Paducah, Kentucky; Greensboro, North Carolina; Augusta, Georgia; Jacksonville, Florida; Beaumont, Texas; West Aurora, Illinois; and Rye, New York.

Booklist 26:11 O '29

"By an examination of the studies included, one is enabled to discover most of the important problems involved in a school-building survey and most of the important techniques used in the solution of these problems. Among the problems on which data are presented for the different school systems are the following: the present school plant; present and probable future population trends; the need for a building program; and the buildings required to house the pupils of elementary-school, junior high school, and senior high school age."
+ El School J 30:149 O '29 500w

ENGLAND, GEORGE ALLAN. Isles of romance. 323p il $3.50 Century

917.29 Islands. Caribbean sea. St Lawrence, Gulf of. Dry Tortugas 29-21787

The Isles of romance of which Mr England writes are Anticosti, Bird Key, Sable Island, Grand Cayman, the Dry Tortugas, Cozumel, St Pierre, the Isle of Pines and the Misty Magdalens. He has explored these island groups at the mouth of the St Lawrence and in the Caribbean sea with their contrasting settings of lumber camp and pirate adventure, and deals with them individually in vividly pictorial fashion.

N Y Times p32 N 24 '29 300w

"A treat for the armchair adventurer." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 153:313 O 23 '29 80w

ENGLAND, JANE, pseud. See Jervis, V. M. S.

ENGLISH, THOMAS H., and POPE, WILLARD B. What to read. 173p $1.10 Crofts

028 Books and reading. Bibliography—Best books 29-15299

"Descriptive and critical annotations on some 500 books selected as good reading for undergraduates. These are meant to be 'suggestive and provocative rather than fully informative.' Editions, frequently the inexpensive reprints, are cited. Very useful for reference in a library."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 26:53 N '29

"An attractive little volume arranged with care and forethought for lovers of good reading and professional writers alike. The list is one that has grown through the years from sundry groups of courses in English and other forms of literature." W. E. H.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ag 3 '29 350w
Wis Lib Bul 25:317 O '29

ENRIQUES, FEDERIGO. Historic development of logic; the principles and structure of science in the conception of mathematical thinkers; auth. tr. from the Italian by Jerome Rosenthal. 271p $3 Holt

160 Logic—History 29-12222

The translator's preface calls attention to the fact that the history of logic is a neglected field, there being but one book on this subject in English and that an antiquated one. The present work, tho comparatively brief, goes deeply into the historical sources of logic, mathematics and philosophy. Contents: The logic of the ancients; Rationalism and the evolution of modern logic; The reform of contemporary logic; From inductive logic to the logic of scientific systems. Appendix. Index.

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 20 '29 480w

"An invaluable text for students of logic, philosophy, or mathematics who seek light on the first principles and structure of science, and have no easy access to a leading representative of modern Italian thought. The brevity of the work should stimulate further inquiries." P. P. Wiener
+ J Philos 26:501 Ag 29 '29 980w

EPSTEIN, ABRAHAM. Challenge of the aged; with an introd. by Jane Addams. 435p $3 Vanguard press

331.25 Old age. Old age pensions 29-4446

"Mr. Epstein, who has spent ten years and more in the study of the problems which confront the destitute aged, gives us, in this book, a well-set-up account of the factors which make for dependency in the declining years. He minimizes the importance of shiftlessness, constitutional inability and the like, placing emphasis upon the ruthlessness with which modern industry casts aside the man who can no longer stand the swift yet monotonous pace set by our mechanized system of society. Mr. Epstein goes into the possibilities of saving for old age under the present range of wages in the United States, comparing wage scales of to-day with those of other days."—Bookm

Am J Soc 35:344 S '29 200w
Booklist 25:308 My '29

"Perhaps the most significant part of his book is an excellent study of the pension systems for the aged which exist in more than forty foreign countries. (There is no organized method of handling the aged in the United States.) The book is well documented and indexed. It should engage the interest not only of social workers and sociologists but of all those who will some day be old themselves."
Bookm 68:xiv F '29 150w

"Mr. Epstein marshalls an astonishing array of statistics to show how great is the problem, how inadequate have been our efforts thus far to grapple with it, and how inevitably we must follow the lead of other advanced nations in adopting some form of old age pensions as the best way out."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Mr 31 '29 250w
Boston Transcript p2 F 9 '29 630w

"An important contribution to American consideration of a subject which is too frequently ignored in this country but which has been carefully studied and legislated for in most European countries and on which more action is likely to become necessary here."
+ J Home Econ 21:371 My '29 80w

"The whole situation of the aged poor in this country is described in an excellent new book by the secretary of the American Association for Old Age Security."
+ Nation 128:123 Ja 30 '29 850w

"The present volume is a rich storehouse of facts with respect to the condition of the aged in the United States and a source book of information on measures, public and private, in America and Europe which have been tested and adopted to surround honorable old age with a moderate measure of security." R. W. Bruere
+ N Y Evening Post p9m F 9 '29 750w

"Conceived in a progressive yet temperate spirit, it is a valuable piece of work."
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 24 '29 380w

"This is one of those rare books which one would like to see placed upon the required reading-list of all prospective legislators."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:786 Mr 16 '29 300w

"Mr. Epstein's volume is a notable contribution to the literature on this vital question." K. P.
+ World Tomorrow 12:235 My '29 380w

ERNST, CLAYTON HOLT, and WHITE TRENTWELL MASON, eds. Opportunity ahead! 188p $1.50 (6s) Appleton

374.1 Profession, Choice of 29-9750

A book of ten careers for boys, in which each field is described with enthusiasm by a successful man in that field. Contents: Opportunities in aviation, by Porter Adams; Shall I go into radio? by E. P. Gordon; Teaching: a man's job, by E. M. Weaver; Opportunities in the ministry, by A. W. Hewitt, D.D.; Librarianship: a new profession, by C: H. Compton; The navy as a career, by Fitzhugh Green; The army, by Gen. M. B. Stewart; Insurance: a great life work, by K. A. Luther; What the stage offers, by Harry Beresford; The job of being a detective, by J. R. Wood.

Booklist 26:11 O '29

Outlook 152:350 Je 26 '29 50w

"Chapters designed to give the lay of the land in ten occupations that are attracting young men today. While studying yourself to find the work for which your own special abilities fit you, a study of these potential jobs will not come amiss."

+ Survey 63:111 O '29 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p562 Jl 11 '29 50w

Wis Lib Bul 25:191 Je '29

ERNST, MORRIS LEOPOLD, and SEAGLE, WILLIAM. To the pure . . . ; a study of obscenity and the censor. 336p $3 Viking press [10s 6d J. Cape]

176.8 Liberty of the press. Prohibited books

28-30424

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"The utter ambiguity of such concepts as 'obscene,' 'lewd,' 'immoral,' 'lascivious,' and 'disgusting,' and the absurdities of existing obscenity laws and current vice crusades have nowhere been more strikingly revealed. This is a case-book in the stupidities of censorship." C. D. Clark

+ Am J Soc 35:507 N '29 280w

"A witty and well documented book."

+ Bookm 69:xxv Mr '29 140w

"It is a great pity that the book is not better than it is. It might so easily have been so. A patient and long-suffering reader will find a considerable amount of very interesting information in it." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 45:77 Ap 20 '29 1050w

New Statesman 33:90 Ap 27 '29 460w

"The study by these two American authors of the working of the censorship in both countries is brilliantly written and arranged. But what then? As we read the book we kept asking ourselves that question. Their solution seems to us to be no solution."

+ — Spec 142:624 Ap 20 '29 820w

"To The Pure . . . is the most complete and sane discussion of the intricacies of censorship of sex literature we have had, rich in content, admirable in tone. The book is judicious but withal gay and humane, pleasantly free from the anti-Puritan complex that mars much advocacy of freedom." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 62:497 Ag 1 '29 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p372 My 9 '29 840w

Wis Lib Bul 25:69 F '29

"The searching analysis of this book, the conscientious research and the effective argument make clear the folly of present legislation and judicial pronouncement." A. G. Hays

+ Yale Law J 38:840 Ap '29 570w

ERSKINE, JOHN. Penelope's man; the homing instinct; end papers by D. Putnam Brinley. 275p $2.50 Bobbs [7s 6d Nash]

28-28481

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:213 F '29

Bookm 68:xiv Ja '29 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p47 Mr '29

"He wrote a book called 'The Private Life of Helen of Troy,' which I approached with prejudice, and to which I capitulated without reserve. 'Penelope's Man' is not quite so funny, but it is good enough." V. Sackville-West

+ Nation and Ath 44:756 Mr 2 '29 240w

"The original dose of biting and tonic irony has been worn to a pungent wafer of thinning wit." D. B. W.

— + New Repub 57:281 Ja 23 '29 100w

Pratt p36 spring '29

"Mr. Erskine's notion of life is so very banal. However, if you can endure his depreciation of golden Helen, see what he makes of the mysterious sun-goddess who tested the souls of men, or of candid Nausicaa." R. A. Taylor

— Spec 142:247 F 16 '29 120w

ERSKINE, JOHN. Sincerity. 356p $2.50 Bobbs

29-23792

"A happy couple is riven in twain by the wife's feministic article in the Atlantic Monthly. The wife goes to Europe and the man into the arms of her friend. Both ladies are novelists. The man gets the fate which one might, under such circumstances, have predicted. The wife learns about seduction from a handsome foreigner and returns, after ten years and countless short stories, to exhibit her accomplishments to her husband, now pretty well tired of his noble life with novelist number two. So the sincere three after ten years' experiment are left just where they started."—Outlook

"Mr. Erskine is graceful and witty as usual, but the total effect of Sincerity is somewhat flat. It is difficult for the reader to regard Winthrop and Isabel as anything other than faintly animated premises in Mr. Erskine's syllogism, and the logic of the syllogism itself is often exceedingly elusive." Margaret Wallace

— Bookm 70:448 D '29 500w

Reviewed by M. C. Dawson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 N 3 '29 1000w

"Mr. Erskine's characters strike one as being flat, not full rounded; they are for the most part dominated by their creator's personality and especially by the ideas which he holds. If the modern trend in fiction is indeed to show rather than to tell, Mr. Erskine is a cardinal offender. We learn on every page that his three characters want to be sincere and do the right thing in life, but the narrative of three closely interwoven lives does not stand out clearly, does not take any direct or easily conceivable course."

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 7 '29 600w

"Mr. Erskine is so sincere in his latest novel that he has lost all of his amusing qualities. He is so intrigued with the problem of sincerity in his characters that he has made them figures to demonstrate a theory and not human beings who by their very humanness prove the author's thesis. It is a bad novel from every point of view. . . One wouldn't mind so much the characters being sawdust dolls if the ideas that they puppeted were interesting or amusing." Fanny Butcher

— Chicago Daily Tribune p13 N 9 '29 600w

"Sincerity is undoubtedly Erskine's best novel, not excluding The Private Life of Helen of Troy." Francis Snow

+ Current Hist 31:630 Ja '30 360w

"This book, perhaps, would have been better in the essay form; the various shades of meaning elaborated upon the word sincerity could then have been developed strictly as ideas. As Mr. Erskine has written it, they are applied to characters who seem little more than puppets. The prose is well used and sometimes rich." R. G. E.

— + New Repub 61:204 Ja 8 '30 380w

"Not one of his characters is for a moment a living person. Every one is a marionette. And for this reason what the author intends for his big scenes turn out as something gauche. . . . The theme required a more masterly handling than it has received. In the argot of the day, 'Sincerity' seems not quite to 'click.'"

— N Y Times p6 N 3 '29 1100w

ERSKINE, JOHN—Continued

"The considerable strength and distinction of the story lie in the remarkably logical psychology of the characters, in the absolute consistency of their motives and of their reactions to the outer demands of their self-imposed rules of conduct toward each other. . . . Dr. Erskine has told the story in a mellow, scholarly, unmannered style, avoiding all trace of the sensational and disregarding the temptations to preach." E. C. Beckwith

+ N Y World p11m N 17 '29 380w

"A dull, and tract-like tale of three people who tried to be sincere and succeeded only in being silly. . . . Mr. Erskine's sharp irony enlivens the novel; and his idea is amusing. But his style is very tedious." F. L. Robbins

— + Outlook 153:428 N 13 '29 300w

"In his somewhat unbelievable new fable of three people who 'go sincere,' Mr. Erskine has carried over much of the method and manner characteristic of his earlier books. The flat, rather commonplace style, the understatements, the slightly stilted dialogue,—all is there save the dry humor which made his 'Helen' so notable. And the effect is, surprisingly, to rob this modern story of almost all interest." T. M. Purdy, Jr.

— Sat R of Lit 6:586 D 21 '29 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '29 230w

ERSKINE, LAURIE YORK. Fine fellows. 343p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

29-11255

Stories of brave deeds on land and in air in the Great war.

---

"Eleven somewhat rambling and resolutely undramatic short stories. Mr. Erskine mutes his crises with a will and adds a touch of disillusionment. His tales of brave men and a fair woman or two are sufficiently entertaining, though surely they could do with a bit of vernacular." Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 14 '29 80w

"The stories Mr. Erskine assembled here have something of the quality of his earlier juvenile stories. Each has a good plot, usually with a humorous twist. Yet there is a curious sense of lack of form about them." W. E. H.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Je 29 '29 400w

ERTZ, SUSAN. Galaxy. 396p $2.50 Appleton

29-16163

The story of one woman's life from her birth in 1862 to her death in London after the war. The galaxy of scenes, events and characters that makes up the story of Laura's life is spread against a background of change from the middle nineteenth century to the present.

---

Booklist 26:70 N '29

"Her style is a sheer delight."

+ Bookm 70:xiv S '29 140w

"It is possible to feel at first that you are reading a letter, informally and intimately expressed, in which Miss Ertz has undertaken to tell you personally of certain people and events with which she is familiar. Later, as the main characters leave childhood, the style seems to become more distant and mature too, but it never loses its clarity or its unpretentious charm. . . To readers who have been charmed by 'Madame Claire' and 'Nina,' 'The Galaxy'—which is even better—will be a great delight." M. C. Dawson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 4 '29 950w

"The last two pages of the novel are beyond question more like poetry than prose. It is a thoughtful and comforting novel, if you have the patience to read it. But it portrays Miss Ertz as a philosopher, the teacher of ethics, rather than as a novelist." D. F. Gilman

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 10 '29 1550w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 S 14 '29 260w

"This is a real novel, worthy to rank with Galsworthy's and, in some respects, not unlike them. . . Not only the central characters but the subsidiary figures have been studied with great care and are individualized to an extraordinary degree."

+ Christian Century 46:1155 S 18 '29 120w

"When the reader finishes the book he has a satisfying sense of having become acquainted with a person. It is all the more satisfying that the new acquaintance impresses him as being dignified, intelligent and honest."

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 S 14 '29 730w

"It is a good story, but superficial and deliberately externalized."

+ — Nation 129:699 D 4 '29 150w

"In an age of thin novels, Miss Ertz has achieved weight and substance. But her book lacks that touch of universality which would place it among the great. It is, one suspects, a trifle too well bred." E. H. W.

+ — New Repub 60:109 S 11 '29 330w

"Miss Ertz gets her reminiscent flavor of the yesterdays when the world was so, so different, chiefly by chucking in a news synopsis every so often. There seems to us very little of color in such a method. . . 'The Galaxy' seems to us an inordinate amount of fuss over a most uninteresting group of people." F: F. Van de Water

— N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 10 '29 300w

"Not only a memorable reflection of changing English life during the period, but an addition to the long gallery of notable feminine portraits from the pages of English fiction."

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 11 '29 600w

"Told with ease and skill, fine understanding of character and some prejudice. . . 'The Galaxy' is a satisfying book, meaty and well-seasoned; a book to sink your teeth into and read with a pleasure at once eager and tranquil. In its elaborate and convincing detail, it presents as fine a picture of the period just past as we have met since 'The Forsyte Saga.'" F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 152:590 Ag 7 '29 280w

"Upon the formlessness of life as it presents itself Miss Ertz has imposed a pattern. There is no helter-skelter, cross-of-life material or stream of consciousness technique here. Selection and arrangement have given to 'The Galaxy' a strongly defined structural unity. Within the confines of the plot the characters move easily, the story runs along uninterruptedly but neither ever oversteps the boundaries. For those who are tired of the amorphous novel, or who never liked it, this will seem refreshing order; for others it will seem a little artificial in its tidiness." Gladys Graham

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:73 Ag 24 '29 500w

"Miss Ertz, who is a shrewd and clever writer, does not seem herself altogether happy about this background of chronicled fashion. Comedy, fashion; tragedy, time, is the formula. It is in effect the choice between time and time's whirligig; and Miss Ertz seems to hover uncertainly between the two. The Galaxy, emblem of time, shines with sentimental effect over Laura's years, and she is a pathetic rather than tragic character." V. S. P.

+ — Spec 143:59 Jl 13 '29 270w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '29 400w

"Her sure touch and her sense of beauty make this a memorable book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p556 Jl 11 '29 420w

Wis Lib Bul 25:323 O '29

ESKEW, GARNETT LAIDLAW. Pageant of the packets; a book of American steamboating. 314p il $3 Holt

656 Packets. Steamboats. Mississippi river

29-23077

Deals briefly with the first steamboats on the Mississippi and the Ohio between 1810 and 1820, and more fully with the great days of steamboating in the United States, largely from 1860 to 1900.

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p152 D '29

"Mr. Eskew tells in lively and readable style the complete story of these boats, of the demand of the Mississippi Valley dwellers for possession of the region by the United States and their need of the waterway, of the development of the river fleet, which had its beginning when Henry Shreve built his boat at Wheeling in 1816, and was ridiculed by all the town, of the building and service of many famous boats, and other factors of his theme."

+ N Y Times p13 O 20 '29 450w

"An excellent and authoritative history of Mississippi steamboating." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:270 O 16 '29 70w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 16 '29 750w

ESTEVEN, JOHN, pseud. See Shellabarger, S:

ETHEREGE, SIR GEORGE. Letterbook; ed. with an introd. and notes by Sybil Rosenfeld. 442p il $7.50 (18s) Oxford

942.06 Great Britain—History—Restoration, 1660-1688. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [29-6542]

"The Letterbook was acquired by the British Museum in 1838. It has never before been published. The work has needed doing for a long time, for not only is it the sole at all full authoritative document we have about Etherege, but it also gives us an interesting glimpse into European politics between 1668 and 1689. It is an extremely welcome addition to our volumes of the period, as well as being in many places excellent reading in itself."—Nation and Ath

---

"The editing of the volume seems to be very accurate. The notes are largely biographical but add to the interest of the letters for the average reader. Several excellent plates together with a map, unmentioned in the table of contents, are included in the volume. The editor's work, although adding little or nothing new to historical knowledge, provides an entertaining comedy of the misadventures of Sedley's and Rochester's boon companions among the more puritanical Germans." G. W. Gray

Am Hist R 34:584 Ap '29 380w

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 12 '29 850w

"Miss Rosenfeld has done her work well. The notes, without which the personal and political references are baffling, are plentiful and to the point, while the introduction covers all the necessary ground, and establishes some new facts." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Nation and Ath 44:328 D 1 '28 730w

"In her edition one misses the original spelling and abbreviations, as well as detecting slight errors. But there are more important things for which to be thankful. Here is a great wealth of unorganized material, interesting alike to the historian and to the student of literature." H: T. E. Perry

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:954 Ap 27 '29 720w

"The Letter Book brings us within range of a friendly comprehension of Restoration society and its natural expression in the Restoration theatre."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p181 Mr 7 '29 1800w

"It is rather as a human document than as an official record of Continental political intrigues that the 'Letterbook' sustains fullest interest. Its present publication, especially in the attractive form given it by the Oxford University Press, should appeal to the general reader as well as to the professed student of Restoration life and letters." G: H. Nettleton

Yale R n s 18:608 spring '29 220w

EULENBERG, HERBERT. The Hohenzollerns; tr. by M. M. Bozman. 364p il $4 Century [18s Allen & U.]

923.1 Hohenzollern, House of 29-9356

Biographical sketches of the most prominent members of the House of Hohenzollern from Frederick I, 1372-1440, elector and margrave of Brandenburg, to "William III," the ex-crown prince, with an added portrait of Ernst von Wildenbruch, dramatist of the Hohenzollerns, who also shared their blood.

---

Booklist 25:391 Jl '29

Reviewed by Norah Meade

Bookm 70:211 O '29 630w

Reviewed by W: K. Stewart

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 My 5 '29 1600w

"His good intention to present an unprejudiced canvas of the entire Hohenzollern line goes for naught before even five chapters have been read. The all too recent memory of William II has him by the brain, and all his bitterness wells up, bravely though he may struggle against villification." S. H.

— Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '29 370w

Cleveland Open Shelf p140 N '29

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

Nation 129:48 Jl 10 '29 720w

"Having read these 'pithy, biographical sketches, I do not find myself any better informed than I was before. Nor does the style of the book inspire the reader with confidence in the historical methods of the author, and one wonders about a good many of the anecdotes whether they are 'facts' or the well-known type of 'illustration.' " L. B. Namier

— Nation and Ath 44:850 Mr 16 '29 800w

"Eulenberg's tour of the ancestral portrait gallery of the Hohenzollerns reveals some decidedly sympathetic human figures. The witty, often caustic characterization, the easy readability of the author's style, well caught by the translator, have a vigor, even a certain intentional flamboyance, justified by Eulenberg's desire to insure interest." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p8m My 25 '29 480w

"First-class history and drama." Emil Lengyel

+ N Y Times p3 My 5 '29 1600w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 228:adv Ag '29 100w

" 'The Hohenzollerns' is a thoroughly readable book and holds the interest throughout. As it is a translation one does not know where to put the blame for a certain awkwardness in the manner of writing."

+ — Outlook 151:626 Ap 17 '29 330w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:12 Je '29 130w

St Louis 27:270 S '29

"Herr Eulenberg is very readable in translation; he knows how to write interestingly and he is capable of independence of judgment."

+ Sat R 147:328 Mr 9 '29 130w

"It is rare that one finds a book so easy and so readable. A biographer who is a playwright uses a dangerous pen. His word pictures are so convincing, and each episode is so clear and so apt an illustration of character, one is tempted to ask if, as often in the play, the character has not been determined and then the incidents selected and written in to fit the character." J: M. S. Allison

Sat R of Lit 5:1091 Je 8 '29 760w

Spec 142:398 Mr 9 '29 50w

"If Herr Eulenberg had given the rein to his feelings only in the chapter appropriate to their expression, he might still have written good history. Unfortunately, however, he sees the last Emperor everywhere. Again and again he interrupts his narrative to point out how this or that unfavourable quality reemerged in the ex-Kaiser, and with every interruption the impression grows that this book is a personal attack masquerading as an historical study."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p87 F 7 '29 820w

Wis Lib Bul 25:275 Jl '29

EVANS, HUBERT REGINALD. Derry's partner. 268p il $2 Dodd

Dogs—Legends and stories 29-17260

Derry, an Airedale, belonged to Ed Sibley who lived in the open country of the Northwest. His partner was Mac, a savage husky. The two dogs had many adventures with man and beast, and often protected their master from harm or danger.

"This is a story full of outdoor life, of the great beauty of forests hushed before the dawn, of idealism and the fine spirit of sportsmanship. It is such a book as any boy in his teens will enjoy, and find profitable."

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 30 '29 260w

"It is a loss to have a book so full of sympathetic interpretation of dogs and nature fail in impressiveness as a whole due to its piecemeal character and to the author's willingness to let the climaxes fall where they will. He inserts a dog-talkie. The life-history of a bass intrudes. The bear chapter should have come earlier. Mr. Evans has the gifts to furnish forth a memorable dog story if, some day, he will only bother to construct one."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:431 N 16 '29 200w

EVANS, IFOR LESLIE. British in tropical Africa; an historical outline. 396p il $4.50 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

960 Africa—Colonization. Great Britain—Colonies [29-5724]

An historical outline of the penetration, acquisition and rule of tropical African territory by Great Britain. Each one of the dependencies is taken up in turn.

"It takes throughout what may be called the 'official' patriotic view and ignores all other historical interpretations. In Mr. Evans's account of the acquisition of Zanzibar, Kenya, and Uganda, everything is patriotically couleur de rose."

Nation and Ath 44:798 Mr 9 '29 80w

"This is a useful and well-executed little book, and it fills a gap in African bibliography. It does not compare with Mr. Buell's two great volumes on the native problem in Africa, but it gives a great deal of the record in a much handier and sufficiently detailed form."

+ New Statesman 32:569 F 9 '29 1000w

"Though written in the first instance to meet the requirements of Colonial Service Probationers at Oxford and Cambridge, and therefore crammed with facts, Mr. Evans's historical outline of the development of our tropical African empire should find a large and appreciative public."

+ Sat R 147:184 F 9 '29 380w

"A very convenient history of British intervention and rule in tropical Africa. The book is temperately and dispassionately written, and no advantage is taken of the openings for moralizing or irony that the facts provide only too plentifully."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p165 F 28 '29 280w

EVARTS, HAL GEORGE. Tomahawk rights. 319p $2 Little

29-14104

A story of warfare between the Indians and the white men in the days of Daniel Boone. Rodney Buckner was captured by the Shawnee Indians when a small boy. Later he led his own people, the frontiersmen, against the Indian allies of the British, and fell in love with White Faun, a white child also brought up in the Shawnee camp.

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 31 '29 170w

"The tale is interesting with plenty of exciting incidents, and gives a well-detailed picture of frontier warfare, but the book is more notable for its fairness of spirit . . . The Indian point of view, the way in which they looked upon the land, a way entirely different from the white's point of view, the injustices from which they suffered and their many good qualities, are carefully set forth. 'Tomahawk Rights' is an unusually good story of its type."

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 14 '29 500w

"This is a most entertaining story of the advancing American frontier at the closing of the eighteenth century and the beginning of the nineteenth, with the scenes laid in that great region which extends from the Ohio River on the east to the Mississippi on the west. It is well written in Mr. Evarts's best manner." F. G. Applegate

+ Sat R of Lit 6:160 S 21 '29 300w

"Hal G. Evarts proves himself capable of writing acceptable stories of more than one type."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '29 230w

EVERTON, FRANCIS, pseud. See Stokes, F. W:

EWERS, HANNS HEINZ. Alraune; tr. from the German by S. Guy Endore. 342p il $5 Day

29-23499

A macabre story built upon the legend of the mandrake root and the blossom of the plant, alraune. The girl, Alraune, is a product of a scientific experiment in artificial impregnation conducted by an eminent scientist on the idea of his nephew, Frank Braun. The girl comes to exert a poisonous influence of attraction over all who come in contact with her. Her lovers die. Only when she falls in love with Frank Braun does her deadly influence abate, and in the end she herself dies at the will of her lover. The book is illustrated with the black-and-white drawings of Mahlon Blaine.

"Not a great novel; but it is a weird tale, parts of which have been told with poetic beauty. And Ewers's characteristic mixture of physical excitement, mystery and moralizing are beautifully translated into illustrations and decorations of equal strangeness by Mahlon Blaine." T: Terwilliger

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 D 15 '29 1350w

"The style is very much like that which Poe used in writing some of his horror tales. Although the subject matter is morbid, Dr. Ewers' restraint keeps the style from becoming strident. The beauty of the style is enhanced by the pictorial power of the author." H. G. K.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 13 '29 380w

"The orgies of the last chapters are enough to bar the volume from censor-ruled communities were it not for Ewers's delicate restraint. For 'Alraune' is a book to be read more for style than content—although there is a lingering suspicion in the mind of the writer that the author intended his heroine to stand as protagonist of the female principle in nature; that power omnipotent, unreasoning, demanding everything and destroying all." Don Ryan

N Y Evening Post p14m N 23 '29 700w

"A masterpiece of the weird and macabre is Alraune. If you like the horrible, well done, here it is." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:350 O 30 '29 40w

EYLES, MARGARET LEONORA (PITCAIRN) (MRS DAVID LESLIE MURRAY). Shepherd of Israel. 307p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Constable]

Moses—Fiction 29-18173

"I am chiefly interested in the human story of Moses and his wife and son, and the slaves he led into a hope of freedom. Possibly some readers, accustomed only to the Bible narrative will find fault with my departures from it. But there is considerable difficulty, for on almost every page of the Book of Exodus the commentators say,'This incident—this ordinance—was obviously the work of post-Exilic days.' So one is forced back on to one's imagination."—Preface

"The 'Shepherd of Israel' is a fine novel—interesting, well written. Yet . . . the thing does not glow. There are no miracles, no wonders. Everything has been explained away, psycholo-gized, analyzed, rationalized. What appears mysterious and supernatural is now quite simple and natural."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 D 8 '29 140w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p7m S 7 '29 430w

"Adding little, if anything, to an already too long list of novels about Moses, 'Shepherd of Israel' is a well written though unimaginative book which will find no place on bookshelves for two reasons, both already suggested. There have been too many books written about the lawgiver of the Israelites in the last two years, and this one only follows, does not add to, the previous ones."

— N Y Times p7 S 8 '29 400w

"Of all the many recent novels dealing with Biblical or historical figures, this interpretation of Moses is by far the best. In so far as success is possible in this kind of fiction, Miss Eyles certainly achieves it. She has brought not only sound scholarship and the passion of a life-time to the task, but she has constructive imagination as distinct from a merely decorative or sentimental fancy. Her descriptions are full of genuine and restrained poetic feeling, and Moses in her hands loses no whit of his prophetic grandeur. . . Miss Eyles has written a very interesting, brilliant, and beautiful book."

+ Spec 142:550 Ap 6 '29 150w

"Mrs. Eyles has wrestled with a great subject, and has emerged, if not victor, by no means empty-handed. Her failure is central, but it is single; and the drawing of the lesser characters is highly and uniformly satisfying throughout. 'Shepherd of Israel' is so gallant an effort and so pregnant with imagination that one is bound to applaud even in criticizing it."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Mr 14 '29 730w

EYTON, JOHN SEYMOUR. Kullu of the carts. 294p $2.50 Bobbs

29-7395

Drew is part English and part Hindu. He lives in India with his father and sisters and his education is that of an English boy. But more than anything else he wants the free life of an Indian boy: so slipping quietly away from home Drew becomes Durroo and shares with little wise Kullu, precocious child driver of a bullock cart, the adventures he has longed for.

---

"Mr. Eyton writes understandingly of a phase of pre-adolescence and provides many attractive vignettes of life in the open."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 12 '29 120w

"It is so well and so vividly told that long before Drew reaches school the reader has become identified with him, shares his love for the quaint, wise little Kullu and his longing to continue the long leisurely journey from serai to serai. . . For the boys and girls who have yet to read 'Kim' the new book will prove an excellent introduction." E. B. Marquess

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Je 16 '29 1050w

"What a story we might have had of the joint adventures of Kullu and 'Durroo,' unhampered by the tragic problem of mixed races, which spoil the vigorous sweep of humor and invention and authentic background of India. By the author's divided interest he has just missed adding another portrait to the gallery of children's favorite fiction characters. Even so we cannot soon forget Kullu."

+ — Boston Transcript p5 Je 8 '29 200w

St Louis 27:316 N '29

"Kullu and Drew are well drawn, and the scenes of their adventures are vividly done. For a boy reader, however, there are passages of description, both of the outdoor and the interior of Drew's mind, which spin out rather long. For a boy the action of a story is the thing, and here he has just time to get interested in the two friends when the book comes to an end. Perhaps in another book Mr. Eyton will tell what happened next." W: O. Stevens

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1032 My 18 '29 320w

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '29 280w

F

FAIRBRIDGE, DOROTHEA. Pilgrim's way in South Africa. 196p $8.50 (21s) Oxford

916.8 South Africa—Description and travel

29-18772

"Dorothea Fairbridge's records of South African travel are presented by her publisher in lavish gift-book style. There are thirty-two photogravures of camera nature-studies by Lancelot Ussher and seventy-two other plates which, with the colored frontispiece of a painting of Rex River Valley by Gwelo Goodman, total one hundred and five pages of illustration to one hundred and ninety of text. . . The writer has an observing eye, and in following beaten tracks of South African travel what she mainly gathers is surface impressions that are set down with effective enthusiasm."—Sat R of Lit

---

"Although the volume makes little pretense to being more than an account of the attractions offered the traveller by South Africa, it contains enough historic and practical information to give it some reference value."

Sat R of Lit 5:1137 Je 22 '29 270w

"Something of a travel-book, but not at all a helter-shelter guide-book; it is not a historical survey, though the book contains many accurate and sympathetic glimpses of South African history; much is here too of the glories of South African colour. The book's crowning merit lies in its conveyance of the subtle quality of atmosphere."

+ Spec 141:962 D 22 '28 220w

"Here and there in her very delightful book she alludes to some of the many difficulties—the native problem, the poor whites, the Indians, the droughts. But the chief impression one gets is of the glorious things to be seen, and her intimate knowledge of their history and traditions enables her to appreciate them at their true value. The illustrations, too, are excellent."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p16 Ja 3 '29 250w

FAIRBRIDGE, KINGSLEY OGILVIE. Veld verse. 84p $2 (5s) Oxford

821 29-11197

"The great majority of these verses were written before the author went up to Oxford in 1908. 'The Veld was his public school.' The first edition of 'Veld Verse' was issued in 1909; the present edition is a revision."—Sat R of Lit

---

Boston Transcript p2 S 19 '28 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ja '29

"The verse is chiefly of interest for its local color and atmosphere. Occasionally it reminds of certain phases of the earlier Kipling, which is, perhaps, inevitable. A poem like 'The Puff-Adder' is vivid, so is the hyena poem."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:447 D 1 '28 80w

"Unselfishness, justice, adventurousness, devotion and that best patriotism which seeks an invisible empire, even if it loses everything else; the common sense which does not harp on 'white' and 'black,' or belittle the one in comprehending the other; an infallible intimacy with wild nature, a capacity for delight in the scene at hand without remorse for what is not—these are some of the characteristics of Kingsley Fairbridge and his graphic poetry."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p330 My 3 '28 950w

FAIRLIE, GERARD. Stone blunts scissors. 314p $2 Little [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

29-4992

In which Victor Caryll, English detective, emerges unscathed with the heroine from the vicious traps laid for him in Paris by the arch-villain. A hair-raising sequel to Scissors cut paper (Book Review Digest, 1928).

"Readable shocker." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 17 '29 100w

"An excellent mystery story, containing many original situations to gladden the hearts of all lovers of its kind."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 2 '29 150w

"The story provides plenty of thrills, although it is not quite so exciting as 'Scissors Cut Paper.' "
+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 17 '29 120w

" 'Scissors Cut Paper,' Mr. Fairlie's previous novel, was an excellent yarn. Its successor, 'Stone Blunts Scissors,' is not quite so good. 'Brain' is not we think, so clever as he was; and that is perhaps why we found Mr. Fairlie's second venture not so absorbing as his first."
Times [London] Lit Sup p714 O 4 '28 120w

FAIRLIE, GERARD. Yellow Munro. 319p $2 Little

29-14103

Professor Weighton is found murdered in his laboratory. John Murray, in a role of mistaken identity, has received a letter from the professor asking him to see that a girl named Yolande receive his "pearls—one of them is valuable." In his quest Murray becomes involved with an enemy gang headed by "Yellow Munro" and undergoes many thrilling adventures before the secret of the professor's valuable invention is found.

"An exceptionally good mystery story."
+ Bookm 70:xxv S '29 50w

"Mr. Fairlie gets away with a somewhat conventional plot by piling up exciting incidents, turns, disguises and danger." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 21 '29 120w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 31 '29 260w

N Y Times p17 S 1 '29 140w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '29 120w

FAIRY shoemaker, and other fairy poems; il by Boris Artzybashev. 114p $2 Macmillan

821.08 Artsybashev, Boris Mikhailovich, illus.

28-25652

The five favorite poems chosen by Boris Artsybashev for illustration in his unique and fascinating manner are the title poem and "The fairy," both by William Allingham; "Sleepyhead" and "Berries" by Walter de la Mare, and "The forsaken merman," by Matthew Arnold.

Booklist 25:216 F '29

"Such books as these are living contributions to the appreciation of good art." A. C. Moore
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 16 '28 680w

"Mr. Artzybasheff has enchanted these poems with the spirit of his imagination, until one could almost safely say they are as uniquely his own as they are their separate authors'. He seems to have achieved a humanness in this book that is less remote, less aloof than in his other works, and although the fantasy is there as ever in the beautifully intricate designs, it is more joyous fantasy, and the figures are animate with fun and mischief." Isabelle Houck
+ N Y World p11m N 25 '28 280w

St Louis 27:102 Mr '29

"The creative power of this interesting Russian family is here turned to the pictorial arts in a way that at once proclaims Russian and Modern. This man is a true artist. His works are stories in prints that fully equal the poems that inspired them in beauty, humor, and fantasy."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:544 D 22 '28 100w

Wis Lib Bul 25:76 F '29

FALSTAFF, JAKE, pseud. See Fetzer, H.

FARINGTON, JOSEPH. Farington diary; ed. by James Greig; 8v; v 8, May 19, 1815-Dec. 30, 1821. 311p il $7.50 Doubleday, Doran [21s Hutchinson]

B or 92 (23-7187)

This is the last volume of the delightful Farington diary, and like the previous volumes is full of witty and intimate reflections of contemporary life and character. Illustrated from portraits of great figures of the day the diary covers the richly historical period from May, 1815 to December, 1821.

Booklist 26:28 O '29 (Review of v 8)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 22 '29 280w

"His diary is a disappointing book. He was one of those people who never seem to be in personal contact with anything. He is always telling us something about interesting events or interesting people, but it is always told as having been told by someone else to him, and, filtered through Farington, it becomes desiccated and flavourless." Leonard Woolf
— Nation and Ath 44:585 Ja 26 '29 330w

"It proceeds along a level path of dull, though useful and interesting, mediocrity. The diarist meets or tells us of most of the distinguished men and women of his time. His pages bristle with the names of soldiers, statesmen, poets, artists, men of rank and men out at elbows, misers, roués and generally the sort of people you like to meet in the pages of a diary; but as our diarist deals with them in his matter-of-fact manner, and records their conversation, often of the most natural and humdrum character, we begin to feel that, after all, life was very much the same dull round in the early days of the last century as we have found it to be in the early days of the present one."Augustine Birrell
New Statesman 32:414 Ja 5 '29 1000w

N Y Evening Post p6m S 21 '29 70w

"Joseph Farington, forgotten for almost a century, was a diarist whose style and perspicuity deserve well of fortune. As a diarist, as has been said before, he ranked as the peer of Pepys. He was a shrewd judge of humanity and of events, and what he saw and heard he put down boldly, with elegance and, sometimes, with a dry wit." T. J. C. Martyn
+ N Y Times p20 O 20 '29 700w

"It would be unfair to compare Farington with the great English diarists such as Pepys, Scott, Fanny Burney and Byron, who put their personality into their work in a fashion which was quite beyond his pedestrian Muse. But his record embodies many interesting details of the great generation from 1793 to 1821, along with much relating to the affairs of the Academy and Farington's less conspicuous acquaintances which is hardly worth reprinting. Perhaps Mr. Greig will add to his editorial services by giving us a selection; a single volume might easily contain all that is of permanent interest."
+ — Sat R 146:825 D 15 '28 180w

"It is the real test of a great diarist to provide such fare that one is tempted continually to go on from page to page with pleasant anticipation of a treat—and this test Farington meets. So we part from him with regret." W. C. Abbott
+ Sat R of Lit 6:201 O 5 '29 800w (Review of v 8)

"Farington was a wonderful diarist, interested in every aspect of life as well as in art, and never failing to note the gossip that he heard. It is a book of perennial interest."
+ Spec 141:887 D 8 '28 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p955 D 6 '28 1950w

FARJEON, ELEANOR. Kaleidoscope. 291p $2.50 Stokes

29-9369

A series of fantastic short stories centering about the character of Anthony, a poor young man. The first part of the book consists of a series of daydreams, or "beautiful images." The second part takes Anthony back to scenes of his childhood.

" 'Kaleidoscope' is an example of an assured talent in one field that has been consciously stretched to cover the demands of another and more ambitious one. . . Miss Farjeon has all of her ten talents in one. She should not make an effort to change a healthy English apple of a gift into an anemic rainbow." Laura Benet

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 24 '29 550w

"Miss Farjeon presents the English countryside in unforgettable fashion. Her descriptions stick in the mind, and the whole makes a book that is unusual and one that the older boy or girl will appreciate. It is not illustrated, but in this case it is almost an advantage, for the reader supplies his own illustrations." O. M. Fuller

+ N Y World p11m N 17 '29 160w

"The idea is brilliant, the writing beautiful, yet, as a novel, it is a disappointment."

— + Spec 141:896 D 8 '28 180w

FARJEON, JOSEPH JEFFERSON. 5:18 mystery. 308p $2 Dial press

29-25348

When Freddy Reeve, in a holiday mood, boarded the 5:18 train from London, and managed to share a compartment with the most beautiful girl in the world, he little realized that a bland gentleman in white spats, a gloomy gentleman in a brown derby, a fussy old lady, a minister, and a Cockney bloke were to become strangely involved with his own subsequent acts and interests. Freddy's adventures on behalf of the lovely lady lead him into the dangerous maze of a full-fledged kidnapping case, some very grim company, and a battle on the brink of a pit, before victory is his.

"An amusing and satisfactory Farjeon mystery."

+ Bookm 70:xxx D '29 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 N 10 '29 120w

"The author has shown great skill in gradually developing his story and carrying it on to a successful and highly satisfactory climax."

+ N Y Times p40 N 17 '29 180w

"Swift action and humor make it [an] exceptionally good thriller." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:468 N 20 '29 80w

FARJEON, JOSEPH JEFFERSON. Person called "Z." 306p $2 Dial press

29-6859

A girl's photograph found in a dead man's pocket along with a letter of warning concerning her impel Dennis Sherwood to take an assumed identity and enter a villainous plot in order to protect the girl.

Bookm 69:xxvi My '29 30w

N Y Times p20 Ap 7 '29 150w

"A mildly blood-curdling tale—only the most naïve reader could consider it in any sense a mystery—adorned by a mildly sentimental and highly proper love story."

— Sat R of Lit 5:936 Ap 20 '29 110w

FARNOL, JEFFERY. Another day. 310p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Low]

29-20646

The hero is Keith Dallas Chisholm, son of an American multi-millionaire. Both Keith and his father thought the boy had committed murder. So Keith fled to England where, in a little village in Sussex, he met the lovely Josepha and her engaging small sister Patience. With true chivalry Keith stayed to help the girls out of their difficulties and in time outlived his own.

Booklist 26:118 D '29

Bookm 70:xxviii D '29 50w

"The most amusing part of this tale is Mr. Farnol's version of the way an American talks. The language of the Bowery mixes quaintly with Farnolism. But it is quite intelligible, and we are able to follow clearly the intricacies of it all, and to enjoy the comfortable folk, like old Sairey, Ben Lomax, and that nice boy, George, who was so sweet, although a lord."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 O 26 '29 280w

"Although Jeffery Farnol's new novel, 'Another Day,' is supposedly a story of the present time, it is in spirit and method as entirely a tale of the Land of Cockaigne as any of his other books."

N Y Times p26 O 20 '29 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1035 D 5 '29 270w

FARNOL, JEFFERY. The shadow, and other stories. 306p $2.50 Little [7s 6d S. Low]

29-16789

Humor, romance, mystery and adventure appear in varying proportions in this collection of short stories. Contents: The shadow; Captain Hector; Retribution; The heir; Black coffee; Upon a day; A boy and the man; An episode; Jaspar Railton; The cupboard; Fortune's fool; A change of mind; Journey's end; The great quietude; Sir Pertolepe the red; The divine Phyllidia; A woman's reason.

" 'The Shadow, and Other Stories,' by Jeffrey Farnol, is romantic stuff, very picturesque, sentimental and local colorish with respect to both time and place. Many of Mr. Farnol's stories might make passable one-act plays or movie scenarios, but they hardly make considerable literature." Edwin Seaver

+ — N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 27 '29 150w

"What can be said about Jeffery Farnol at this late date? Only that while age cannot wither his incurably romantic point of view, custom has staled his style considerably. . . And now Mr. Farnol has produced his first book of short stories. They are so easy to read, so impalpably thin, and so true to the Farnol pattern that the collection forms a sort of a jumbled dream of characters out of the earlier novels."

— N Y Times p28 N 24 '29 370w

Sat R of Lit 6:298 O 19 '29 160w

"Mr. Farnol has become the slave of an artificial convention of his own. But, within his limits, he shows a lively enough fancy, and he writes with breeziness and gusto."

+ — Spec 142:486 Mr 23 '29 50w

"Mr. Farnol's new book is a collection of fifteen stories, ten 'period' and five modern. Of the period stories 'Retribution' comes out top, but all of them are monotonous in plot and undistinguished in style."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p340 Ap 25 '29 60w

Wis Lib Bul 25:277 Jl '29

FARRELL, M. J. Young entry. 319p $2 Holt [7s 6d E. Mathews & M.]

29-26493

A breezy story of young life and young love in the Irish hunting country. Prudence is eighteen and badly named, for she is in constant disgrace in the eyes of her genteel old aunts, and the servants have frequently and cheerfully, to lie for her. Her girl friend "Peter" enters heartily into all her scrapes. The first coolness between them arises with the entrance of English Tony and his wrong ideas of the hunt. Prudence is presently absorbed in Tony, however, so it all ends pleasantly.

Booklist 25:359 Je '29

FARRELL, M. J.—Continued

"You just can't be horrid and superior about this book even though salmon fishing and fox shooting mean nothing in your life—and never will. The spirit of the young author is in every sentence, in the stiff phrasing, in the clichés and stock characters and the rough, eager form of the novel. You can't help liking her aliveness, which is neither deep nor lyrical but a surface quality of health and sturdiness." Margery Latimer

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 10 '29 730w

"There is a delightfully young and engaging quality to it. It moves to swift time and there are no dull spots." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 23 '29 1100w

"There is spirit in the book, energy, lightheartedness. And extremely realistic, vivid conversation, full of the color and salt of youth. The type, like its talk is foreign to us, wholly absorbed in hunting, dogs, and horses. It is a little difficult to sympathize or get very excited over the problems of lives entirely devoted to the field. Yet the hunting passages, the open-air riding, the maneuvers of the hounds blow with a strong fresh breeze through the story. They are spontaneous, living, whereas the high-spirited practical jokes are labored." Lillian Rogers

+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 16 '29 500w

"It is one of the most satisfying books of light fiction this reviewer has read in a long time. It has verve and vitality."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 3 '29 300w

"An example of the best type of light fiction, fresh, easily written and genuinely funny."

+ Outlook 151:350 F 27 '29 150w

Pratt p40 summer '29

"There is plenty of open-air life; and much talk about fox-hunting for those who like it. It is all rather silly and, perhaps because of a wild Irish candour, quite engaging." R. A. Taylor

— + Spec 140:329 Mr 3 '28 100w

"Prudence and Peter are modern, but sanely and not tiresomely so; and one of Mr. Farrell's greatest triumphs is the way he manages to give a vivid sense of their characters through stray snatches of their conversation. . . Because Peter and Prudence are so lovable and interesting the reader will the more resent Mr. Farrell's unnecessary attempt to drag a supernatural element into the book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p213 Mr 22 '28 380w

Wis Lib Bul 25:195 Je '29

FARSON, NEGLEY. Fugitive love. 267p $2 Century

29-7500

A rapid-fire romance centering about the love of Jenny Cain and the magnificent Swede, Torsten Aberg. Jenny's unscrupulous father has promised her in marriage to a political crook, Chauncey O'Malley. But Torsten saves her from this, and she in turn aids him to escape his enemies, when the scene shifts to Chicago. Here spies, gunmen and pistol shots come into play for a stirring climax, but the fugitive lovers escape danger.

Bookm 69:xxiv My '29 70w

"There is action from start to finish."

Boston Transcript p4 Je 1 '29 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '29 150w

FASTEN, NATHAN. Origin through evolution. 456p il trade ed $4; text ed $3 Knopf

575 Evolution 29-11540

"The purpose of this author in adding another to the many volumes already dealing with his subject is to provide a scientifically accurate account, brought to date, of the bases, elements and factors of evolution as the scientist views them, but presented in a manner intelligible and interesting for the layman who wants a dependable exposition of the theme and for the student who is not specializing in this field but desires to understand it. Dr. Fasten, who is Professor of Zoology in Oregon State Agriculture College and has had a wide and varied training and experience in zoological science, has achieved notable success in his aim."—N Y Times

Bookm 70:xvi D '29 170w

"Mr. Fasten writes clearly, but his style is entirely lacking in grace. His book will never be called fascinating, but it has informal value as a plain and conservative treatment of an important subject." H. M. Parshley

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 S 15 '29 750w

"In line with the title of his book, Professor Fasten has traced in a simple and straightforward way, matter from its origin to its highest expression as we know it today—mankind in evolution. Incidentally he performs two valuable services from the standpoint of the teaching scientist. First, he makes it easy for the truth-seeking layman to grasp the idea of evolution in the inorganic world and the universe at large as well as in animal life. Next, in a particularly illuminating chapter dealing with certain widespread misconceptions which have been attached to the evolutionary theory, he is at pains to show that the facts of evolution not only are compatible with real religion but materially strengthen it." N. M. Grier

+ Christian Century 46:1376 N 6 '29 320w

"For general reading the book has two special features of value, and one of them is its combination of scientific accuracy with simplicity of statement and readable style. Technical terms are not much used, and a glossary explains those that have been unavoidable. The other is that it is so modern, so up to date, that it contains accounts of and references to the investigations and conclusions of scientists that have not yet reached the stage of book publication."

+ N Y Times p13 N 17 '29 450w

FAULKNER, WILLIAM. Sartoris. 380p $2.50 Harcourt

29-3496

Bayard Sartoris, made more reckless than the traditional Sartoris men by the loss of his beloved brother John, comes home from the World war thoroughly determined to get rid of himself. He finally succeeds, after he has married and left a son to carry on the tradition of his wild family. The scene is northern Mississippi.

"To this review the Sartorises seemed melodramatic rather than dramatic. Mr. Faulkner has talent, but it is still immature." L. S. Morris

— Bookm 69:310 My '29 240w

"Whatever faults the novel may have it is worth reading, even worth plowing through the opening pages, where the style is annoying in its complexity for the downright excitement of many of its passages. . . It discloses a novelist of real imaginative power, who is more than half a poet." Herschel Brickell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 F 24 '29 1050w

"A work of uneven texture, confused sentiment and loose articulation. . . Mr. Faulkner appears as little interested in the working out of a theme as in the consistent creation of character. His principal interest, it would seem, lies in quantitative variety, in assembling within a single book the widest possible range of characters, situations, moods, effects and styles."

— N Y Times p8 Mr 3 '29 520w

"Mr. Faulkner has put some extraordinary pictures into his book of life in the hills of Northern Mississippi; there are times when the novel is remarkably good. Unfortunately it has certain defects of structure, and the style is at times needlessly difficult and complex." Herschel Brickell

+ — No Am 227:adv Ap '29 200w

"The novel is quite a good piece of workmanship, well organized and well told. One might feel that some intangible quality of excellence had been sacrificed for too big a canvas or that the story of Mr. Snopes's love letters was a trifle superfluous—but then, one might react most any way to a modern novel." J. D. Tasker

+ — Outlook 151:311 F 20 '29 320w
Wis Lib Bul 25:195 Je '29

FAULKNER, WILLIAM. The sound and the fury. 401p $2.50 J. Cape & H. Smith
29-20977

"A southern family of gentle blood is shown in decay, its members petty failures, drunkards, suicides, pathological perverts and idiots. Part One presents the tragedy as seen through the eyes of Benjy, the idiot son, a grown man thrown back into childhood by any chance sight or smell. Through his broken thoughts we learn of Caddy, a beloved sister, who has run away from the hideous home and sent back an illegitimate daughter. In Part Two, we move back eighteen years and witness, through the workings of his mind, the last day in the life of Quentin, brother of Benjy and Caddy. Part Three brings us again into the present, where we look through the mean eyes of Jason, the third brother. And in the final part of the novel, in the author's direct narrative, the spectacle of white disintegration is shown and sharpened by the emphasis thrown upon Negro solidity."—Outlook

---

"It is as merciless as anything that I know which has come out of Russia. I find myself wishing for someone with whom to compare William Faulkner, but to compare this writer from Mississippi with James Joyce or Marcel Proust or Chekov or Dostoevsky gets one nowhere, for Faulkner is definitely American. It will be interesting to see what readers and critics think of this novel. Many, I am sure will call the author mad. But if Faulkner is mad, then James Joyce is equally so; if Faulkner is obsessed with futility and insanity, so is Fyodor Dostoevsky. It is true that 'The Sound and the Fury' is insane and monstrous and terrible, but so is the life that it mirrors. It is difficult to read, but I could not put it down. I believe, simply and sincerely that this is a great book." Lyle Saxon
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 O 13 '29 950w
Boston Transcript p2 O 23 '29 1050w

"The author has chosen an unusual medium for his story in not one but four styles. Yet the four are welded together in perfect unity. The objective quality of the novel saves it from complete morbidity."
+ N Y Times p28 N 10 '29 500w

"To many it will be as incoherent as James Joyce, but its writer is a man of mature talent, and the story, if read with patience, turns such a powerful light on reality that it gains a fast grip on the emotions of the reader." Harry Hansen
N Y World p16 O 9 '29 580w

"We should say that William Faulkner is Joyce's most able and most consistent American disciple. He is by no means a slavish imitator of Joyce's style, and only in the second section of The Sound and the Fury does his effort to follow it seem labored and unoriginal. . . It is a novel of power and of terrible sincerity. We do, however, find that the theme, dramatic and potentially moving, loses much of its force and clarity by being presented, almost wholly, through subjective analysis. It takes a stronger hand than William Faulkner's to divert the stream of consciousness into channels of perfect usefulness and beauty." F. L. Robbins
+ — Outlook 153:268 O 16 '29 700w

"In his writing Mr. Faulkner shows a remarkable knack of opening a vista of horror with a single sentence. His power is shown almost as much by what he does without as what he uses. There is deliciousness in the figure of Gerald, the self-conscious aristocrat, the complete Man Who Does the Right Thing; there is an exquisite tenderness in Quentin's thoughts, at Harvard, of the negroes at home; but for the most part Mr. Faulkner rigorously denies himself humor and tenderness; here they would be in his way. This is a man to watch." Basil Davenport
+ Sat R of Lit 6:601 D 28 '29 730w

FAUSET, JESSIE REDMON. Plum bun. 381p $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d E. Mathews & M.]
29-4421

Angela Morgan is an educated colored girl fair enough to pass as white. Changing her name she goes to New York to live in Greenwich Village, and embarks on an unhappy love affair with a white man. Her younger sister, who is unmistakably colored, also goes to New York, but lives in Harlem and the sisters rarely meet. Anthony Cross enters the lives of both girls but does not know they are sisters. He too is "passing." A complicated situation arises, causing the three much pain before their problems of love and color are adjusted.

---

Booklist 25:321 My '29

"The characters are obvious types, and unfortunately are seldom remarkably real and convincing. 'Plum Bun' nevertheless, marks an advance over Jessie Fauset's earlier novel, 'There Is Confusion.' " V. F. Calverton
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 26 '29 550w

"A novel of very ordinary sorts about a subject of extraordinary interest. . . The analysis of Angela's character, her desire to get the good things of life which would be denied were her race known, her negative deceptions to attain her ends, her whole philosophy of carpe diem, are all admirably handled. . . The rest of the book is inconsistent and trivial. The story is melodramatic, unreal." B. K.
— + New Repub 58:235 Ap 10 '29 220w
Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p10m F 23 '29 130w

" 'Plum Bun' is told from the inside looking out, with a simple fidelity to character which has nothing to do with race or creed or color. Jessie Redmon Fauset's people are individuals first and members of an oppressed race afterward."
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 3 '29 520w

"It is an all too wordy book, and, especially toward the end, the plot is badly jumbled and manipulated with obvious difficulty. . . Nevertheless, 'Plum Bun' is one of this season's novels which most deserve the attention of readers who want the quality of literature in their fiction. As the presentation of a problem that grows daily more insistent, it frames a remorseless indictment that time and again strikes white bigotry straight between the eyes." Shaemas O'Sheel
— + N Y World p11m Ap 7 '29 420w
Outlook 151:430 Mr 13 '29 40w
St Louis 27:251 Ag '29

"The one strong point of the book, aside from the interest inherent in the problem itself is the comparison of the white and negro races, which Miss Fauset accomplishes deftly and with examples, and from which you get a sense of the warmer vitality and the growing purposefulness of the negro race today."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:866 Ap 6 '29 200w

"A second venture by the author of There is Confusion, and a far more mature rendering of life both in style and substance." Alain Locke
+ Survey 62:325 Je 1 '29 220w

"This long, careful novel on the colour question in the United States is written with marked earnestness. Parts of it are a good deal better than others; the story is told with too great a regard for naturalistic detail, the effect being to smother here and there a quick and decidedly sympathetic sense of character. The book although too concerned at times with the commonplace, is written throughout with insight and sincerity."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p939 N 29 '28 200w
Wis Lib Bul 25:102 Mr '29

FAUSSET, HUGH L'ANSON. William Cowper. 319p il $4 Harcourt [12s 6d J. Cape]

B or 92 Cowper, William [29-3206]

Mr Fausset is the author of studies of Donne, Coleridge, and Tolstoy. His present biography traces the heritage and background, the achievement and the tragedy of Cowper's life, and offers a sympathetic and reasonable explanation of his madness.

Booklist 25:283 Ap '29

"Mr. Fausset makes a book chiefly notable for its delicate and sensitive writing and its sincere effort to understand and present sympathetically a spirit that asks little of its fellows. He devotes himself chiefly to Cowper's inner life. . . This method makes the portrait seem at times the abstract projection and history of a spirit rather than the picture of a man living in a physical world." Theodore Morrison

+ — Bookm 69:205 Ap '29 600w

"Mr. Fausset's criticism of Cowper's poetry is sensitive and just, and his account of the struggle in him between the reason that imposes limits on experience and the poet's sensibility that desires 'to enter life more intimately and self-forgetfully by way of feeling and sensation,' is the best interpretation we have of Cowper's madness." F. K. Brown

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ja 27 '29 1350w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 9 '29 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p73 My '29

"His preoccupation with the etiology of poor Cowper's mania, though it looms rather large in the earlier half, does not prevent this study from being the most penetrating, the most sensitive, and the most sympathetic that any modern critic has given us." D. M. Stuart

+ — Nation and Ath 44:180 N 3 '28 750w

"He has already studied other religious problems in his Donne and Tolstoy, and he has many qualifications for the work: though I think even he has found the difficulties great. . . Mr. Fausset passes Cowper's writings pleasantly in review. His judgments are always fair and usually sound." E. E. Kellett

+ New Statesman 32:16 O 13 '28 1000w

"Mr. Hugh Fausset has rendered a distinct service to English letters: he has given us the first satisfactory biography of William Cowper." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p9m F 2 '29 560w

"Most biographies add only to our store of fact; this book illuminates life. It is a human study of exceeding value—a piece of highly beautiful work." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 27 '29 1650w

"The interpretation of Cowper's life which he offers may not wholly satisfy everyone, but, like all Mr. Fausset's work, it is suggestive, brilliant, and important."

+ Sat R 146:543 O 27 '28 1100w

Spec 141:993 D 29 '28 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p776 O 25 '28 1700w

FAY, BERNARD. Franklin, the apostle of modern times. 547p il $3 Little

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin 29-28650

Franklin's career of contrasts and paradoxes ably presented by a Frenchman. While unhonored and unloved by his countrymen, Franklin was worshipped by the French people, who fully appreciated him as the "first bourgeois in the world." The biographer dwells with interest upon the occasion of Franklin's visit to France; but the present work was due to his discovery of "between six hundred to nine hundred unpublished letters which throw new light on the Doctor's life. They have cleared up many obscure points; his religious and moral attitude, his Masonic rôle, his political and diplomatic activity, and the loves of his later years."

"He is solid, trustworthy and painstaking, but this does not mean that he isn't readable. His Franklin is a really satisfying book and is worth a dozen of the current run of 'brilliant' biographies." Grenville Vernon

+ Bookm 70:566 Ja '30 350w

"It is safe to say that no biographer of Franklin has approached his task with a wider or profounder scholarship. The result is a biography that is well proportioned and balanced, that interprets Franklin from the background of Colonial factional politics as well as from the perspective of international diplomacy, and appreciates at once the magnificent contributions and the grave inadequacies of Poor Richard." H: S. Commager

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 D 1 '29 1300w

"Extremely well-visioned and delightful portrait." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 7 '29 1700w

"Professor Fay has made a thorough study of the Franklin documents available. He has worked up the background with scholarly zeal. With such material it would be difficult to produce an uninteresting book. Nevertheless, the present volume leaves something to be desired. The style is dilute and mediocre. Although the author asserts that all statements are documented, a good many of them have the air of author's comments, of generalization and speculative interpretation of Franklin's state of mind, which might well be spared. Nevertheless, he has gven us a rich and rewarding survey of one of the most astonishing of American lives." R. M. Lovett

+ — New Repub 61:147 D 25 '29 1850w

"M. Fay's views, backed by a heavy but quite unobtrusive documentation, will be found set forth in 515 pages of first-rate reading. . . The style of the book throughout is easy if not inspired, and Mr. Bravig Imbs has done a valiant piece of work in preparing it for the American market. The pen-pictures of early Boston, Philadelphia and New York are worth while in themselves. There are an extensive bibliography and an index, and many of the illustrations are veritable documents. In short, no one who is in the least interested in Franklin will overlook this brilliantly thorough, scholarly and revealing biography." S: Putnam

+ N Y Evening Post p8 N 30 '29 700w

"In one respect at least, M. Fay's life of Franklin is superior to any other which we have. It excels in presenting Franklin not simply as a great American, but as one of the great men of his century. M. Fay was aided in his task by the discovery of hundreds of unpublished letters which apparently had not been utilized by previous writers on Franklin. These were helpful in clearing up certain phases of his life which had heretofore rested too much on conjecture. Add to these contributions the fact that M. Fay has been eminently successful in visualizing for his readers the sharply contrasting backgrounds against which Franklin moved during the various periods of his life, and one perceives that there was ample justification for this biography."

+ N Y Times p1 D 1 '29 2000w

"It is without undue prejudice in M. Fay's favor that I say that the book is one of immense scholarship, packed with detail, embodying new and illuminating information, and built upon a thesis which no one would care to dispute. On the other hand, I find in it plenty of evidence of M. Fay's unhistorical prejudices, a good deal of awkward writing, and a general sluggishness of movement that is destructive of enjoyment. I cannot but feel that if the book had been written with more care and discrimination it would have been better in every way." C. H. Grattan

+ — N Y World p10m D 1 '29 1080w

Reviewed by W: Frauenglass

Outlook 154:28 Ja 1 '30 400w

R of Rs 80:20 D '29 160w

"As this is incomparably the best biography of Franklin yet published, a book which at once answers the exacting demands of scholarship and reads like a romance, we may state its defects briefly and then proceed at more length to indicate its virtues. In part of his equipment M. Fay is an ideal biographer of Franklin. But in knowledge of the colonial American background, of some aspects of the American character, and, we may add, of the literary niceties of the English language, his equipment is inferior. There are times when we distrust even his view of Franklin, which, after the fashion of the present day, rather overemphasizes psychology. . . We are fortunate in obtaining so expert and careful a history of the man and all his significant acts, great and small, from one of the scholars who is most at home among the people and ideas of the period." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:507 D 7 '29 1800w

"If M Fay's narrative is not impeccable either in historical or biographical interpretation it is responsibly conceived, and fashioned out of details for which there is documentary evidence. In execution it is spirited and readable, though marred by occasional obscurity in the use of English."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '29 900w

FAY, BERNARD, and CLAFLIN, AVERY. American experiment. 264p $2.75 Harcourt

917.3 United States—Civilization. National characteristics, American 29-3157

A Frenchman studies with unusual sympathy and understanding the development and significance of the new civilization that is the United States. After sketching in the historical background out of which the American race and nation have developed, M. Faÿ analyzes the qualities and institutions of the American people which contribute to an original civilization and attempts to allay the hateful fear of America which he warns us is spreading in Europe.

---

"The definitely historical section of the book is limited to three chapters and covers one hundred pages. These chapters, and especially the one which deals with the middle period in American history, are disappointing, and contain too many careless sentences to be quite convincing. . . The coördination between the work of the two authors is not always perfect. In general, the point of view is that of the French observer. But in making such criticisms one must remember that the evident purpose is not to write a history, but to interpret American society today. When the authors touch on intellectual conditions in the eighteenth century, or on French ideas of America, and especially when they analyze life in contemporary America, they become shrewd and witty observers, having much to say that is wise and important. The chapter on 'American Institutions', all the way from the colleges to the movies, is admirable—and will need to be read by the social historians of the future." R. G. Caldwell

— + Am Hist R 34:855 Jl '29 530w

"Unlike many of his predecessors, the present author, a young French scholar, did not gather all his notions of America from clubs, hotel lobbies, and train windows. He has lived and studied in this country long enough to absorb something of the spirit of its institutions. Nevertheless, the book contains many sweeping generalizations, some of which are dubious, some half true, and some wholly wrong. In behalf of Mr. Faÿ it may be said that he has succeeded far better than most American writers who 'interpret' European countries."

+ — Am J Soc 35:522 N '29 150w

"The present work lacks even the profundity which characterizes Mr. Waldo Frank's brief study; it is the result of collaboration and is uneven, and the historical chapters, while popular, do not avoid being dull." G: E. G. Catlin

— Am Pol Sci R 23:775 Ag '29 550w

"This study is one which no student of the growth of American institutions can afford to pass over. M. Faÿ has gone far to place before his countrymen and fellow Europeans a true picture of the trends of our national life." E. A. Cottrell

+ Ann Am Acad 143:374 My '29 750w

Booklist 25:281 Ap '29

Reviewed by L: Gannett

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 F 3 '29 900w

"Whether Mr. Claflin's collaboration, begun 'on the battlefields of Verdun,' has extended to the subject-matter of the book, or to the translation, or to both is not clear, but M. Faÿ, either with or without Mr. Claflin's help, has evidently read American history to good purpose, and the English of the book has been exceptionally well done. Most of M. Faÿ's readers will be interested mainly in discovering how a French intellectual with a bent for history and sociology represents America to his countrymen. On the whole the portrait is well drawn." W: MacDonald

+ Nation 128:258 F 27 '29 750w

"The first three chapters are historical and will undoubtedly be of considerable use to uninformed French readers. But to Americans they are not new either in facts or interpretations. . . When it comes to interpreting contemporary American life, M. Faÿ is exceedingly unreliable." C. H. Grattan

— + New Repub 58:180 Mr 27 '29 600w

" 'The American Experiment' is, as you may guess from its title, an analysis of the origin, growth, government, institutions, morals and tendencies of this republic. It is eminently fair, accurate, mild. And equally tame, banal, bromidic. From cover to cover I did not perceive a spark of original observation, shrewd comment or penetrating induction." L: Sherwin

— N Y Evening Post p8m F 2 '29 780w

"It would be hard to find a more succinct or a better balanced account of the historical factors which have joined to produce the United States of the twentieth century than that given by M. Fay. In the space of 100 pages he has shown an ability for distillation which puts our own outliners to shame. His estimates of outstanding American statesmen are uniformly excellent, and he has made clear the exact contribution of each to our history, from Franklin to Wilson."

+ N Y Times p1 F 3 '29 1050w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:20 Mr '29 120w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:821 Mr 30 '29 620w

"This analysis, while admirable from the psychological point of view, takes perhaps too little note of economic inter-relationships between America and Europe. None the less, the book, especially because of the many penetrating observations of the last chapters, deserves well of the reading public in both this country and Europe." Merle Curti

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 21 '29 750w

Wis Lib Bul 25:126 Ap '29

FAY, CHARLES RYLE. Great Britain from Adam Smith to the present day; an economic and social survey. 458p $3.75 (12s 6d) Longmans

330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions. Great Britain—Social conditions. Great Britain—Industries [28-14399]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"A mature reader, familiar with some considerable portion of the literature of the period, will undoubtedly appreciate the quality of judgment and the new syntheses that distinguish the book. The younger student will hardly be able to grasp the full significance of the author's interpretation." A. P. Usher

+ — Am Econ R 19:268 Je '29 400w

"The book is the work of a mature scholar. The style 'is nervous, racy, and finished,' a description which Mr. Fay imputes to the writings of Adam Smith. The student of sociology will find much of value in this meritorious study." R. D. McKenzie

+ Am J Soc 34:747 Ja '29 400w

FAY, C: R.—Continued

"Dr. Fay is both an economist and a historian. His mastery of economic and historic fact is well known and is, indeed, manifest on almost every page of this work. Some of the most useful passages in the book are those which link up history with present-day questions. There are one or two doubtful points which probably arise from ambiguity or misunderstanding rather than error." Arthur Redford

+ Eng Hist R 44:144 Ja '29 900w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:619 D '28

"Part one, treated largely in terms of important statesmen is perhaps the most valuable of the four. Personalities are not overemphasized, and behind their names is presented a very welcome sketch of the financial side of the industrial revolution, an aspect of which all too little is known. Parts two and three, though more frequently treated in general surveys, are freshly written. . . The final part is excellent." C. F. Mullett

+ Pol Sci Q 44:315 Je '29 250w

St Louis 27:46 F '29

FAY, SIDNEY BRADSHAW. Origins of the World war. 2v; v 1, Before Sarajevo: underlying causes of the war; v 2, After Sarajevo: immediate causes of the war. 551;577p il $9 Macmillan

940.311 European war, 1914-1918—Causes. Europe—Politics 28-27688

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"No other work has yet appeared in English, French, or German which is at once so comprehensive, authoritative, impartial, and well proportioned." Preston Slosson

+ Am Hist R 34:336 Ja '29 1160w

"This long expected account is extensive and elaborate, in many parts very thorough, always scholarly, and often testifying to the author's great erudition. . . No extensive scholarly work on the origins of the war contains an abler or more sympathetic treatment of the German case, and it is most desirable that such treatment should be given." Raymond Turner

+ Am J Soc 34:931 Mr '29 350w

"The author has spent more than eight years in the preparation of this exhaustive treatise; he has worked over all the source material and is thoroughly familiar with all the previous treatments of the subject. He is, furthermore, a writer of singular balance—open-minded, clear, and of sound judgment. His book is, beyond question, the best single work on the subject in any language." W. L. L.

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:511 My '29 300w

Booklist 25:157 Ja '29

Reviewed by J: Carter

Bookm 68:579 Ja '29 40w

"He has given us the most authoritative and impartial survey of war origins that has appeared to date. It is not the final judgment, as the author would be the first to admit, in view of the gaps in the evidence." F: H. Soward

+ Canadian Hist R 10:67 Mr '29 700w

"Should the readers of this periodical only cursorily look over these two volumes of Professor Fay they could do much to dispose of some of the war legends; they could readily understand that the world war was not inevitable; that it could have been prevented by a more informed public opinion." G. G. Benjamin

Christian Century 46:199 F 7 '29 1500w

"It is altogether probable that this book will remain for many years to come the last word upon the subject in any language." J. W. Swain

+ Hist Outlook 20:247 My '29 720w

"The analysis is very well done and is valuable. Professor Fay's conclusions will not be always admitted by pro-Entente readers, but he is never markedly biased or wrong-headed."

+ Nation and Ath 45:280 My 25 '29 100w

"The most thorough and exact formulations of the new view of the origins of the World War we have yet had." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y World p11e Ja 6 '29 150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:13 F '29

"It is a monumental achievement, written with complete objectiveness and lack of bias. A classic among histories, the book is in itself an historical event. Its effect as the full import of its facts is widely absorbed, will be far-reaching." Ernest Gruening

+ Portland Evening News p5 Ja 22 '29 2200w

Pratt p30 spring '29

St Louis 27:170 My '29

"An achievement of the first-water, as well in the importance of its subject as for the manner of his treatment." B. E. Schmitt

+ Sat R of Lit 5:721 Mr 2 '29 3000w

"To one English reader not unacquainted with the diplomatic history of the critical pre-War years, Professor Fay—involuntarily perhaps—appears to be strongly pro-German."

Spec 142:sup591 Ap 13 '29 450w

"The most important attempt yet made by an American scholar to examine impartially both the immediate and the underlying causes of the outbreak of 1914."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 20 '29 1200w

"His long-promised book has been eagerly awaited. It is one of real importance; and will at once take its position as the best guide available to the whole of the long and tangled story with which it deals. It is the book essentially not of a partisan but of an impartial student."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p325 Ap 25 '29 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 25:101 Mr '29

FEARING, KENNETH. Angel arms. (Songs of today ser.) 64p $1 Coward-McCann

811 29-10640

Harsh songs of the city and its underworld, written in blank verse.

Reviewed by F. E. Hill

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 28 '29 120w

"There is nothing pleasant in the entire volume and little that by any stretch of the imagination of those who find beauty sometimes in the world could be called attractive or instructive except as the dissecting table may be fascinating to the medical student." F. M.

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 1 '29 150w

"The volume is alive and democratic in outlook." E. L. Walton

+ — Nation 129:22 Jl 3 '29 110w

"Authentic, unified, and genuine, but honestly dull." Rolfe Humphries

— + New Repub 59:104 Je 12 '29 300w

"The verse is brisk and hard, sometimes a little off key, but always effective and clear." Horace Gregory

+ — N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 27 '29 300w

FELLOWES, DAISY (DECAZES) (MRS REGINALD FELLOWES). Cats in the Isle of Man. 260p $2.50 Dial press [6s Heinemann]

29-20022

Claudia, a girl of the French aristocracy, loved Felix de Foljambe, but married Count Robert de Limon and bore him a son. Some time after her marriage, however, she became the mistress of Felix. She planned to go to America with him, but Felix did not prove a faithful lover, and Claudia stayed to take care of her husband, who had been wounded in the War.

"The book has several serious defects. It is told by a narrator who could not possibly be aware of the tithe of the facts she records. It also lacks atmosphere, in proportion as the people it is written about lack ties and natural feelings. It has the great merit, however, of being able to present a scene in the fewest possible words." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 147:482 Ap 6 '29 400w

"Intrinsically ironic material handled with a delicate cynicism. . . The book is written with a deceptively innocent air; in reality it has a good deal of late eighteenth-century French worldliness about it."
Times [London] Lit Sup p385 My 9 '29 170w

FERGUSON, CHARLES WRIGHT. Confusion of tongues; a review of modern isms. 464p il $3.50 Doubleday, Doran

289 United States—Religion. Sects 28-29463

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:230 Mr '29

"This book seems to us by all odds the best presentation of the leading spiritual psychopathologies which have made religious history such a crazy-quilted story, especially in America."
+ Bookm 68:xii Ja '29 100w

"Mr. Ferguson does not rate as an authority on the history of religion, but he has worked intelligently with authentic sources of information, and his style is buoyantly, sometimes boisterously, readable—if one is not repelled by apparantly flippant treatment of matters which are of tremendous import to those who believe in them."
+ — Christian Century 46:116 Ja 24 '29 300w

"An unfailingly amusing and reasonably thorough account of the numerous religious cults that flourish more or less successfully in America today."
+ Nation 128:210 F 13 '29 80w

"There is material for a score of 'Elmer Gantrys' in this account of American religions and cults. Mr. Ferguson has written a book which is less painful to read than 'Mother India' but more revolting, and English people will be relieved to know that he is an American himself." L. L. Irvine
+ — Nation and Ath 45:480 Jl 6 '29 750w

Reviewed by Vincent McHugh
N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 12 '29 500w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson
N Y Times p3 Ja 6 '29 1350w

"In the present volume the author has undoubtedly made a valuable contribution to contemporary critical literature. It is unfortunate that he sometimes spoils his effect by being rather too clever. At other times, too, his many extracts from documents and advertisements become boring, thus losing an effect by laboring the point. In his treatment of the Ku Klux Klan he strikes a happy balance, and as a result, it is the best chapter in the book. On the whole, the volume is well worth looking into." J. N. Nathanson
+ — N Y World p11m Ja 20 '29 700w

Reviewed by Evelyn Underhill
Spec 143:309 S 7 '29 170w

"While we agree that a first-rate and important book might be written on the varieties of religious expression we have to add that Mr. Ferguson has not written it. His concern is more with sensation than with significance, and he has little care for the subtleties of psychology. . . Whatever strictures we may have suggested upon Mr. Ferguson's style and manner of presentation, we fully acknowledge and would stress the interest of his matter. He is sufficiently though not invariably accurate in his details, but he has caught fairly enough, so far as we can see, the spirit of the faiths."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p732 S 26 '29 980w

FERGUSON, CHARLES WRIGHT. Pigskin. 383p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-23875

A satirical romance of American college life in Martha Sumner university, where football, or pigskin, rules everything, and learning, or sheepskin, comes out a very poor second. Poor Chancellor Horace Ethelmore Dickey tries to keep everybody happy—the fathers who think football is the only subject taught; the alumni who demand football victories; the millionaire who gives endowments; and the press which is always looking for trouble. And so it goes.

"Charles W. Ferguson's Pigskin is a very ill-natured book. Mr. Ferguson is firmly determined upon exposure in the manner of Sinclair Lewis. We may readily concede that, in the corruption and chicanery of the financial side of university administration, there is plenty of matter for exposure. In fact, Mr. Ferguson has made out a very good case. But he fails to capture or convince us. He lacks Mr. Lewis's genius for caricature and his aptitude for the selection of the exact and revelatory detail." Margaret Wallace
— Bookm 70:319 N '29 170w

"Mr. Ferguson is a good satirist because he cannot hate any of his characters or find any faultless."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 3 '29 420w

" 'Pigskin' is more nearly a novel than 'Elmer Gantry,' for Mr. Ferguson has a reverence for form and prefers to deal with actuality rather than with caricature. His irony has for its foundation literary photography. He presents his multitudinous snapshots and posed portraits and panoramas of life in a youthful Southern university with a reportorial impartiality. He does not descend into savage cartooning. Our chief complaint against Mr. Ferguson is that he presents too much. There is reality in 'Pigskin,' but its author has held his mirror a little too close to nature. He has too much regard for unessentials. In consequence, his novel is at least a hundred pages too long and filled with incidents and aimless trails of interest that never get anywhere in particular." F: F. Van de Water
+ — N Y Evening Post p11m N 9 '29 750w

"There is some good satire on the less than novel motif of hired athletes, and there is good observation of the manners and mores of bucolic collegians."
+ N Y Times p32 D 1 '29 170w

FERGUSON, WILLIAM BLAIR NORTON. Riddle of the rose. 338p $2 McBride [7s 6d Jenkins]

29-20437

"From the first page, when the story opens on Fifth avenue in the late afternoon, till it ends in Hillcrest, a little town on the Hudson, we are lost in a maze in which the clues are so inextricably entangled, the characters are so ensnared, that we feel we are walking alone in the dusk and seeing strange shapes among the trees, or wandering through some mediaeval castle with drawbridge and moat, where evil deeds were done of old. For the 'Crimson Rambler' stalks through the pages in ancient armor which diffuses a ruddy glow."—Boston Transcript

Bookm 70:xxxiii O '29 40w

"Anyone who likes a fast moving story with a thrill on every page, with a love story woven ingeniously into the thread of the mystery, will feel rewarded if he reads the riddle of Barsac de Rose." G. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 S 14 '29 450w

"There is no use in trying to guess the answer. If you must know, look in the back of the book."
N Y Times p22 N 3 '29 160w

"There are weak spots in the plot, but it's thrilling." W. R. Brooks
Outlook 153:312 O 23 '29 40w

"The story is based upon events which happened during the War, and the working out of a long-postponed vengeance; it is full of incidents as violent as they are unaccountable and unexpected and, if the reader can be persuaded to play fair with the author and not look at the end to begin with, he will have a good run for his money."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p670 Ag 29 '29 200w

FERGUSSON, HARVEY. In those days; an impression of change. 267p $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf 29-5600

The story of a man who went down into the Southwest in those days when the wagon trains were pouring into the land. Thru all the phases of the pioneering he stayed and worked and prospered. The days of the automobile found him still there.

For biographical sketch of the author see N Y World p10 Ap 14 '29

Booklist 25:360 Je '29

"In the directness of Mr. Fergusson's style one is reminded of Willa Cather's Death Comes for the Archbishop. Everything in both books is as clear and lucid as a piece of plate glass and yet both novels have the quality of depth which so many writers seek with curious devices and so often miss wholly. The refreshing feature of In Those Days is that its author sat down to his typewriter with a story to tell." Herschel Brickell

\+ Bookm 69:193 Ap '29 600w

"Harvey Fergusson in the pages of his latest novel has packed most of the major themes that make up the story of the winning of the West, and it would be difficult to find a writer better qualified to retell this national saga. . . But Jayson is one of the most unsympathetic human beings who was ever made the hero of an epic narrative; the reader is never drawn to him for a moment; he seems incapable of a broad or a noble gesture." Harrison Smith

\+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 F 10 '29 1100w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 6 '29 1100w

"The whole effect is so colorful and the various episodes are so well handled that it is not difficult to indulge the author's extra emphasis on his principal idea: the romance of realism." J. D. T.

\+ New Repub 58:367 My 15 '29 170w

"You won't have a better time reading any other book published between this Michaelmas and Whitsuntide. Again, as in 'Wolf Song' last year, Mr. Fergusson has shown that urbanity and distinction of style are not incompatible with writing about the frontier."

\+ N Y Times p8 F 3 '29 680w

"This is a thoroughly interesting tale for its own sake, but it contains deeper meanings for those who care to look for them. No one can really understand the American character of the present day without realizing that pioneering of one kind or another is right around the corner for most of us, and Mr. Fergusson makes this very clear." Herschel Brickell

\+ No Am 227:adv Ap '29 200w

"Mr. Ferguson's absorbing tale follows a natural course, and ably presents a plausible human narrative in a truthful setting of historical interest."

\+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '29 420w

"Harvey Fergusson pares away unessentials until he gets to the core of action. His people are of the quick not the dead, and we learn afresh that those who can, do, and that the race is to the strong. If it be the thing to compare a novel to that with which the author compares it—to life itself—then he has caught its pulse in his hand. There is a beat to it like the rhythm of any full spirit leaping free." Halle Schaffner

\+ Survey 62:498 Ag 1 '29 300w

FERRERO, GUGLIELMO. Seven vices; a novel of Italy in our own times. auth. tr. by Robert Livingston and Elisabeth Abbott. 2v 352;311p $5 Harcourt
29-14295

The city of Rome at the end of the last century forms the background. Susanna, a young Roman matron falsely accused of murdering her husband, and Oliviero Alamanni, son of a wealthy senator, are the principal protagonists. Oliviero plays Lohengrin to Susanna's Elsa, gets into serious difficulty, runs away to Paris with a courtesan, and at the close of the book returns to Rome.

"Mr. Ferrero has the true epic touch, rich but not verbose, inclusive but not heavy. The Seven Vices would be better reading if some of its detail were omitted, but as interesting and convincing portrayal of a confused, colorful period it achieves its purpose."

\+ Bookm 70:98 S '29 820w

"His method is old-fashioned; the novel moves slowly and somewhat ponderously, and the style seems to one accustomed to the lean tenseness of a great deal of modern prose more than a little wordy. To the writer bent upon showing his reader a period, however, and at the same time establishing the verity of his characters, this somewhat outworn approach has its value." Herschel Brickell

\+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Jl 7 '29 1450w

"An extremely important historical novel, ably translated, possibly slightly condensed by American editors, bearing a title wholly unworthy of the importance of the work." D. F. Gilman

\+ — Boston Transcript p4 Jl 13 '29 1500w

"The excitement, the sense of accomplishment that a good novel inspires are lacking. The cause lies mainly in the author's attitude toward his material. He has approached his data as a historian and not as a novelist. He has misused the historian's chief faculty—the ability to fix characters and events in an exact and unique relation to time and space, to correlate all the facts of a given case to its immediate setting so that personalities and circumstances belong irrefutably to a specific moment and to no other." Florence Codman

— \+ Nation 129:527 N 6 '29 620w

"Guglielmo Ferrero has produced a book that not merely towers and soars above the heads of his countrymen, dead or alive, but takes rank with the great fiction of all lands and all tongues. A noble work in the grand manner and of Olympian scope, the work of a man who sees human beings with merciless clarity and sees life whole as a spectacle of infinite absurdity and infinite amusement. Solid, sober and sweeping, its details are etched with vivified perfection. Although a picture of Rome in the 'nineties, its panorama is recognizable in any big capital and any period." L: Sherwin

\+ N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 20 '29 650w

"It runs close, very close, to being a great novel. The translation is admirably idiomatic, colloquial and spirited and for a picture of political society in a world capital of a generation ago it is priceless. Abounding in fine, easy characterization, great scope, superb vitality and disciplined literary action, Signor Ferrero's novel, atones for at least three of his seven years' silence." J: Carter

\+ N Y Times p7 Jl 7 '29 1500w

"'The Seven Vices' is written in the dramatic style characteristic of the author's historical works; there is penetration, power, wit and imagination, as well as profound knowledge of the background, Rome in the Nineties." Mary Shirley

\+ Outlook 152:430 Jl 10 '29 430w

"The novelist in Professor Ferrero's latest book conceals but imperfectly the historian. . . Fiction and historiography are sometimes sister arts, and the verve and color of expression which have served Professor Ferrero so well in the one, have not deserted him in the other." Garret Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 6:129 S 14 '29 970w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '29 850w

FERRIERE, ADOLPHE. Activity school; tr. by F. Dean Moore and F. C. Wooton. 339p $4 Day [12s 6d Allen & U.]

370.1 Education—Experimental methods. Education of children
28-27566

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:193 F '29

"It is a fine piece of work, very un-American in its scholarly thoroughness and very un-European in its lively, swift-moving style." Elisabeth Irwin

+ Bookm 68:706 F '29 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 F '29
St Louis 27:11 Ja '29

"It is an encouraging book, alive and stimulating itself, for its theme is the stimulation of life." Hughes Mearns

+ Survey 61:512 Ja 15 '29 120w

"The whole description of the Geneva curriculum abounds in interest. It would be easy to make fun of this or that detail . . . precisely because Dr. Ferrière is in such deadly earnest. But when we compare the 'activity school' with the ordinary school of tradition we are abashed. . . Every other page contains some useful or illuminating idea."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p361 My 2 '29 1200w

FERRIS, HELEN JOSEPHINE (MRS ALBERT B. TIBBETS). This happened to me; stories of real girls as told to [the author]. 241p $2.50 Dutton

170 Girls. Conduct of life 29-30588

"A book for the girl who wants other people to like her. The stories were said to have been told the author by various girls who explain how they overcame shyness, talkativeness, stage fright, fear of ridicule and other psychological faults."—Springf'd Republican

---

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Bookm 70:441 D '29 300w

"The editor of The American Girl brings together the real experiences of real girls who wanted to be popular, or were shy, or talked too much, or lost their tempers, or hated the houses they lived in, or suffered from other common woes of girlhood and yet managed to find the way out and follow it. Like the author's earlier book, 'Girls Who Did,' a wholesome, helpful, and attractive book for 'real girls.' "

+ J Home Econ 21:937 D '29 80w

"The confession story has invaded the world of girls' books, but so deftly has Miss Ferris handled her material that she has given it a constructive twist which not only assures girls that 'This Happened to Me' (as well as to you) but that 'I Cured Myself.' It is difficult to do justice to a book which makes so wholesome and welcome a contribution to problems more often handled heavily by psychologists and educators."

+ Nation 129:601 N 20 '29 120w

Reviewed by O. M. Fuller
N Y World p11m D 8 '29 20w
Springf'd Republican p6e D 15 '29 60w

FERRIS, HELEN JOSEPHINE (MRS ALBERT B. TIBBETS), comp. Love comes riding. 313p il $2.50 Harcourt

Short stories—Collections 29-24079

A collection of love stories for girls in the teens. Contents: The Sire de Malétroits's door, by R. L. Stevenson; Singing eagles, by Marguerite Jacobs; The nightingale and the rose, by O. Wilde; Red poppies, by Alice Brown; A chaparral prince, by O. Henry; The mill of dreams, by Eleanor Farjeon; The snowstorm, by A. Poushkin; Her first ball, by Katherine Mansfield; The keeper of the light, by H. Van Dyke; The star lovers, by Grace James; An unfinished story, by R. H. Davis; The melancholy hussar, by T. Hardy; Land's end, by W. D. Steele

---

"Their literary merit is high and their influence good, for there is a lift to the spirit in every one. Girls must have this sort of reading matter." M. L. Becker

+ Bookm 70:443 D '23 230w

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner
N Y Times p12 D 15 '29 100w

"An admirable collection of thirteen stories, beginning with that one which never fails to thrill, 'The Sire de Maletroit's Door,' by Robert Louis Stevenson, down to a quite modern story by Wilbur Daniel Steele, 'Land's End.' " O. M. Fuller

+ N Y World p11m D 15 '29 150w

"The best anthology of love-stories that I have seen for old or young is one for girls, Love Comes Riding. The literary quality of these stories is uncommonly high and well sustained, but the feature that most impresses me is their extraordinary diversity. Love comes riding from every point of the compass and in as many guises as there are stories, and every time there is a lift to the story." M. L. Becker

+ Outlook 153:590 D 11 '29 120w

FETZER, HERMAN (JAKE FALSTAFF, pseud.). Book of Rabelais. 246p il $4 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Rabelais, François 28-28605

The author has attempted to write this life of the French satirist as Rabelais himself might have written it. "I have enterprised, in a desire to do what is fitting," he says, "to write this anecdote of the great doctor's life as I would tell it in an alehouse, if I were fortunate enough to be in one and to have the ear of a convivial company."

---

Booklist 25:283 Ap '29

"So little is actually known of the life of Rabelais that any very lengthy study of his quiet history must inevitably be regarded more or less in the light of fiction. In Mr. Falstaff's book there is little to complain of, for the author has taken no great liberties with what is known. One wishes, however, that Mr. Falstaff's style presented fewer obstacles."

+ — Bookm 68:xvi F '29 150w

"He has essayed to paint 'a lively and faithful portrait' of the friar, physician and teller of great tales. Of the liveliness there can be no question, though it is often somewhat too clever and self-conscious, especially when it takes an epigrammatic turn. Of the fidelity it is difficult to judge, for on many pages Messire Francois is hidden beneath the cloud of his biographer's opinions on life in general and all things in particular."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 30 '28 200w

"This book is interesting only as a novel approach to Rabelais's life. Of course, nothing new may be found here and the outright style adopted by 'Jake Falstaff' often produces, because of its brusqueness, the opposite effect from what must have been intended. Accuracy is not lacking, but the whole work conveys an air of incompleteness."

— + Boston Transcript p6 N 28 '28 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p40 Mr '29

"This is no common biography. It is uneven, it is overdone, it sometimes flounders and sprawls; but it nevertheless bears here and there the unmistakable marks of something that approaches genius."

+ — Nation 128:208 F 13 '29 120w

"The author, fortunately, knows something of the material with which he is working, and for this we should not be ungrateful. We should be grateful, too, for the restraint which he, on the whole, has exercised in enlarging upon the all too few facts in the case. Another point on which Jake Falstaff deserves praise is that, while leaning to the traditional portrait of Rabelais the Jester, he has not forgotten Rabelais the Humanist. . . As for the style of the work, it is overmannered; with a forced striving for an archaic whimsicality. This makes for dull plodding, and this is the greatest fault which may be found with the book." S: Putnam

N Y Evening Post p9m N 10 '28 620w
St Louis 27:168 My '29

FETZER, HERMAN (JAKE FALSTAFF, pseud.). Reini Kugel: lover of this earth. 283p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-5960

The roistering adventures of Reini Kugel, super-strong man, lover of this earth and its fruits, are set out in a blustering prose style interrupted with verse as Reini Kugel occasionally bursts into song.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 19 '29 130w

"Written with the bold free style of a buccaneer it captures interest from the beginning, and before one is half way through one wonders when something is going to happen. Always just ahead there is the vague promise of action at last. It has the style of a masterpiece of terseness and the plot of a bowl of bread and milk."

— + Boston Transcript p7 Mr 30 '29 250w

"Mr. Falstaff tries hard to follow in the footprints of François Rabelais but his shoes are too small. There are several good jokes and a couple of lusty songs in this satiric extravaganza, but the net impression one gains is that of a good-humored literary exercise."

— Nation 128:406 Ap 3 '29 60w

FEUCHTWANGER, LION. Pep; American songbook; English version by Dorothy Thompson. 100p il $2 Viking press

831 29-17096

The author of "Power" and "The Ugly Duchess," in rather heavily playful mood, satirizes the American Babbitt in a series of poems illustrated with amusing drawings by Constantin Aladjalov.

"As poetry 'Pep' is a 100 per cent flop, but as a reflection of the German conception of Americanism it is unpleasantly revealing. Aladjálov's pictures are subtler and more biting satire than the rather crude jingles of Mr. Smith-Wetcheek-Feuchtwanger."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 18 '29 250w

"If Miss Thompson has not succeeded in making another Carl Sandburg of the mythical Mr. Wetcheek, she has nevertheless done a very workmanlike job on a plainly difficult task. . . Nearly as interesting as the text are the pen and ink drawings of Constantin Aladjalov. They also are sardonic and subtly fantastical. Cover and jacket contribute a smart touch of modernism to a very sophisticated little volume." M. L. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 18 '29 380w

" 'Pep' is a joke by Lion Feuchtwanger at the expense of the so-called Americanization of Europe. It is not as good as it might be, but it is amusing. It arouses smiles and occasional chuckles if not a loud guffaw. . . Herr Feuchtwanger's gentle literary satire will not aggravate us who have been the victims of the stout and resounding staves of Messrs. Sinclair Lewis, Mencken, Lardner, et al." Herbert Gorman

— + N Y Times p2 Ag 18 '29 1150w

"Feuchtwanger's jibes at American minds, manners and morality are scurrilous, but well merited. And the illustrations are most appropriate. But the little book won't strike the spot where it would do the most good."

Outlook 152:628 Ag 14 '29 90w

Sat R of Lit 6:594 D 21 '29 280w

FEVAL, PAUL, and LASSEZ, M. Years between; adventures of D'Artagnan and Cyrano de Bergerac; tr. by John W. Chase. 4v v 3, Secret of the Bastille; v 4, Heir of Buckingham. 303;312p $5 (ea 7s 6d) Longmans

29-3430-31

Carrying on in the dashing spirit of the first two volumes of "The years between" these last two volumes bring to a romantic close the stirring adventures of Tancrède the mysterious cavalier and his gallant friends Cyrano and d'Artagnan.

Booklist 25:322 My '29

"There have been direct and indirect imitations of Dumas almost without number and almost all of them quite beneath contempt; but here for the first time you will find romances which are genuine disciples of the master whose secret has never been learned by romance-going hacks." Donald Douglas

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ja 27 '29 820w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 26 '29 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p95 Je '29

"The entire four volumes constitute a daringly successful attempt, not merely to bridge the gap between 'The Three Musketeers' and 'Twenty Years After' but to capture the very qualities of Dumas's style. The translation by Mr. Chase is highly efficient."

+ Nation 128:405 Ap 3 '29 120w

"If only there had been no eagle, these works would have been thrilling enough—and they are thrilling enough to keep one up nights reading them." S: Putnam

N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 26 '28 900w

N Y Times p9 Ja 20 '29 520w

Reviewed by Arthur Strawn

N Y World p10m Ja 20 '29 1250w

"The job has been well done. D'Artagnan and Cyrano de Bergerac are present and the mile-a-minute action of the original classic, as well as the quaint style, are faithfully followed by Dumas's ghosts." Milton Byron

+ Outlook 151:150 Ja 23 '29 110w

"Here is all the machinery which the elder Dumas borrowed or invented, rattling along as fast as ever it did under the hand of the master. And here are Dumas's characters—what were they ever, one French critic has asked, more than a plume, a sword, a mustache?—behaving as they invariably behaved. Even the English history is as refreshingly absurd as if it had been written in the reign of Louis-Philippe. A life-long lover of Porthos, Athos, and Aramis, one who has often sighed, in crass defiance of the critics, for more tales about them ought to be over-joyed. And yet—."

Sat R of Lit 5:984 My 4 '29 350w

"The narrative still proceeds, strong and direct and knit together. But some plausibility is lacking. A suspicion creeps in that the writer has his tongue in his cheek; and we ask ourselves unwillingly whether, when this figure is so amazingly unlike Cromwell, this other figure may also be unlike Richelieu—which is a pity, for it is all very good fun and very stirring, and we ought not to be forced to ask such questions."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p329 Ap 25 '29 380w

Wis Lib Bul 25:161 My '29

FICKE, ARTHUR DAVISON. Mountain against mountain. 100p $1.50 Doubleday, Doran

811 29-5434

"Paris 1917," a long poem on the World war; "Lyrics for the young" and "Lyrics for the old," short poems, many of which have been published in American magazines; and "The return of Christ," compose the book.

Booklist 25:314 My '29

"Mr. Ficke's new book is not so good as Sonnets of a Portrait Painter and strikes one as falling a little too close to a prose level." Conrad Aiken

— Bookm 69:215 Ap '29 220w

Reviewed by J: Drummond

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 5 '29 550w

"Sincerity of thought, dignity and true beauty of expression can all be found in this slim volume."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '29 160w

"In 'Mountain Against Mountain' there are two short narratives which reveal a peculiarly poetic temperament. Although they fall far short of greatness, the lyrics which fill out the volume are seldom trivial or commonplace. Each one gives evidence of Mr. Ficke's unusual imaginative faculty." J. D. Tasker

+ — Nation 129:254 S 4 '29 260w

"One finds a variety of matter and of observation, but the impact is weak." R. E. L.
— New Repub 59:80 Je 5 '29 100w

"Arthur Davison Ficke is an urbane and amiable anarchist, always gentlemanly, always genuinely likable. He accepts the futility of his existence with good-natured understanding. He is never unintelligent; he uses his facilities for writing accurate verse with undisputed warmth and charm." Horace Gregory
+ N Y Evening Post p8m F 9 '29 280w

"There is excellent work in that portion of the book called 'Lyrics for the Young,' still more excellent work in 'Lyrics for the Old,' and an original idea, color and more good rhetoric in the concluding extended piece called 'The Return of Christ.' But Mr. Ficke is distinctly not one of the major poets of our time. . . He is, at his best, a sensitive poet of certain attainments who comes nowhere near Mr. Robinson, for instance."
— + N Y Times p38 Mr 17 '29 350w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks
+ — N Y World p11m F 10 '29 350w

"Those who are interested in the spectacle of modern poetry, as well as those who know Mr. Ficke's earlier work, will find in 'Mountain Against Mountain' two narrative poems which represent a development, at least a new and interesting phase, in the author's verse. Both 'Paris 1917' and 'The Return of Christ' show the peculiar individual temperament of Mr. Ficke's 'Sonnets of a Portrait Painter.'" J. D. Tasker
+ Outlook 151:269 F 13 '29 200w

"Mr. Ficke's long opening poem, 'Paris 1917,' and his long closing poem 'The Return of Christ' both exhibit a commonplaceness of style, an absence of all literary and rhetorical distinction, that naturally do not compensate for their lack of poetic interest, imaginative beauty, and power. For the rest we have here a pleasant afterglow of romantic nineteenth century rumination."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:1030 My 18 '29 230w

FIELD, HARRY HUBERT. After Mother India. 325p $3.50 Harcourt [7s 6d J Cape]

915.4 Mayo, Katharine. India—Social conditions. Women in India 29-18643

This book is an attempt to consider some of the charges made against Miss Mayo's "Mother India" in the light of fresh evidence. Numerous press attacks upon "Mother India" are discussed, the part Gandhi played in the controversy, the debate over Miss Mayo's child marriage statements, etc.

Bookm 70:xiv D '29 150w

"Mr. Field's materials are similar to those used in 'Mother India,' as might be expected after his statement that he 'assisted in the editing' of that book, and his method of choosing witnesses and appraising evidence is like hers. Statistics and authorities that agree with Miss Mayo and support her conclusions are accepted without reservation; other statistics and authorities are ignored, rejected or belittled." W. N. Brown
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 13 '29 950w

"Mr. Field's book represents an excellent documentation of Miss Mayo's thesis, which may be almost impossible for the same demonstrators to challenge successfully."
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 16 '29 270w

"At least nine volumes have been published in reply [to Miss Mayo's 'Mother India'] and nobody knows how many scores of magazine articles. Mr. Field, who was spending some time in India investigating matters of public health when Miss Mayo was gathering her material, has digested the protests and denials and subjected them to critical examination. His conclusion is that the criticisms of Miss Mayo and her book are not justified, and that her unfavorable report upon certain aspects of Hindu social life was a true representation of the conditions."
Christian Century 46:1251 O 9 '29 250w

Reviewed by Stanley High
Current Hist 31:224 N '29 1100w
Nation and Ath 46:751 N 2 '29 220w

Reviewed by C: Johnston
N Y Times p3 Ja 5 '30 40w
St Louis 27:341 D '29

Reviewed by E: Thompson
Sat R of Lit 6:203 O 5 '29 1100w
Spec 143:636 N 2 '29 800w

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN. Hitty; her first hundred years. 207p il $2.50 Macmillan

29-22704

The memoirs of a very personable wooden doll who was carved from mountain ash wood over a hundred years ago and lived thru many experiences on land and sea thereafter. Her first appearance was in Maine, but she wandered far—to the South seas and India, before she returned to the land of her birth.

Booklist 26:125 D '29

"Written against a rich historical background, full of excitement and action, Hitty is a book which will, I predict, appeal to boys as well as girls. That is, it will if we give them a chance at it!" Helen Ferris
+ Bookm 70:308 N '29 170w

"Rachel Field in writing Hitty's story has surpassed anything she has done. Hitty is a real character, happily conceived and imaginatively and honestly developed. Miss Field's assimilation and reproduction of the 1800 American scene and mood add a rich background to the adventures of the doll. It is this careful, yet unlabored re-creation of the period that adds to the value of the book and heightens the effect of Miss Field's keen characterization." Josiah Titzell
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 N 3 '29 1300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p159 D '29

"Hitty, a doll who has been invested by her creator, Rachel Field, with a personality which might well be expanded to the proportions of a novel, has been equally fortunate in finding an artist who does her and her adventures ample justice. Hitty's dignified and animated progress through American scenes in the best traditions of the American grand manner renders her a rare literary personage. She is irresistible, and a live character with pegs in place of muscles."
+ Nation 129:598 N 20 '29 160w

"'Hitty: Her First Hundred Years' shows promise of becoming a classic. Rachel Field gives us Hitty's charm and sturdy spirit in pure and simple English, of a slightly antique flavor, unadulterated by any of the saccharine sentimentality which makes most children's books unreadable, at least for adults." Ruth Seinfel
+ N Y Evening Post p14m N 16 '29 500w

N Y Times p12 N 17 '29 70w

"Just where the audience begins for Rachel Field's Hitty, it would be hard to say, and I see no reason for its ending anywhere. Here is another book to stay." M. L. Becker
+ Outlook 153:589 D 11 '29 100w

"When three such persons as Rachel Field, Dorothy Lathrop, and a genuine hundred year old American doll put their heads together the quite unusual must result. Few books have excited such curiosity as the memoirs of Hitty during their making, and still fewer perhaps have so amply justified all expectations. . . As a joint production the book is unsurpassed, nor could its production be better." M. W. Bianco
+ Sat R of Lit 6:392 N 16 '29 650w

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN. Pocket-handkerchief park. 60p il 75c Doubleday, Doran

29-21923

It was really no park at all, only a small green open space surrounded by tall buildings.

FIELD, R. L.—Continued
But it was big enough to allow old Mrs Solomon with her pretzels to hold forth; there was the merry-go-round in one corner; in another Mr Enricho had his ice-cream wagon; Pop sold balloons on the lawn, and in one corner stood the little Black Iron Boy who had once been a hitching post. The neighborhood children loved the little park, and were heartbroken when it was to be sold. Then one midsummer eve Timothy made a wish, and the little park remained as it had been.

Cleveland Open Shelf p160 D '29

Reviewed by O. M. Fuller
N Y World p11m N 17 '29 230w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Outlook 153:589 D 11 '29 100w
Sat R of Lit 6:431 N 16 '29 150w

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN, comp. American folk and fairy tales. 302p il $3 Scribner

398 Folklore—United States 29-25017

The American folk and fairy tales in this volume for children are gathered from the following sources; Indian legends, Negro stories, Louisiana folk tales, Paul Bunyan stories, Southern mountain stories, Rip Van Winkle and Hawthorne's Great stone face.

"Miss Field does not pretend to be exhaustive or comprehensive, but we may all agree as to the representative quality of her choice. Her preface is an interesting discussion of the essentials of folk and fairy tales."
+ Cath World 130:377 D '29 280w

"Nathaniel Hawthorne, Washington Irving, Joel Chandler Harris, James Stephens, Percy MacKaye, George B. Grinnell, and others are impressed into service by Rachel Field to make this first contribution to authentic American mythology. It is a notable and impressive showing, and should inspire additions from parts of the country not treated in this volume. The drawings are good, but the colored illustrations are not in harmony with the spirit or make-up of the book."
+ Nation 129:602 N 20 '29 120w
N Y Evening Post p14m N 16 '29 100w

"This book is truly representative of America's wealth of tradition and her many peoples." O. M. Fuller
+ N Y World p11m N 17 '29 230w

FIELDING, ARCHIBALD. Cluny problem. 321p $2 Knopf [7s 6d Collins]
29-9000

Sir Anthony is killed while investigating a theft in Cluny. His ex-fiancée and a Scotchman with a remarkable dialect clear up the double mystery and fall into a romance.

"What with disguises, red herrings, two beauteous damsels and a fascinating vamp there's not a dull moment in and about Villa Porte Bonheur at Cluny—and the end offers another problem to think over on blue Mondays." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 31 '29 130w
N Y Times p22 Ap 21 '29 130w

"This author has a tremendous understanding of detail, but his verbosity is more than once irksome, and generally his plots want buttoning up. The ingredients are all there, but need more skilful mixing." H. C. Harwood
+ — Sat R 147:137 F 2 '29 150w
Sat R of Lit 5:936 Ap 20 '29 300w

"Mr. Fielding not only presents a most exciting detective story, but a really good novel as well. The people are all so vivacious, various, and picturesque that they really matter to the plot, instead of sticking about like lay figures waiting for the detectives to question them. The Cluny Problem is brilliantly successful. It stimulates through its progress and satisfies in its conclusion." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 141:828 D 1 '28 220w

"The story is of the kind that the reader likes to pursue at one sitting to discover the truth of the matter."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '29 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p46 Ja 17 '29 180w

FIELDING, ARCHIBALD. Mysterious partner. 286p $2 Knopf [7s 6d Collins]
29-17221

"Farthing was one of the oldest houses in England. And under its roof were Edgar Danford, the owner; his wife, his brother and his stepdaughter; his estate agent, Rivers; his business partner and a number of other less important people—when there rang through the drawing-room the ghastly, ghostly laugh the third repetition of which always shortly preceded the death of a member of the family. Knowing this, it will not startle you to find the unfortunate Danford dead, strangled in his bed, a few mornings later. Whereupon our old friend Inspector Pointer gets busy and untangles a very complicated mystery."—Outlook

Bookm 70:xxxiv O '29 20w

"Mr. Fielding solves his uncanny riddle credibly." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 8 '29 130w
N Y Times p38 O 20 '29 150w

"A little long, but otherwise excellent."
+ Outlook 153:74 S 11 '29 200w
Times [London] Lit Sup p405 My 16 '29 220w

FIFE, ROBERT HERNDON. Young Luther; the intellectual and religious development of Martin Luther to 1518. 232p $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Luther, Martin 28-22943

An account of the early religious development of Martin Luther. The author, who is professor of Germanics in Columbia university, delivered the lectures of which the book is constituted, in 1927 at Upsala university.

"Because it is composed very largely of references to and considerations of source materials, it is not a preeminently readable book, but for the same reasons it is valuable as a text and reference book. It is obviously well documented." M. E. M.
+ Boston Transcript p2 D 15 '28 350w

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness
Crozer Q 6:112 Ja '29 420w

"The conclusions that are reached on the basis of careful source-studies are in no way new, but the book is to be highly recommended."
+ J Religion 9:158 Ja '29 60w

FINE, NATHAN. Labor and farmer parties in the United States, 1828-1928. 445p $3 Rand school of social science

329.8 Labor and laboring classes—United States. Socialist party (United States). Political parties—United States 28-24182

"A painstaking history of farm and labor parties in the United States during the last hundred years, from the launching of the first workingman's party by the trade unions of Philadelphia in July, 1828, to the present."—Cleveland Open Shelf

"Any satisfactory treatment of the history of third party movements in the United States requires a more comprehensive and thorough knowledge of economic and political history than the author discloses, with the result that he has given us a narrow presentation of the history of labor and farmer parties unrelated to the major forces and movements which characterize American development. His approach to the subject is quite distinctly from the standpoint of labor and reveals a too superficial knowledge and lack of comprehension of the farmer and his problems." L: B. Schmidt
— Am Econ R 19:713 D '29 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p86 Je '29

"The heroic struggle of these parties of the Left makes a dramatic story, and Mr. Fine has told it well. He handles his facts with such sound selective judgment and critical fairness that his book is likely to become the authority in this field."

+ Nation 128:378 Mr 27 '29 200w

"Mr. Fine has put us all in his debt by his careful work in a difficult and neglected field of history. He leaves no one in doubt about his own thorough belief in the necessity of a political party to champion the interests of the farmers and workers. But he does not let his beliefs run away with his facts. And so far as I am aware from the confusing mass of material he has had to examine, he has drawn his facts with only a few minor errors." Norman Thomas

+ World Tomorrow 12:345 Ag '29 850w

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. Courageous companions. 304p il $3 (10s 6d) Longmans

29-20115

An adventure story of a young English boy named Osberne who shipped with Magellan upon the first voyage around the world. The book won the juvenile fiction contest prize of $2000 offered by Longmans, Green and Company.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see N Y World p10m N 3 '29

---

Booklist 26:125 D '29

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Bookm 70:441 D '29 120w

"It is the task of a master of the art of adventure to infuse [his] material with blood and with life. . . In 'Courageous Companions' the author has met this demand of his art. His tale is vitally alive. Proportion is there, thorough knowledge of the breadth and depth of his subject and a keen zest for the sport of the thing." D. C. Lunt

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 N 24 '29 1000w

"This is eminently a young boy's book and will lend a lasting glamour to the prosaic old geography lesson. Adventure-loving little girls may enjoy it too, although it is only fair to warn them that not one little girl figures in the whole story."

+ Cath World 130:376 D '29 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p133 N '29

Nation 129:601 N 20 '29 40w

"The descriptions of the sea, of storms, the feeling of the lack of knowledge in those brave days, the lack of food, the terror of some of the bleak, black nights is consistently felt by the reader because of the vigor with which the story is written. . . It is a finely proportioned book." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p34 O 6 '29 200w

"This is as fine a story of the sea as has yet been written for young people. . . The illustrations in black and white by James Daugherty make an ideal setting for the book, for the artist has not only caught the spirit of the author in interpreting his story but he has by some magic whisked the reader back four centuries." O. M. Fuller

+ N Y World p10m O 20 '29 600w

"I read it with mounting enthusiasm because it is a brilliant evocation of the days of Magellan and of the spirit in which adventurers went round the world, with the magic that may lie in words well used." M. L. Becker

+ Outlook 153:590 D 11 '29 50w

St Louis 27:316 N '29

Reviewed by F. V. Morley

Sat R of Lit 6:393 N 16 '29 1700w

"It is a colorful, smashing tale of the sea, of mutiny, of perilous rescues, of all the danger of a voyage in uncharted seas, made vivid by the facile pen of a skilful, imaginative writer."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '29 140w

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. A man for a' that; the story of Robert Burns. 259p $3 Stratford

B or 92 Burns, Robert 29-17486

A biography of appreciation, rather than of literary pretense or psychological analysis in the modern manner, is Mr Finger's study of the Scotch poet, written for all lovers of the work of Robert Burns. It is a simple and sympathetic study of his life and an understanding analysis of his poems.

---

Boston Transcript p5 N 13 '29 420w

"The usual patterns for biographical writing he has happily flung aside. Charles J. Finger loves Bobby Burns and all his salty rhyme, and this love he will communicate in a book which is written with a zest that is as refreshing as a brisk breeze in a stuffy library. The title indicates his approach. By copious and deft quotation, and by examining the evidence not under the microscope of pretentious scholarship but with the eyes of simple human understanding he establishes Burns as a flesh and blood creature." Shaemas O'Sheel

+ N Y World p11m N 10 '29 500w

"Mr. Finger thinks his own thoughts, and says what he thinks, and whether you agree or not, his honesty, in this life of Robert Burns, will be refreshing to you. There's a good deal to be said for common sense, even in biography, and there's plenty of it in this book. Also, common sense makes good reading—a fact which many authors don't seem to realize. If you are interested in Burns, we predict that you'll like this book."

+ Outlook 153:29 S 4 '29 100w

"In the welter of biographies that have descended upon us the past ten years, this story of Robert Burns by the former editor of Reedy's Mirror stands out because of its straightforward, refreshing style, its sympathetic understanding of the Scottish bard both as a man and a poet."

+ World Tomorrow 12:523 D '29 120w

FINLEY, JOHN HUSTON. Thalia; or, A country day; a masque. 75p $2 Houghton

812 29-10773

A poetic drama, written in archaic language and using the pastoral theme, in which Thalia, the rustic muse, a porcupine, a woodchuck, a rabbit and a fox are the main characters.

---

"John Finley in his 'Thalia' has made the mistake of thinking that a modern masque should be written in archaic language and on an old pastoral theme. His animal characters, his countrymen are the usual figures. The play within the masque has the old theme of the werewolf. The result is that for the modern reader the long poem, despite its evidence of careful workmanship, is dull." E. L. Walton

— Nation 129:150 Ag 7 '29 70w

"Although for his first venture Mr. Finley has deliberately selected a poetic genre no longer having the widest appeal, the humaneness in the treatment of this theme enables the poet to escape to some degree out of his form. There is a breath of modern air blowing through the lines, and this in spite of the many archaic words employed. One thing John Finley Jr. has attained at the outset of his career, and that is skill in execution; his mastery of verse, utilized to give expression to a freer range of thinking, may eventually carry him far." Percy Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p4 My 12 '29 700w

FINNEY, ROSS LEE. Sociological philosophy of education. (Modern teachers' ser.) 564p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

370.1 Education. Sociology. Education—Curricula 28-6558

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"When it becomes so easy to 'explain' the various complex forms of social behavior merely by the superficial use of psychological terms, it is certain that not only 'dullards,' but many

FINNEY, R. L.—Continued
misguided students, will fail to see the need of delving experimentally by more laborious methods into the problems of psychology. The plausibility of many interpretations made by such writers only increases the deception, and delays the progress of real science." J. P.
— Am J Psychol 41:146 Ja '29 320w

"Light can dazzle as well as illuminate, and a sort of Chautauqua cleverness occasionally distracts one from the dignity of the theme and the seriousness of the argument. . . When all is said, I would commend this remarkable contribution as being of great pith and moment." W. P. Lemon
+ — Christian Century 45:1493 D 6 '28 580w

Reviewed by Christian Gauss
New Repub 57:170 D 26 '28 2000w
St Louis 26:348 N '28

FIRKINS, INA TEN EYCK, comp. Index to short stories; supplement. 332p price on application Wilson, H.W.

016.8 Short stories—Bibliography

"The arrangement followed in the Supplement is practically the same as that in the earlier editions of the Index; namely, that of listing in one alphabet the author and title entries of the stories,—full information as to where the stories may be found being given under the author entry. References which appear in the Second Edition have not been repeated but old titles which reappear in later collections are listed; it will therefore be necessary to use both the Second Edition and the Supplement to be sure that all available sources are found. There have been indexed in the Supplement 11,092 stories by 1,031 authors; the latter represent thirty-six nationalities."—Preface

Booklist 25:375 Jl '29
Library J 54:855 O 15 '29 450w
Wis Lib Bul 25:272 Jl '29

FIRTH, RAYMOND WILLIAM. Primitive economics of the New Zealand Maori; with a preface by R. H. Tawney. 505p il $6.25 Dutton [25s Routledge]

330.993 Maoris. Society, Primitive. Civilization, Maori 29-10146

An account of the social and economic organization of the Maori people in New Zealand, prior to contact with Western civilization. The book opens with a study of primitive economics in general. A description of the land and the Maori people follows; their clothing, their seasonal "calendar of work," etc. Then we have a study of the Maori village life, social relations, kinship groupings, the family, marriage, and the power of the chief. Industry, division of labor, education, accumulation of wealth and tribal feasts, transfer of goods and other economic problems conclude the work. With illustrations and maps.

"Dr. Firth's account stands as an adequate and usable description of one of the most pleasing economic equilibriums to be found among primitive peoples." Ruth Benedict
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 1 '29 450w

"Dr. Firth has achieved an important piece of work. He has been fortunate in his subject, and wise in limiting it to the well-documented sphere of Maori sociology; but the thoroughness and the sanity of his discussion derive from his own erudite and zealous industry. His book will for long be both a treasurehouse for writers on New Zealand and a valuable antidote for students of the current economic teaching against the a priori doctrinairism of their elder prophets."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p413 My 23 '29 1400w

FISCHER, MARJORIE. Pleasure first. 287p $2 Macaulay 29-17222

Nicki, who was a count, and Mary, his loving American wife, were quite happy together. Then Nicki meets a fascinating young artist with red hair, and the two are clandestinely happy at Red's apartment. Mary turns for consolation to her dependable friend John, and goes to Paris with him. But Mary finds she loves Nicki, in spite of his faithlessness, and returns to New York to be with him. Then Red makes up her mind to marry John, and does. She is quite happy for a while. Then she sees Nicki again, who promises to call on her occasionally, and she is much happier.

"Despite an occasional incisive accuracy about the reactions of a man and a woman to each other, 'Pleasure First' is a careless flash in the pan. It leaves you where you were at the start, without having taken you anywhere in the interim."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 O 27 '29 300w

"Marjorie Fischer is a new author, and a clever one. With an admirable ingeniousness she offers a jaded literary world a book that is just different enough to be pleasantly refreshing. 'Pleasure First' is charming and witty. Artificial and, for the most part, quite unbelievable, it is, nevertheless, not shallow." O. K. M.
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 5 '29 420w

FISHBEIN, MORRIS. Hour on health. (One hour ser.) 158p $1 Lippincott

613 Hygiene 29-12294

In this one hour discussion of health and medicine and the average man Dr Fishbein takes up the following topics: How long will you live? Physically fit; Exercise—its benefits and hazards; Digestion and indigestion; Food fads and fallacies; Sleep; The heart and blood vessels; High blood pressure, Bright's disease and diabetes; A sensible vacation program; Medicine in our changing world.

"The book is easy reading, generally sound, and within its scope can be recommended." M. P. Ravenel
+ Am J Pub Health 19:1070 S '29 180w

"A practical distillation of broad scientific knowledge leavened with humanistic sympathies and a bland good humor which make very palatable reading." R. S.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '29 660w

"His little book is rather notable among the many dealing with this theme for the inclusiveness of its treatment and the variety of the subjects with which it deals. It is soundly based on medical knowledge, and the author has shown wisdom and great good sense in the selection of the phases of his theme, and he is both fearless and pungent in their discussion."
+ N Y Times p21 My 19 '29 330w

FISHER, ARISTA EDWARD. To the sun. 374p $2.50 Cosmopolitan bk. [7s 6d Murray]

Shakespeare in fiction, drama, poetry, etc. 29-7718

"A biographical novel on Shakespeare. 'To the Sun' has been achieved through a happy marriage of scholarship and imagination. Mr. Fisher has an intimate and extensive knowledge of the Elizabethan age. He knows the history of the players, of the court, and the life of everyday London. From the study of Shakespeare's plays, from the great body of criticism, he has discovered facts and suggestions and out of the medley of fact and fancy has come his conception of what was the man—Shakespeare."—N Y Times

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:666 Je '29

"Many of Mr. Fisher's characters are pleasantly touched with satire—gusty, learned Ben Jonson, the foppish Southampton, even the Queen. But the portraits of Shakespeare and Margaret Samaran are dramatically pure. Mr. Fisher has made the story of their strange, violent, unsatisfied love into a moving novel—more in spite of his ambitious setting than because of it." Margaret Wallace
+ Bookm 69:429 Je '29 550w

"Here is, indeed, a glorious novel. It is a first novel, we believe, and if we are right, the hand that wrought it is old in the ways of fictional art. The name of Shakespeare and his mighty spirit were never more potent than in these pages. No other [writer] in our day has taken a poet of the first magnitude, and made him live, breathe, suffer, love, work; mount his starry steps as plainly in view as a familiar neighbor walks the pavement along your street." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p10 My 11 '29 560w

Cleveland Open Shelf p95 Je '29

" 'To the Sun' is a novel of new quality, quite distant from cheap employment of historical material, serious in manner and worthy of considered attention. . . Acceptable as any conception so far that we have of the nature of William Shakespeare, the book is full of glamour, and yet keeps its feet on the ground."

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 28 '29 930w

FISHER, IRVING. Money illusion. 245p $2 Adelphi co. [7s 6d Allen & U.]

332.4 Money. Prices. Currency question—United States 28-24181

"The presentation aims to show in simple terms 'how unstable in buying power are all monetary units, including the dollar; what hidden causes produce that instability; what harm results, although ascribed to other causes, and what are the various remedies which have been tried or proposed.' A supplement contains an outline of plans for stabilization, suggestions for research, a reading list and a symposium of views."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 D 16 '28 100w

Boston Transcript p4 S 1 '28 150w

"The style is clear and concise, the subject-matter interesting throughout."

+ R of Rs 78:adv28 S '28 50w

"The book is non-technical, distinctly readable, and well worth reading." P. F. Brissenden

+ World Tomorrow 12:89 F '29 480w

FISHER, IRVING, and BROUGHAM, HERBERT BRUCE. Prohibition still at its worst. 358p $1.50 Alcohol information com., 150 5th av., N.Y.

178.5 Prohibition 28-30059

Mr Fisher follows up his earlier book "Prohibition at its worst" with this new one. It is slightly different from the first, presenting without comment or bias the arguments and the statistics furnished by proponents and opponents of prohibition, and reserving until the final chapter the expression of his own conclusions.

---

"Those of us who were convinced before will perhaps share Professor Fisher's conclusions; those who disagree may yet be grateful to him for an honest attempt to present the relevant facts on both sides of this knotty problem." H: R. Mussey

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 27 '29 430w

"In the presentation of great tables and charts laboriously gleaned from many sources there are such multifarious possibilities of error, not merely in counting the figures, but in interpreting the figures, and analyzing the methods by which they are obtained, that it is almost incredible to a rational mind that any of the figures can possess the slightest scientific value. . . The only possible conclusion to be reached by a perusal of the great mass of material, statistical and testamentary, presented in 'Prohibition Still at Its Worst' is that nothing is proved at present—certainly not by this publication." R. S.

— Boston Transcript p3 F 9 '29 880w

Cleveland Open Shelf p75 My '29

N Y Times p7 Ja 6 '29 720w

"Professor Fisher is well-known for his wholehearted belief in the Volstead Act and there is sufficient material in the present volume for several hundred really first-rate arguments and at least three or four fist-fights." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv F '29 220w

Pratt p7 spring '29

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:22 Mr '29 240w

St Louis 27:124 Ap '29

"We owe Irving Fisher the tribute of a reading of his new book because of his courage, the admission of his previous mistakes, and for the new and trustworthy matter he gives us." Haven Emerson, M.D.

+ Survey 62:146 Ap 15 '29 220w

FISKE, CHARLES. Confessions of a puzzled parson, and other pleas for reality. 273p $2 (7s 6d) Scribner

261 Sociology, Christian. Church. United States—Religion 28-20784

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:148 Ja '29

"This parson is not so much puzzled as peeved." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 45:1263 O 18 '28 140w

Reviewed by S. G. Cole

Crozer Q 6:128 Ja '29 380w

"A stimulating book, whose extreme readability should not lead anyone to miss its genuine earnestness. Not everyone will agree, but that is the last thing the Bishop wants." C. S. Patton

+ J Religion 9:148 Ja '29 160w

St Louis 27:6 Ja '29

Reviewed by B. I. Bell

Sat R of Lit 5:664 F 9 '29 160w

FISKE, CHARLES, and EASTON, BURTON SCOTT. Real Jesus; what He taught: what He did: who He was. 261p $2.50 Harper

232 Jesus Christ 29-19208

"The special purpose of this book is that it tries to do what has not yet been satisfactorily accomplished by any book on the Life of Christ. We have attempted to give an account of the life, work, and teaching of Jesus as a readable and interesting story, while yet basing the account on the reasonably assured results of historical criticism."—Preface

---

"Both authors are well known; Bishop Fiske for his various analyses of the social and religious problems confronting the age, and Professor Easton for his scholarly contributions to the literature of the Gospels. In collaboration they have produced a biography characterized by penetrative insight, by simple sincerity and understanding of the crying needs of the generation to which Christ ministered in person." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 23 '29 900w

"It would be folly to anticipate that the cardinal contention of the present volume will escape challenge, to leave unmentioned many of its minor interpretations, which are positively provocative. . . Many of the problems relative to 'messiahship' and the precise nature of the 'kingdom of God' still remain unsolved. Nor will such minor interpretations as the present volume sets forth in justification of the use of physical force, for non-interference in the realms of politics, business and social relations, or as evidence of Jesus' concern to have his new movement organized into churches and the church, meet with universal approval. The volume supplies added testimony to a growing interest in the historic Jesus." W: E. Hammond

Christian Century 46:1314 O 23 '29 350w

FISKE, GEORGE WALTER. Changing family; social and religious aspects of the modern family. 324p $2.25 Harper

173.7 Family. Home. Religion 29-907

The housing problem, the new status of woman, companionate marriage, the new moral-

FISKE, G: W.—Continued
ity—these and other factors which contribute to the problems of the modern family are discussed by Professor Fiske. The author finds the only satisfactory answer to them in the establishment of a strong religious faith.

"Though not a profound discussion of the family, the book is characterized by a vigorous idealism, born of depth of religious conviction. It is wise rather than scholarly and reveals a tolerant and sympathetic insight into an exceedingly difficult problem. The writer shows a wide range of information, based in part at least upon personal investigations. Christian parents and the religious teacher will find the book especially helpful because of its frank statement of the problem, its radiant religious idealism and its practical suggestions for creating and preserving the religious home." J: M. Mecklin

+ Christian Century 46:360 Mr 14 '29 820w
J Religion 9:501 Jl '29 220w

"The book is interesting, particularly for those who are concerned with modern trends in religion and the relation of religious thought to daily living." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ N Y Evening Post p10m F 16 '29 120w

"This book abounds in workable suggestions of what men and women may do to make the family function wholesomely in modern machine society." E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 151:432 Mr 13 '29 130w

"The author has a nimble pen and his thought flows swiftly. There can be no uncertainty as to the sentiment of most of his readers and at times he does not curb the inevitable temptation to use this advantage to stir their feelings along the line of their previous conviction. For example, his attitude toward the lure of companionate marriage is fundamentally too sound to be made unconvincing to the perplexed but honest seeker for insight because the author chooses adjectives rather than reasoning." E. R. Groves

+ Survey 63:104 O '29 320w
Wis Lib Bul 25:69 F '29

FLANAGAN, MRS HALLIE (FERGUSON). Shifting scenes of the modern European theatre. 280p il $3.50 Coward-McCann

792 Theater—Europe 28-29742

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:238 Mr '29

"Shifting Scenes is not precisely copious in information or in critical ideas, but it is easy to read and it does communicate the author's delight in her subject." G. B. Munson

Bookm 68:698 F '29 300w

"From her visits to the theatrical capitals there, to Lady Gregory, to Gordon Craig, to workers in the playhouse, to cafés and cathedrals, she has pleasantly distilled in print the almost naïf joy and enthusiasm they waked in her, so that you are more interested in seeing what a grand time she had than in the theatrical experiments she tells you about." W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ja 20 '29 100w

"It is a holiday, a festival in the gallery and the back-stage. I am acquainted with no other book that so completely catches the spirit of the drama and the art of play." Bernard Smith

+ N Y World p11m Ja 27 '29 650w

"Miss Flanagan is an American lady who came on the wings of a Guggenheim Foundation to inspect the European theatre. She brought with her a considerable innocence, and unflagging enthusiasm, and one of those hearty, staccato American prose styles which pass for the high quality goods in American reviews. . . One who travelled so fast and so far could hardly be expected to stop and think."

— Sat R 148:398 O 5 '29 170w

"Hallie Flanagan's book has a deceptive way of seeming simple because, instead of being about theories and experiments and philosophies, it takes the form of a series of charming essays on the people of the theatre in the countries through which she travelled. It is only when the book is put aside that you realize how much more of the theatre can be revealed through its artists than in any other way, how much these brilliant portraits of people have added to the knowledge and understanding of their work. Standing alone, the chapters on Russia, on the drama of the life in the streets added to the drama in the theatres would be enough to give the book a permanent value." F: Morton

+ Theatre Arts Mo 13:230 Mr '29 400w

"Mrs. Flanagan is so keen and alert an observer and is so interested in her surroundings that she can with justice describe her book as a dramatic diary. It is gay, informal, penetrating, a little gossipy at times, but abounding in good sense, and, above all, in generous sympathy for the peculiarly national characteristics of each of the theatres she visited in turn. . . The best part of her book, filling more than a third of it, consists of her impressions of the theatre in Russia."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p761 O 3 '29 1200w

FLANDRAU, MRS GRACE C. (HODGSON). Then I saw the Congo. 308p il $3.50 Harcourt [12s 6d Harrap]

916.7 Kongo, Belgian. Africa, Central 29-18538

With painstaking record of fact and attention to interesting detail, Grace Flandrau writes the story of a trip from the west coast of Africa, following the Congo to the Indian Ocean. Pygmies and cannibal tribes are described—with especial attention to the intelligent Mangbetus—as well as big-game hunting expeditions.

Booklist 26:113 D '29
Bookm 70:xxxiv D '29 350w

"Because Grace Flandrau can write—'Then I Saw the Congo' is a vivid record of what Africa is today. It is the picture of all the incongruous people who roam that continent and all the incongruous reasons that bring them there." Ruth Benedict

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 22 '29 1400w

"In an easy, conversational style the writer tells of the training of wild elephants, the pigmies, with their gentle, lovable natures—far from the deadly savages she has a right to expect, from current report. . . At Nairobi, the journey over, the reader will be as loath to leave as the author was to start for the United States and civilization." J. C. G.

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 21 '29 500w

"In reading Miss Flandrau's book one is at once impressed with her easy and intimate style. The descriptions of the native life an scenes that meet her observant eyes proclaim her a traveler of distinction. The whole book teems with incidents and action, and with its numerous illustrations makes excellent entertainment." C. D. B.

+ Churchman p17 O 5 '29 80w

"Because it is written without either bias or buncombe, 'Then I Saw the Congo' is a travel book that is genuinely informative. It is also interesting reading." S. M. Elam

+ New Repub 60:305 O 30 '29 280w

"Mrs. Flandrau has made an excellent choice of a title, for her quotation from Vachel Lindsay provides the desirable atmosphere, and she is able to maintain it. The book is a very real contribution to the literature of the no longer Dark Continent." Kermit Roosevelt

+ Sat R of Lit 6:286 O 19 '29 800w
Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 1 '30 550w

"It is an advantage that the writer is a novice in Africa, for her eyes are fresh and she is not tempted to dilate on details half understood. The writer is sensitive and receptive, and, as an American, able to consider with detachment the methods of the different foreign administrations brought to her notice."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p1031 D 5 '29 900w

FLANNER, HILDEGARDE. Time's profile. 156p il $2 Macmillan
811 29-18477

The first volume by Miss Flanner to appear in four years. "Time's profile" represents a mature and carefully selected group of poems, for the most part lyrics in a variety of regular verse forms. Quiet introspection colored by intellectual passion is the distinguishing characteristic.

---

Booklist 26:110 D '29

"The reader is aware of an original talent here working in no overhasty, casual cleverness, but taking time to make lyric and beautiful the themes that engross her. Miss Flanner's poetry has an emotional appeal; its thought is clearly expressed, its language shaped for beauty and melody of phrase."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 D 8 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p4 D 21 '29 250w

"Hildegarde Flanner has been publishing since she was eighteen. 'Time's Profile' has the fine maturity of technique and thought which gives her a place among the recognized lyricists of America. With the same grave eyes that fathomed the world of her first book, 'Young Girl,' Miss Flanner looks upon the images carved out by Time." E. L. Walton
+ Nation 129:558 N 13 '29 500w

"'Time's Profile' shows Miss Flanner's maturity as a craftsman to be far from complete. On close inspection, many poems in this book resolve into a collection of phrases, unwelded into a truly serviceable poetic form. The lyrics, 'A Wreath for Ashes,' four sonnets in the sequence, 'Sonnets in the Quaker Language,' the lovely poem, 'Dictionary,' are successful indeed, and in many poems, single phrases have the stamp of a delicate yet vigorous talent." Louise Bogan
— + New Repub 60:130 S 18 '29 400w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory
N Y Evening Post p10m O 12 '29 150w

"Miss Flanner achieves many beautiful effects in the course of her experimenting, and there are many who should enjoy her more or less rococo work."
+ N Y Times p36 O 27 '29 250w

"Unimportant collections of poems on a variety of trite subjects."
— Outlook 153:187 O 2 '29 70w

FLEG, EDMOND. Boy prophet; a tr. made by D. L. Orna. 153p $2 Dutton [6s Benn]
29-16324

A Jewish boy, brought up in the shadow of Notre Dame de Paris, in love with a young French Catholic girl of his own age, attempts to explain his changing states of mind on the subject of religion. He vacillates between Christianity and Judaism and then turns to Zionism.

---

"A bare synopsis can give no idea of the fervour and poignancy of this story of a sensitive childhood. The incidental character sketches are excellent and have their humour; and the absence of reiteration, morbidity, and rhetoric keeps the tone as clear as a child's voice."
+ New Statesman 31:520 Jl 28 '28 140w

"Simplicity, delicacy, an appealing kind of charm, make this slender volume a notable piece of work. Translated from the French, the quality of the original has been unusually well preserved."
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 14 '29 500w

"An exquisite thing, as firm and fragile as an ivory crucifix."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:166 S 21 '29 350w

"This intimate autobiography of a spiritually gifted child is brief, sincere, and of penetrating pathos."
+ Spec 141:60 Jl 14 '28 180w

"The little book is a valuable glimpse into a phase of modern religious unrest and illuminating by its honesty to all interested in the psychology of the Jewish race."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p860 N 15 '28 170w

FLEG, EDMOND. Life of Moses; tr. from the French by Stephen Haden Guest. 276p $3 Dutton [12s 6d Gollancz]
220.9 Moses 28-29464

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:191 F '29

Bookm 68:vii Ja '29 120w

"M. Fleg has made, within the limitations he has set for himself, a noble book. The material has all the rich-flavored homeliness of folklore and the grandeur of religious narrative. The style, which a skillful translator has beautifully rendered into English, combines the vigor and exaltation of Bible poetry with the quaint turns and lovely fantasy of the ancient rabbinical writings."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 27 '29 250w

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 12 '29 200w

"The poet author writes: 'Is not this life, as Israel has imagined it, interpreted it, and felt through the ages, also History?' And we answer: A history indeed of Jewish fables about Moses, but not a history of Moses."
— Cath World 129:250 My '29 100w

"Fleg and his translator have both done a good piece of work."
+ Christian Century 46:919 Jl 17 '29 300w

"The book, as a whole, lacks appeal for the occidental mind." W. H. D.
— Churchman 139:28 Ja 5 '29 60w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 Mr '29

J Religion 9:329 Ap '29 30w

"He has gone to the old Rabbis of the Talmudic periods whose pious exegesis in the course of the centuries has produced a wealth of Mosaic allegory and parable of a strange, imaginative beauty. These he has now combined with the Biblical story with such loving skill that an entirely new Moses emerges whom we see in all his lineaments not only as a seer but a very appealing human being—yet it is a Moses whom we at once recognize as psychologically and historically possible and true." W: Seagle
+ Nation 128:85 Ja 16 '29 400w

St Louis 27:88 Mr '29

FLEG, EDMOND. Wall of weeping; tr. from the French by Humbert Wolfe. ltd autog ed 101p $12 Dutton [30s Gollancz]
841

A narrative poem in five parts, concerned with the visions of the Wandering Jew, here called "The Dreamer." He sees the dance of the cities thruout history, the Great war, the appearance of Antichrist, and finally himself accepted by future generations as the Son of Man.

---

Bookm 70:xii Ja '30 80w

"Almost every time I read a book coming from the European continent, I find in it the romanticism of escape. Whether it is Spengler battling the scientific spirit, Pirandello playing on a trapeze of sham metaphysics, or some little known German novelist mysticizing human sorrow, there remains a similarity, a sameness of spiritual struggle with an age hardened into steel. Such is my impression of 'The Wall of Weeping.' This translation is to be taken as a commentary on the original, an attempt to give us Edmond Fleg in spirit and essence, rather than a verbatim of the French edition." J. T. Farrell
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 S 29 '29 460w

FLEG, EDMOND—Continued

"Humbert Wolfe, who translates Edmond Fleg's extraordinary poem, tells us in a preface that his English rendering is but a mere commentary upon the French poet's glorious and exalted creation. This modest statement entirely fails to convey in any sense the real significance of his own achievement. Mr. Wolfe's version of 'Le Mur des Pleurs' is no slovenly free verse translation with nothing to recommend it but its pedantic literacy. On the contrary, he has constructed on the foundations of M. Fleg's poem, and in the same spirit and manner, a very remarkable English poem."

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 30 '29 250w

"A poem of fire and passion in which two poets of genius conspire to take once more the silver trumpet and call to their ancient people. There are moments in reading this poem when the reader will declare that prophecy is not dead in Israel." E: Shillito

+ Christian Century 47:19 Ja 1 '30 1500w

Nation and Ath 45:539 Jl 20 '29 200w

Sat R of Lit 6:173 S 21 '29 60w

"[The translator] has done admirable work; magisterial passages jostle one another page after page, and rare words, surprisingly accommodated to simple measures, dazzle and allure the reader. The style is so familiar that the translation might pass for an original; and perhaps because of its familiar movement, the meaning of the word-pageant is singularly hard to unravel. One can deeply admire the conception of the work, while wishing still that its culminating thought had found a more articulate and prevailing substantiality. The technical distinction, the audacious atmosphere of cosmic metaphor, the readjustment of consecrated thoughts and words, suggest alike a scale of thinking which the conclusion does not fill."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p649 Ag 22 '29 650w

FLEISCHMAN, DORIS ELSA (MRS EDWARD L. BERNAYS), ed. Outline of careers for women; a practical guide to achievement. 514p $3 Doubleday, Doran

396.5 Woman—Employment. Profession, Choice of. Occupations 28-30061

"Brief notes on various careers and professions in which women are finding or have long found it possible to make a living and sometimes to express themselves, by representative women in each field. Medicine, engineering, railroading, child welfare, banking, foreign trade, as well as the more common fields of education and the arts are dealt with more or less successfully. In general the articles are written by New York women, and they will probably be most helpful to young women in search of a career who at the same time live in a large city—preferably, one suspects, New York itself."—Nation

Booklist 25:269 Ap '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 10 '29 100w

"All the chapters in this large volume are entertaining. Moreover, they are all informative, having been written in every case by a woman whose swiftly summarized biography proclaims her an expert in her field."

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 6 '29 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p84 Je '29

Eng N 102:320 F 21 '29 120w

Nation 128:292 Mr 6 '29 160w

"Noteworthy among the numerous books of similar sort because of the thoughtful and widely visioned spirit in which the articles composing it are written. The forty-three contributors are all women who have won through to success in their special fields, and in the course of the long struggle have done a lot of observing of the world and its ways and of thinking about them."

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 6 '29 480w

Pratt p10 spring '29

Sat R of Lit 5:716 F 23 '29 130w

"The book is undoubtedly the most comprehensive one of its kind and should be recommended to young women who have not made their decisions. One wishes, however, that more stress had been laid upon the procedure for entering each occupation. The value of the book would also be greatly enhanced if a bibliography followed each chapter." M. B. Blake

+ Survey 62:146 Ap 15 '29 120w

FLETCHER, JOHN GOULD. Black rock, and other poems. 187p $3 Macmillan [7s 6d Faber & G.]

821 [28-26849]

Poems showing a wide emotional range, grouped under five headings: Gateways; Dust discrowned; The black rock; Cycle of Liguria; Prayers to the unknown God.

Booklist 25:111 D '28

"Mr. Fletcher is an Imagist to the extent that he very often uses images to convey his thoughts and feelings. In this habit he is not unlike the general run of poets, new and old. There is in his work, however, a tendency to distend the image more than is usual, to the degree that his poetry becomes like some immense heliotrope, or like life, which for Mr. Fletcher is nothing else 'But blue smoke rising slowly in still air.' "

— + Bookm 68:692 F '29 200w

"A book of genuine—if formidable—distinction." Mark Van Doren

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ja 13 '29 780w

Boston Transcript p7 N 21 '28 200w

"Mr. Fletcher, with all his bitter power, is too angry and restless to give his vision a clean outline. He piles image on tortured image, adjective on vast adjective, symbol on cloudy symbol, and makes a jagged mountain of verse up which one labours only to find chill fog at the top. And yet when Mr. Fletcher steadies himself, forgets to rebel, and looks hard at an object, he can harness himself in rhyme and produce a memorable short poem." Barrington Gates

— + Nation and Ath 44:182 N 3 '28 350w

"Mr. Fletcher's work is often diffuse and cloudy, the effort of a poet bewildered by the brilliance of his emancipation."

New Statesman 32:16 O 13 '28 100w

Pratt p25 winter '29

"He frequently writes without any irresistible impulse. Yet he has true poetic feeling, though his nebular notion too rarely concentrates into a star. A number of short lyrics, scattered through the longer pieces, have a sincere and sudden beauty." R. A. Taylor

— + Spec 141:372 S 22 '28 150w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 61:169 N 1 '28 20w

"There is too much of the smoke of battle, the lurid lights, the shattering detonations, in Mr. Fletcher's latest poems. He is at times too consciously and stridently at war with life and himself. Yet, intensely individual as these poems are, the conflict which they embody transcends the personal."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p780 O 25 '28 980w

FLETCHER, JOHN GOULD. John Smith—also Pocahontas. 303p pl $3.50 Brentano's

B or 92 Smith, John, 1580-1631. Pocahontas. Virginia—History—Colonial period 28-25141

"This book is not altogether iconoclastic, but it does present Smith in an unfavorable light on several occasions. It tells of his highly colorful career fighting the Turks before coming to America and he is revealed in the light of a more or less unscrupulous soldier of fortune. Mr. Fletcher accepts the Pocahontas legend, explains it, and carries it to its illogical conclusion. He also gives a detailed description of life among the Colonists and Indians, illustrated by a number of reproductions of old prints."—Outlook

---

"If there were assurance that all rewriting of American biography that seems destined to be done would turn out to be as judicious and readable as is Mr. Fletcher's account of Captain John Smith and Pocahontas there would be little reason to dread the new garb in which our traditional worthies will doubtless appear." W: MacDonald

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 D 16 '28 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p30 F '29

"This book is competent, scholarly, and, of course, interesting—but it is questionable if either the style, the compilation of familiar data, or even a reasonably new fact now and then, succeed in making it particularly valuable."

+ — Nation 127:665 D 12 '28 60w

Reviewed by M. M. Riordan

N Y Evening Post p9m D 1 '28 430w

"His John Smith is no stuffed and painted puppet, or adventurer with unscrupulous deeds all glossed over, or deified victor. Instead, you have a picture of a very real figure all compounded of bravery, stupidity, self-seeking, prejudice, ambition, short-sightedness, daring, with something of the adventurer inclined at times to look upon the country he exploited as his own personal appanage." C: J. Finger

+ N Y World p8e O 28 '28 330w

Outlook 150:1332 D 12 '28 150w

Pratt p35 spring '29

R of Rs 78:adv40 N '28 40w

St Louis 27:168 My '29

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. House in Tuesday market. 282p $2 Knopf

29-1083

The house in Tuesday market, which Gaisford rents, yields a horrid mystery in the form of a dead body concealed in an oak chest. Gaisford and his friend Trapper have little difficulty in discovering who the dead man is; but it is a harder problem to find who, ten years earlier, had killed Machin, embalmed his body and hid it in the chest.

---

Bookm 69:xxvi Mr '29 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 27 '29 100w

"It has as promising a beginning for a mystery story as one could ever hope to find, and those who are familiar with J. S. Fletcher at his best need not be told that what is to follow will make good the promise."

+ N Y Times p25 Ja 13 '29 210w

N Y World p11m F 3 '29 100w

"It's told in an interesting and workmanlike way. The only trouble with it is that every one knows who did the murder long before the end of the story, with the result that they all have to go around hiding their suspicions from each other so the proper number of pages will be filled. And that seems rather like a waste of good paper—to say nothing of good time." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 151:74 Ja 9 '29 130w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Matheson formula. 276p $2 Knopf

29-12911

In order to get hold of Matheson's formula for a devastating explosive an international ring abducts Matheson and ruthlessly murders everyone who tries to help him. The criminals discover the secret of mixing the explosive, which goes off in the nick of time and blows them all to pieces.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 7 '29 100w

"The story makes lively reading, but it is far from being Fletcher's best."

+ — N Y Times p16 Je 30 '29 180w

"It must have taken courage to put the word 'formula' in the title to this story, for if ever a thriller was written to a formula—and we believe several have been—that is it. It sticks to the formula even to the explosion in the last chapter. Yet it is a good yarn, simply because Mr. Fletcher can always be counted on to turn out a good yarn, even with second hand ingredients." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 152:311 Je 19 '29 120w

"Mr. Fletcher seems to be slipping. But he includes some admirable pages of exposition and some deft sketches of the English countryside, just to show that he is capable of better things than this rather loose-jointed and unsatisfactory book."

— + Sat R of Lit 6:258 O 12 '29 200w

"There is little doubt that once the reader starts traveling on the sudden and mysterious journeys which Prof Matheson takes, willingly and unwillingly on various occasions, he will want to stay with him to the end to see what it is all about."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 300w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Old Lattimer's legacy. 317p $2 Clode

29-18003

Old Lattimer bequeathed practically his whole fortune to the son of his old friend Loveday. Before the young man knew of his luck, he was off to London, poor but happy as a struggling young writer. Then, as a rich man, Will found himself entangled with many difficulties, including a beautiful girl and a crooked lawyer. But Will, happily, lost his money and was free to marry the girl of his choice.

---

"Somewhat excruciating romance of Mr. Fletcher's younger days."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 S 8 '29 100w

"The reader will probably not be disappointed—or surprised—in the way in which the author works out the narrative to its almost inevitable conclusion."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '29 120w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Paradise court. 325p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

29-6187

A breathless chase back and forth across the English channel, a beautiful Russian girl in distress, and two gallant Englishmen to the rescue, make up this complicated mystery.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja '29 80w

" 'The Paradise Mystery' is not spectacular, but soundly done, in spite of some needless repetition of detail." R. L.

+ — N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 4 '28 110w

— N Y World p11m F 3 '29 80w

Sat R of Lit 5:670 F 9 '29 180w

"The story may be far-fetched, but in Mr. Fletcher's practised hands it reads quite plausibly, and certainly does not lack movement or incident."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p258 Ap 5 '28 110w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Wild oat. 270p $2 Doubleday, Doran

29-10738

A delightful, headstrong English girl of the younger generation was Varina Macherley. She managed her own large estate with a clear head and a steady hand until young Stannary Pearce arrived to put a threshing machine in order. Until that time Varina had refused any number of likely swains. Stannary was the beginning of the wild oat stage, but Lennie reaped the harvest.

---

FLETCHER, J. S.—Continued

"Presumably one of Mr. Fletcher's earlier efforts, this tale of country life runs true to a rather dated formula for rural novels. . . Some life-like village characters adorn the volume."

\+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 11 '29 90w

"The slight story is pleasantly written, but not very well developed, the conclusion in particular seeming manufactured. The best drawn characters are the incidental ones."

\+ — N Y Times p19 My 26 '29 530w

Times [London] Lit Sup p432 Je 7 '28 170w

FLITCROFT, JOHN EHRET. Novelist of Vermont; a biographical and critical study of Daniel Pierce Thompson. 329p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press [16s Oxford]

B or 92 Thompson, Daniel Pierce 29-8166

"To have written a novel with its scenes laid in Vermont that has seen sixty editions and still lives to have been extensively 'pirated' in Great Britain, and to have been considered worthy company for William Gilmore Sims in the aftermath of American fiction that followed the sunburst of James Fenimore Cooper, was the fortune of David Pierce Thompson, of Montpelier, who now is for the first time biographically revealed in Mr. Flitcroft's volume. . . The sixty-edition novel which gave Thompson his chief fame centers about the deeds of Ethan Allen."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"Like his native granite, the subject dulls the chisel. Vermonters who stay in Vermont give up little of themselves to others. The grim-faced old lawyer whose portrait faces the title page left little besides his books upon which to build a study. Mr. Flitcroft has made much of the slender material and is greatly aided by a charming introduction furnished by a grandson, Charles Miner Thompson, though, as he was but four years old when his grandfather died, he can hardly have been intimate with the old gentleman." D. C. Seitz

\+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ap 28 '29 500w

"Mr. Flitcroft has used a wide variety of sources in his study with appreciation and careful understanding as to their merits. The last half of the volume is an unfinished novel now published for the first time. There is also an appendix of important and interesting letters relating to Judge Thompson and an excellent bibliography." G. R. B. R.

\+ Boston Transcript p11 Ap 13 '29 300w

Nation 128:722 Je 12 '29 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p438 My 30 '29 160w

FLOWER, JOHN CYRIL. Approach to the psychology of religion. 248p $3.50 Harcourt [10s 6d K. Paul]

201 Religion—Psychology 28-13400

"The main thesis of the author is that all religions involve, as their common characteristic, the experience of frustration in situations felt to be beyond personal control. The author opposes those who would derive religion from any one instinct or group of instincts and connects it more intimately with tendencies of behavior."—J Religion

---

"Highly important volume." J: H. Holmes

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 S 23 '28 380w

J Religion 8:322 Ap '28 50w

"A discriminating psychological analysis which reflects great credit on the British school of religious psychologists." W. M. Horton

\+ J Religion 9:143 Ja '29 180w

FLOWER, WALTER NEWMAN. Franz Schubert; the man and his circle. 369p il $5 Stokes [15s Cassell]

B or 92 Schubert, Franz Peter 28-26938

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:161 Ja '29

"It makes no attempt to evaluate Schubert's musical creations. Instead, the distinguished author of well-known works on Händel and Sullivan has filled his three-hundred page text with a fascinating and beautifully modulated account of the many—often remote—aspects of the composer's life and the nature of his friends and background. . . One cannot resist this volume with its evocation of the Vienna of the early Nineteenth Century." Elbert Lenrow

\+ Bookm 68:694 F '29 450w

"It gives repeated evidence of having been thrown together in haste for the centenary festivities. Flagrant errors of fact honeycomb his pages." P: Bowdoin

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Ap 7 '29 500w

Reviewed by Douglas Gilbert

N Y World p10m Ja 13 '29 160w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:638 D '28

Pratt p35 spring '29

St Louis 27:100 Mr '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:100 Mr '29

"Each of these biographies is to be commended for accuracy and interest. Mr. Flower brings to his task more diligence in research than Herr Kobald, having made use of records not commonly investigated. But he has produced a biography somewhat less useful to the general reader in that he offers no criticism or description of Schubert's music—and Schubert without his music is nothing." D: S. Smith

\+ — Yale R n s 18:585 spring '29 600w

FLYNN, BRIAN. Billiard room mystery. 270p $2 [2] Macrae Smith co. [7s 6d Hamilton]

When the murdered body of Prescott is found in the billiard room at Considine Manor, Anthony Bathhurst notices certain important things: the dead man is in evening clothes, but wearing brown shoes, with one of the laces peculiarly tied, and evidence points to his having been strangled with the other—in spite of the presence of a dagger. After having separated a number of false clues from real clues, the detective's final problem is solved by noting the deliberately changed positions of billiard balls on the table near which the body was found, and by arranging a trap through which the murderer, who innocently bends to tie the shoelace of the girl he is determined to marry, convicts himself.

---

"The story is narrated without any humor and with no attempt to draw characters. . . When the suspense is over and the murderer is found, we do not quite understand how it all happened. Nor is the final explanation plausible. Its weakness lies in the author's eagerness to divert suspicion from the original criminal."

— Boston Transcript p5 N 30 '29 170w

"The author of this story has constructed a baffling mystery, but he has done it by concealing most of the essential clues until the last chapter, thereby depriving the reader of the pleasure of trying to keep pace with the mental processes of the detective."

— N Y Times p48 D 1 '29 100w

FLYNN, BRIAN. Case of the black twenty-two. 295p $2 Macrae Smith co. [7s 6d J. Hamilton] 29-1804

The mystery concerning two screens which had belonged to Mary, queen of Scots, caused two murders and much stir in police and legal circles. Anthony Bathurst, free lance investigator, took chances and discovered the secret which the screens had guarded for three hundred years.

---

"Well constructed and entertaining goods." Will Cuppy

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 3 '29 100w

"It is very easy to be clever; it is devastatingly hard to be simple. Mr. Flynn has succeeded, without spoiling his story at all."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 16 '29 250w

"He follows his theories to successful conclusion in a remarkably fine demonstration of deductive reasoning. Let us have more, and soon, from Mr. Flynn." E. C. Beckwith
+ N Y World p11m F 3 '29 150w

"Mr. Flynn's story is ingeniously contrived and well told."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p153 Mr 1 '28 180w

FOERSTER, NORMAN. American scholar; a study in litterae inhumaniores. 66p $1 Univ. of N.C. press

814 Learning and scholarship. Literature and science 29-21086

"This diatribe of Professor Foerster is the expansion of a paper read before the Graduate Club and the Philological Club of the University of North Carolina last year. That we are in an age of darkness is due to our over-devotion to science. . . Professor Foerster considers the effect of the over emphasis of science first on language, then on history, literary and general, then on critical research, on orientation and on education."—Boston Transcript

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p37 D 1 '29 130w

"Professor Foerster has argued well, but it is doubtful if anyone, scholar or layman, will feel he has said the last word upon the subject." G. R. B. R.
+ — Boston Transcript p10 N 2 '29 480w

" 'The American Scholar' by Norman Foerster will mark the dawn of a new and more fruitful epoch in the study and teaching of literature. No one interested in literature and the destiny of America can afford not to give this slender blue book his deepest consideration. The man who has revolutionized the study of American letters has here turned to an appraisal of the methods of literary scholars, in general, an appraisal distinguished by his usual discrimination, justice, and wisdom." H. H. Clark
+ Sat R of Lit 6:602 D 28 '29 1300w

"Mr Foerster's essays, in the main, are a pungent, if not very helpful, restatement of an old criticism, the general truth of which has long been recognized by most literary scholars. But he demands too much or too little. 'We need criticism—not a confined esthetic or art-for-art's-sake criticism, but criticism as comprehensive in its implications as that of Aristotle—if we are to be scholars and not pedants.' We need even more to recognize that repetition of some other person's generalizations about literature and society is as deadly to true scholarship as the assembling of dull facts about influences and origins."
— + Springf'd Republican p8 O 12 '29 1000w

FOERSTER, NORMAN, ed. Reinterpretation of American literature; some contributions toward the understanding of its historical development; ed. for the American literature group of the Modern language association. 271p $2 Harcourt

810.9 American literature—History and criticism 28-25395

"The book which Mr. Foerster has edited is not perhaps for the general reader but it is of the greatest importance for all who take their native literature seriously, and especially for scholars, critics, and teachers. In it a group of scholars have united in a carefully organized discussion, the purpose of which is to discover how far American literature is American, and when so, why; and to their symposium has been added an excellent bibliography of American literary history and criticism, and of the sources from which new knowledge may flow."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 25:241 Mr '29

"The sense for permanent values evident in the contributions to the present volume, particularly in Professor Murdock's lively essay, indicates that the writers are by no means unaware of the still living power of great books." G: F. Whicher
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Ap 28 '29 420w

Boston Transcript p3 N 17 '28 270w

"The contributions of Howard Mumford Jones on The European Background, Kenneth B. Murdock on The Puritan Tradition, V. L. Parrington on The Development of Realism, and A. M. Schlesinger on American History and American Literary History are indeed fresh and thoughtful and therefore good. The other five essays are perhaps too purposeful. But the book as a whole will prove suggestive to any student of American letters."
+ Nation 128:210 F 13 '29 130w

Reviewed by W: Troy
New Repub 59:131 Je 19 '29 360w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Outlook 150:1376 D 19 '28 1150w

"This Program of American criticism will serve its purpose admirably, provided that purpose is understood to be preliminary to a more difficult task. Let us rather ask for another and much more radical volume, in which the daring critic leaves measurement to those best qualified to do it, and engages the new problems of intuitive appreciation for whose solution science can only prepare." H: S. Canby
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:721 Mr 2 '29 2450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p24 Ja 10 '29 1100w

Reviewed by F. O. Matthiessen
Yale R n s 18:603 spring '29 530w

FOGG, WALTER. One thousand sayings of history, presented as pictures in prose. 919p $5 Beacon press

803 Quotations. History—Dictionaries 29-1093

"Mr. Fogg does better than his title promises; he presents not a mere thousand but a generous 1,137 quotations from the sayings of famous men that have historical interest. Instead of the usual bare quotation with the briefest possible reference to its author, he presents the saying with the name and time of its author, and then follows this with half a page or more of condensed but graphic picturing of the man and his era and the occasion which called forth the sentiment."—N Y Times

Booklist 25:275 Ap '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 31 '29 120w

"In the present volume, 1137 historical bon mots are given their proper setting. Those that are familiar thus acquire a new significance. And to these vignettes in prose is given a certain 'journalistic' color and elan which make the book as entertaining as it is informative." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 19 '29 300w

"It makes a meaty volume for reference and illustration—preachers take note—and a pleasant body of desultory reading."
+ Christian Century 46:651 My 15 '29 150w

"His background 'pictures in prose' are written with a vivid touch, and the facts they present are dependable statements of history."
+ N Y Times p4 Ja 20 '29 250w

"Much information may be gleaned from his pages, and the book should be found entertaining for desultory reading. Though the material defies classification, the editing is intelligent."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 22 '29 230w

FOLIGNO, CESARE. Latin thought during the Middle ages. 120p il $1.75 (5s) Oxford

940.1 Middle ages. Latin literature, Medieval and modern

An essay on the process of the transmission of the classical heritage of the West and its subsequent history in the Middle ages.

FOLIGNO, CESARE—Continued

"There is here no manual for college freshman, but the matured ideas of a scholar who has spent his years in the study of Continental literature. The book is well written and stimulating. Its faults, if faults they be, are of omission. I find the final chapter on 'The Schoolmen and After' inadequate, the treatment of the work of the school of Chartres too brief, and the final paragraphs rather inconclusive. But any sketch will meet with similar criticisms." J. F. Willard

+ — Am Hist R 35:391 Ja '30 300w

"The essay is distinguished by its common sense and philosophical spirit."

+ Hist Outlook 20:359 N '29 50w

"Had the author made this essay a linguistic study pure and simple it would have been more successful, for the difficulty of combining such an interest with other and more varied aspects of medieval culture is clearly apparent. . . Still, the book is in effect a very useful little introduction to the early Middle Ages."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p862 O 31 '29 470w

FOLSOM, JOSEPH KIRK. Culture and social progress. (Longmans' social science ser.) 558p $3 (12s 6d) Longmans

301 Civilization. Sociology. Progress 28-9538

"In a very thoughtful and tactful way the author tries to debunk the subject of his book. He is writing for second-term sociology students on the nature of culture, of personality, of social change as variously viewed in the modern world. He stresses welfare, the prevention of physical and mental suffering, and the elimination of waste. He ends by considering the purposes and conditions of human life."—Survey

"The most valuable feature of this book is the remarkably clear elementary statement of a psychological theory of the mechanism of culture transmission which the writer has formulated for his opening chapters." F. N. House

+ Am J Soc 34:568 N '28 220w

"It is indisputable that waste is, in general, to be deprecated and avoided, but it may be confidently asserted that a world without work would be a world with no outlook. With the above as the main, and perhaps the sole, protest, it may be said that the book merits cordial approbation." P. L. M.

+ Nature 122:803 N 24 '28 170w

"It is a good, evenly tempered, hopefully written text-book, stimulating without being disturbing, covering the general field, and conveniently arranged for class-room use." Nels Anderson

+ Survey 61:395 D 15 '28 100w

FONTAINE, EDGAR CLARKE. Ways to better teaching in the secondary school. 271p $1.60 Ginn

371 Teaching. Education, Secondary 28-27569

"The supervisor of high schools in the state of Maryland has written a book urging that teaching methods be formulated according to the learning processes of children and that teaching procedure be adapted to the ways pupils study and learn."—School R

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 F '29

"Teachers and administrators will find the book valuable in that it shows the inadequacy of the daily recitation and gives specific examples of the newer technique." D. H. Loree

+ School R 37:308 Ap '29 480w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Doctor who held hands. 310p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Collins] 29-14380

Dr Jacmer Touchon, calling himself a psychosynthetist, was really a great psychologist turned blackmailer. With diabolical cleverness he tried to drag Madame Storey, a beautiful detective, into his toils. But she was too clever for him and Touchon paid the penalty for his one mistake.

"One of the better Crime Club selections."

+ Bookm 69:xxv Ag '29 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 7 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 31 '29 110w

"Not only is the plot utterly preposterous, but it is so clumsily constructed that the saw marks are apparent to the most inexperienced eye."

— N Y Times p13 Jl 28 '29 150w

"The events should afford you excitement and satisfaction, since the characters are well worked out, the plot is carefully constructed, and the writing is above the average." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 152:552 Jl 31 '29 70w

"The characters are drawn without skill, and the book as a whole fails as a detective story because there is so little real detection in which the reader can take either part or interest."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p901 N 7 '29 250w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Self-made thief. 285p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Collins] 29-3662

A young lawyer bets in his club that he can rob a bank and escape with ease. His semi-success leads to an acquaintance with Cora, the golden-haired gang-girl, and a life of crime.

"The action is at all times exciting and swift. The real charm in this book lies in the eccentricities of the dapper attorney, and will interest the lover of this brand of story, depicting the thieving man who becomes self-made in crime."

+ Bookm 69:xxx Ap '29 60w

"No mysteries or sleuths enter the story, but it is safe to say that once you have begun it you will keep on to the finish." E. C. Beckwith

+ N Y World p11m F 3 '29 100w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:192 Ja 30 '29 80w

"This seems to us a better story than those Mr. Footner has published in the past year or two."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:784 Mr 16 '29 150w

"There is no element of mystery in this method, and at the best the reader does not get so much entertainment as in following the unraveling of a crime at the hands of the 'supersleuth'; but, apart from that, Mr. Footner shows less than his usual ingenuity."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p14 Ja 5 '28 90w

FORBES, GEORGE. The earth, the sun, and the moon. (Little bks. of modern knowledge) 78p 75c Doubleday, Doran

523 Earth. Sun. Moon 28-18772

"Brief, popular treatment intended to interest beginners."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

" 'You will search long before you find an astronomy that preserves, amidst its accurate relations of fact, so much of human wonder and delight.' "

+ Educ R 76:136 O '28 200w

Nature 121:1015 Je 30 '28 260w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:564 N '28

FORBES, HELEN CADY. Mario's castle. 198p il $1.75 Macmillan 28-21061

The winter she was thirteen Elizabeth's aunt took her to Italy for a visit. Elizabeth stammered badly and the doctor thought perhaps the learning of a new language would help her to overcome the habit. Alone or in company with Mario, a boy of her own age who lived in a nearby castle, Elizabeth had many adventures and when the visit came to an end there was not a trace of stammering left.

---

Booklist 25:170 Ja '29

"The Italian setting and characters are true to their romantic originals; the American viewpoint true to what goes on in the head of an idealistic American girl, and the whole told with a purity and simplicity of style and with an absence of sops thrown out to grown up taste, that is most refreshing."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:559 D 29 '28 300w

FORBES, ROSITA (TORR) (MRS ARTHUR THOMAS MCGRATH). Account rendered; and, King's mate. 355p $2 Macaulay

[29-11413]

"Here is a rapid tale that starts at Deauville and ends in North Africa. Within its swift and racy limits are high society functions and Riff wars, Secret Service activities and the secret activities of amorous Frenchmen, deserts and moonlight gardens, murder and false suspicions, and women of various breeds and moods."—N Y World

---

"Miss Forbes makes good use of her African lore, summoning up a picturesque, not to say hectic, crowd of sheiks, kaids, sultans and Britishers milling about in mystery, sudden death, love and adventure of the perpetual motion type."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p35 Ap 14 '29 180w

"When Rosita Forbes writes one is assured of an interesting story, and when the action takes place in Northern Africa authentic local color is assured. . . The characters are drawn with a sureness of touch that denotes familiarity due to experience and observation." J. C. G.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 30 '29 550w

New Statesman 31:460 Jl 14 '28 150w

"A rapid and diverting tale."

+ N Y World p10m Ap 21 '29 50w

"The situations are a little stereotyped: the glimpses of the Riff are amusing as well as picturesque." R. A. Taylor

Spec 140:847 Je 2 '28 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '29 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p470 Je 21 '28 400w

FORBES, WILLIAM CAMERON. Philippine Islands. 2v 620;636p il $12.50 Houghton

991.4 Philippine Islands—Politics and government. Philippine Islands—History 29-229

The author was governor general of the Philippines from 1909 to 1913, and his connection with the islands lasted, in one form or another, for ten years. The book summarizes the early history and the period of the Spanish occupation, and covers very fully the period of American occupation and the changes in Philippine affairs to the present date.

---

"In these two volumes ex-Governor W. Cameron Forbes has produced the most important book as yet written by an American about the Philippine Islands, and has made a distinguished contribution to the world's literature of colonial government." Ralston Hayden

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:487 My '29 1000w

Booklist 25:243 Mr '29

"These two volumes constitute the most comprehensive stock-taking of the American investment in the Philippines that has been made. No individual in American life, with the possible exception of William Howard Taft, is in a better position than W. Cameron Forbes to prepare such an inventory." Stanley High

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Mr 3 '29 1050w

Reviewed by Edmund Noble

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 5 '29 2200w

"Mr. Forbes has made exhaustive use of documents as well as of a detailed diary which he kept during his nine years of service in the islands. The result is probably the most valuable account of the American occupation of the Philippines that has yet appeared. Invaluable as these two volumes are, they contain a number of defects. . . The test which Mr. Forbes adopts of a successful colonial administration—a test which he reiterates on the last page of his volumes—is the extent to which postal receipts and deposits in savings banks have increased. This test is a characterization of the work as a whole and an indication of its limitations." R. L. Buell

+ — Nation 128:742 Je 19 '29 780w

"With a wealth of material in his files, with easy access to government archives not open to the average research student, Forbes has produced a work far exceeding in scope and in interest anything that has previously been written on the Philippines. Whatever may be thought of the author's political philosophy, the book will unquestionably find its place as a standard study of the Philippine problem." B. L. Pitney

+ New Repub 58:204 Ap 3 '29 1000w

"The best history of the Philippines that has yet been published. This is not a book for the general reader, but it is invaluable to all students and should be in all the libraries of the country." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p14 F 17 '29 1200w

"The record since 1901 is the amplest, most thorough, defense of American occupation of the Philippines yet written. It aims to be free from all bias. . . Most of all, it is a plain relation of the accomplishment of Forbes and his friends in a difficult medium, told without egotism and without frills." F: O'Brien

+ N Y World p11m F 3 '29 1100w

"Mr. Cameron Forbes, Governor General of the Philippines from 1909-1913, has written the first complete and authoritative work on our oldest colony. . . No historical and social study could possibly have been better documented or more considered than this. Indeed, Mr. Forbes has omitted from his survey no aspect of the island life. He is not only incomparably well-informed but conspicuously just and fair in his treatment of every question concerning the Philippine population." Van Wyck Brooks

+ Outlook 151:270 F 13 '29 600w

Pratt p31 summer '29

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:28 F '29 120w

"The detached, judicious, well-balanced, and dispassionate attitude of the author toward the larger topics and problems dicussed in the book contributes measurably to the historic and literary value of the work." Norbert Lyons

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1024 My 18 '29 720w

"Mr. Forbes has presented in a most impressive manner the record of our administration, and on the whole it is a highly creditable achievement; but he is so strongly opposed to complete independence within the near future that his evidence is one-sided." K. P.

+ — World Tomorrow 12:283 Je '29 180w

"Mr. Forbes's book, though not always exhilarating in style, is extraordinarily well documented, and is based upon the widest variety of sources, public and private. As a work of reference, it is indispensable." C. H. Haring

+ Yale R n s 19:201 autumn '29 750w

FORD, COREY (JOHN RIDDELL, pseud.). Salt water taffy; or, Twenty thousand leagues away from the sea; the almost incredible autobiography of Capt. Ezra Triplett's seafaring daughter, by June Triplett [pseud.]. 206p il $2.50 Putnam

817 29-12707

This amusing parody of Joan Lowell's seafaring autobiography was supposedly written by the daughter of Captain Ezra Triplett of the famous "Kawa." With photographs of Miss Triplett and the quaint characters in her story, these latter bearing marked resemblance to Heywood Broun, Frank Sullivan, Reinald Werrenrath, Clarence Chamberlin and other notables.

FORD, COREY—Continued

Booklist 26:23 O '29
Reviewed by Percy Stone
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Je 23 '29 550w

"If one has a copy of 'The Cradle of the Deep' he may place the two volumes side by side and watch the one rock the other into inanity. Corey Ford's ability to seize upon whole sentences and paragraphs and use them to the humorist's advantage is almost as incredible as the autobiography (which is 'dedicated to Corey Ford who encouraged me by writing this autobiography for me.') Second honors go to the photographer."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 29 '29 280w

"The book that results from the combined efforts of Mr. Ford and the Messrs. Putnam is naughty in that nice way that is permitted to humorists. The innuendoes fly thick and fast to prick Miss Lowell's South Sea bubble and the puns riot and gamble like Mr. Ford's herd of waterspouts in every chapter. 'Salt Water Taffy' is somewhat double-barreled in its satire. Miss Joan Lowell gets most of the buckshot and rock salt, but some of it strays off in the direction of Grover Whalen, the Mary Ware Dennett jury, New York municipal welcomes, and other topical things."
+ N Y Times p21 Je 9 '29 500w
St Louis 27:287 O '29

"It is a sterling performance and I am proud of the little daughter of my old skipper, the little girl whom I personally taught the art of navigation and, the uses of sextant, quadrant, and hydrant. Proud, too, am I to be incorporated in another epic of the sea and to know that old Traprock, thanks to fifty years of clean living, is still able to take care of his share of 'Salt Water Taffy.'" "W. E. Traprock"
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1141 Je 29 '29 1050w

"It is a difficult matter to satirize something that in itself sounds like broad satire, as does 'Cradle of the Deep,' but in 'Salt Water Taffy' Mr Ford has at least helped to put the public mind in a proper mood of skepticism regarding such narratives."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '29 230w
Times [London] Lit Sup p826 O 17 '29 100w

FORD, FORD MADOX. The English novel; from the earliest days to the death of Joseph Conrad. (One hour ser.) 149p $1 Lippincott

823 English fiction 29-10388

Mr Ford's brief but provocative survey of the English novel distinguishes between the "nuvvle" of the mid-Victorians, and the novel which flowered in the work of Flaubert, Stendhal, Turgenev, and in England in the work of Henry James and Joseph Conrad.

Booklist 25:351 Je '29

"In his monograph on 'The English Novel' Mr. Ford is never dull, though he is occasionally ineffectual. He draws a pastiche of attractive inferences—more generic than specific. . . So often are his judgments the children of caprice or predilection, rather than of the closest scrutiny, that their value to the literateur is negligible, and they only serve, if at all, as a pleasant recreation for a charmed circle of admirers." E. M. Benson
— + Nation 128:sup482 Ap 17 '29 330w

"It errs a little, perhaps, in being a bit too general and rambling, but it is nearly always provocative." Edgar Johnson
+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 6 '29 530w

"Mr. Ford, discussing the English novel from the earliest days to the death of Conrad, offers the mildly unorthodox opinions of a brilliant novelist whose taste is independent and catholic but impeccable and British. Only the most ignorant on the subject will learn anything from his book; but only the most stodgy will fail to be diverted and exhilarated by it. Ideas leap hither and yon as they always do for Mr. Ford, and he spills them out in a jumble of vivid words."
+ Outlook 151:513 Mr 27 '29 120w
Sat R of Lit 5:889 Ap 13 '29 250w

FORD, FORD MADOX. No enemy; a tale of reconstruction. 302p $2.50 Macaulay

29-24226

Gringoire, poet, gourmet, and agriculturist, offers his reminiscences and reflections upon his experiences as an officer in the war—for Gringoire is none other than Ford Madox Ford himself, with his sage philosophies, his poetic eloquences, his love of fine cooking and his theory that world peace would be attained if each man were given a plot of ground, a "gingerbread cottage," and instruction in the economics of culinary art.

"Mr. Ford's prose is as fine as ever—mellow, colloquial, intimate—a voice, as it were, speaking slowly of things remembered and struggles done with. 'No Enemy' is a queerly moving book." Herbert Gorman
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 29 '29 750w
Boston Transcript p2 D 18 '29 700w

" 'No Enemy' offers him another opportunity to invent a character who is himself and to be loquacious on the subjects of cookery, internationalism, land, food, poetry, Lord Kitchener's death, and his experiences with Masie and Rosalie. A charming discursive quality, of a man who has little to say but who says it pleasantly, pervades these pages." Horace Coon
+ N Y Evening Post p12m D 21 '29 580w

"The substance of these pages is so rich in thought, eloquence and imagery that one is tempted repeatedly to turn back and reread them. In the form of personal narrative within an outer likeness of the imaginative, Mr. Ford again proves his eminence as a contemporary master."
+ N Y World p11m N 17 '29 150w

"It is a perfect complement to Ford's own War novels, which will endure as the expressions of a mature mind upon a subject which seems rather the province of youth. . . His passion, spiced by a sort of patient irony and expressed in brilliant, apt prose, produces fine books. His War books are a great contribution to the literature of the period." F. L. Robbins
+ Outlook 153:427 N 13 '29 270w

FORD, HENRY. My philosophy of industry (an authorized interview, by Fay Leone Faurote). 107p $1.50 Coward-McCann

338.4 Industry. Machinery in industry

29-5005

In an interview with Fay Faurote, Henry Ford expresses himself about Machinery, the new Messiah; My philosophy of industry; Success; Why I believe in progress.

Bookm 69:xxii Ag '29 130w
Boston Transcript p2 F 27 '29 280w
Current Hist 31:828 Ja '30 140w

"From the book as a whole one gains a picture of Henry Ford's mind, a busy, scattered mind which stoutly believes that only applied thinking is useful. . . Mr. Ford 'thinks big' with the utmost nonchalance; and he is not concerned with the minutiae of social-reform programs. He does not bother to tell us how the application of power to industry is to accomplish the millennium he outlines." Freda Kirchwey
Nation 128:194 F 13 '29 780w
New Statesman 33:248 Je 1 '29 280w
N Y New Tech Bks 14:24 Ap '29

"The little book shows that Henry Ford no more allows other people to do his thinking on general matters for him than he allows other manufacturers to tell him how to run his plant. In both he is original, resourceful, distinctively himself."

+ N Y Times p18 F 10 '29 450w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:152 Ja 23 '29 600w

Outlook 151:506 Mr 27 '29 100w

Pratt p11 summer '29

St Louis 27:191 Je '29

St Louis 27:260 S '29

+ Spec 143:230 Ag 17 '29 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p519 Je 27 '29 60w

FOREL, AUGUSTE HENRI. Social world of the ants compared with that of man; tr. by C. K. Ogden. 2v pl $15 Boni [63s Putnam]

595.796 Ants. Psychology, Comparative [28-17894]

"Among recent books of compelling interest on these subjects are Alverdes's 'Social Life in the Animal World' and Myers's 'Psychology of Insects,' together with M. W. Wheeler's four volumes. The present work of Forel compares favorably with the best of these. He sums up his life's knowledge of ants in two splendid volumes of nearly half a million words. . . The volumes teem with exciting, tragic, comic, astonishing phases of ant life." —Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"It contains a rich mass of material, well arranged, and, though technical, is presented simply and lucidly with the spirit of an enthusiast."

+ Booklist 25:381 Jl '29

"Forel has struck a delightful mean in style which has been preserved by the excellent translation of Dr. C. K. Ogden. While many passages necessitate undiluted technical language, most are illuminated by the charm of personality of the author." W: Beebe

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ap 14 '29 1250w

Nature 121:819 My 26 '28

"It is a book of unquestionable importance. The ordinary reader will find it a book rather to browse in, not only on account of its size but because Forel, though exact in his descriptions, is diffuse rather than vivid; indeed, the best passages are those which he quotes from his earlier books and from other writers. But for completeness it is unequalled; there is hardly a phase of ant life, in all its diversity, which it has left untouched. The illustrations are excellently chosen and produced, and the translation is good."

+ New Statesman 30:830 Ap 7 '28 1550w

"August Forel is singularly fortunate in his translator, C. K. Ogden, who is himself a distinguished author and editor, and who has done his work with exceptional skill and accuracy. He has helped the venerable and vivacious author to shine through the pages of his book, and to present himself to us as a vigorous and singularly attractive personality, keenly interested in all sorts of things, and, one may add, greatly inclined to boil over at low temperatures, in the fashion of milk soup." C: Johnston

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 28 '29 1400w

"M. Forel, it seems to me, steers a just course between the view which sees ants as much smaller men who get there first and the other which would see them as no less alien from us than colloids or crystals. It would not become me to praise his learning in myrmecology, which appears to be immense. But I can without impertinence praise a book which in every line even of its more technical pages communicates a spirit of almost lyrical love and enthusiasm for its subject." E: Shanks

+ Sat R 145:352 Mr 24 '28 1650w

"Except for his occasional brief references to human relations, revealing most delightfully the author's personality, the 996 pages of these volumes are almost exclusively records of facts. . . The ordinary reader will not find this work easy reading." Beverley Kunkel

Sat R of Lit 5:1126 Je 22 '29 720w

"The life-work of a thinker and scientist. Not only is the book beautifully printed and illustrated, both in colour and line; the translation is also quite excellent, with never a hint of those inversions and complexities that characterize, while they do not deform, the original." F. Y.-B.

+ Spec 140:sup463 Mr 24 '28 1150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p529 Jl 19 '28 480w

FORREST, WILLIAM MENTZEL. Biblical allusions in Poe. 208p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

811 Poe, Edgar Allan. Bible in literature [28-20859]

"This is a literary study of a literary man written essentially for the literary reader. The burden of the book is to show the shaping influence of the Bible as literature upon the productive works of the eccentric Poe, and essays as well 'to bring into high relief the literary features of Scripture.' 'The most universally renowned of American authors' is set forth in the striking paradox of having a wide acquaintance with biblical material, making generous use of it to the point of saturation, and yet for all that, his own thinking was so little affected by this same material that he might as well have written eighteen centuries B.C. as eighteen centuries A.D."—Int J Ethics

---

Boston Transcript p4 N 3 '28 150w

"Professor Forrest has made a real contribution to the story of American letters. And while he has not shown that Poe was in any sense a profound student of the Bible, this was no part of his intention, and one is both impressed with the extent of the inquiry, and profited by the result. . . The chapters that deal with prose and poetic resemblances to the Bible, and with biblical quotations, allusions and influences, are of the sort to make the work an admirable companion to the volumes on the Bible in Shakespeare, Milton, Tennyson, Browning, Ruskin, and others in an increasing list." M. S. Enslin

+ Christian Century 46:490 Ap 11 '29 480w

"Every lover of Edgar Allan Poe will hail with pleasure this charming little volume by Professor Forrest. And those who are the most thoroughly acquainted with Poe's writing will, I fancy, be amazed at the array of Biblical quotations, allusions, and reflections—filling over forty pages—which the author has assembled in an appendix." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 6:111 Ja '29 400w

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm

Int J Ethics 39:378 Ap '29 180w

FORRESTER, HARDING. Lure of the dust; a comedy of Rhodesia and the South Atlantic. 332p $2.50 Century

On shipboard bound for Rhodesia Bruce meets Yolande. He has fallen in love with her even before he hears from an elderly scandalmonger the story of Yolande's unhappy marriage and scapegrace husband. The friendly circle of young people who met on the boat keep in touch with each other in Africa, and understanding the situation between Bruce and Yolande, help them thru the dramatic and tragic events that lie ahead.

---

"The book is brimming with humor, always fresh and spontaneous; and even the mystery surrounding the heroine isn't taken too seriously."

+ Bookm 70:xxiii S '29 110w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p38 Ap 14 '29 100w

"This is an extremely well-told tale, breezy, amusing, and yet full of insight into poor human nature."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 18 '29 250w

N Y Times p17 Ap 21 '29 150w

FORRESTER, HARDING—Continued

"Mystery, exciting adventure and a plausible love-story, on shipboard and in Africa, and plenty of good laughter make this a readable yarn."

+ Outlook 151:554 Ap 3 '29 20w
Times [London] Lit Sup p792 N 3 '27 250w

FORT, JOHN P. Stone Daugherty. 307p $2.50 Dodd

29-9934

A grim and uncompromising picture of pioneer-Indian warfare is drawn in this story of Stone Daugherty, who came to his cabin one day to find his wife and two sons horribly butchered and only his baby daughter Jane alive. With a band of angry frontiersmen he makes reprisal. The experience warps Daugherty's character. He is cruel to Jane and to the scarcely older child he takes for second wife. Two months after the marriage he is tried for wife murder but gets off. Jane has lived her life in fear of him; but love for the man her father has crippled nerves her to bring retribution to Stone Daugherty.

Reviewed by Douglas Tyacke
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 2 '29 420w

"An excellent novel of character in terms of action." C. G. Poore

+ N Y Times p7 Je 16 '29 580w

"The new book is a mature effort, and if Mr. Fort chooses to push on in this field he should very quickly achieve fame and a following." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 228:adv Ag '29 100w

"The book has strength and authenticity." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 151:636 Ap 17 '29 120w

"Beyond question Mr. Fort has accomplished an imaginative re-creation of absolutely first-rate importance. This, precisely, is the forest frontier; and here precisely, in Daugherty and his daughter and his companions, are the Americans who passed over the Alleghanies. For these realizations, and for the steadiness with which such characters as the two lawyers and the less instinctive neighbors of Daugherty are realized, only unqualified superlatives are just. These elements of the book are—superb. It is a greater pity, therefore, that Mr. Fort sees fit to bring the Concord strain into his novel. . . The fiction is completely imagined, and he could have trusted it." Bernard De Voto

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1067 Je 1 '29 600w

FOSDICK, RAYMOND BLAINE. The old savage in the new civilization. 239p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

901 Civilization. Social sciences 28-27789

In these addresses delivered to college audiences Mr Fosdick builds up a picture of modern man beside the tremendous machine of modern civilization which he has created, and asks the question Is man to be master or victim of the forces which he himself has let loose?

Reviewed by G: G. MacCurdy
Am Anthropol 31:806 O '29 460w
Booklist 25:205 F '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 D 16 '28 160w
Boston Transcript p2 F 6 '29 220w

"As always, Mr. Fosdick speaks with courage, frankness, clearsightedness and the force that comes from sincere conviction and passionate desire for the spiritual welfare of mankind. The book is provocative of thought and should have wide reading."

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 6 '29 450w

"This book of Fosdick's is to say the least immensely interesting and thought-provoking. It deserves and I think will have a wide reading." J: P. Gavit

+ Survey 61:448 Ja 1 '29 680w

"This is a good book to place in the hands of conservative and complacent citizens in the more prosperous circles of American society." K. P.

World Tomorrow 12:43 Ja '29 120w

FOSTER, HARRY LA TOURETTE. Combing the Caribbees. 302p il $3 Dodd [12s 6d Lane]

917.29 Caribbean sea. West Indies—Description and travel. West Indies—Social life and customs 29-8873

Mr Foster went to the West Indies at the instance of his publishers to write a guide book for tourists. He did write one, but this is not it. It is rather a colorful and entertaining account of ex-officio adventures in the islands. With illustrations from photographs.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:664 Je '29

Booklist 25:355 Je '29
Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Bookm 70:xxix O '29 190w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '29 110w
Cleveland Open Shelf p109 Jl '29

"Harry L. Foster, like many travel writers, has more of a talent for traveling than for writing; yet in spite of its high school style, 'Combing the Caribbees' is an entertaining account of Guadeloupe, Martinique, Trinidad—and those other islands one is never quite able to keep straight. If it is not an important book, it is at least color on the map—and it is often more profitable not to be bored than to consume a treatise." E. V. F.

+ — New Repub 59:296 Jl 31 '29 230w

"The record is continuously entertaining and is not burdened with gratuitous information." R. C. B. B.

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Je 22 '29 60w

"Mr. Foster's route in the main, is the conventional one; but he branches off in spots, meets many unconventional islanders and writes in a pliant, colorful and cheerfully unassuming fashion." Halsey Raines

+ N Y Times p7 My 19 '29 680w

"Mr. Foster always writes entertainingly of the places he visits, and manages to give you a pretty good idea of them without employing statistics, dates or any of the devices in favor with travel writers who have a certain number of pages to fill." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 151:636 Ap 17 '29 60w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:10 My '29 240w
St Louis 27:204 Je '29
Sat R of Lit 5:1168 Jl 6 '29 200w
Times [London] Lit Sup p473 Je 13 '29 730w

FOSTER, THOMAS SUTCLIFFE. Travels and settlements of early man; a study of the origins of human progress. 320p $7.50 Stokes [21s Benn]

572 Man—Migrations. Man, Prehistoric. Anthropology [29-13023]

"Mr Foster, who is Reader in Education at Bristol University . . . embarks on a survey of the development of the apes through millions of years, and of primitive man from the time when he emerged or became differentiated from the ape. His chapters on 'The Near East' and 'Barbarous Europe' sketch the progress of man to the dawn of written history. He then diverges to America and the Pacific."—Spec

"The author shows not only extensive knowledge, but great depth too. The entire story of the human race from the Old Stone Age to the beginning of history proper is portrayed with a wealth of color and an artistic combining of it, together with scientific deductions and conclusions, that are truly remarkable." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p10 My 4 '29 450w

"The indigestibility of Mr. Foster's book is due to something more than an incapacity to write even tolerable English. It is a book of the transition between the older anthropology and the new, and incompatibilities abound. The influence of the old is apparent from his bombinations in vacuo about the habits of primitive man. . . If Mr. Foster's book is an index, it is plain that anthropology is passing through a period of shocking confusion, where the new ideas are strong enough to draw the orthodox from allegiance to the old, but not yet strong enough to ensure their own adoption, teach new habits of thought and clear up the mess. The value of Mr. Foster's book lies in its secondary achievements." H. J. M.

— + Sat R 147:49 Ja 12 '29 900w

"Those who know a good deal about prehistory will find Mr. Foster's book stimulating."

Spec 142:166 F 2 '29 700w

"Written without a single note, diagram or map, the book is not easy reading; at least summaries of the argument might have been given after each chapter. Data (with no indication of their degree of validity) are fastened together into what looks like a consistent narrative but is really an utterly precarious structure. . . Among the authorities used there is hardly any account taken of foreign scholarship (other than American). The result, indeed, reads more like a pre-historical romance than pre-history, only that the reader will be bewildered by the mass of details and suggestions, however much they may bear witness to the author's industry and imaginative activity."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p119 F 14 '29 220w

FOURNIER, ALAIN. The wanderer (Le grand Meaulnes); tr. from the French by Françoise Delisle. 306p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Constable]

28-29726

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:165 Ja '29

"The book has more of an idea than has any of Stevenson's; it is fresher besides. It has, as Havelock Ellis says in his Introduction, 'the freshness of the soul of a child.' Still, as three fourths of the story has to do with the life of schoolboys in a provincial French town, there are passages in it that, for an alien reader, do not sustain a live interest."

+ — Dial 86:265 Mr '29 200w

"Now and again—it is not often—a book appears which has about it a quality of magic. 'The Wanderer' is of that small company. Though it has been sympathetically translated, it must have lost something of its magical atmosphere in the process. It comes dangerously near the life of common day at times, and at others trails more than a suggestion of the dark romantic gloom which covers 'Wuthering Heights.' But on the whole it must be admitted to that jealously guarded land of the fairy tale for grown-ups: and where is the blackguard who will criticize it?" T. S. Matthews

+ New Repub 57:357 F 13 '29 140w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:12 F '29

Pratt p36 spring '29

"A hauntingly beautiful story."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 13 '29 300w

"It is the magic which suffuses the incidents of the story, the wandering gleam upon it, which makes it so remarkable an experiment in fiction. . . The book must be read with something of the concentration one gives to symbolist poetry if one is to appreciate its peculiar and haunting quality."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p398 My 16 '29 860w

Wis Lib Bul 25:31 Ja '29

FOWLER, JOHN FRANCIS. American investment trusts; with an introd. by John Moody. 415p $5 Harper

332 Investment trusts 28-28990

"The author is an officer of an investment trust and thus is able to discuss the subject on the basis of practical experience. The different kinds of investment trusts are described, and their management and restrictions explained. Among other topics are accounting procedure, promotion policies and taxation. In the appendix is an 8-page directory, showing year of organization. There are also specimen charters, indentures, and reports. An up-to-date bibliography is added."—Am Econ R

Am Econ R 19:127 Mr '29 50w

Booklist 25:269 Ap '29

"For the student of contemporary finance, as well as for the investor, Mr. Fowler's book holds much that is of interest and of value, and little that is out of date." E: H. Collins

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Ja 27 '29 750w

Reviewed by C. C. Oakes

Harvard Business R 8:117 O '29 1100w

FOX, HAROLD MUNRO. Blue blood in animals, and other essays in biology. (Science for you ser.) 212p $2.50 Brentano's [5s Routledge]

570.4 Biology 29-21111

"Slight essays by an English biologist; the best concerns animal life in the Suez Canal, where Eastern waters meet Western."—Nation

"The twelve essays report truthfully on blood colors in animals, sex determination, Tyrian purple, Pearl's population studies, and so on. You can learn something from them, but you will be disappointed if you cherish any very high notion of what an essay should be—as writing."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 My 19 '29 120w

"For the layman in popular biology, this is both instructive and intensely interesting."

+ Boston Transcript p8 My 18 '29 250w

Nation 128:772 Je 26 '29 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p227 Mr 21 '29 300w

FOX, MRS HELEN (MORGENTHAU). Patio gardens. 228p il $6 Macmillan

712 Gardens. Gardens—Spain 29-13287

Description of the gardens of Spain, both old and new, with suggestions for adapting some of their features to American gardens and climates. There are descriptions, plans, and pictures of patios, pools, fountains, tiles, and gardening in pots.

Booklist 26:60 N '29

"Miss Fox has studied the Spanish patio garden with special reference to its American adaptation, and her suggestions are tempered by healthy prejudices against practices which no amount of tradition can excuse. Her chapter on 'Gardening in Pots' will be especially welcome to the city dweller." L: Colman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 17 '29 200w

"Miss Fox is less interested in the gardens from a purely aesthetic point of view than she is as inspiration for American gardenmakers, and her large volume is well filled with designs and with lists of the flowers used by the Spaniards to get the lovely effects for which their gardens are noted. Her book should help the spread of the Spanish garden in this country, which would be a distinct contribution to our civilization." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 228:adv Ag '29 260w

St Louis 27:285 O '29

FOX, JESSIE DOUGLAS. Rain before seven. 341p $2 Brewer

29-10481

Of the four young sisters living together in the roomy old house palely lovely Jennet is the least fathomable and the most attractive. Yet with all her inscrutable charm she fails to hold Christopher, tho she follows him to England to claim him. Unselfish dependable Katherine has meanwhile found happiness with

FOX, J. D.—Continued
Shawn, but Jennet's return causes havoc in the family once more.

---

"It is a simply written story, done with understanding and sympathy and an appreciation of some of life's essential truths."
+ Bookm 69:xxiv Ag '29 80w

"There are few gradations of character in 'Rain Before Seven.' Black is quite black, and white is immaculate. But things are always happening to these lively young people, and the reader is entertained to the end."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 26 '29 420w

N Y Times p8 My 26 '29 560w

"The author shows considerable talent for prose expression, but little for characterization. Her conception is immature and no breath of humor flutters her pages."
— + Outlook 152:78 My 8 '29 130w

"An interesting, capably handled story for the most part."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1079 Je 1 '29 230w

"A first novel of considerable promise."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 7 '29 300w

FRANCE, ANATOLE. Rabelais; tr. and with an introd. by Ernest Boyd. 254p $5 Holt [18s Gollancz]

847 Rabelais, François 29-9545

Essays on Rabelais and his books, which give also the seventeenth century French background of his work and explain the purpose of the tales about Gargantua and Pantagruel. Originally prepared by the author as lectures to be delivered in South America.

---

Booklist 25:385 Jl '29

"One reads with an interest in no wise diminished by the fact that this popular book on Rabelais breaks no new ground. The translation by Ernest Boyd is well done, and the illustrations by Edy Legrand have yielded, under the hands of P. and A. Baudier, wood-cut work as vivid as that of Doré or Robida." L: P. Shanks
+ Bookm 69:316 My '29 520w

"The book is a well wrought amalgam of scholarship and exposition. It serves as an adequate introduction, for the purposes of the general reader, to the work of a master who probably suffers from neglect." Lloyd Morris
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ap 14 '29 880w

"To read Anatole France on Rabelais is like watching a deft fencer try to overcome an opponent armed with a huge bludgeon. The glittering blade is a futility. Anatole France is clearly at a loss in trying to understand his rollicking, lusty friend of the sixteenth century." Sidney Homer
— Boston Transcript p4 Jl 27 '29 760w

Reviewed by Eliseo Vivas
Nation 129:69 Jl 17 '29 720w

Reviewed by Sherard Vines
Nation and Ath 45:312 Je 1 '29 480w

"What M. France, quite apparently, has done has been to dive into his subject and read up on it, very much in the manner of a lyceum specialist rummaging the Britannica, preparatory to a session with the ladies' clubs. The effect is about the same. Only, in place of turning to the Britannica, M. France has had the good judgment to fall back upon certain Gallic authorities, the men who, since the beginning of the century, have been revolutionizing Rabelaisian lore. This does give his lectures a value of a sort from the point of view of popularization; though even here, the value is considerably lessened by numerous inaccuracies and downright misstatements which have been allowed to creep in." S: Putnam
+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 30 '29 900w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv D '28 80w

Pratt p35 autumn '29

"The truth is that his subject bored him and he could not bring himself to take any trouble with it. This is obvious in the positively monstrous padding of the book. . . What reason, after all, was there for supposing that Anatole France would have anything useful to say, in Buenos Ayres or anywhere else, on the subject of Rabelais? This only, that few subjects ever found him wanting in diverting comments, even if a good many found him wanting in deep understanding. . . But for him to write a whole book on an author with whom he had little real sympathy was like making a respectable marriage. The joy of the encounter was gone before it had begun." E: Shanks
— + Sat R 147:612 My 4 '29 1400w

Sat R of Lit 6:192 S 28 '29 250w

Wis Lib Bul 25:320 O '29

"Unfortunately neither the portrait nor the exposition comes up to our expectations. We miss France's subtle wit and musical phrase; we miss his penetrating irony, his cynical but illuminating revelations of human nature. His treatment of his subject lacks his usual literary appeal; it is, in an unfavorable sense, academic. On the other hand, if we have too little here of the genuine Anatole France, we have good measure of Rabelais. . . The most famous passages of the Five books are related, and thus we have in accessible and pleasing form the cream of Rabelais' humor." C. S. Parker
— + Yale R n s 19:205 autumn '29 520w

FRANCIS, GRANT R. Scotland's royal line; the tragic house of Stuart; with a personal biography of that hero of romance and misfortune, Prince Charles Edward. 350p il $7 Dutton [21s Murray]

923.1 Scotland—Kings and rulers. Stuart, House of. Charles Edward, the Young Pretender [29-3613]

A history of the Stuart line in Scotland, with most of the space devoted to the Jacobite uprisings and a biography of Charles Edward, the Young Pretender.

---

"He weaves the known facts into so impressive and fascinating a picture that even readers well steeped in Scottish-English history are more than likely to treat the book as a new deliverance in its own particular field."
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 6 '29 450w

"Mr. Francis has written a full and admirable character-study of 'James III. and VIII.,' and a detailed account of the career and downfall of his son Prince Charles Edward. But he has called his book Scotland's Royal Line, and filled it up with scanty, and not seldom inaccurate, records of the lives of the earlier Stuarts. . . He shows, in fact, innumerable signs of a complete lack of scholarship."
+ — New Statesman 32:230 N 24 '28 280w

N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 16 '29 220w

N Y Times p22 Ap 14 '29 360w

N Y World p11m Ja 27 '29 120w

"Controversial material is temperately handled. The style is agreeable."
Outlook 151:230 F 6 '29 80w

"The book fills no special purpose, but is honestly done, serves no cult, is animated by no great prejudices, and its many illustrations make it an excellent book to have on the table."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:933 Ap 20 '29 380w

Spec 141:662 N 3 '28 550w

"The book ends with a chapter that should have had some interest, on the descendants of the Stewarts outside of the main line. Its value, however, is practically negligible, since the account of them is so confused that, unless one already knows the facts pretty well, it is simply impossible to grasp relationships."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p796 N 1 '28 880w

FRANCK, HARRY ALVERSON. I discover Greece; wherein an incurable nomad sets forth what befell him and an artist friend during a labyrinthine summer journey through modern Hellas. 359p il $4 Century

914.95 Greece, Modern—Description and travel 29-9765

An indefatigable world traveller discovers Greece and makes his usual bookful of meticulous observation and accurate information, informally written down, and amply illustrated.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:330 N '28

---

Booklist 25:389 Jl '29

"The narrative is informal, observant and amusing; it imparts information in the form of a readily assimilable by-product."

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 16 '29 120w

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett

Boston Transcript p3 My 11 '29 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p141 N '29

"Mr. Franck, in his book, tells a lot about Greece, all in all, but he tells it at times in the manner of a Baedeker and at times in a diary-like form that is not exciting. Unfortunately, he is a professional traveler who rushes around a country pretty thoroughly and then writes a book about it; to judge from his list, he is covering the world. Well, to travel on that scale and still be able to write interestingly about the places you see, is a big job; and Mr. Franck does not seem to be up to it." W. D. Lang

— \+ Nation 128:720 Je 12 '29 280w

"No traveler, it seems, could be more observingly casual than Mr. Franck; he gives the impression of thoroughness and at the same time of catching his impressions like the moving camera. But his interests are entirely those of the present day, and he is not sufficiently familiar with Greece to convey a fully balanced picture." Halsey Raines

\+ — N Y Times p9 Jl 7 '29 600w

"There is good sense and thoroughness and humor in it, and Franck never magnifies his own importance in a way to dwarf the scenery." C: J. Finger

\+ N Y World p11m My 12 '29 400w

"It is charactertistic of the writer's art that, in the sphere of the factual at least, it leaves nothing for anyone else to say about a place. A travel book by Mr. Franck, in other words, has the thoroughness of a passage of locusts. . . 'I Discover Greece' is too reportorially inspired, too wanting in scholarly sympathies for the country's past, to make its perusal pleasing to those drawn to Greece, not by its modernities, but for what memories it still holds of the golden days when burning Sappho loved and sung. The book would have profited by an index."

— \+ Sat R of Lit 5:1168 Jl 6 '29 350w

"Unequipped in style or knowledge to write a literary or informative account of his travels in Greece, he is content to pose quite unaffectedly as the energetic, irreverent American tourist covering the country according to his will and his means."

— \+ Times [London] Lit Sup p639 Ag 15 '29 400w

Wis Lib Bul 25:193 Je '29

FRANCK, HARRY ALVERSON. Marco Polo, junior; the true story of an imaginary American boy's travel-adventures all over China. 293p il $2 Century [12s 6d Methuen]

915.1 China—Description and travel. China—Social life and customs 29-20054

Mr Franck's first book for young people is the story of an American twelve-year-old boy's adventures during travel with his father in every part of China.

---

"It is easy reading and has much interesting material in it. At times it is too staccato and at times one feels as though there could have been more care—not only in the writing but in the penetration. It is, however, lavish with material." M. G. Bonner

\+ — N Y Times p36 O 6 '29 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Outlook 153:591 D 11 '29 50w

"The book has several virtues: it is patently true, it reveals a land which in many ways seems queerer than Alice's, it shows the way to travel, and it is a help toward comprehension of the people. It would be hard to exaggerate the value of this two-year fruit of Mr. Franck's sojourn in this land of transition." T. M. Longstreth

\+ Sat R of Lit 6:426 N 16 '29 150w

FRANK, BRUNO. The Persians are coming; tr. from the German by H. T. Lowe-Porter. 139p $2 (6s) Knopf

29-5601

"The German title of this book is Politische Novelle, which gives a much clearer idea of the author's purpose than does the rather cryptic American title. The core of the novelette is a series of political discussions between two statesmen, the German Carmer and the French Dorval, the latter an idealized portrait of a well known contemporary French politician. These liberal diplomats analyze the disease of Europe and discuss the possible methods of cure. The trouble with Europe is, of course, America. The imaginations of Europeans have been enslaved and inflamed by the glamour of transatlantic wealth. The Americans are the new barbarians, the modern Persians who must be repulsed at the borders of civilization by some imminent battle of Salamis."—Bookm

---

"Whether or not one is able to swallow Herr Frank's particular brand of idealism, his book remains a beautiful expression of it. In a prose so perspicuous and delicate and sincere that one hardly questions the pertinency of what they are saying, the liberal diplomats, Carmer and Dorval, analyze the disease of Europe." C. P. Fadiman

\+ — Bookm 69:192 Ap '29 600w

"A strange and beautiful book this, and mingled with its lyric persuasiveness the thin, clear note of intellectual protest." Eugene Lohrke

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 F 17 '29 1100w

"One scarcely knows how to define a work of fiction in which so many of the normal necessities of the form are either coldly slighted or altogether dispensed with. Notwithstanding, whether one defines or fails to define Bruno Frank's latest book, certainly no one can resist its power and thought-enthralling interest."

\+ Boston Transcript p8 My 18 '29 200w

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine

Nation and Ath 44:844 Mr 16 '29 140w

Reviewed by T. S. Matthews

New Repub 58:285 Ap 24 '29 220w

" 'The Persians Are Coming' has a charm independent of its protest and its irony; it has the civilized flavor of the best Continental writing, the exquisiteness of style, the exclusiveness of grace and polish. It is everything but a real novel—imaginative, witty, poetic, philosophical. One's only real objection to it is that as a unit it does not perfectly coalesce—its individual effects do not merge into an even larger one."

\+ — N Y Times p2 Mr 17 '29 650w

"Herr Frank has brought all his delicacy and subtlety of style to bear upon a dramatic subject, and the result is a remarkably good piece of writing." Herschel Brickell

\+ No Am 227:adv Ap '29 80w

"A remarkable piece of imaginative writing."

\+ Outlook 151:349 F 27 '29 350w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Sat R 147:412 Mr 23 '29 140w

FRANK, BRUNO—Continued

"Political though its theme may be, Frank's work is emotionally affecting. Its plea for internationalism should make an impression on anyone who is not a hidebound nationalist. In any event, 'The Persians Are Coming' is an excellent presentation of one phase of the European situation. And while it is a political novel it possesses all the fascination of the drama in Carmer's life, making the work a vital and appealing narrative."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '29 450w

FRANK, BRUNO. Trenck; the love story of a favourite; tr. from the German by Eden and Cedar Paul. 297p $2.50 Knopf

Trenck, Friedrich, freiherr von der—Fiction
28-21737

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p47 Mr '29

New Statesman 32:416 Ja 5 '29 500w

" 'Trenck' is far less successful than Bruno Frank's other writings dealing with Frederick the Great. The author seems never to have been able to make up his mind whether he was dealing with history or fiction. Excellent in the vignette, he is woefully incompetent in handling the structure necessarily involved in a sustained novel."

— Sat R of Lit 6:274 O 12 '29 230w

"He does not succeed in relating in any artistically productive way the figures of Frederick the Great and his victim, Friedrich von der Trenck. . . These doubts would not matter, since Herr Frank is writing a novel, if only he had made his ennobled Trenck a living figure. His Frederick may or may not be an approximation to the historical Frederick; he is, at any rate, a real man who might have done what Frederick did. But Trenck is a stick, beset by none but noble thoughts and yielding to none but noble follies."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p1024 D 27 '28 300w

FRANK, LEONHARD. Robber band; [tr. by Cyrus Brooks]. 313p $2.50 J. Cape & H. Smith [7s 6d Davies]

"The tale depicts the escapades and aspirations of a small group of school and working boys in 'the pious gothic town' of Wurzburg who characteristically revolt against the bondage of their daily lives by forming a 'robber band.' They make themselves a nuisance in the streets and by night raid the king's vineyard. As they grow older the band slowly disintegrates under the pressure of social and other personal interests, and the principal character, Michael Vierkant, whose experiences are obviously based upon the author's own, becomes in turn a factory hand, a laboratory attendant, and finally an art student in Munich. He ultimately commits suicide for totally inadequate reasons."—New Statesman

---

"Leonhard Frank is not, I think, one of the most interesting writers of his generation, and his powers are hardly shown to best advantage in this book written in his youth. But it does reveal a genuine talent for picturesque narrative, an ability to create odd characters and handle rather extraordinary situations. Its style is very pleasing, being at once smooth, easy and straightforward." Clinton Simpson

+ — Bookm 70:451 D '29 380w

" 'The Robber Band' is more of an impression than a story. It is like a drawing in anatomy in which the details stand out grimly and the whole is oddly disproportionate. Yet it gives you an idea. Its stripped accuracy makes you shudder. And beyond whatever you find of grimness and humor, you feel an ache which cannot be denied. The author has insinuated into his pages the strangled ache of adolescence which prompts its gestures of rebellion."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 D 1 '29 380w

"Frank's first novel should certainly be read by those who take an interest in German fiction of to-day." V. Sackville-West

+ Nation and Ath 44:416 D 15 '28 120w

"The narrative moves spasmodically, with unexplained irrelevancies and omissions; some of the episodes seem quite needlessly unpleasant; and more and more towards the end the story lapses into a totally incomprehensible mysticism which makes nonsense of the last few pages. Nevertheless the tale has merits; in particular an understanding of the difficult age in youth which is the beginning of adolescence."

— + New Statesman 32:576 F 9 '29 150w

"Despite its violence and snatchy style and pauseless narration of small incidents the book has power. It is not, of course, a pleasant book." Pierre Loving

+ — N Y World p11m N 10 '29 700w

" 'The Robber Band' is an exhausting book, and one feels all the time that one is being taken in; there is, perhaps, nothing behind these impressive, disquieting appearances." L. P. Hartley

— Sat R 146:824 D 15 '28 320w

"The book has a kind of distorted beauty. It is a night-mare world; but you are driven vehemently along by some implacable force." R. A. Taylor

Spec 141:794 N 24 '28 130w

FRANK, WALDO DAVID. Re-discovery of America; an introduction to a philosophy of American life. 353p $3 (12s 6d) Scribner

917.3 United States—Civilization. National characteristics, American
29-6953

This criticism of American life and culture analyzes its European background, its gods and cults, art, leaders, and the spirit of the people. Out of the confusion of the "American jungle," Waldo Frank tries to discover a direction for the growth of a creative American life.

---

"The complete absence of either humor or modesty in this diagnosis of American civilization makes it somewhat laborious reading but it would be too easy to dismiss the book as useless. It is, as a matter of fact, informed by a very earnest—though not necessarily altogether sincere—awareness of the fragmentariness of our culture and by a passionate desire to see American life come through unscathed, well integrated, and free of European intellectual dominance. Much in the book is obviously little more than a hieratic and unctuous projection of personal turmoil, yet something of value remains." E: Sapir

— + Am J Soc 35:335 S '29 400w

Booklist 25:316 My '29

"To the clever satirists and purveyors of American disgusts this creative study in social integration no doubt will seem a bit preposterous. It is shrewdly alert and realistic, informed with an honest sincerity of thought, yet it comes to final issue on a note of mysticism." V. L: Parrington

Bookm 69:441 Je '29 480w

"For all these specific reservations 'The Re-Discovery of America' remains one of the most vigorous positive criticisms of our civilization that has been made. No one else in America that I know combines anything like Mr. Frank's interior resources and insight with such wide scholarship and such ample observation of contemporary affairs in Europe and America." L: Mumford

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 31 '29 3200w

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 13 '29 400w

Reviewed by James Rorty

Nation 128:509 Ap 24 '29 1250w

"A good deal of this is conventional stuff, and a good deal more is mere confusion of mind struggling with a superheated vocabulary. Occasionally in 'a vague permeation of his darkness,' there is a shrewd or penetrating comment. But far too much is oracular thundering from which now and then emerges some luminance in mist, some muddled intuition struggling tongue-tied." Edgar Johnson

— N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 9 '29 880w
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv My '29 280w
St Louis 27:167 My '29

"Mr. Frank, whose heart and mind alike both yearn for the Mediterranean and the culture which sprang from its shores, nevertheless presents his problem in the jargon of sociology, metaphysics, even psycho-analysis and in the end leaves his reader so bewildered from the effort of construing the meaning of words that he is almost incapable of comprehending the order of the author's ideas. Of the latter the book has a stimulating quantity, but it is unfortunate that they are so overlain with the kind of phraseology which Kant could not avoid and Spengler appears to relish."
— + Sat R 147:414 Mr 23 '29 120w

" 'The American who has really lived in Europe . . . to save his life must return to his own place.' The discovery of America is, for such, the way of salvation. The discovery, as Mr. Frank describes it, is not joyous, nor is the journey unincumbered. Mr. Frank carries along an imposing amount of intellectual luggage, and stops again and again to assort and display it. Merely as an intellectual tour de force the book is inspiring, and if the pace is breathless and the work itself 'almost fleshless and with no smiles or pleasant moods at all,' the expedition, once begun, remains fascinating to the end." W: MacDonald
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:822 Mr 30 '29 1600w

"In the first part of Mr. Frank's book 'The death of Europe' is described. But these funeral orations have been declaimed so often in recent years that we are getting used to them. Mr. Frank is quite convinced that Europe to-day is dead. This, perhaps naturally, seems to us the least satisfactory part of his book. In Part II, however, Mr. Frank turns to America itself, and there—on more familiar ground—he writes most interestingly. . . We recommend his book as making stimulating reading."
+ — Spec 142:516 Mr 30 '29 630w
Spec 142:1015 Je 29 '29 40w

" 'The Re-Discovery of America' indicates that while Mr Frank has acquired an intellectual background for his musings, he has not acquired an esthetic background. If the book is read for its incidental observations—observations having at times the tone of half-bardic pronouncements—not a few of these will be found exotic and strained."
— Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 2 '29 1200w

"Waldo Frank has given us an inside view of ourselves. Like Herbert Croly, Walter Lippmann, and VanWyck Brooks before him, he has evolved his critical skill by being a participant observer, a creative worker, within the society which he scrutinizes. His interpretations possess the integrity of indigenous life and thought. And, judged by all the standards of results, he has written a great book, grand in conception, penetrating in insight, and amazing in prophecy. His is a book which no future interpreter of American life can neglect and which all serious contemporary critics will need to consult." E. C. Lindeman
+ Survey 62:414 Jl 1 '29 650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p324 Ap 25 '29 520w
Wis Lib Bul 25:275 Jl '29

FRANKAU, PAMELA. Three. 285p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hurst & B.]
29-17998

Janet James, following her engagement to an English major, spends a year on the Italian Riviera. In the sophisticated English colony at Florio, she meets Count Ferini, who becomes her lover. Forced to decide between him and a respectable English marriage, she chooses the latter.

———

Bookm 70:xxxi O '29 80w

" 'Three' is a soothing anodyne. It has a definite picture-postcard-of-the-Riviera quality about it. Perhaps it is best described as an attractive story."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 S 8 '29 280w
N Y Times p22 O 13 '29 430w

"Shorn of its bright superficialities and boiled down to essentials, this novel is but another variation on the venerable triangle theme. . . The story is extremely well told, and shows decided improvement in the writing of Gilbert Frankau's promising daughter."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:544 D 7 '29 160w

"Miss Frankau has an undoubted gift for writing, but it is still unformed, ingenuous, and too persistently concerned with frivolity, disillusionment and illicit love-making."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 7 '29 210w

FRANKLIN, MRS CHRISTINE (LADD). Colour and colour theories. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 287p il $3.50 Harcourt [12s 6d K. Paul]
612.8433 Color-sense. Color. Light 29-8078

The book is an argument against the color theories of Helmholtz and Hering, and an exposition of the theory of color-vision which Dr Ladd-Franklin herself has evolved. For the student; not for the ordinary reader.

———

"The book provides no single integrated exposition, either of the facts of color vision, of the 'genetic' theory in revised version, or of other theories. Instead, we are confronted by a somewhat disjointed series of 20 or more papers, covering a period of about thirty-five years, from 1892 to 1926. . . The assemblage and collocation of the membra disjecta of the theory therefore devolves upon the reader. In spite of the vigor and clarity of diction of the author the task is not an easy one. . . Apart from its permanent scientific worth, the volume is of interest in the side-lights that it throws upon past feuds and schisms still effective in directing the currents of visual research and theory. Particularly illuminating are the sections referring to the era when the recently discovered properties of 'visual purple' gave rise to a ferment of theories afterwards discarded." Elsie Murray
+ — Am J Psychol 41:653 O '29 1700w
Boston Transcript p6 Je 1 '29 350w
Nature 124:686 N 2 '29 150w

"These papers offer added evidence of the author's ingenuity in marshaling new facts in support of her views and of the vigor with which she criticizes the two older theories." W. H. W.
+ N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 20 '29 120w
N Y New Tech Bks 14:21 Ap '29

"The author of this book is, in the reviewer's opinion, one of the most remarkable women America has produced in the world of pure thought. She is probably one of the five or six people in the world competent to discuss the facts and theories of vision with a proper grasp of the numerous problems involved. Certainly she is one of the very few who can tell both physicists and psychologists (who often stand at opposite poles regarding their treatment of the facts of vision) 'where to get off,' and this she does in a piquant yet forceful manner." Harry Helson
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1190 Jl 20 '29 1800w

"The great difficulty of all theories of colour-vision is that some phenomena seem to require a physiological and some a psychological explanation, but that no clear line can be drawn between the two territories. Mrs Ladd-Franklin's is, however, one of the most ingenious and comprehensive that has been put forward."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p499 Je 20 '29 300w

FRANKLIN, HAROLD BROOKS. Sound motion pictures; from the laboratory to their presentation. 401p il $3 Doubleday, Doran

791.4 Moving pictures, Talking. Television 29-17200

The first comprehensive outline of the talkies, which is intended more for the industry than for the public. The author reviews the history of sound pictures, goes into the science of sound reproduction, and the manufacture of the pictures. He concludes with chapters on television and the future of the motion picture, and a glossary of technical terms.

"An astoundingly exhaustive textbook on audibility in the cinema which, at the same time, supplies an unintentional but valuable critical commentary on the amazing dramatic form that centers in Hollywood. It cannot be said too strongly that the book is as complete and intelligent a survey of the historical and technical phases of the film industry as one could well hope for. It is invaluable for one interested in the technique of the film business, and its discussion of the matter of television is an exceptionally skillful and restrained contemplation of a naturally fascinating subject." R: Watts, Jr.

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 S 15 '29 460w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 10 '29 120w

"A book theoretical, practical, expository, for both laymen and technicians."

N Y Times p22 S 15 '29 400w

"The material is so clearly arranged that anyone with merely a small boy's curiosity as to what makes a talky talk can get the information in one reading. This clear tabulation of the material covered is a thoughtful gesture to the lay reader, for a large portion of the book is devoted to technical details which will be interesting only to the studio worker or the theatre owner."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:352 N 2 '29 170w

FRASER, CHELSEA CURTIS. Story of engineering in America. 471p il $2.50 Crowell

620 Engineering—United States 28-24165

This simply written book for young people is a rapid telling of the achievements of civil engineering in America—roads, railroads, bridges, tunnels and subways, dams and reservoirs, canals, harbor improvements, lighthouses, mines, buildings. Contains 100 drawings by the author and 18 photographs.

Booklist 25:196 F '29

"It is just the book for those thousands of boys who, without knowing just what engineering means, have a vague idea that they want to be engineers."

+ Christian Century 46:82 Ja 17 '29 60w

"Written in an interesting and popular style, the book will appeal to the non-technical reader, but for the engineer it is marred by numerous wild and inaccurate statements of fact and careless editing of both drawings and text matter."

+ — Eng N 102:110 Ja 17 '29 400w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:8 Ja '29

"While Mr. Fraser's new book is intended chiefly for and will be most appreciated by boys in their teens, adult readers who want to be better informed on its theme will find it well filled with authentic information and written in enthusiastic, interesting style."

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 13 '29 400w

Sat R of Lit 5:785 Mr 16 '29 320w

Springf'd Republican p10 My 28 '29 50w

FRASER-HARRIS, DAVID FRASER. A B C of nerves. 234p $2.50 Knopf

612.8 Nervous system 29-27519

A clear presentation of the elementary facts relating to the constitution and functions of the nervous system, for readers without previous knowledge of anatomy and physiology.

Booklist 26:106 D '29

"Here is a little book about that subject of universal interest, the nerves, as simply written and as authoritative as one could find in a long search. Dr. Fraser-Harris is an eminent London physician who is an authority on his subject and, unlike too many specialists and authorities, he has the ability to write about it with clarity and as much simplicity as the necessity for scientific accuracy makes possible."

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 4 '29 380w

"Dr. Fraser-Harris has not quite succeeded in getting outside his subject and looking at it from the point of view of the layman, or indeed of the psychologist: miracles are treated rather as if they were everyday occurrences; but his book is a useful and readable collection of facts on a subject of universal interest."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p112 F 14 '29 900w

FREDERICK, MRS CHRISTINE (MCGAFFEY). Selling Mrs Consumer. 405p il $5 Business bourse, 80 W. 40th st., N.Y.

647.1 Home economics. Buying. Women as purchasers. Consumption (economics) 29-16541

Mrs Frederick, the first woman representative of the consumer to appear before congressional committees, and founder of the Home experiment station, has here made a study of consumption as controlled by the average woman. From facts supplied by an accurate compilation of statistics on various matters relative to consumption, she discusses and emphasizes the following things: first, the buying power of women, who "Mrs. Average Consumer" is, and the psychology of buying; second, per capita consumption, new trends in American diet, use of tinned foods, and kinds of household equipment, toilet articles and clothing on the market; third, Mrs Consumer in relation to prohibition, chain stores, advertising, reason for the failure of consumers' clubs, and the need of special financial provision for capitalizing a new home for young couples.

"The author has achieved wide reputation in her field. She writes entertainingly and with authority. The book cannot fail to attract attention on the part of efficient housewives." W. M. T.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 27 '29 810w

Reviewed by Day Monroe

J Home Econ 21:856 N '29 300w

"The whole book ought to prove highly suggestive and fruitful to students of economics, for there is probably no one in this country who has studied woman as a buyer and user of goods and as a factor in the economic life of the country as has Mrs. Frederick." F. F. Kelly

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 25 '29 1850w

"This book is a worthy examplar of the new method of scrutinizing the characteristics of buyers and taking from them the cue as to how to find out what and how they will buy. An imposing array of factual matter is assembled which should have considerable value in correcting a too masculine view of the market for consumer goods and of how to reach it." Ordway Tead

+ Sat R of Lit 6:338 N 2 '29 230w

FREDERICKS, ARNOLD, pseud. See Kummer, F: A.

FREE, EDWARD ELWAY, and HOKE, TRAVIS. Weather; practical, dramatic and spectacular facts about a little studied subject. 337p il $3 McBride [14s Constable]

551.5 Meteorology. Weather 28-30045

"Rain and hail and frost, mist and snow—each has its elucidating chapter. And we learn much about floods and thunderstorms and gales at sea and cyclones, about radio weather and aviator's air and about sun-spots. One of the most interesting chapters is the gay yet informative dissertation on weather in relation to human comfort. It is this combination throughout of gayety with informativeness which is the outstanding quality of the book."—N Y Times

Booklist 25:237 Mr '29

"As the preface points out, the book was planned 'not logically, but psychologically.' The method is more successful than might have been expected, for this is an excellent book, well-arranged and engrossingly interesting. . .; The illustrations deserve the highest praise." C. H. Payne

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 7 '29 520w

"The authors of this book have certainly ransacked the whole field of scientific knowledge for their material, and with the result of providing a series of essays on weather not soon likely to be excelled." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 12 '29 520w

Cleveland Open Shelf p60 Ap '29

N Y New Tech Bks 14:10 Ja '29

"The achievement of the book's authors may be summed up quite briefly: they have collected weather data which is by no means uninteresting, and they have presented it in such an attractive way as to make of it a thoroughly readable book—two distinct accomplishments. . . There is much that is really witty in this volume on what weather is and why. Yet the book is essentially one of information, the presentation of fact. Most of it, of course, is scientific fact."

+ N Y Times p22 D 2 '28 380w

"This is a thoroughly jolly book. The fact of an amusing, witty, yet accurate book about all sorts and conditions of scientific problems connected with the weather seems almost beyond belief, but Messrs. Free and Hoke have done just that." L. H. Titterton

+ N Y World p11m Ja 20 '29 320w

Pratt p13 spring '29

St Louis 27:160 My '29

"This book is worth the price asked; and is just the kind of book the average business man should own and read. Nor will reading be in the nature of a task but rather an enjoyment, because one (if not indeed both) of the authors is an expert at popularizing science. It is not a text book nor do we feel like recommending it for classroom work where exactness in statement is insisted upon; but it has a very real appeal to grown-ups who have their own ideas as to what they like to study." Alexander McAdie

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:510 D 15 '28 1050w

"It would be impossible to desire a more luminous and entertaining account of the present state of meteorology than this American volume contains. The authors' description of the difficulties which still attend on weather forecasting is remarkably lucid. We must add a word of praise for the admirable photographs with which the book is illustrated, and the delightful old-fashioned maps which have been drawn by Miss Elise Seeds."

+ Spec 142:1021 Je 29 '29 630w

FREEMAN, HAROLD WEBBER. Joseph and his brethren; with an introd. by R. H. Mottram. 372p $2.50 Holt [7s 6d Chatto & W.] 29-1963

"How the passion for land may turn to nothingness the love for wife or child or adventure is the theme about which H. W. Freeman builds his quiet story of Benjamin Geaiter and his six sons. The scene is laid in the eastern part of the shire of Suffolk, in England. . . The five elder sons of Benjamin Geaiter one after another made futile gestures to escape Benjamin's tyranny: Canada beckoned to the twins, Hiram and Bob, with promise of freedom and riches; Ernest was all but trapped by a plausible recruiting sergeant; Harry wanted, for a moment, to forget the harshness of Crakenhill in the smiles of the postmaster's daughter. But in the end it was Crakenhill itself that drew them back, wondering, bewildered, how they ever could have dreamed of forsaking the perfection that they themselves had created with sweat and sinew."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:473 F '29

Booklist 25:247 Mr '29

"It is a perfectly delightful book." T. S. Matthews

+ Bookm 68:689 F '29 550w

" 'Joseph and His Brethren' is the first novel of a young Oxford man who followed his university career with two years as a farmhand in Suffolk. Quiet originality, sureness and force are united to make a really remarkable novel. This book—somehow it demands bucolic images—is a cud on which one can chew, contentedly and fruitfully for a long time." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ja 13 '29 1000w

"The portrait of Benjamin Geaiter as drawn by Mr. Freeman is only one of a group of excellent portrayals. In fact, the novel is more remarkable for these divergent character studies than for its qualities as a story." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 26 '29 1300w

"Certainly this awful picture of farm slavery is not calculated to win men back to the land. The book is well written indeed, but if these be true types of the Suffolk farmer, we can but blame the Reformation for depriving these stupid, illiterate, unmoral pagans of the only thing that made life worth living, their faith."

— + Cath World 129:380 Je '29 180w

"H. W. Freeman in 'Joseph and His Brethren' has done (for a first attempt at novel writing) an amazing piece of work. . . It is by no means a truly great book. It is by all means a remarkable one, because, chiefly, it is a sturdy, deep-rooted seedling. . . It is the sort of book that those of us who have to read books get a thrill out of because it assures us that the literary orchard is not fallow, that the seedlings actually are sturdily pushing up." Fanny Butcher

+ — Chicago Daily Tribune p11 Ja 12 '29 760w

Cleveland Open Shelf p110 Jl '29

" 'Joseph and His Brethren' reveals unusual narrative skill and there are few if any new novelists who write with a greater mastery of the form which they have chosen than Mr. Freeman does. Yet his novel (which has been very highly praised) is not strikingly original in theme or substance. It is admirably executed, but it is very much in a current tradition." J. W. Krutch

+ — Nation 128:232 F 20 '29 650w

"Mr. Freeman has resisted the temptation to be either powerful or picturesque. And his book is the most probable description of English farm life that I know." Raymond Mortimer

+ Nation and Ath 44:112 O 20 '28 50w

"Many of Mr. Freeman's chapters have a beginning, a middle and an end all of their own, with this result, that his story must begin all over again with the following chapter. Consequently, his book lacks a sense of the whole, it lacks progression and a resulting culminative effect." Edwin Seaver

New Repub 57:330 F 6 '29 600w

" 'Joseph and His Brethren' has fiber; it has the stuff of enduring fiction. There is no intricate, soul devastating plot such as Hardy weaves. The book is a benign and simple annal of the poor—although it is not short." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 13 '29 1500w

"Perhaps it bears a certain surface resemblance to some of Hardy's Wessex stories, but it is Hardyesque with humor added, humor rich and close to the soil. It has something solid and durable." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv F '29 200w

FREEMAN, H. W.—Continued

"Dateless yet original in conception, rich in immemorial and precious characters, nice in description as a Dutch picture, noble in spirit, this novel is one in a thousand. We would rather be the man who—not conceived but opened his eyes and heart and received it than be President. And that in a great democracy such as ours, where, by the way this book could not have been written, is as much as any one could say."

+ Outlook 151:108 Ja 16 '29 730w

Pratt p36 spring '29

"Mr. Freeman is very handy with East Anglian dialect and his knowledge of the technique of nineteenth-century farming must be unrivalled." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 146:660 N 17 '28 70w

"There is nothing suggestive of immaturity about his book. It is carefully proportioned, admirably thought out, weighty in substance, with nothing of meretricious glitter or of precocious cleverness about it. . . 'Joseph and His Brethren' should find an appropriate place on shelves with books that tell us of the Yorkshire moors, the becks and fells of Westmoreland, the Sussex down, the lush meadows by the Froom, and the wild rocky coast of Cornwall. It deserves an honored place in regional literature." S: C. Chew

+ Sat R of Lit 5:585 Ja 12 '29 950w

"It is a live and truly delightful book that holds the attention from beginning to end, not primarily because it is an East Suffolk novel, or a 'land' novel, but because the author has an imaginative grasp of character and an effortless charm of narrative style." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 141:557 O 20 '28 150w

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 3 '29 1300w

"The tilling and cultivation of the soil is all the Geaiters know and all they need to know. English fiction is considerably the richer for a book that so well and faithfully portrays them."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p778 O 25 '28 720w

Wis Lib Bul 25:75 F '29

FREEMAN, JAMES EDWARD. The ambassador; the Lyman Beecher lectures on preaching, delivered at Yale university, April, 1928. 212p $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

262.1 Preaching. Clergy 28-23573

The Yale lectures on preaching by the Bishop of Washington are an appraisal of the office and work of the Christian ministry and the qualifications, equipment, perils and opportunities of the minister.

Christian Century 46:460 Ap 4 '29 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 Mr '29

"Every student for the ministry should read and read again these lectures; and every pastor who reads will have freshened interest and quickened zeal." M. G. Evans

+ Crozer Q 6:118 Ja '29 250w

"For ministers who are out at work and would like to know how to do things better, these lectures are not quite explicit enough. But they hold up a worthy and truly Christian ideal of the ministry."

+ — J Religion 9:334 Ap '29 150w

FREIENFELS, RICHARD MULLER. See Müller-Freienfels, R:

FRENCH, JOSEPH LEWIS, ed. Great detective stories of the world. $2.50; also in 3v ea $1.75 Dial press

Detective stories 29-27526

A collection of detective stories of all times by writers of international fame. Among the authors represented are Voltaire, Balzac, Dumas, Poe, Dickens, Gaboriau, Pinkerton, Conan Doyle, Robert Louis Stevenson, and Anna Katherine Green.

"Beginning with a scrap from Voltaire's Zadig, you progress through Vidocq's 'Memoirs,' Balzac, Dumas and Poe to a Dickens-Wilkie Collins-Gaboriau group, then on to such moderns as Doyle, Green and Stevenson—a baker's dozen in all, and each about 100 per cent better than most of the contemporary groceries." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 N 10 '29 100w

Boston Transcript p3 O 30 '29 500w

"A book of detective stories opening with Voltaire may cause curiosity, but Mr. French explains that 'Zadig' exhibits the methods of deduction used in criminal cases to-day. Dumas is represented by a story called 'D'Artagnan—Sleuth-hound.' Getting D'Artagnan into the detective class is a feat, but the editor does it by taking certain famous episodes out of the 'Vicomte de Bragelonne,' which make as thrilling reading as any mystery." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p18 O 17 '29 320w

FRENCH, JOSEPH LEWIS, ed. Pioneers all! achievements in adventure. 324p il $2.50 Bradley

920 United States—Biography. Frontier and pioneer life 29-13714

Joseph Lewis French has compiled for boys a book of stories of men of adventurous lives, pioneers all, who have played their part in the development of our country. Illustrated in color, the book opens with the expedition of Lewis and Clark, and describing famous examples of trapper, hunter, pioneer, cowboy, engineer, etc., ends with the story of Lindbergh.

"No small part of the vitality of and interest in the volume is due to the vivid and altogether stirring pictures by Sidney Riesenberg."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 27 '29 100w

"It is healthy and clean-cut stuff, quite free from crudities, the best possible fodder for boys." C: J. Finger

+ N Y World p11m My 12 '29 40w

"Mr. French has compiled his stories mainly from standard chronicles—journals, biographies, and narratives—upon the various topics; but in several cases, such as that of 'The Days of '49,' by Charles Pettigrew, and of the material taken from newspapers and periodicals of recent dates, the stories have the freshness of original contributions. The chapter upon the deep-water sailor, from Felix Riesenberg's 'Under Sail,' is as lively a bit of writing as anyone might wish; and the story of Lindbergh is inspiring."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:936 Ap 20 '29 230w

FRIEND, OSCAR JEROME (OWEN FOX JEROME, pseud.). Golf club murder. 319p $2 Clode

29-12058

John Hardy is jailed for assault when he attacks the two men who appear to be molesting a beautiful stranger. And on the same day the girl's father is arrested for the murder of Wolf-Face Fosdick, bank president to whom the accused man is in debt. John Hardy helps to clear the innocent and to clean up the town.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 26 '29 100w

"Strictly speaking it is a murder romance rather than a detective story. A formalist in style would say that it is abominably constructed. But it contains all the factors which provide entertainment and escape from the problems of the world."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Je 19 '29 250w

"An ingenious method of murdering a person is not enough to make a good detective story, particularly when the victim is such a villain that the reader would be only too satisfied if the murderer were not discovered at all. And we might pertinently ask what place has an entire chapter devoted to the making of fudge in a detective story?"

— Boston Transcript p5 Ag 3 '29 120w

N Y Times p19 Je 16 '29 210w

"Apart from the murder the book is occupied with the struggles of one John Hardy to purge the politics and finances of his native West Fork from a gang of ruffians, among whom was 'Wolf-face.' It takes him 288 closely printed pages to do it and that is rather too much."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p361 My 10 '28 180w

FRIEND, OSCAR JEROME (OWEN FOX JEROME, pseud.). Red kite clue. 303p $2 Clode [7s 6d Skeffington]
28-29079

"Artemus Graham, ostensibly a gentleman of leisure, is in his hours of privacy the Art Vandal who has set Chicago by the ears. In arranging for the theft of a Chinese chest which holds a relic prized by the Lamas, he becomes involved in the murder of Professor Vanderventer. His endeavor to save the innocent accused and to help Elizabeth Vanderventer, with whom he is in love, starts him on an exciting piece of detective work."—Boston Transcript

"This is wild, woolly, incredible and exciting." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p36 D 2 '28 100w

" 'The Red Kite Clue' has in it the makings of a rousing thriller. But unfortunately the author has not built up the story well enough to give the reader his just due of suspense."
+ — Boston Transcript p7 D 22 '28 180w

"A readable and interesting detective story."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '29 150w

"An exciting tale for those who do not ask to be deceived into belief."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p405 My 16 '29 150w

FRIESE, JOHN FRANK. Cosmopolitan evening school; organization and administration. (Century vocational ser.) 388p il $3 Century
379.19 Evening and continuation schools. Education of adults 29-3379

A survey of the city evening school—organization, administration, teaching. The author is assistant professor of industrial education at the University of Wisconsin.

Booklist 26:11 O '29
Boston Transcript p2 My 1 '29 150w
St Louis 27:306 N '29
Wis Lib Bul 25:124 Ap '29

FRISBIE, ROBERT DEAN. Book of Puka-Puka. 356p il $3.50 Century
919.6 Danger Islands 29-19893

Puka-Puka is one of the lesser known South Sea islands. The author, an island trader there, lived the life of a native, and describes Puka-Pukan customs, habits, sex-life, religion and philosophy from the native point of view.

Booklist 26:113 D '29
Bookm 70:xxxiv D '29 300w

"Puka-Puka, as the natives call it, or Danger Island, as it is otherwise known, must be just about as fascinating a pin-point as the Pacific can boast. To the author of this engaging book it is home. His account of the life which he enjoys there explains his contentment."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 24 '29 170w

" 'The Book of Puka-Puka' is a singularly observing and provocative, yet strikingly unpretentious book, presenting in undulating, unaffected prose a candid, glowing portrait of life among one of the most highly segregated of the South Sea island groups."
+ N Y Times p4 N 3 '29 500w

" 'The Book of Puka-Puka' as the narrative of the impression of a sensitive, sensual youth in a mad environment of which he is master, and of the details of being in one of the most exotic spots in the round globe, is a first class South Seas story. The selection of material from his vast diary is very well done, so that there is no dulness, no stupid scientific gabble by a layman, and there is little left out of real interest in the doings and sayings of the Puka-Pukans, from birth to death." F: O'Brien
+ N Y World p11m D 15 '29 900w

"In this series of sketches, closely-knit, and drawing—with seeming random lines, stipplings, and bits of light and shadow—a picture full of art, of a life so remote from that of the world at large as to be almost unintelligible, Mr. Frisbie has shown real originality and skill. The combination of qualities that make such writing possible is rare: imagination, close observation, a feeling for beauty, and a thoroughly pagan point-of-view are some of them. Add to these a long residence among the natives, the ability to learn a difficult language, and a background of education and reading few South Sea traders have, and it will be perceived that the combination is rare indeed. Mr. Frisbie's writing, done with a light touch, full of gusto and undertones of irony, suits the subject well." C: Nordhoff
+ Sat R of Lit 6:510 D 7 '29 900w

"Robert Dean Frisbie has succeeded in giving a much-written subject an entertaining tang. While the book adds little to the scientific data about those remote islands of the Pacific, it makes agreeable light reading."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 D 25 '29 380w

FROST, CHARLES W., and FULLERTON, MARGARET. Furniture inlaying; a textbook for students and amateurs. 140p il $2.50 Bruce pub.
749 Marquetry 28-9894

"A brief history of the art and a discussion of the principles of design precede practical directions for executing lines and borders, intarsia, marquetry, veneering and finishing. Richly illustrated with suggested designs and halftone illustrations."—N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 24:391 Jl '28
N Y New Tech Bks 13:18 Ap '28
Pratt p28 autumn '28

FROST, MRS ELIZABETH (HOLLISTER). Hovering shadow. 89p $2 Harper
811 29-15094

Brief lyrics of New England village life for the most part, with a light touch of color from Main Street, and the conversational style in episodes from the life of such people as the Widow, the Young Couple, the Grandmother, etc. Most of the poems have appeared in Harper's magazine.

"Elizabeth Hollister Frost has a quick, light touch in many of her satirical and colloquial verses. She impresses you as having been a close observer of certain phases of New England life. But to make the realism significant in the form of poetry is another matter, and in her more serious poems the ability to bring about the pathos intended does not match her other gifts." C: Divine
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 S 15 '29 100w

"The verse in this latest volume is delicate in conception, somewhat realistic, rather conventional on the whole. It is also subjective and emotional rather than intellectual in its appeal. More than all this, it is good poetry—good in its technique, in its lyric quality, in its content. On the whole, the poems in 'Hovering Shadow' are more even in quality than were those in her earlier volume, 'The Lost Lyric.' "
+ Boston Transcript p3 S 7 '29 230w

"In 'Hovering Shadow' the moors and the dunes of Nantucket find an appreciative and vivid portrayal. Mrs. Frost is far from academic, a bit careless, perhaps. But we are recommending her less exclusively as a poet than as the bardist of Nantucket."
+ — N Y Times p37 N 24 '29 200w

FROST, ELIZABETH—Continued

"We can say of 'Hovering Shadow' that it is quite attractive and salted with experience. We think that Mrs. Frost's work is gaining in individual force." W: R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 6:292 O 19 '29 300w

FROST, HOLLOWAY HALSTEAD. We build a navy. 501p il $4 U.S. naval inst.

973 United States—History, Naval 29-14346

"In his preface Lieut. Commander Frost says that his book is 'a story, not a history.' He deals only with early naval annals, 'the most dramatic and the most instructive.' His story finishes with the Mediterranean campaign of 1815, in which Stephen Decatur brought the Dey of Algiers to terms, an achievement picturesque, if not difficult."—N Y Times

Reviewed by B. A. Fiske

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 11 '29 1050w

"A readable book, an honest piece of work, claiming not too much for the old navy, and generous to the foe." H: E. Armstrong

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 14 '29 1400w

FROST, ROBERT. Selected poems. 213p $2.50 Holt

811 29-3388

Fifty-seven poems chosen by the author from A boy's will, North of Boston, Mountain interval, and New Hampshire. The former edition of Selected poems (Book Review Digest, 1923) contained no poems from the volume called New Hampshire.

Booklist 25:256 Mr '29

"This selection gives us the most valuable of Frost's poems."

+ Dial 86:436 My '29 130w

"In a new edition of 'Selected Poems,' which first appeared five years ago, Mr. Frost has wisely added fourteen pieces to the original list; and the selection could be even larger than he now modestly makes it." Mark Van Doren

Nation 128:110 Ja 23 '29 100w

Reviewed by Theodore Spencer

New Repub 58:24 F 20 '29 160w

Wis Lib Bul 25:71 F '29

FROST, ROBERT. A way out; a one act play. ltd ed 19p $7.50 Harbor press, 142 E. 32d st., N.Y.

812 29-12393

"This short play concerns the descent of a fugitive criminal upon a hermit in a lonely 'neck of the woods,' and the way out he found for escape by murdering the lonely man and taking his place when the sheriff trails him to the hermit's cabin."—Boston Transcript

"We have never seen this play acted, but it appears to be well adapted to practical and effective production, and makes one regret that Frost has not written more in the dramatic form. He has the evident capacity greatly to enrich the repertoire of our little theaters even if he may not care to wrestle with full-length drama for the commercial playhouse." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 O 6 '29 170w

"The action is very simple, but it is the dialogue with its rich idiomatic, country speech, its undercurrent of ironic humor, that is most effective and appealing. . . 'A Way Out' is a dramatic prose-poem imbued with all the fine qualities we associate with Mr. Frost as a poet." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 13 '29 660w

"Dramatic impact there is none, although there is dramatic intensity to every line. Apparently the author was so intent on his 'sentences' that he forgot what the whole was about. Needless to say, however, that as a piece of writing 'A Way Out' is no less distinguished than is all which Mr. Frost writes, and that probably all who are of the Frost cult will wish to obtain a copy." Percy Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p8 Jl 28 '29 300w

FROST, ROBERT. West-running brook. 64p il $2.50 Holt

811 28-29523

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:201 F '29

Cath World 129:377 Je '29 100w

"His memorable work is, after all, not his excellent dramatic stories of grey rustic characters, but his lovely lyrical eclogues mingled of nature and atmosphere, of a shrewd and half-daemonic philosophy, and, above all, of his own inimitable self—all written in the tang-and-accent of racy essential Yankee speech." E. M. Root

+ Christian Century 46:19 Ja 3 '29 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p53 Ap '29

"There are two poems in the collection which are probably the most poignant that Robert Frost has written, Acquainted with the Night, and The Thatch."

+ Dial 86:436 My '29 120w

"It is because of his previous accomplishment that one turns to Mr. Frost's new book with excitement, and at the same time feels justified in subjecting it to rigorous criticism. For it is on the whole disappointing. Not that it is without its successes; 'Spring Pools' is a fine poem, so is 'A Soldier.' But there is an impression of thinness gained from this book which Mr. Frost has not given before." Theodore Spencer

— + New Repub 58:24 F 20 '29 250w

Pratt p24 spring '29

Reviewed by S. N. Cleghorn

World Tomorrow 12:135 Mr '29 400w

FRYE, PROSSER HALL. Visions & chimeras. 277p $2.50 Marshall Jones

804 Literature—History and criticism. Authors 29-18239

"The Professor of Rhetoric in the University of Nebraska writes on Sheridan, Sterne, Carlyle, Arnold, Calderon, Montaigne, Pascal, Sir Thomas Browne, Renan, Huxley, Pater, De-Quincey, and Ibsen; worn subjects, but he freshens them. He notes with frank distaste the something 'flabby' in Renan, the something 'shabby' in Sterne, the mouthing half frenzy of Carlyle, the dilettantism of Montaigne. But he is unexpectedly kind to Walter Pater and severe on Thomas Huxley."—Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by S. B. Gass

Bookm 70:568 Ja '30 2250w

"It is only when you remember the great artistry in 'Romance and Tragedy,' that you think of Frye as less important in his present role, a critic of modern criticism." G. E. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 O 11 '29 420w

Reviewed by J. T. Shipley

Nation 129:754 D 18 '29 380w

"A miscellany of essays written from a steady point of view, which may be called aristocratic in temper, highly reasonable in its activity, and dualistic in its faith." G. B. Munson

+ N Y Evening Post p10m D 7 '29 520w

"Professor Frye is an outspoken critic of vigor and penetration. . . He has his own angle and comes in each case to an independent and persuasive result. He is a critic of men as well as of their writings, and has the poise of experience with life and with letters. . . His is not a mind made up to a program. He is an admirable writer, and a personality."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:348 N 2 '29 180w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 14 '29 1100w

FRYMIR, ALICE W. Basket ball for women; how to coach and play the game. (Athletics for women) 260p il $2 Barnes, A.S. & co.

796.32 Basket ball 28-17729

"Information on the fundamental and advanced technique and all controversial points of the game. Many diagrams and illustrations from photographs. Author was formerly coach at a state teachers' college and at Battle Creek college."—Booklist

Booklist 25:61 N '28
Pratt p23 winter '29
St Louis 27:21 Ja '29
Wis Lib Bul 25:98 Mr '29

FUCHS, THEODORE. Stage lighting. 500p il $10 Little [42s Allen & U.]

792 Theaters—Lighting. Electric lighting 29-5811

A comprehensive handbook which gives a history of the development of stage lighting, and a detailed technical discussion of equipment and methods. The technical descriptions are illustrated from drawings and diagrams, including the chapter on home-built equipment for the use of amateur groups.

Booklist 25:312 My '29

"The diagrams and other illustrations are excellent, particularly those which endeavour to show the effects of different kinds of lighting on a statue or a face. Although few people want darkness on the stage, it is certain that many scenes in the English theatre are too brightly, or at least too uniformly, lighted. Mr. Fuchs has produced a standard work which should be on every producer's office shelves."
+ New Statesman 34:92 O 26 '29 300w

"The book fails to give a first-hand idea of what lighting a production really means in practice, of how all the parts hang together when they get into action. Mr. Fuchs seemingly has not sat through enough light rehearsals of modern productions to realize how inadequate, how cumbersome most of our present stage apparatus is, particularly the dimmer board, and what a needless waste of time and energy it involves." Lee Simonson
— + N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 3 '29 700w

St Louis 27:164 My '29

" 'Stage Lighting' should serve as a text book in all schools of the theatre, and as a handbook for every technician in the amateur and professional theatre. Mr. Fuchs, unlike many who write of and for the amateur in the theatre, never questions his reader's capacity to comprehend a clear-cut scientific definition when his material demands it. Such objects as electricity, light, color, equipment, and control are analyzed vividly and with authoritative conviction—'which makes the nature of the volume essentially that of a handbook.' "
+ Sat R of Lit 5:959 Ap 27 '29 300w

"His bibliography cannot be as helpful as the book itself, for his book supersedes every other technical work he mentions. The electricians and the directors of little theatres are not the only ones who will find this book invaluable. It is so thorough that the largest motion picture theatres stand equally in need of it. No architect planning a playhouse, large or small, should be without it." Kenneth MacGowan
+ Theatre Arts Mo 13:311 Ap '29 500w

"This manual on stage lighting is an extraordinarily thorough piece of work, admirably designed to be of use to the amateur theatrical organization and at the same time to illustrate the whole range of this side of the craft of the theatre."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p848 O 24 '29 450w

FUERST, WALTER RENE, and HUME, SAMUEL JAMES. XXth century stage decoration; with an introd. by Adolphe Appia. 2v il $40 (£5 5s) Knopf

792 Theaters—Stage-setting and scenery 29-14254

"Twentieth Century Stage Decoration is in two volumes, one of text, the other of illustrations. Each volume is its own complete record; each supplements the other. Volume I contains an introduction by Adolphe Appia, fifteen chapters on the development, problems, forms of twentieth century stage design and the aesthetic possibilities which this material growth has opened up in the theatre. It concludes with a useful chart of the important productions of several hundred stage decorators. Volume II contains 400 illustrations, including a group in color, of stage design and investiture as it has developed all over the world through a generation in which it has been the livest and most vigorous of the arts of the theatre."—Theatre Arts Mo

"Unfortunately for the reader, all the more than 300 illustrations are bound in a separate volume, so that your neck gets weary turning your head from one volume to the other; but perhaps a single book would have been too bulky to make. The illustrations, at any rate, are chosen with a keen eye to illuminating explanation of the text, and the text is for the most part clear, simple and full of common sense." W. P. Eaton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 Je 9 '29 380w

"This joint work of Herr Fuerst and Mr. Hume is the most complete survey of twentieth-century theatre activities which has yet appeared, and the authors show that they have been able, in spite of the nearness of the material, to gain a true perspective." Allardyce Nicoll
+ Nation and Ath 44:447 D 22 '28 820w

"This book is valuable to all interested in the stage. It has only one defect and that is one for which the authors are not responsible. Among the artists' work shown that of Gordon Craig is absent. Apparently Mr. Gordon Craig refused to contribute. It is perhaps comprehensible that he should have done so, for the scheme of the book does not recognise the extent to which recent developments have been permeated by the influence of his designs."
+ — New Statesman 32:386 D 29 '28 1300w

"Mr. Fuerst and Mr. Hume have each had practical experience as producers of plays and as designers of stage settings. They have set down here much that is of value to the student of the theatre, amateur or professional." H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 7 '29 1550w

Reviewed by F: Morton
Theatre Arts Mo 13:465 Je '29 650w

"The whole book is a record of the highest value, comprehensive, impartial, and clearly expressed."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p74 Ja 31 '29 800w

FULLER, MRS ETHEL (ROMIG). White peaks and green. 91p $2 Willett

811 28-30480

"If one were seeking another name for a book that already has a perfectly good name and is quite worthy of it, one might call it 'Landscape with Figures,' for there is on nearly every page a landscape, ranging in scale from a garden glimpse to a mountain top panorama."—Christian Century

"A sense of beauty and of melody combine in these often poignantly haunting poems. . There is a subtle Hellenic quality to many of the lyrics."
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 13 '29 180w

"The first poem in this volume of genuine poetry is called 'Concerning the Speech of Mountains.' It validates the title of the book and sets the key note for it. There are a dozen or more of these poems that I would like to reprint here and let the reader be his own reviewer, but it would be better to read them all. There is very little dead wood in this grove of white birches." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 46:521 Ap 17 '29 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '29 110w

FULLER, HENRY BLAKE. Gardens of this world. [ltd ed] 225p $2.50 Knopf

914 Europe—Description and travel 29-19020

The "gardens of this world" are places that serve to shut out the ugly and the banal and to bring the mind back to quietude and peace. In this series of sketches two old friends, the Chevalier of Pensieri-Vani and the Seigneur of Hors-Concours, connoisseurs of beauty, revisit and discourse about some of these loved gardens in France, Spain, Northern Africa, Athens, Italy, Sicily and Dalmatia.

---

Booklist 26:118 D '29

Reviewed by Garreta Busey

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 17 '29 550w

"The charm of the book is incontestable; but even so, we doubt if this posthumous volume is any more for the many than Mr. Fuller's other books." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p10 O 26 '29 550w

"It is charming, reflective, provocative, a book entirely individual, which touches upon universal things. This book will stand for long, I think, as something beautiful. Intensely individual, more than a little ironic, couched in a style which sometimes approaches the précieuse, it is a book of insight and of loveliness. It has in it the beauty of a spirit that loved beauty and found it, knowing that by searching, and only by searching, can one find gardens in this world." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p2 O 20 '29 1100w

"It is not dazzling sword-play of wit which distinguishes Gardens of This World, but the perfect calculation of superb and unostentatious craftsmanship." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 153:109 S 12 '29 500w

"The book is not quite a novel, nor quite a book of travel. There is a thread of story and there are various characters. But the theme is the new world of aeroplanes, steam yachts, millionaires, and youth, moving through mellow Mediterranean scenes; and two or three elderly gentlemen who lingeringly bid those scenes adieu. These elders have not only the sadness of personal parting, but a feeling that the world also is bidding adieu to all that had been so dear to them."

Sat R of Lit 6:348 N 2 '29 110w

FULLER, JOHN FREDERICK CHARLES. Generalship of Ulysses S. Grant. 452p $5 Dodd [21s J. Murray]

B or 92 Grant, Ulysses Simpson. United States—History—Civil war—Campaigns and battles 29-27666

From a detailed study of Gen Grant's campaigns Colonel Fuller, an English military authority, derives the highest opinion of his generalship and ranks him as one of the few great strategists of modern times.

---

"Colonel Fuller's book is greatly appealing to the reader who loves Civil War history. There is hardly a book written on this period which is so clear in its presentation of facts and so unprejudiced in its point of view." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 21 '29 1000w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson

N Y Times p1 D 29 '29 1900w

R of Rs 81:17 Ja '30 460w

"Colonel Fuller is a stimulating writer on military and other topics, but he is not seen at his best in The Generalship of Ulysses S. Grant. Colonel Fuller, instead of being content to narrate, is all too anxious to defend and apologize; and it cannot be said that the defence or the apology is wholly satisfying."

— Spec 143:818 N 30 '29 200w

"There was room for a modern military appreciation of General U. S. Grant; and Colonel Fuller's, if unconventional, will at any rate promote thought. . . . The campaigns of Grant are related in sufficient detail, with adequate sketch maps, so that the reader, to some extent, is enabled to form his own judgment. The author, however, hardly seems to provide all the essential atmosphere."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p936 N 21 '29 850w

FULLER, MARGARET WITTER. Her son; a chronicle of youth. 310p $2.50 Morrow

29-4420

"Essentially the story of Laura Wolcott; in her childhood, her young womanhood and her marriage and finally as reflected in the life of her son Stephen. She is a woman who puts into motherhood a force and a consistency of purpose that should, properly, be directed toward the raising of perfect cows. Stephen, her son, is made-to-order material. Where a more sensitive and intelligent child would have revolted at the interference with his school life, his sports and, later, his business activities, Stephen takes it like a little major, and taking it makes him a very dull boy."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Booklist 25:322 My '29

Bookm 69:xxii Je '29 100w

"Accepting the mother for what she is, accepting the conclusions of the book as one author's textbook idea of the great spiritual and material success to be derived from clean living, it is possible to see the virtue in Miss Fuller's complete honesty of style and method and the compositive arrangements of her novel." L. F. Hellman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 F 24 '29 300w

Boston Transcript p2 F 20 '29 1350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p94 Je '29

" 'Her Son' is in many ways a distinguished work. It has intensity, it has restraint, it carries conviction and, with certain reservations, it achieves a form. It is in some respects as fine an idyl of New England as we have." Edwin Seaver

+ — N Y Evening Post p11m F 16 '29 650w

"In creating her major character, Mrs. Fuller has had moderate success, and has achieved a unity which is lacking in the book as a whole. The treatment is episodic, but the episodes do not merge into the central theme. Laura does not dominate the story, and the accessory characters are too vague to be satisfactory."

— + N Y Times p27 F 17 '29 420w

Sat R of Lit 5:760 Mr 9 '29 300w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '29 100w

Wis Lib Bul 25:102 Mr '29

FULLER, RAYMOND TIFFT. Walk, look & listen! sign posts on a naturalist's highways. 295p $2.50 Day

590.4 Natural history—Outdoor books

29-8569

Essays, short and long, by one who delights to follow the advice of the title, and has walked in field and woods on the lookout for the glimpses of natural life there recorded.

---

Booklist 25:381 Jl '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ap 21 '29 200w

"The book is non-technical and popular and instructs one in the arts of looking and listening when traveling through the by-ways and the woods."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '29 180w

"In each case we are presented with a certain amount of information, breezily and pleasantly conveyed. And in the essay on the Seven Sounds of nature, Raymond Fuller quite definitely writes better, precisely because he allows emotion to enter into his observation and to come through into his description." C: Johnston

+ N Y Times p2 Je 30 '29 200w

FULLER, SARITA, pseud. Their own desire. 324p $2 Doubleday, Doran
29-17658

When Henry Marlett tells his daughter Lucia of "the other woman" he expects her as a young modern to sympathize. He is therefore surprised and annoyed at her outburst. Lucia and her mother leave home. Henry continues the affair. But the far-reaching effects of it ruin the lives of Lucia and the other woman's son who fall in love with each other at first sight.

Bookm 70:xxx O '29 60w

"For her character delineation, as well as for the advancement of the action, the author makes ample use of the monologue intérieur invented by Edouard Dujardin. While the style is occasionally high pitched and perilously near to bathos, the craftsmanship is neat, and there are moments of real poignancy." R. C. B. Brown

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Jl 21 '29 360w

"This is a story of substitutes. By that we mean that sensationalism is substituted for honest drama, sentimentality poses as real romance, and the cheapest types of men and women masquerade here as best citizens."

— Boston Transcript p2 Jl 10 '29 380w

" 'Their Own Desire' comes very near being a first-rate novel. The theme is good and the author's comprehension of the theme is good. But throughout the hand of the potter shakes, the form is not incorruptible and implications that should be furrowed to rock bottom are only partly excavated. Miss Fuller would seem to have read James Joyce not so much wisely as too well. She goes to the faucet of psychology whenever necessary and turns on the stream of consciousness. Unfortunately the proper pressure is lacking and the stream runs by jerks and starts." Edwin Seaver

+ — N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 13 '29 350w

FURFEY, PAUL HANLY. Social problems of childhood. 288p $2.25 (10s) Macmillan

362.7 Children—Charities, protection, etc. Children—Care and hygiene 29-5669

Dr Furfey is discussing the responsibility of the community toward the social problems of the child. He considers community action in regard to such problems as child health, delinquency, illegitimacy, recreation, and vocational guidance.

"There is nothing to indicate any original research or contribution other than an attempt to review the efforts which have been made to meet these problems. The author discusses society's problems in dealing with children without giving one much insight into the problems of the child."

— + Am J Soc 35:516 N '29 200w

Booklist 25:344 Je '29

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 23 '29 180w

Cath World 129:245 My '29 250w

"A very well balanced and informing book, the work of a competent expert."

+ Christian Century 46:967 Jl 31 '29 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p85 Je '29

J Home Econ 21:450 Je '29 80w

"Its purpose has been adequately and accurately fulfilled without partisanship. The author reviews critically the scientifically developed methods of meeting problems which have arisen as the result of our shifting civilization for the pre-school child, for the older child at home, in the schools, at work, or at play, and for delinquent, defective, and dependent children."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:960 Ap 27 '29 130w

FURNISS, MRS RUTH PINE. Snow. 248p $2.50 Harcourt
29-18542

The memory of his beautiful mother's tragic death in the snow haunted Nikolas Paget for years. When he met Mary Anderson, young, shy and reminding him just a little of his mother, he married her after a month's courtship. His friends sighed with relief or sneered, according to their natures. There was a short interval of happiness, and then the old demons attacked Nikolas again. And Mary Paget, too, died in the snow.

"This is a determinedly deep-dyed tragedy. The dilemmas of Mrs. Furniss's wracked beings seem fairly open to solution, yet their seriousness is magnified terrifically until it is not so much an inevitable tensity as hysteria which is their major note."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 O 20 '29 120w

"Mrs. Furniss's novel is unsympathetic as a love story, unconvincing as a picture of life. Her people are daubs not even significant as caricatures."

— Boston Transcript p4 N 9 '29 160w

FYLEMAN, ROSE. Forty good-morning tales. 121p il $2 Doubleday, Doran 29-10386

"Mary Smedley, a good girl, who sewed herself up in a sampler, Thin Helen who blew entirely away and the Pirate who had a passion for pickled onions are among the amusing characters found in this book of whimsical stories. Illustrated by Erick Berry."—Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 25:362 Je '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 N '29

"Any child with any imagination will hug this book to her heart and find fresh fields to roam in. And as for any child without imagination, if there is one, she surely will have at least a small seed planted within her, which with proper cultivation will eventually come to flower." L. T. Bartlett

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1076 Je 1 '29 450w

G

GAG, WANDA. Funny thing. unp il $1.50 Coward-McCann
29-23112

The funny thing was an animal that ate dolls and worried kind-hearted Mr Bobo very much. So he fed the funny thing so many jum-jills that it had to sit on a high mountain in order to have a place for its rapidly growing tail. And, of course, being filled with jum-jills it dined no longer on dolls.

"The work of an artist of distinction. Last year she published Millions of Cats and straightway belonged to children everywhere. The Funny Thing has the same quaint charm." Helen Ferris

+ Bookm 70:307 N '29 60w

"If the history of the art of the picture book is ever written the name of this artist will undoubtedly be graven there in large letters, for she, writing her story as well as drawing it, has discovered the richest potentialities of each factor, and to the process of integration has brought a wealth of originality. No other books have quite that feeling of the artistic whole." Lynd Ward

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 N 17 '29 260w

"Here is one of the most attractive picture books of the season. The book is truly childlike, and shows both originality of idea and illustration." O. M. Fuller

+ N Y World p11m D 1 '29 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Outlook 153:589 D 11 '29 70w

"Once more we have a humor and a curious, grotesque charm that are highly individual. There is excellent technique here. Miss Gag knows how to draw and while to us personally the designing of some of the double-page pictures seemed over conscious and mannered at times, still there is certainly no one else who can touch her in her own particular line." Rachel Field

GAG, WANDA—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 6:403 N 10 '29 150w

GALE, ZONA (MRS W. L. BREESE). Borgia. 241p $2.50 Knopf
29-21543

"We are introduced to Marfa Mansfield, a lovely young girl for whom life seems to offer nothing in the way of melodrama, but just there is the key to Marfa's psychosis. A series of coincidences, involving tragedy for her closest friends, is Marfa's excuse for a morbid, half remorseful but wholly egocentric conviction that she is an agent of evil. She loves to think of herself as a modern Lucrezia Borgia. At first she hugs the idea to her soul in secret, but her vanity feeds upon her obsession until it becomes a boast and she resents efforts of her friends to convince her that she is really a normal 'nice girl.' Miss Gale depicts this unwholesome but credible mental state."—Outlook

---

Booklist 26:118 D '29

"Miss Gale, mature as ever in her acute observation, makes the most of it, drawing a portrait that will not be easily forgotten by the reader. It is surprising to note with what few strokes Miss Gale can suggest a complete characterization. Indeed, her talent at times suggests the work of the great Japanese artists who confined themselves to the essential lines and so produced a greater illusion of reality than that suggested by over-drawn pictures. Borgia is to be placed among the finer achievements of Miss Gale, and, remembering her past work, that is a lot to say." Herbert Gorman
+ Bookm 70:315 N '29 300w

" 'Borgia' is humorless and beautifully calculated. For all her concentration on mystic significance, Miss Gale has turned hard and cold and exalted. The sentimental smile that she was wont to turn upon poor harried humans has most certainly faded. . . . The style is precious and oftimes exquisitely sensitive. Miss Gale appears to weigh every word with delicate precision and to decide its position with calipers. One feels particularly that extravagant and strained attention has been lavished on the arrangement of phrases. Form has somewhat conquered feeling." Florence Haxton
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 O 13 '29 1600w

Reviewed by W: E. Harris
Boston Transcript p2 N 16 '29 1350w

"Here is a very individual vision plus a very accomplished technique. Miss Gale's isolation has no doubt encouraged a great deal of self-communion, but she has never forgotton that her business is ultimately to communicate; and what we get, therefore, is a manner as crisp, as deft, and as definite as the mood is tenuous and intangible." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 129:725 D 11 '29 900w

" 'Borgia' is a cold and cloudy book which has none of the ecstatic warmth of 'Preface to a Life,' none of the shrewd, critical knowledge of external humanity of 'Miss Lulu Bett.' Here, for perhaps the first time, Miss Gale has lost her knack of pointing human character with sly, economical, sagacious strokes. Even the writing, rich and luminous though it so often is, is wanting in the close-packed meaningfulness which Miss Gale can command at her best. In spite of all these things the book is perhaps more provocative than many novels which are more successful; it seeks to do something quite worth doing, if the reader is willing to sift it for himself, it succeeds." L: Kronenberger
+ — N Y Times p2 O 20 '29 1050w

"The style of 'Borgia' is fastidious, the narrative subtly handled. It is a very distinctive book—in fact, a little too distinctive to be either human or credible." Marie Luhrs
+ — N Y World p11m N 24 '29 250w

"If the 'happy ending' with which she untangles Marfa's strangely knotted destiny seems a trifle banal, it is only because life, having no climaxes and no form, is so often banal, to the discouragement of the dramatic. For that life is to blame, and not Miss Gale! She interprets the inarticulate and repressed with the sympathy and truth of a fine and sensitive artistic instinct." Mary Shirley
+ Outlook 153:109 S 18 '29 500w

"The style like the argument is overdone. It is appalling to be afflicted with terrific niceties at the most banal moments, to be burdened with the intricacies of unimportant acts. . . Such a to-do over nothing only makes grotesque what was intended to be exact and perfect, and one is alarmed with the thought that Miss Gale is enamoured with the technique of science, not of art." Donald Davidson
— Sat R of Lit 6:440 N 23 '29 850w

GALE, ZONA (MRS W. L. BREESE). Portage, Wisconsin, and other essays. 214p $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf 814 28-27676

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:154 Ja '29

"One rather resents the new and brighter note in Miss Gale's writing, but one is grateful for what remains of the old Portage, where 'it seems like a party when you get your bread thin,' and suspects that this book may be an adieu to Portage."
Bookm 68:v Ja '29 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p29 F '29
Nation 128:539 My 1 '29 250w
Pratt p27 summer '29
Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 10 '29 120w

GALLAGHER, FRANK. Days of fear. 175p $2 Harper [5s Murray]
B or 92 Hunger strikes. Ireland—History—Sinn Fein rebellion 29-26488

This day-to-day journal of one who took part in the hunger strike in Mountjoy jail, Dublin, in 1920, is the record of a spirit sorely beset, alternating between strength and weakness, ecstasy and torment, certainty and doubt.

---

Booklist 25:357 Je '29
Reviewed by Norah Meade
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 21 480w

"The literary merit of the work can hardly be questioned. The doubts, the despair, the grim obsessions are more than mere words upon a printed page. The author has painted in powerful colors the struggle of his own will against the agony of continuous hunger and sleeplessness."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '29 280w

"As a sheer record of mental history under such an experience, this book is genuine literature. It thrills and overawes the reader." A. W. Taylor
+ Christian Century 46:747 Je 5 '29 250w

"Apart from its value as a piece of literature, which is great enough, this journal is an amazing record of what force of will and faith in a cause can do in face of physical suffering." Norah Meade
+ Nation 129:256 S 4 '29 170w

Reviewed by A. Gregory
Nation and Ath 44:422 D 15 '28 1000w

Reviewed by Augusta Gregory
New Repub 58:sup141 Mr 20 '29 1650w

"Mr. Gallagher's journal of the strike is a genuine contribution to prison literature, though it suffers badly from the vice of fine writing."
+ — New Statesman 32:574 F 9 '29 580w
New Statesman 33:339 Je 22 '29 1500w

"A singularly graphic little book. A. E. calls it one of the most important documents left to us from the time of civil warfare in Ireland, and it is intensely moving stuff." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv Ap '29 50w

St Louis 27:271 S '29

"It is a vivid and gripping account, evidently considerably polished up after the event, but with the freshness of reality all over it." R. N. Baldwin

Sat R of Lit 5:916 Ap 20 '29 500w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 17 '29 200w

"He has set down, with painful and almost morbid intensity, his physical and mental experiences during the self-inflicted struggle. Written in the form of a diary, this unusual book records, day by day, each phase of increasing starvation, the early physical pangs, the hallucinatory stage in which the natural craving for food became an exquisite torment and temptation, the stage of physical revulsion from the idea of eating, the later periods of alternate delirium and lucidity."

Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 10 '29 200w

"In the book are not only strong social implications, but it raises interesting and inevitable questions concerning the force of the hunger strike as a non-violent method of attacking injustice and wrong."

+ World Tomorrow 12:348 Ag '29 50w

GALLICHAN, WALTER M. Poison of prudery; an historical survey. 235p $2.50 Stratford [7s 6d W. Laurie]

176 Sex. Sex instruction 29-16590

The history of prudery, prejudice and taboo in regard to matters of sex and sex-instruction. The social and moral importance of the subject, its effect upon physical and mental health, and the censorship of "obscene" books are among the topics discussed.

---

"His more specifically factual books are in a better vein than the present one, for he has no grace of diction and no humor and no power of rounding out an argument. In 'The Poison of Prudery,' since he has no idea to contribute, but only a gospel to insist upon, he makes shift with truisms. Nevertheless, all his points are excellent." Ruth Benedict

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 6 '29 300w

"As a bald attack on Victorian ideas of sex, incorporating the opinions of those who have already shown up Victorian prudery, it is successful enough. But it lacks subtlety. The author (with Freud at his back) makes the mistake of confusing prudery with modesty, and, at the other end of the scale, of calling what is only normal eroticism obscenity."

— New Statesman 33:722 S 21 '29 200w

"He has the zeal of a crusader and he seems to have read widely and variously upon the subject. But he lacks the judicial temper that is always desirable in the treatment of mooted questions, the restraint in statement that invites confidence and either up-to-date knowledge of conditions or willingness to acknowledge them."

— N Y Times p20 S 8 '29 500w

"The case histories introduced to prove the steps in the argument are too sketchy to be of much value but throughout the volume the quotations from Ellis, Jones, Hirschfield and others, create a sort of symposium of the best modern thought on the subject of inefficacy of suppression, the human distortions created by repression and the need for the abandonment of the ostrich attitude toward sex." M. L. Ernst

Survey 63:230 N 15 '29 300w

"This book, which contains almost as many quotations from the works of others as comments by the author himself, is a sound enough exposition of the text; 'We should not be ashamed to name what God has not been ashamed to create.' As propaganda, however, its effective value is lessened by the author's failure to distinguish between the virtue of calling a spade a spade and the tedious vice of making spades the chief subject of thought and conversation."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p751 S 26 '29 280w

World Tomorrow 13:42 Ja '30 100w

GALLICHAN, WALTER M. Youthful old age; how to keep young; with an introd. by Thurman B. Rice. 236p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Laurie]

613 Hygiene. Old age 29-9467

Sensible advice on how to eat and drink and exercise, in short how to live, so as to keep young after old age comes.

---

Reviewed by M. P. Ravenel

Am J Pub Health 19:840 Jl '29 230w

Booklist 25:381 Jl '29

Pratt p16 autumn '29

Springf'd Republican p14 Ag 14 '29 420w

"The subject of diet is dealt with in a way that accords with modern thought and research. There is a pleasing absence of faddism here, as throughout the book. Chapters on sex hygiene give simply and sanely much valuable information that many intelligent people have failed to find in other books on this subject. Along with scientific fact and practical advice the author intersperses much of his own philosophical reflection. Altogether, a good book, which should be widely read." A. E. Johnson, M.D.

+ Survey 62:379 Je 15 '29 300w

GALLISHAW, JOHN. Only two ways to write a story; a book for writers which cites cases in the craftsmanship of the modern short story. 486p $5 (21s) Putnam

808.3 Short story 28-29984

"John Gallishaw undertakes the linear analysis of a score of short stories, in order to acquaint the student with their component parts, their proportions, and the articulation of their chief members. Mr. Gallishaw in effect, conducts an anatomy class in short fiction."—Dial

---

"The Only Two Ways to Write a Story, is a 'case book' for the student of this fiction form. An interesting and helpful volume for the writer who is anxious to eliminate his faults both of construction and of dramatic interest." Stewart Beach

+ Bookm 69:328 My '29 160w

"Mr. Gallishaw makes a representative selection of short stories and submits them to thorough dissection. His findings will no doubt be helpful to some; others will cling to the trial-and-error method, which—whatever its faults—is essentially the way of creation."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Ja 27 '29 130w

"In so far as the process of creation can be reduced to a chart, Mr Gallishaw's contrivance clicks, but the whole method somewhat resembles taking a Swiss watch apart and putting it together again with a screw driver."

Dial 86:528 Je '29 80w

Pratt p28 summer '29

St Louis 27:202 Je '29

GALLISHAW, JOHN. Twenty problems of the fiction writer. 455p $5 (21s) Putnam

803.3 Short story. Fiction—Technique 29-10496

Classroom lectures on the structure and technique of the short story which with the companion volume "The only two ways to write a story," constitutes "a complete course in short story writing."

---

Booklist 26:23 O '29

Reviewed by Stewart Beach

Bookm 69:328 My '29 160w

"What was said of Mr. Gallishaw's earlier book in this column remains true of the present one. These books teach one how to write

GALLISHAW, JOHN—Continued
only those short stories now commonly used by our eight-cylinder-million-and-a-half-advertising-medium magazines. They can help to perfect mediocrity, and that is about all." Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 27 '29 400w
St Louis 27:310 N '29

"We must assume that he is fully qualified to give the kind of advice essential to those writers who are ambitious for the princely rewards paid out by the big American magazines. And that, most unhappily, is the key of the whole matter. For when an author by following such advice as this of Mr. Gallishaw's can earn anything from £150 to £500 for a machine-made short story of seven thousand words, he is not encouraged to emulate the methods of a Katherine Mansfield, an A. E. Coppard, or, most emphatically, a Guy de Maupassant."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p555 Jl 11 '29 1000w

GALSWORTHY, JOHN. A modern comedy. 798p $2.50 Scribner [8s 6d Heinemann]
29-26919

This book, comprising three full-length novels, The silver spoon, The white monkey, Swan song, and two short interludes, continues the Forsyte saga and comes to a climax with the death of Soames Forsyte, Fleur's father.

Reviewed by K: Schriftgiesser
Boston Transcript p2 S 28 '29 1250w
Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p4 O 11 '29 650w
Reviewed by Percy Hutchison
N Y Times p1 S 8 '29 2900w
Sat R 148:189 Ag 17 '29 400w

"In some respects 'A Modern Comedy' is inferior to 'The Forsyte Saga'; it is much less rich in varied and vivid types of character; it is less successful as the portrait of an age. The nineteen-twenties are too close to us for such a portrait; perspective is impossible. But in other ways 'A Modern Comedy' has the advantage of its predecessor. It has a more organic unity, a clearer and more symmetrical plan, dominated by one great figure as tragic finally as Père Goriot,—the figure of Soames Forsyte. . . It is that least showy and attractive of the Forsytes, Soames, the villain, who has proved so strong that, against the will of his somewhat puzzled creator he has become the hero of the cycle." H. E. Woodbridge
+ Sat R of Lit 6:509 D 7 '29 1100w

"A Modern Comedy, when all its merits have been enumerated, has hardly the qualities of real greatness, but together with the Forsyte Saga it becomes an epic about the comparative greatness of which (in these times when novelists are as common as magpies and as acquisitive) there can be no doubt whatever: an epic only a little weak and uncertain towards the close. Frankly, there are passages here which bore us to the extent of skipping half-a-dozen pages in the hope of finding something interesting: which never happened with the Forsyte Saga. But what an achievement the whole thing is!"
+ — Spec 143:827 N 30 '29 300w

GALSWORTHY, JOHN. Plays. 698p $2.50 Scribner
822 28-25469

The plays of John Galsworthy, complete up to the present time (1929), are contained in a single volume, uniform with The Forsyte Saga and Caravan.

Booklist 25:154 Ja '29

"Reflection strengthens the belief that far more drama is packed into any one volume of Galsworthy's short stories than can be found in this volume of plays. . . He produces his best drama by means other than dialogue."
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 28 '29 100w

"They are plays that read wonderfully well, they are never long, never broad, often deep, and always there is some subtle overtone vibrating through them."
+ Christian Century 46:82 Ja 17 '29 100w
+ — Dial 86:266 Mr '29 100w

"I should call the book just about indispensable for any library of modern English literature." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 227:adv Ja '29 60w
Pratt p25 spring '29

"Obviously some compression in the physical process of book-making has been necessary. The indispensable economy has been effected by using a small though legible type and placing it in two columns on each page."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 28 '28 100w
Wis Lib Bul 24:343 D '28

GANN, THOMAS WILLIAM FRANCIS. Discoveries and adventures in Central America. 261p il $5 Scribner [21s Duckworth]
917.282 British Honduras. Mayas. Central America—Antiquities [29-26266]

"In the present volume Dr. Gann again takes up the thread of his personal narrative of adventures, pursued from year to year, in the area of the ancient Maya ruins of British Honduras. This is the author's fifth book on similar lines, the whole comprising instalments of an interesting serial story written practically on the spot. For Dr. Gann is an indefatigable diarist, and each volume is an account of the season's journeys and results, with but little editing."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 25:316 My '29

"Dr. Gann writes in a leisurely manner, inserting an occasional semi-extraneous triviality or a bit of an anecdote related by a companion —entirely irrelevant, yet productive of that grain of humor which is so essential to the support of the reader's interest." M. G.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 2 '29 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p71 My '29

"Dr. Gann's book abounds in graphic and entertaining stories of travel in the forest lands of Central America, with notes on the native peoples, the flora and fauna, and it would be interesting if these were its only content. His main purpose, however, is to describe the discoveries that he and his companions made at Chunucha. The site, which appears to have been that of a provincial town of the old Maya empire, yielded many artefacts of high quality, and a number of stelæ that provided a series of important dates in Maya history."
+ New Statesman 32:446 Ja 12 '29 220w
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 14 '29 560w
Times [London] Lit Sup p1020 D 27 '28 580w

GARBER, PAUL EDWARD. Building and flying model aircraft; a guide for youthful beginners in aeronautics, prepared for Playground and recreation association of America. (Ronald aeronautic lib.) 300p il $2.25 Ronald [10s 6d Simpkin]
629.18 Airplanes—Models. Aeronautics
28-12717

"Amply illustrated graded instructions for making different types of models, including airplanes, gliders, balloons, and compressed-air engines, with advice on airplane clubs and aircraft contests. Author is on the staff of the United States National Museum."—N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by C. D. Lunt
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 F 3 '29 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:31 Jl '28
Pratt p17 winter '29
St Louis 26:294 S '28
Survey 61:247 N 15 '28 40w

GARDINER, MRS DOROTHY (KEMPE). English girlhood at school; a study of women's education through twelve centuries. 501p il $6.50 (18s) Oxford

376 Education of women. Education—England [E29-227]

An illuminating survey of women's education in England from Saxon times down to the nineteenth century. The author gives liveliness to the work by quoting from contemporary writings and including illustrations from contemporary sources. The work gives occasional glimpses of education on the continent at different periods.

"The book is probably too detailed for the general reader, but is valuable as an aid to obtaining a true historical perspective on education and its relation to social conditions, the lack of which so often makes discussion of current conditions seem weak or fallacious."

+ J Home Econ 21:683 S '29 150w

" 'English Girlhood at School' is crammed from cover to cover with the most fascinating records of English girls from Saxon times onwards, and gives a picture—rather a multitude of pictures—of their lives and opportunities which can keep one enthralled for hours." Ray Strachey

+ Nation and Ath 45:170 My 4 '29 520w

"Nothing better in historical writing has been done in the last decade than Dr. Eileen Power's book on mediæval nunneries or Miss George's study of the conditions of life in eighteenth-century London. And Miss Gardiner's survey is well worthy to be ranked with these."

+ New Statesman 33:450 Jl 13 '29 230w

"Monumental is not too large a word to apply to a work of such scope, such careful research and such scholarship as Miss Gardiner's study of twelve centuries of education for women in England. . . Her work is a compendium of information, woven into an interesting narrative, of the education of women in England through more than a dozen centuries that will be invaluable not only for students of its special theme but also for those interested in education in general, in English social history and in sociology."

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 25 '29 400w

"An admirably executed piece of work. The only complaint might be against its exhaustive thoroughness; for, sometimes, in the wealth of citation, we lose sight of the broader, more inclusive movements. One particularly interesting section is on 'The Tudor Paragons.' "

+ — Spec 142:864 Je 1 '29 250w

"A scholarly and readable history of the education of women in England has for long been wanted, and this book of Mrs. Gardiner's goes far towards filling the gap. Solidly based upon original sources and showing a wide range of reading, it is written with so much charm and illustrated by such well-chosen quotations that it cannot fail to interest the general reader as much as the student."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p601 Ag 1 '29 2000w

GARDNER, PERCY. Principles of Christian art. 301p $3.50 Scribner [10s 6d J. Murray]

246 Christian art and symbolism [29-26331]

"Dr. Gardner makes no attempt in this volume to compete with the many histories of art which deal with the changing technique of painting and sculpture. In two sections written from the psychological and historical points of view he sets forth certain fundamental principles and in conclusion offers tentative suggestions for 'a reconciliation between modern religion and art.' "—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Mr 10 '29 90w

"This is a broad, comprehensive, scholarly survey of the whole question, searching and suggestive. It goes deep into the very roots of things, as one would expect from such a scholar."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '29 230w

"On the whole, the book impresses one as a good example of English provincialism, and when the writer treats of modern Christian art one gets the impression not only of provincialism but of quaint and quite British ignorance." M. H. Gates

— + Churchman p17 Ap 27 '29 450w

"Percy Gardner covers a wide ground and has much of interest to say on the spirit and the self-imposed restrictions of a Christian aesthetic. It is, in fact, a book which any man who has an interest in the foundations of art and conceives it as more than mere technical excellence can read with advantage. It is unfortunate, however, that in dealing with 'modernism in art' the author seems to have stopped short at the end of the nineteenth century."

+ — Spec 142:434 Mr 16 '29 90w

"As a learned and closely—though not very clearly—reasoned attempt to find principles in one of the most complicated relations of art, that with religion, this book deserves to be treated with respect. . . In the course of his inquiry Dr. Gardner touches upon all periods and phases of art, often with apt comment, but the principles he has really defined are, we feel, those of humanistic and not of religious art."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 7 '29 880w

GARNETT, DAVID. No love. 276p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Chatto]

29-12060

Two English families of widely different backgrounds, tastes and habits become neighbors on a tiny island off the coast of Sussex. The relations of these two families, chiefly in the friendship of the two sons, Benedict Lydiate and Simon Keltie, make the story. Their careers separate them, but they come together on the island at vacation time. Simon loses the love of his beautiful wife Cynthia and Benedict wins her, only to leave her, hurt and bewildered. Some years later the two men meet to talk over the sale of the island. Benedict's reflection upon Simon is that there is no love in his heart. And for that matter, there is little in Benedict's.

Booklist 25:395 Jl '29

"In 'No Love' an older David Garnett has turned aside from fantasy to write a full-length 'straight' novel. Like its predecessors, it is distinct and a trifle aloof, with an effect of artless simplicity that is more apparent than real. It is not a book to be read, breathless, at a sitting. But in the end its very quiet becomes pervasive, bringing into harmony through the lives of these two rather inarticulate young men the overtones of the generation whose youth bridged the war." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Je 2 '29 750w

"The style of this book is clear, succinct, direct. It is like a perfectly played fugue heard on a crisp morning. The sufficing descriptions of people, places and events are adorned by few symbols or similes except such as are innate to a fine rendering of the English language, a natural and unlabored grouping of words, and phrases comprising a brilliant effect that makes one unconscious of the medium of impressions and loath to stop and analyze their cause." E. C. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 13 '29 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p142 N '29

"Though 'No Love' begins with an assurance and a brevity which promise well, this latest book shows its author moving quite definitely in the direction of the conventional novel. When, for example, near the very beginning, he introduces a female freethinker who held that 'but for the mistaken belief in God, mankind would already be living in a condition of almost unimaginable bliss and moral elevation' he is exactly in his own tradition, for he is there assuming that his reader will understand, without further elaboration, exactly what he means to convey by that ironic phrase. And there are other touches of the same sort, particularly in the first few pages. But as the story develops it slides almost imperceptibly into another manner and becomes, before it is finished, all but indistinguishable from countless others." J. W. Krutch

GARNETT, DAVID—Continued
— + Nation 129:17 Jl 3 '29 750w

"Out of his observation of children and the details of country life he builds up a beautiful scaffolding for his story, and the two households described sum up very neatly two ways of life. The book finished, one forgets the lovers, but the excitement of being a child and living among orchards on an island lingers like a wish in the memory. 'No Love' is a work of art." Raymond Mortimer
+ Nation and Ath 45:114 Ap 27 '29 150w
New Repub 59:349 Ag 14 '29 230w

"He has at last succeeded in creating or recording living character. . . It is possible that if Mr. Garnett found a significant story to tell he would write a better book. Pending this, No Love is much the best thing he has so far done." E. S.
+ New Statesman 33:243 Je 1 '29 800w

"Considered alone, 'No Love' has a certain rare charm. It is only when one compares it with David Garnett's other books that one realizes its inadequacy. The author has chosen a medium to which he is not carefully and expressly suited as in his former works. One has no wish to confine a writer to one field, even when he has done beautifully well therein, but Mr. Garnett in his present branching out is not master of his canvas. It requires a robustness of which his delicate tools are not capable." Marjorie Johnson
+ — N Y Evening Post p8m Je 1 '29 480w

"The plot, of course, is nothing; the manner everything. . . But the whole process is artistic; it is the second inspection, and not the immediate reading, that reveals Mr. Garnett's method. His book lives as a fused entity, and one reads it with the gratifying sense that one is enjoying an artistic whole."
+ N Y Times p9 Je 2 '29 800w

"The story is not unusual but it is touched by David Garnett's peculiar and original magic. His wit and his poetic fancy, his happy use of irrelevant detail to heighten the effect of naturalness, his graceful prose, and the gentle irony of his characterizations give to 'No Love' the vitality and charm which we have learned to expect in his work."
+ Outlook 152:229 Je 5 '29 200w
Pratt p37 autumn '29

"It is interesting, beautifully written, original, profound, but it lacks humanity. There is always present in Mr. Garnett's work an immediate, vivid impression of the hostility and cruelty with which men treat each other, balanced by a sense of pity that they should behave so badly. This attitude of mind is best expressed by Mr. Garnett, as he has already expressed it, in fable. Directly he translates it into terms of ordinary life and tests it by ordinary behavior it is seen to be partial and inadequate." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 147:716 My 25 '29 660w

"A good, medium-dull novel. . . The old poignant Garnett is strangely missing from these pages. Not once does the heart ache, not once do the eyes light up with amusement. There are good bits here and there—the whole chapter on farming lifts itself out of the book with sound and scent and weary feeling. But that is only one chapter; and toward the end. In style, in manner, too, the man seems to me to have changed; but not for the better." Robert Nathan
— + Sat R of Lit 5:1090 Je 8 '29 700w

"The multiplicity of interests, the feverish ness latent in contemporary matter, forbid such an evenly wrought surface as this author usually exhibits. Some passages are so charged with the sap of primal feeling that they refuse the lacquer of ironic style that admirably expresses the more distant comment." R. A. Taylor
Spec 142:sup705 My 4 '29 450w

"A book of great fascination, rich in humour and poetry, and suffused with a more human warmth than we have yet noticed in his work. It is very difficult to put one's finger on the particular quality which gives even this story of modern times and people its one remove from reality."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p358 My 2 '29 660w

GARRATT, GEOFFREY THEODORE. An Indian commentary. 335p $2.75 (7s 6d) J. Cape & H. Smith

915.4 India—Social conditions. India—Economic conditions. India—Politics and government [29-12921]

"Mr. Garratt belongs to the best of those who have official knowledge of the new India, with all its complex difficulties. He has been in the civil service, but has come out of it, with a liberal outlook and a strong sense of the new hard thinking that will have to be done, if disaster is to be averted. In 'An Indian Commentary' (the title does no sort of justice to the book) he gives a compressed account of the Indian social structure, of the caste system in the present process of rapid change, of the village economy and the new spread of industrialism, together with a clear summary of Gandhi and the Swaraj movement."—New Repub

"The world is flooded with books about India. But not all of them are at the same time both readable and reliable. Mr. Garratt has succeeded to a remarkable degree in both directions. The title is well chosen, for the book is truly a clear and well developed running commentary on the essential features of India's political problems." M. T. Titus
+ Am Hist R 35:412 Ja '30 300w

"I have never read so packed a book on the Indian situation; it is all muscle and no padding. It must represent the patient study of years. There is frank speaking in it; but that does not mean the airing of opinions that have cost nothing. Mr. Garratt, who does not whitewash anything or anybody, puts his judgments quietly and modestly, taking no sides." E: Thompson
+ Nation and Ath 44:496 Ja 5 '29 250w

"One is often asked to recommend a short and trustworthy book that a Westerner can read with the assurance of getting an outline of the essential things of India and the problem of tomorrow. Here it is. Mr. Garratt's is exactly the book we have been wanting." S. K. Ratcliffe
+ New Repub 60:179 O 2 '29 150w
Reviewed by C: Johnston
N Y Times p18 Ja 5 '30 360w
Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:28 N '29 70w

"The book is without padding or fine writing, it is an almost ideal handbook to the political controversy. So conservative a man as Sir Valentine Chirol has testified to the book's moderation of tone and statement. I think it the best and fairest study of the Indian situation that has appeared in my lifetime." E: Thompson
+ Sat R of Lit 6:203 O 5 '29 150w
Spec 141:929 D 15 '29 300w

GARRETT, WILLIAM A. From dusk till dawn. 328p $2 Appleton [7s 6d Lane]
29-10436

Max Winter agrees to carry the peculiar little millionaire's document to America. But shortly after he receives it, the packet is stolen. Winter's efforts to find out, in the space of a night, what it is all about get him into various baffling mysteries, made up of murder, kidnapping and robbery.

"The reader who follows Winter through his strange and hazardous undertaking will find himself far from disappointed."
+ Bookm 69:xxvi Jl '29 40w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 26 '29 80w

"In a purely impersonal manner Mr. Garrett manages to put a thrill into about every other page."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 3 '29 200w

"The reader who likes swift action and plenty of it will find just what he is looking for in this book."

+ N Y Times p16 Je 2 '29 180w

"327 pages of thrilling narrative."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 230w

"If the reader can swallow the rather incredible kernel the rest of the fruit follows easily, and the plots of crooks to rob Rennison, and of detectives and hero to catch the crooks, become quite exciting."

Times [London] Lit Sup p101 F 7 '29 130w

GARRISON, WINFRED ERNEST. Affirmative religion. 292p $2 Harper

204 Religion 28-24262

Dr Garrison, literary editor of the Christian Century and author of "Catholicism and the American mind," is here deliberating some of the religious issues of modern life. Dr Garrison's standpoint is that "the most affirmative attitude that one can take with reference to Christianity is evidenced by a willingness to have it submitted to all the tests of experience and intelligence."

---

Booklist 25:230 Mr '29

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 13 '29 120w

"Into the confused transitions of our contemporary religious situation Dr. Garrison's book brings a clearness and vigor of thinking that will help to sweep away some of the fallacies and perplexities that dim the vision of so many fogbound folk; and this clear thinking carries at the same time a moral and spiritual challenge that will quicken steps and lift up heads and hearts to a new comprehensiveness of outlook and a new assurance of faith." C: W. Gilkey

+ Christian Century 45:1525 D 13 '28 480w

GARRISON, WINFRED ERNEST. Catholicism and the American mind. 267p $2.50 Willett

282 Roman Catholic church in the United States. Church and state in the United States 28-15512

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Reviewed by A. E. Holt

Am J Soc 34:716 Ja '29 300w

"To merely summarize the errors of principle and fact in this hodgepodge of unctuous bigotry —we prefer the out and out Ku-Kluxer—would require about a dozen pages of this magazine. The book is not worth the space." B. L. C.

— Cath World 128:119 O '28 500w

"The sections dealing with papal infallibility and the Catholic attitude toward public schools are exceedingly well documented and developed. Dr. Garrison very clearly and ably explains his thesis that 'the Catholic Church is both a religion and a form of government.' Lourdes reveals the religious character of the church, Rome the governmental character. Both as a religion and as a government Catholicism is today in the crucible in America, and what seems to the reviewer the 'high spot' of Dr. Garrison's discussion is reached in the pages which deal with American Catholic citizenship. These pages are all the more interesting and important at the present moment in consequence of the recent conclusion of the Lateran peace." E. B. Barrett

+ J Religion 9:475 Jl '29 850w

Pratt p8 winter '29

St Louis 26:346 N '28

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 60:558 S 1 '28 150w

GARROD, HEATHCOTE WILLIAM. Collins. 123p $2 (5s) Oxford

B or 92 Collins, William 29-10511

"The professor of poetry at Oxford has built up around a lecture delivered last year before the British Academy this little book on William Collins, in format and to some extent in method a companion volume to his earlier studies of Wordsworth and Keats. The same harsh and somewhat dour scholarship which in the 'Keats' was turned mercilessly against the late Miss Amy Lowell is in the present monograph turned, rather surprisingly, against the gentle author of the 'Ode to Evening.' The professor's chief interest appears to lie in the minutiae of textual criticism, not criticism in the sense of correcting errors that have crept into the text but criticism of Collins's own text, its solecisms, its unfortunate figures of speech, its formal personifications, its conventionality, its learned allusions out of keeping with the subject."— Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"Such a scholarly performance requires patience in the reader as well as the commentator, yet with enough patience the reader can learn something new and interesting. Swinburne's enthusiasm certainly does need qualifying, and now and then Professor Garrod adds a sensitive discovery of his own. The essay is, indeed, carefully considered, ably expressed and nicely printed; and it is likely to sharpen the interest and judgment of anyone who finds pleasure in the poetry of Collins."

+ Bookm 69:viii Jl '29 220w

Reviewed by S: C. Chew

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Mr 10 '29 450w

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 30 '29 520w

"His cautious attitude can end by being extremely irritating, for affected bewilderment is often more maddening than genuine stupidity. Professor Garrod's wavering analysis of Collins is irritating because he will only timidly employ the sensibility and wide reading that he certainly possesses."

— Nation and Ath 44:696 F 16 '29 720w

"Professor Garrod's books are never easy, and he makes as heavy demands on his readers as if they were undergraduates with Greats a month ahead. But it cannot be denied that he is an excellent coach. . . Whether he approves or disapproves, we know exactly why. . . A better literary exercise is hard to conceive than to take such a poem as the 'Ode to the Passions,' read it through, and then re-read it with Mr. Garrod's aid. Incidentally, unless the student is exceptionally learned, he will pick up a great deal of information by the way."

+ New Statesman 32:390 D 29 '28 250w

"The book is, in Professor Garrod's words, 'something between an essay and a commentary,' so that it is satisfactory neither as the one nor the other. Collins and his poetry remain, at the end, unaffected, unexplained, uncategoried, unilluminated. . . The book, however, is not wholly bad. There are entertaining pages and some diverting but judicious quibbling." James McLean

— + Sat R of Lit 5:1074 Je 1 '29 550w

"The method which Professor H. W. Garrod applies in his new critical study of Collins is both serviceable and refreshing. Professor Garrod's aim is not to be destructive; and he does not lessen our regard for Collins. He makes it possible, however, to give him a juster appreciation."

+ Spec 142:248 F 16 '29 100w

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p95 F 7 '29 220w

GARROD, HEATHCOTE WILLIAM. Profession of poetry, and other lectures. 270p $4.50 (12s 6d) Oxford

821 English poetry. English literature 29-22376

Lectures, many of them delivered during the author's tenure of the chair of poetry in Oxford, 1923-8. Contents: The profession of poetry; Poets and philosophers; 'Pure poetry'; Byron,

GARROD, H. W:—Continued
1824-1924; Coleridge; Wordsworth's Lucy; The place of Hazlitt in English criticism; Cowley, Johnson, and the 'Metaphysicals'; The nightingale in poetry; Rupert Brooke; The poetry of R. L. Stevenson; Mr Humbert Wolfe; Mr A. E. Housman; Massinger; Milton and Oxford; How to know a good book from a bad; Walter Raleigh.

Nation 129:500 O 30 '29 180w

"Lectures do not always read well; but while we may take exception to certain colloquial effects that may be telling enough on the rostrum, we shall be content to follow much of this pleasant way where humour enlivens, and the width and depth of erudition enrich, a persuasive style." Sherard Vines

+ Nation and Ath 45:712 Ag 31 '29 720w

New Statesman 33:714 S 21 '29 1050w

"A book that is packed with sound observation. Dr. Garrod has wit. But his work is occasionally marred by something resembling spleen, due to the fact that this disciple of Arnold carries even further than his teacher the depreciation of the minor poet. Yet the discerning reader will look with tolerance on Dr. Garrod's lapses in view of the fact that they are more than compensated for by the truly arresting dicta in which the volume abounds."

+ N Y Times p2 S 8 '29 300w

"Professor Garrod has been delivered from enthusiasm: in its place he has achieved much subtlety of intelligence, much clarity and honesty of taste. There is no doubt that he possesses a style of approach and an outlook of his own; and in consequence he is always refreshing to read. We shall not be overstating the dryness of Professor Garrod's manner if we call it 'tart.' . . His acidity shows itself in a clear consciousness of small faults and an effort not to be pleased without reason. This trait brings with it a limitation: when men have trained themselves in negative criticism, they sometimes leave themselves without the ability to make their praises ring true." Alan Porter

+ — Spec 143:sup451 O 5 '29 1300w

"His criticism is scholarly and humane, and it is also adventurous. He says what he thinks about poets of to-day and yesterday and says it, fallibly no doubt, but authoritatively. For he has measured the demands of the ideal which English poetry has always aimed at, and knows what it costs a man to be an inheritor of a great tradition."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p699 S 12 '29 1450w

GARSTIN, CROSBIE. Houp la! 314p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

29-15564

Dominic William Augustin de Bouverie Welbeck Burfleet, seventeenth earl of Blades, was girl-shy. These are his joyously funny adventures in Gothland, Cairo, Colombo, Java and other places, in all of which he tried to avoid the ladies.

"Crosbie Garstin's humor is the sort that frequently demands co-operation on the part of the reader; it is gay, often persistently so, but likely to fatigue hard-boiled customers who come to it without the best intentions. If it does not force the unwilling chuckle from every reader at least it should keep most reasonable souls in a pleasant state of mind for a longish evening."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p42 S 29 '29 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p144 N '29

"The foreign scenes are effective with their poster colouring. The story might have been more firmly put together. The Baltic episodes, amusing in themselves, have little to do with the rest. The dialogue is sometimes long drawn out. But the fooling is gay and cheerful."

+ — Nation and Ath 45:86 Ap 20 '29 100w

"Part caricature and part burlesque, the former is never very pointed and the latter never very funny. 'Houp La!' is at best merely an entertaining yarn, at times swift-moving and colorful, but often cluttered with long passages of undistinguished dialogue, serving no better purpose than to make the volume more bulky."

— + N Y Times p7 Ag 4 '29 350w

"The faults of the novel are clearly visible to the naked eye, but its gay good humor and the true comicality of its characters and episodes make us very willing to look the other way. Novels like this one contribute much to the gayety if not to the significance of vacation days. No one can go far wrong if he chooses 'Houp La!' for entertainment."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:95 Ag 31 '29 220w

"It is admirable fooling—with some luminous description of distant seas and islands worthy of the author's more serious work." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 143:662 Ap 27 '29 120w

"A very amusing book, which thoroughly lives up to its circus title. The dialogue—English, American, and as spoken by circus artists—is brisk and lifelike; one entertaining situation follows another; the geographical background—e.g., in the circus scenes—is always good; and there are pleasant touches of sentiment at the end."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p364 My 2 '29 110w

GARVER, FREDERIC BENJAMIN, and HANSEN, ALVIN HARVEY. Principles of economics. 726p $3 Ginn

330 Economics

"This text-book, by two professors in the University of Minnesota, is another attempt to clarify the elements of economics for undergraduates who have little economic experience. The authors believe that the first need of the student is a grasp of principles, and accordingly give the greater part of their space to a full statement of the theory of value and related principles."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"The authors modestly disclaim any credit for originality in their work; yet there are many original ideas in the book, and it will make a valuable addition to the American literature on economic principles." J: Ise

+ Am Econ R 19:259 Je '29 280w

"Their treatment is clear and well illustrated. It should be intelligible to any ordinary reader, and will give, if understood, a sound grasp of the essential concepts and principles of economics."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p316 Ap 18 '29 110w

GASKELL, MRS AUGUSTA. What is life? introds. by Karl T. Compton and Raymond Pearl. 324p $3.50 Charles C. Thomas, 300 E. Monroe st, Springfield, Ill. [16s Bailliere]

577 Life (biology) 29-3305

"Life, according to Mrs. Gaskell's theory, arises whenever atoms clash in such a way as to cause some of their component electrons to unite in a new system. . . The first part of the book is devoted to discussing the criteria for judging the value ('rating') of a theory, or, better, a working hypothesis, and to a very clear and interesting account of modern atomic physics. The new idea of the author is then presented very precisely, and the elements of originality in the scheme are extensively set forth. Finally, some application is made to such general matters as the cause of cancer, the soul, death and evolution."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 F 24 '29 450w

"The book will be found, not only worthy of admiration, but also, as Professor Pearl phrases it, 'extremely stimulating and original.'"

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 22 '28 450w

"Being unsupported by any evidence, the suggestion is unlikely to be regarded very seriously by scientific workers."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p167 F 28 '29 60w

GATES, HENRY LEYFORD. Lipstick. 303p $2 Barse & co.
29-13211

"The doings of the younger sophisticates, the cocktail-drinking 'hot' parties and the ceaseless search for new thrills are vividly if romantically pictured in 'Lipstick.' And just as clearly, though more ironically drawn, are the antics of the elders of these smart young moderns."—N Y Times

"The reader who is bored with the sordidness of the opening chapters will find pleasure in the closing. Chris's struggle to accomplish the 'impossible' will arouse the sympathy of the most blase reader."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 4 '29 250w

"The author has combined a mixture of several parts deviltry with a dash of romance and a sprinkling of pathos in a light concoction for the pleasant passage of an afternoon."
N Y Times p30 O 6 '29 200w

"'Lipstick' will show the reader the worst and best sides of the jazzy, whoopee crowd of youngsters and of the elders who are imitating them. The book is hardly important."
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 7 '29 300w

GAUS, JOHN MERRIMAN. Great Britain; a study of civic loyalty. (Univ. of Chicago. Studies in the making of citizens) 329p $3 (13s 6d) Univ. of Chicago press

342.42 Citizenship—Great Britain. Great Britain—Nationality. Great Britain—Politics and government. Education—Great Britain
29-13393

"The title of Professor Gaus's book is hardly an adequate indication of its contents. Civic loyalty suggests patriotism and patriotism commonly suggests an allegiance of the intensified kind that shows itself only on occasion. Mr. Gaus is not particularly concerned with the British people in their moments of stress or enthusiasm, but with their everyday attitude, year by year and generation after generation, toward public affairs. What he is interested in are the conditions and influences that make the Britisher politically what he is, and the changes in the historical pattern which appear to be coming about at the present time or seem likely to come about in the near future."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Reviewed by S. M. Rosen
Am J Soc 35:499 N '29 400w

Reviewed by C: A. Beard
Am Pol Sci R 23:1006 N '29 300w

"The book forms part of a projected series dealing with civic education in various countries. It is, however, so admirable a survey of British social life in general as to have high value quite apart from its main purpose." W: MacDonald
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 11 '29 800w

"A thoroughly interesting as well as highly suggestive account of the conditions which make for civic loyalty in Great Britain." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '29 550w

"Not only an extremely valuable examination of contrasted methods of civic training, but an admirable survey of contemporary political and social conditions as well." W: MacDonald
+ Nation 129:254 S 4 '29 180w

"Admirably done. The writing is objective. An Englishman, reading Dr. Gaus, finds that his point of view, even in its subtleties, is appreciated. The book is packed with detail, fully documented and replete with apt and authoritative quotations." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p11 Je 23 '29 830w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:30 N '29 80w

"The author has contrived to enter into the life of the country he is describing, without sacrificing the ability to criticize it. As a citizen of the United States he is impressed with some of our customs which to us may appear hardly noticeable: but every British citizen would gain some more knowledge of his own public affairs by reading the book." C. D. Burns
+ Spec 143:162 Ag 3 '29 400w

GAW, ALLISON, and GAW, MRS ETHELEAN (TYSON). Pharaoh's daughter, and other Biblical plays of the contest, 1927. 261p il $2 Longmans

812 Religious drama
28-25871

Three Biblical plays, the first of which won the first prize in a 1927 contest sponsored jointly by the Drama League and Longmans, Green. Pharaoh's daughter, by Allison and Ethelean Gaw, is a three-act dramatization of the life of Moses; The making of a king, by Lindsey Barbee, concerns Saul and David; and the third play, Ruth of Moab, by Mina R. Maxfield, is a pastoral in seven scenes setting forth the story of Ruth.

Booklist 25:201 F '29

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 3 '29 100w

"Plays technically better than many of their kind, though they use much material which many Biblical scholars might question."
Boston Transcript p4 N 24 '28 200w

"Dramatically all three of these plays—and especially the first one—show a distinct advance in technical skill over the multitude of plays which have been written around the same characters. But they are all broken up into numerous short scenes which are dangerous to the emotional continuity of the whole and demand experienced directorship and acting for effective production." Fred Eastman
+ — Christian Century 45:1398 N 15 '28 440w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:11 F '29
Pratt p24 summer '29
Wis Lib Bul 25:71 F '29

GAY, GEORGE INNES, and FISHER, HAROLD HENRY. Public relations of the commission for relief in Belgium; documents. 2v il $10 Stanford univ. press

940.47 Commission for relief in Belgium. European war, 1914-1918—Hospitals, charities, etc.

"Mr. Gay, an active member of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, has gathered together and organized for the reader significant source material about the Commission's widespread activities. The material is in the form of documents—letters, reports, memoranda—tracing the origin of the C. R. B., its initial operations in Holland and its eventual appearance on the Belgian scene. The documents reveal the nature and amount of importations brought into Belgium during the war: food, clothing, supplies, tools; they disclose the finances of the C. R. B. and their origin; government subsidies, personal gifts, private credits. The second volume contains data on the rehabilitation of Belgian industry, and the extension of the Commission's work to Poland."—Bookm

Bookm 70:xvi D '29 150w
N Y Times p18 D 15 '29 400w

"These volumes have a permanent historic value in more than one respect. Herein is presented the official data of the long, trying task and the difficult problems, at times almost insurmountable, which Mr. Hoover, as the commission's Chairman, had to meet and solve in provisioning starving populations. The origin of the new rule of war urged by him is thus left in no mist of doubt. It is neither theoretical nor sprung from a mere altruistic impulse but takes its place as a conviction resulting from his own intimate, hard experience in the greatest of wars. Apart from this immediate phase and its possible outgrowing changes, the volumes afford an enduring record of the consequences of war in directions to which history has hitherto given scant attention." Gustavus Myers

GAY, G: I., and FISHER, H. H:—Continued
+ N Y World p11m N 24 '29 1600w

GAYE, PHOEBE FENWICK. Vivandière! 338p $2.50 Liveright [7s 6d Secker]
29-13065

Historical romance of Napoleon's march on Moscow and of Julie, the vivandière who followed the French army, selling her wines and provisions.

Booklist 26:32 O '29

" 'Vivandière!' has a spaciousness of conception and a richness of detail which make it a memorable addition to the creative literature of the Napoleonic wars. It offers an impressive and often grotesquely beautiful genre picture of war of the period." Florence Haxton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 23 '29 1100w

"It is a vast, moving spectacle of the Grand Army on the march, through which the author has woven a romance that for courage and beauty is on a scale commensurate with the great adventure of the advance on Moscow." R. M. W.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '29 600w

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West
Nation and Ath 44:620 F 2 '29 40w

"The characters are well conceived, but the dialogue is flat. The book is long and a little messy. As a historical novel, is it remarkable for anything else? The writer has some talent and a lot of imagination, but she does not convince one that she knows how people talk." Cyril Connolly
— + New Statesman 32:636 F 23 '29 130w

— N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 13 '29 50w

" 'Vivandière!' satisfies the romantic requirements of this type of fiction; the love story is winsome, is maintained on a high plane, has its elements of pathos and is plausible. Miss Gaye's characters are the author's marionettes, but they possess verisimilitude, and the mistress of their action skillfully conceals her handling of the wires on which they are dangled."
+ — N Y Times p6 Je 16 '29 750w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p7m Je 16 '29 350w

"There is a great deal of vivid writing in the book, and the story-interest never flags." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 228:adv Ag '29 60w

"Unmistakably a historical novel and a very good one. Its structure is excellent, and it is written with eloquence, rich imagination and humanity." F. L. Robbins
+ Outlook 152:310 Je 19 '29 180w

"Miss Gaye has plenty of knowledge of the period; her book is full of historical detail perfectly assimilated and effortlessly introduced. What she lacks is the power to evoke the past, to produce that slight blur in the mind which gives perspective. It would be strange if she had it, for her gift, which is considerable, lies in the actual, the vivid, the immediate. The brisk, free, dialogue suggests Englishmen of to-day, not French soldiers of a hundred years back." L. P. Hartley
— + Sat R 147:256 F 23 '29 280w

"What emerges from Miss Gaye's brilliant pages is the picture of the Grande Armée itself as it uncoils its slow length through the heat and dust of the Russian summer towards fabulous Moscow and then writhes slowly back along its desolate and blood-stained track. In all modern history there is no more epic page, none which more fascinated the historically minded artists of the nineteenth century. Any writer who undertakes Napoleon's Russian campaign competes with Tolstoy and with Victor Hugo. In English only Joseph Conrad has added any memorable touches to their panorama, and he tried only in vignettes. Miss Gaye has attempted to cover the whole vast canvas, and she has not egregiously failed." Garrett Mattingly
+ Sat R of Lit 6:4 Jl 27 '29 700w

"Miss Phoebe Fenwick Gaye's Vivandière is described as the initial work of an author in her early twenties. There is a kind of spring perfume about this beautiful novel which possibly lingers only in books written by the young. But of crudity or immaturity in achievement there is no trace." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 142:135 Ja 26 '29 160w

"Julie's bravery and resourcefulness place her above the heroine of standardized war romances. The story, though of a popular type, has vigor and is not excessively sentimental."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 11 '29 350w

"Miss Gaye shows an admirable acquaintance with historic detail, but the slender romance moves casually and is never coordinated with the great historic theme of pity and terror which has been beyond her power."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p100 F 7 '29 200w

GEDYE, GEORGE ERIC ROWE. Wayfarer in Austria. (Wayfarer ser.) 223p $3 Houghton
914.36 Austria—Description and travel
[29-6361]

"Mr. Gedye has known Austria for years as correspondent of the London Times and of other newspapers, and, as a wayfarer on its bypaths, has absorbed the spirit of the country, and particularly of its great city to which he devotes many loving pages. The photographs with which the book is illustrated are well-chosen and well-reproduced."—N Y Times

Booklist 25:281 Ap '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p38 Ap 14 '29 120w

"As the first travel-book on Austria that has been printed in English, it will prove of indubitable interest to the arrant rovers who have hesitated to savor Austria's old world charm." H. F. M.
+ Boston Transcript p7 Mr 30 '29 220w

"Mr. Gedye's volume has an individual touch which gives it definite distinction. If books of this sort are to be written, this clearly is how the thing ought to be done." H. W. Harris
+ Nation and Ath 43:826 S 29 '28 650w

"Mr. Gedye adds to his stream of facts a quality which Baedeker does not possess—a genuine and infectious enthusiasm for the country he describes. His book will undoubtedly send many new visitors to Austria."
+ New Statesman 31:700 S 15 '28 620w

" 'A Wayfarer in Austria' is intended to be a useful guide book and to be readable. And it succeeds as well as it possibly could." R. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 2 '29 180w

"This is a book that cried aloud to be written. It ends the search for something more than Baedeker's pre-war volume on Austria. Let it not be thought, however, that 'A Wayfarer in Austria' is an English Baedeker. Nor that it is a volume of sketches on this, that and the other thing in Austria that happened to strike the author's fancy. This book is a happy medium between the two. It is as comprehensive as a guide-book and as lightly written as a sketch." C. K. Streit
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 20 '29 780w

"A gay, thorough and useful addition to an excellent series of narrative guide-books."
+ Outlook 151:230 F 6 '29 20w

"It is an evangel of the charm of Austria: of Vienna, the City of Laughter—but a laughter shot at times with sadness for a glory that has departed; of the haunting beauties of Graz, Salsburg, and Innsbruck; of waterfalls, snow-peaks, and glaciers: of the country's good and extraordinarily cheap food; and, above all, of its sweet-mannered friendly people. This book is literature and its insight, knowledge, and sympathy help us to understand Austria."
+ Spec 141:219 Ag 18 '28 [illegible]

"Besides having an unusual command of ideas his book is an extremely competent guide book, written with an agreeable vividness which makes it a pleasure to read."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p799 N 1 '28 600w

GEER, WALTER. Napoleon and his family; the story of a Corsican clan. 3v v 2 399p il $5 Brentano's [18s Allen & U.]

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French (27-18981)

"Walter Geer is an American business man who has turned to a study of Napoleon's family as a relief or perhaps an antidote for his economic activities. The present volume forms the second in a trilogy, and takes the history of Napoleon's family from 1809 to 1813, covering the period of Napoleon's greatest glory and the long decline leading to his fall."—Sat R of Lit

---

"It is an exceedingly amusing task to trace to its special tragic consequence each one of the various blunders, follies, treasons of these grotesque parasites who constituted the Emperor's immediate family. This difficult task Mr. Geer is accomplishing with great expertness and with patience. He is a quiet, impartial scholar. He might even be offering a more readable series if he were a little less accurate and a little less fair."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 N 4 '28 450w

Boston Transcript p10 N 23 '29 420w

"Depending almost entirely upon secondary sources, themselves not altogether critical, he writes an uncritical, uninspired, inaccurate, pedantic volume whose chief merit is that it puts the researches of Masson at the disposal of English-speaking readers." L: R. Gottschalk

— Nation 128:592 My 15 '29 150w

N Y Evening Post p12m N 9 '29 150w

Reviewed by L. V. Updegraff

N Y Times p4 F 3 '29 840w

"The author is to be praised for the care with which he treads the treacherous maze of his biographical anecdote, which has so often confused and led astray the less astute students of Napoleon."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:546 D 1 '28 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p129 F 21 '29 620w

GEMMILL, PAUL FLEMING. Present-day labor relations; a critical examination of methods of collective negotiation between employers and employees. 312p $3 Wiley [15s Chapman & H.]

331.1 Labor and laboring classes—United States. Employees' representation in management. Trade unions—United States 29-7839

A short non-technical treatment of labor relations in the United States which deals briefly with trade unionism, quite fully with plans of employee representation, and in conclusion, briefly, with industrial democracy.

---

"On the whole Dr. Gemmill has done a good piece of work in carrying out his major purpose of presenting 'a short, non-technical treatment of labor relations in the United States.' One hopes, however, that even the average student and business man will not take the author too seriously when he advises them that they can probably 'learn from these pages as much as they will need to know about labor relations of these kinds.' They will do better if they let Dr. Gemmill's book stimulate them to read further in the field." B. M. Selekman

+ — Am Econ R 19:707 D '29 800w

"The arrangement of topics is logical and few important aspects of the general subject escape attention The author's usual plan is to bring out both sides by quoting carefully selected extracts from different authors and to suggest, rather than dogmatically to state, his own judicious conclusions. This plan, far from being repetitious and tiresome, gives a liveliness and variety to the style that is commendable." H: Seager

+ Ann Am Acad 144:153 Jl '29 480w

Booklist 26:11 O '29

GENTHE, ARNOLD. Isadora Duncan; twenty-four studies; with a foreword by Max Eastman. 24pl $4 (16s) Mitchell Kennerley, 489 Park av., N.Y.

B or 92 Duncan, Isadora 29-4779

Twenty-four photographic studies of Isadora Duncan, made in New York during her visits to America in 1915-18.

---

"Mr. Genthe's photographs are unrewarding. They were taken during the war, and are carefully made foggy in a would-be 'artistic' technique which already looks very old-fashioned. The Rubens limbs are usually lost in drapery and dimness, but the head sometimes emerges, challenging and even grandiose."

— Nation and Ath 45:sup135 Ap 27 '29 50w

"Though in some cases the reproductions seem to fall short of the full clarity we could desire, this book is an indispensable part of the Isadora Memorial which is being built up to convey to the future some hint of the rare and matchless thing she was. The foreword by Max Eastman is one of the most sensitive and illuminating things written about Isadora."

+ N Y World p10m Mr 17 '29 80w

"It is a good thing that a skilled photographer should have saved for us twenty-four studies of that mistress of grace and harmony, Isadora Duncan. He gives perhaps a disproportionate number of merely facial portraits, and his re-creating Greek statuary; but his studies are instructive as well as delightful, for one can see in them how by force of aspiration she made beauty with a far from perfect physique."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p334 Ap 25 '29 120w

GENTLEMAN WITH A DUSTER, pseud. See Begbie, H.

GENTRY, FRANK MARION. Technology of low temperature carbonization. 399p il $7.50 Williams & Wilkins [34s Bailliere]

662.7 Carbonization. Coal distillation 28-22410

"Author has endeavored to coördinate the experimental researches and expert opinion of many authorities and establish the art upon firm technical foundations and thereby overcome the empiricism which has hindered its progress."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

"The book is well illustrated and contains a great deal of numerical data which will be found very useful to those interested in this subject." H. C. Porter

+ Chem & Met Eng 35:756 D '28 520w

"Several books on low-temperature carbonization have appeared in the last decade, some of them inexcusably poor. It is therefore a pleasure to find that the first American attempt in this direction has resulted in a book which, as a whole, is very good, and which rises in places to excellence." H. A. Curtis

+ Ind & Eng Chem 20:1278 N '28 350w

"Mr. Gentry has done a great service to all who are interested in the more effective utilisation of coal by writing a most excellent and comprehensive critical account of the work that has already been done in this field. He has produced a book which is packed with trustworthy information and sound criticism." W. E. G.

+ Nature 124:2 Jl 6 '29 1200w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:6 Ja '29

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:15 F '29

St Louis 27:17 Ja '29

GEOFFREY OF MONMOUTH. Historia regum Britanniæ; with contributions to the study of its place in early British history by Acton Griscom; together with a literal tr. of the Welsh manuscript no. LXI of Jesus college, Oxford, by Robert Ellis Jones. 672p $10 (42s) Longmans

942.01 Great Britain—History—To 449. Legends, Celtic. Arthur, King 29-14821

Geoffrey of Monmouth's History of the kings of Britain is best known as the source of the King Arthur literature. "This volume offers (1) the first accurate Latin text made from manuscripts of the most important source of early British history and legend; (2) the first literal translation of one of the surviving Welsh Manuscript Chronicles, dealing with the same early history; and (3) a discussion of Geoffrey's claim to have had and translated an ancient British book." (Preface)

---

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '29 320w

"Those who go to Mr. Griscom's book for information will be well repaid." C: Johnston

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 21 '29 1000w

"Mr. Griscom with his scholarly text and his version of the corresponding Welsh chronicle has at last made the way clear for a study of the very engaging Geoffrey."

+ Spec 143:726 N 16 '29 860w

"At last, and thanks to American scholarship, we have something that approaches a critical text of Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia Regum Britanniae. This strange book is known best as the well-spring of Arthurian literature, and as one of Shakespeare's sources. . . All English translations share the inaccuracy of the printed Latin texts from which they were made. Mr. Acton Griscom has made every student his debtor, for he has printed a manuscript which dates from Geoffrey of Monmouth's own days. He gives variant readings from the Bern manuscript, which is of much the same date, and from a thirteenth-century manuscript now in the possession of Lord Harlech."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p905 N 14 '29 3300w

GERMANY, AUSWÄRTIGES AMT. German diplomatic documents, 1871-1914; sel. and tr. from the documents pub. by the German foreign office, by E. T. S. Dugdale; and an introd. by J. W. Headlam-Morley. 4v v 1-2 ea $7.50 Harper [ea 21s Methuen]

327.43 Germany—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—Germany. Europe—Politics 29-26329

The first two volumes of a projected series of four reproducing the most important documents of the forty-volume collection of the German Foreign office covering Anglo-German relations from 1871 to 1914.

---

"The lacunae of the Grosse Politik itself are manifestly reflected in an abridgment. The inadequacy of official documents for the explanation of a diplomatic situation is evident. . . In conjunction, however, with the splendid group of British biographies—Disraeli, Salisbury, Dilke, Granville, Gladstone, and Curzon, these documents are important and indeed indispensable. The work of translation has been excellently done; it is a faithful reproduction of the original, clear, accurate, and idiomatic." L. B. Packard

— + Am Hist R 34:591 Ap '29 600w

Booklist 25:345 Je '29

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 12 '29 630w

New Statesman 32:610 F 16 '29 630w

"These are invaluable source books of history, and good reading for all those who care to follow the course of events that changed the whole course of world affairs." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv F '29 90w

GEROULD, JAMES THAYER, and TURNBULL, LAURA SHEARER, comps. Selected articles on interallied debts and revision of the debt settlements. (Handbook ser.) 489p $2.40 Wilson, H.W.

336.3 Debts, Public. European war, 1914-1918—Finance. European war, 1914-1918—Reparations 28-13477

Briefs for the arguments on both sides of the controversy over the war debts are furnished, with quotations from selected sources and extensive bibliographies.

---

Booklist 24:393 Jl '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:300 N '28

"Contains nearly 500 pages of factual data and opinion covering all phases of the problem." K. P.

World Tomorrow 11:425 O '28 80w

GESELL, ARNOLD LUCIUS. Infancy and human growth. 418p il $3.50 (15s) Macmillan

136.7 Psychology, Physiological. Child study 28-13860

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"The book is highly suggestive. Many problems are pointed out, and certain outstanding trends of mental growth during the period of infancy are described." F. L. Goodenough

+ Am J Psychol 41:313 Ap '29 780w

Cleveland Open Shelf p26 F '29

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:10 F '29

Pratt p7 winter '29

GHENT, WILLIAM JAMES. Road to Oregon; a chronicle of the great emigrant trail. 274p il $5 (21s) Longmans

917.8 Oregon trail. Overland journeys to the Pacific. Frontier and poineer life [29-9318]

This chronicle of the great emigrant trail that ran from Independence, Missouri, to the mouth of the Walla Walla in Washington recalls the lives of the early pathfinders and missionaries and follows the rising and falling flow of migration from the first caravans in 1841, thru the days of the gold rush, and the stage-coach era to the decline of the trail with the coming of the railroads. The natural features along the way are described, the various towns and settlements that marked its course, the life of the emigrants en route and their encounters with the Indians.

---

Reviewed by H. C. Dale

Am Hist R 34:887 Jl '29 500w

Booklist 25:355 Je '29

"The dramatic quality of the material has been carefully subordinated to the need for accuracy. The Road to Oregon provides a solid foundation upon which other and more minutely interesting descriptions may be built." Margaret Wallace

+ Bookm 69:446 Je '29 160w

"In 'The Road to Oregon' Mr. Ghent chronicles, with meticulous accuracy and in loving detail, the natural and human history of the Great Emigrant Trail." H: S. Commager

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ap 28 '29 1100w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '29 420w

"Mr. Ghent tells a comprehensive story. His book is filled with facts, and although those facts seem not always to be used to the best advantage, they are there for the imagination to play upon. The illustrations—most of them reproductions of the melodramatic and charming prints of the time—are very effective."

+ Nation 129:756 D 18 '29 300w

Reviewed by H: Chapin

New Repub 59:80 Je 5 '29 50w

"It is most carefully done and with an admirable regard for the distinction between probable truth and legend."

+ New Statesman 33:158 My 11 '29 440w

"Mr Ghent, who has been known as the author of books expounding socialism and economic subjects, shows in this work no sign of a preoccupation with his former themes. He writes with clearness, force, accuracy and detachment." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 7 '29 1400w

"Despite Parkman's errors and omissions, his 'Oregon Trail,' of course, will still continue to survive for its color and its brilliancy. But in every library, on the shelf beside the 'Oregon Trail,' should be placed a copy of Ghent's more detailed and inclusive report of the lives of those who carved out the road to the Northwest."

+ Outlook 151:468 Mr 20 '29 130w

"It has literary excellence." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:16 Je '29 420w

"Mr. Ghent has given us an interesting and accurate account of the trail in all its main relations to American history. . . It is a stirring story, told for the most part in vivid style. There is not a great deal in it, to be sure, that is strictly new, but all the available materials are gathered up by an expert hand." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 6:72 Ag 24 '29 850w

"The author has striven, and to all appearances with an exceptional degree of success, to make his record accurate. Since he invites correction, however, it may be noted that he gives to the Presbyterians credit that belongs to the Congregationalists. Most, if not all of its missionaries whom the author mentions were Congregationalists."

+ Springf'd Republican p14 O 17 '29 600w

"It is a romantic story, with its gory passages and Mr. Ghent has told it well. The book is admirably illustrated, but needs more maps."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p390 My 16 '29 240w

Wis Lib Bul 25:193 Je '29

GIBBON, MONK. For daws to peck at. 95p $2 Dodd [6s Gollancz]

821

Poems by a young Irish poet who has been likened to W. H. Davies.

---

"Mr. Gibbon offers us not only the simplicity and beauty which the cawing world has always scorned somewhat or much, but a scene that is close to pastoral and lyrics that have a simple song quality." F. E. Hill

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 28 '29 360w

New Statesman 33:49 Ap 20 '29 60w

"I search in vain for the advertised kinship to Mr. W. H. Davies. Mr. Gibbon has enough to shake off without being entangled by that magician also. But I do find freshness of thought, an unhurrying attitude to both life and beauty unusual in a young poet." Humbert Wolfe

+ — Sat R 147:288 Mr 2 '29 320w

Spec 142:623 Ap 20 '29 130w

"A true lyric poet, and a modern, he wears his heart bravely and quietly upon his sleeve. If at times he mistakes a trivial mood for a lyric impulse, he never fails to search for that simplicity which has been the desire of all English lyric."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p319 Ap 18 '29 220w

GIBBONS, FLOYD PHILLIPS. The red Napoleon. 475p $2.50 J. Cape & H. Smith

29-17091

"Mr. Floyd Gibbons anticipates the next war in The Red Napoleon—it appeared serially in Liberty—not as an international struggle but as an inter-racial conflict in which the entire civilized and the uncivilized world take part. He creates a mirthless and ruthless Tartar-Mongol Karakhan of Kazan, who, as the Dictator of Red Russia in 1932, sweeps across central Europe, annihilates the French, British and Belgian armies, instigates a successful revolution in England and in the Reign of Terror that follows ingeniously moves his forces across the Atlantic and devastates our continent. He is ultimately defeated and sent into exile. He spends the rest of his life preaching human equality to a mocking audience."—Outlook

---

" 'The Red Napoleon' is a thoroughly depressing performance. It glorifies the American Navy —and Floyd Gibbons."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p32 D 8 '29 160w

Boston Transcript p2 S 18 '29 230w

Reviewed by Paul Blanshard

Nation 129:694 D 4 '29 650w

"The central monster, Karakhan of Kazan, is shaken together from equal parts of the Yellow Peril, the Red Terror and the Rising Tide of Color. His policy of world domination and world miscegenation, though a little faint in biology, is aptly calculated to enlist Nordic antipathies. And the barb of a second American 'unpreparedness' is pressed home with no light thumb. The characterizations are throughout flimsy; but certain of the war situations have a disturbing verisimilitude." Vincent McHugh

N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 17 '29 400w

"Lurid and egotistical as this self-revealing novel is, it should be read with attention by all pacifists and millenium makers. Mr. Gibbons writes plausibly and well of political and military developments. The chain of possibilities is stretched beyond the bounds of likelihood, but the narrative itself is logical and coherent."

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 25 '29 650w

"Mr. Gibbons is a military tactician and he knows how to clothe a good yarn so effectively in local color that we sometimes follow his tin soldiers breathlessly. But his prophecy has so large an element of incredulity about it that for the most part we are laughing up our sleeves." E. M. Benson

+ — Outlook 153:111 S 18 '29 220w

"As in all such tales the characterization in the book is of the flimsiest. This is natural, but the dialogue and the love story are more stilted than they have any right to be, even if the writer's chief interest does lie in writing history that hasn't happened. But readers should find Mr. Gibbon's theory most interesting, at the least."

— + Sat R of Lit 6:274 O 12 '29 400w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 22 '29 420w

GIBBONS, HERBERT ADAMS. New map of South America. 400p il $3 Century [12s 6d J. Cape]

918 South America 28-28394

The book does for South America what the earlier volumes in the New maps series did for Europe, Asia and Africa: it provides against a sketch of the natural resources and history of the continent as a whole a discussion of contemporary affairs and the development of each one of the South American countries. With maps and an index.

---

Booklist 25:158 Ja '29

"This volume is the work of a journalist, not an historian. It is both historical and descriptive, and the author expresses decided views on certain phases of the Latin-American policy of the United States. Its historical sections are of little value to the scholar or general public. The descriptive data, though not free from inaccuracies, are valuable. The discussions of current political and economic conditions in the ten nations of South America are well worth reading." J. F. Rippy

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 D 16 '28 330w

"The volume is written in the familiarly pleasing style of the author. Despite the sketchiness of this volume it can be laid aside by the reader with the knowledge that one has a well-rounded picture of the South American continent." A. C. Wilgus

+ Hist Outlook 20:41 Ja '29 580w

Living Age 335:156 O '28 80w

GIBBONS, H. A.—Continued

"Mr. Gibbons's book is a very competent and readable summarization of the contemporary history and status of the South American countries, one which will correct many existing misapprehensions and give the business man as well as the general reader a clear collective picture of South America, economic, political and social, at the present moment. Seven excellent maps lend further justification to the title." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p8m D 22 '28 100w

"Writing clearly, vividly, making his picture forceful and dramatic without sensationalism or straining after effect, Dr. Gibbons fixes the South American nations upon our minds, not all together, but one by one. . . Important as the book is in explanation and commentary, it is still more important in its readable presentation of a wealth of basic fact."

+ N Y Times p13 N 25 '28 800w

"What Dr. Gibbons has done is to produce a sane, level-headed, business-like book showing that in Latin-America there is an atmosphere of confidence and contentment, and the inference is that Americans are not to go there in any insular pride and ignorance, believing that they alone walk as heirs of the ages." C: J. Finger

+ N Y World p11m D 9 '28 420w

Outlook 150:1372 D 19 '28 60w

Pratt p28 spring '29

St Louis 27:32 Ja '29

"This work is the most important on its subject that has appeared for many years, and its author has this advantage over many of his predecessors in the same field, that his criticism is objective and his information up-to-date."

+ Sat R 147:149 F 2 '29 480w

"In general, he takes a safe middle-line, soft-pedalling the bitterly controversial, and sticking, on the whole, to objective facts. The book is a convenient ready-reference for travellers, or for those wishing to brush up on present-day conditions in the various countries."

Sat R of Lit 5:578 Ja 5 '29 200w

"To those of us who have eyes for the future importance of the countries of Latin America, this book is an indispensable vade mecum."

+ Spec 142:623 Ap 20 '29 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p223 Mr 21 '29 650w

Wis Lib Bul 25:29 Ja '29

GIBBS, ANTHONY. Young Apollo. 372p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Hutchinson]

29-19023

The younger generation, Oxford-set, as Anthony Gibbs sees it. Allan, a dreamer and writer, and Jane, a nice practical athletic young lady, fall in love and get married. Their two best friends are the irrepressible Geoffrey Horners and the sophisticated Ysobel d'Aunay —who complicates matters somewhat by also loving Allan. Jane is going to have a baby, and Allan writes a novel which may bring him fame; but the story ends with a tragic note as Jane dies when the baby is born.

---

Bookm 70:xv Ja '30 30w

"Despite the gaps in reality and a certain careless neglect of plan, Mr. Gibbs has caught a warmth of tone which makes 'Young Apollo' a sympathetic story."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 O 27 '29 320w

"The spirit of youth breathes through the story. Mr. Gibbs has been able to capture that spirit because he is of the generation about which he writes and has breathed the atmosphere which he describes. He who fears to be shocked should not attempt 'The Young Apollo,' for like all youth, it delights to shock its elders and to chuckle to itself over their horror." R. R. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 30 '29 130w

"These two young things while sufficiently charming in small doses are rather wearing when stretched over an entire novel. Mr. Gibbs' writing is witty at times, easy flowing always, but there is too much of it. The characters have possibilities but they are swamped by themselves."

— + N Y Times p6 O 20 '29 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '29 260w

"This is a very competent example of the sentimental novel, a good deal above the average in certain parts. There are passages, indeed, which are tolerably true to experience, and which suggest that Mr. Gibbs could write a much better sort of book if he thought rather less about what a novel ought to contain."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p639 Ag 15 '29 230w

GIBBS, JEANNETTE CLARKE (PHILLIPS) (MRS ARTHUR HAMILTON GIBBS). Humdrum house (Eng title Release). 322p $2.50 Little

29-3184

Bored with life after eleven years of marriage and housekeeping Margaret Underhill seeks new interests. Tho her husband does not encourage her plans, a visiting lecturer induces her to go to New York where she becomes interested in settlement work. Meanwhile her husband's secretary falls in love with him. In spite of this and other complications, however, Don and Margaret find a way to adjust their differences.

---

Booklist 25:285 Ap '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 F 17 '29 250w

" 'Humdrum House' is a good moral tale with certain premises and certain foregone conclusions, but there is a certain unreality about it that makes it uncommon as propaganda." D. F. G.

— + Boston Transcript p2 F 6 '29 720w

Cleveland Open Shelf p95 Je '29

"There are all the 'makings' of a novel here, yet the author is too intent on the general implications. Her people are types, representative creatures who portray a slice of the community, but who do not live and breathe for themselves. Structurally the book is poor. The writing is prosaic, eminently suited to pointing a moral, but scarcely adorning the tale." Lillian Rogers

— + N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 9 '29 650w

" 'Humdrum House' is written with great attention to detail—it is an exact chronicle of the suburban American housewife's life. It is interesting and amusing. But it leaves the reader, nevertheless, with a feeling of the thinness of the American philosophy and the drabness of the American scene."

+ — N Y World p11m F 3 '29 350w

— Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 150w

"The author's sound common sense and quiet persistence display themselves throughout the book and make it quite an interesting piece of work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p364 My 2 '29 200w

Wis Lib Bul 25:75 F '29

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Darkened rooms. 298p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

29-6174

Mr Gibbs' new thesis novel deals with spiritualism. A Buxton photographer with some hypnotic powers builds up a tidy little business in faked seances. But when, after the death of her fiancé, he wins a morbid hold on lovely Rose Jaffrey, her friends investigate Amery's methods and expose him. It is too late to help Rose, who goes to her death in a scene which seems to affirm all that the novel was written to deny.

---

Booklist 25:285 Ap '29
Bookm 69:xxiv Ap '29 100w

"Sir Philip Gibbs has magic and technique and he couples the preposterous with the plausible. He tests the reader's credulity while he exposes the devices of the clever worker in telepathy by making his characters give themselves away. Yet in the end such is the glamour he conjures up that we are left to ponder upon the secrets hidden by that thin veil between two worlds." Halle Schaffner
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 10 '29 300w

"Quite as fascinating a book as any Sir Philip Gibbs has done. It is an interesting attempt to do something vitally necessary in England. If, of necessity, it is indeed somewhat sensational, this is no doubt ingrained in the warp of the subject itself. Even to people who are not interested in the eternal question of immortality, and who is not, the method and the manner will prove a fascination." I. W. Lawrence
+ Boston Transcript p5 F 2 '29 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p142 N '29
N Y Times p9 F 3 '29 620w

"It is a very serious and interesting book, whose able attack on quack spiritualism, however, appealed to us far less than did the poignancy and beauty of Rose and Adrian's love story."
+ N Y World p11m Ja 27 '29 240w

"Outside of Mr. Gibbs's usual assumption that he has to write down to his duller readers, the book is well written." Milton Byron
+ — Outlook 151:189 Ja 30 '29 120w

"In execution the book does not rise above the commonplace, but it succeeds in giving an effect of cumulative horror out of proportion to the interest of the story." L. P. Hartley
— + Sat R 147:185 F 9 '29 60w

"Mr. Gibbs has not aimed so much at an exposé of spiritualism as he has attempted to show our susceptibility to its influence. The theme of the novel is quite in advance of the author's skill in presenting it. He has found it easier to load his characters and his situations with useless paraphernalia than to integrate his argument and to dispense with all but pertinent details. We are impatient with his plaintiveness and evident avoidance of force. In suggestiveness and insight, 'Darkened Rooms' has far more to offer than by way of craftsmanship."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:715 F 23 '29 300w

"Darkened Rooms is a very readable, if melodramatic, story; and the moral is as sound as may be." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 142:170 F 2 '29 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p120 F 14 '29 170w

GIBSON, KATHARINE. Goldsmith of Florence; a book of great craftsmen. 209p il $5 Macmillan
709 Art. Art—Florence. Artists. Art industries and trade 29-23063

"Tells the stories of various crafts and of great craftsmen, with profuse and magnificent illustrations." (Outlook) Contents: In the time of the knights: Weavers of stories; tapestries. Brothers of the quill; illuminated manuscripts. Woodcarvers of long ago. The armorer. In the great days of the city of Florence: Ghiberti and the goblins; Capping the Duomo; Brunelleschi. Donatello's children. The secret a bambino keeps; Della Robbia. The goldsmith of Florence; Cellini. During the American revolution—and now: Boston's handyman; Paul Revere. A woodcarver of today: I. Kirchmayer. Master smith: Frank Koralewsky.

---

"The illustrations are on a scale little short of sumptuous." M. L. Becker
+ Bookm 70:445 D '29 140w

"There is a dignity and solidity about this quite unusual and exceptional book. . . It is one of the conspicuously fine books of the year." M. G. Bonner
+ N Y Times p12 D 15 '29 200w

"One of the nicest books to give a child. . . A child who possesses this book will gain unconsciously a foundation for the formation of good taste." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 153:548 D 4 '29 80w

"A by-product of its author's story-telling at the Cleveland Museum of Art, this inspiring account of the lives and accomplishments of great men, known and unknown, is beautifully written and lavishly illustrated." A. L. Haight
+ Sat R of Lit 6:393 N 16 '29 200w

GIBSON, WILFRID WILSON. Between fairs; a comedy. 92p $1.50 (3s 6d) Macmillan 822 29-6907

A comedy of love and manners in a travelling circus in the English coal country, which concerns the loves of Blackjack, the lion-tamer, and the disillusionment of his Aggie.

---

Booklist 25:275 Ap '29

"When Wilfrid Gibson deserts his muse for a prose farce-comedy about life in a traveling circus you want to beg him to get back to verse again! The play has just about the present-day dramatic reality of something by Shadwell or Jonson." W. P. Eaton
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 F 10 '29 40w

"The plot is rather forced and the action negligible. The dialogue is amusing, but at times the characters forget they are vagabonds and fall into rather erudite phraseology. The chief merit is the delineation of characters."
— + Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '29 180w

"Wilfrid Gibson's verse at its best speaks simply, tritely, but not unworthily of love and death in the English coal country. At its worst it is Eddie Guest with an English accent. His comedy is inept and tedious."
— Nation 128:352 Mr 20 '29 100w

"The humour and the contrivances are a little forced at times, but the conflict of alternating generosity and fierceness between the two chief characters is well sustained."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p987 D 13 '28 160w

GIBSON, WILFRID WILSON. Golden room, and other poems. 173p $2.50 (6s) Macmillan
821 29-26260

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:314 My '29

"Though not particularly original, the poems are exceedingly well done and in their harmonious simplicity will merit a warm reception."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 F 13 '29 230w
Nation 128:352 Mr 20 '29 50w

"Mr. Gibson is, perhaps more than any other British poet who lives, a singer of the people—of miners, of tinkers, of bedraggled wayside women and beggars, of sailors, old men and poverty-stricken farmers. Any extended immersion in his poetry is apt to prove monotonous. He is, at his best, a little brother of Thomas Hardy and A. E. Housman."
N Y Times p38 Mr 17 '29 600w
Reviewed by Granville Hicks
N Y World p10m Ap 28 '29 500w
St Louis 27:166 My '29

"The verse has the traditional pleasant smoothness of so many of the English poets, and the same charm of English countryside and manners. 'The Golden Room' is interesting for its varieties of short song and for something like Mr. Hardy's suggestion of scene behind scene, emotion shading into emotion." E. L. Walton
+ Sat R of Lit 5:884 Ap 13 '29 160w

GIDDINGS, FRANKLIN HENRY. Mighty medicine; superstition and its antidote; a new liberal education. 147p $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

370.1 Superstition. Education. Teaching, Fredom of 29-9852

The "mighty medicine" of the title is a liberal education, potent to counteract old superstitions and traditions and to induce intellectual honesty and courage.

"For the most part, The Mighty Medicine is a wise argument for the undoing of all old magics." J. K. Hart

+ Am J Soc 35:334 S '29 380w

Booklist 25:378 Jl '29

Bookm 70:viii O '29 220w

"If there is little of the prophet or artist evident in this book there is much of realism. There is also keen analysis, a clear understanding of whence our conventional schooling has come, of its fatal limitations and the indispensable changes demanded by the present and future." J. E. Kirkpatrick

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 30 '29 600w

"Professor Giddings in this provocative book, packed with sound reasoning in adapting educational practices to the needs of the modern world, presents the factors that make a new liberal education." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 15 '29 700w

Reviewed by Clarence Britten

Nation 129:199 Ag 21 '29 420w

"This little book contains some immensely valuable matter. Chapters XIV, XV, and XVI, besides the first seven, should be known to every educator. Chapter XIV especially, 'What the College Graduate Should Know,' is full of useful suggestion." Maynard Shipley

+ New Repub 60:108 S 11 '29 860w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 20 '29 300w

"Sometimes the discussion is too heated for complete lucidity, but in its quieter moments it is packed full of uncomfortable truths. 'The Mighty Medicine' will be bitter medicine for sentimentalists, but probably they will not read it. The last chapter might have been omitted. It is a somewhat overemotional 'clarion call' to the 'intellectually honest and unafraid' to enlist for war against the 'medicine men' of education. It is a too-hysterical note in an otherwise important, significant and true statement." Raphael McCord

+ — N Y World p11m Ap 21 '29 350w

"This is a significant book with a touch of inspiration in it. Its message is potent, its sweep broad, its bearing fundamental. It deserves the widest circulation, in academic circles particularly." Joseph Jastrow, M.D.

+ Survey 62:534 Ag 15 '29 350w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p577 Jl 18 '29 40w

Wis Lib Bul 25:273 Jl '29

GIDE, ANDRE PAUL GUILLAUME. School for wives; tr. from the French by Dorothy Bussy. 116p $2 Knopf

29-18949

"The first part of Eveline's Diary in 'The School for Wives' is written just before her marriage, the second twenty years after. The purity and gravity of her young love, the intensity of her devotion, are expressed in a liquid and transparent language. Eveline's second diary, beginning after twenty years of marriage, when she is on the point of leaving her husband, contains pages which for candid emotion and sheer poignancy are unforgetable. Nothing can be more commonplace than Eveline's story of disillusion, despair, and sacrifice, nothing more exquisitely expressive and nuancé than the progress of her disenchantment, more pathetically concise than the end of the drama."—Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by J: Chamberlain

Bookm 70:204 O '29 600w

"'The School for Wives' [has] naturalness, directness, and a surface perfection which conceals a good many subtleties of character and judgment. Its limpid style is well rendered by Dorothy Bussy, Gide's official translator; her work, which was not very satisfactory at first, has improved with each new book. And yet, the novel will be disappointing to those readers who, unfamiliar with its author's versatility, were expecting something more ambitious." Malcolm Cowley

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 20 '29 950w

Boston Transcript p2 O 9 '29 430w

"In this brief and remarkably condensed novel M. Gide shows himself to be not only profound but over-subtle, for so fastidiously has he handled the character drawing and the central theme that the real point is likely to be missed. In 'The Counterfeiters' the author used the diary framework to give his people neighborly reality and to enable him to comment freely upon them and their affairs, although the comment is limited strictly by the terms of Edouard, the novelist, whose notebook we are supposed to be reading." Pierre Loving

Nation 130:49 Ja 8 '30 300w

Reviewed by L: Sherwin

N Y Evening Post p6m S 28 '29 550w

"This noteworthy book, which can be read in an hour, is remarkable as a literary tour de force, as a character study of truly Gallic subtlety, and as the exposition of an obscure moral problem involving no overt act. As a triumph of literary skill, the presentation of a complicated story of disillusionment by the medium of a diary kept by a guileless woman is striking." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 153:109 S 18 '29 280w

"'The School for Wives' is a marvel of simplicity and economy . . . perfect unity, classical continuity, two characters only, a man and his wife, both of them coherent and static, one single observer and recorder, the wife, one single record, the wife's diary, the style a miracle of directness and simplicity: not one 'difficult' word in the whole volume." Abel Chevalley

+ Sat R of Lit 6:205 O 5 '29 1200w

GIDE, ANDRE PAUL GUILLAUME. Travels in the Congo; tr. from the French by Dorothy Bussy. 375p il $5 Knopf

916.72 Africa, French Equatorial—Description and travel. Kamerun—Description and travel 29-13239

The travel note-book of a journey thru the Congo undertaken by a distinguished French man of letters who was not only a keen and discriminating observer of native life and scenes, but also a sympathetic and friendly one, who seems to have commanded the affection and respect of the blacks. His journal is simply and beautifully written. It is illustrated from photographs taken by the cinematographer who accompanied M. Gide.

Booklist 26:26 O '29

"Dorothy Bussy's translation preserves the quality of Gide's writing, which is admirable because it is clear and linear, even where it is most hurried. Although there is none of the overtone or undertone of Conrad's Heart of Darkness, to the memory of whose author Gide dedicates his book, one finishes Travels in the Congo with the sense of having experienced an adventure through Belgian and French equatorial Africa." J: Chamberlain

+ Bookm 69:554 Jl '29 600w

"Aside from the great underlying motive of humanity, one welcomes 'Travels in the Congo' as a revelation of André Gide himself; for in journeying with him, in apprehending through his keenly developed senses, in sharing the emotions, the enthusiasms, the indignations and the affections which Africa aroused in so rare and versatile an intelligence the reader is inevitably the richer." Blair Niles

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 My 12 '29 1000w

"Gide not only is a profound writer of distinguished prose but he is an observer of keen perceptiveness who records what he sees and hears and not what preconceived notions make him think he sees and hears. The book is a magnificent picture of a keenly sensitive and alert mind in its contact with new experiences." Walter White

+ Nation 128:771 Je 26 '29 300w

"One regrets, in a book of nearly four hundred pages, the lack of an index to locate the innumerable references. The point of the criticism, of course, is that the book of M. Gide is important. It is the production of a first-class European mind. M. Gide says memorable things, and his fellow traveler makes delightful and arresting photographs. But the publishers are in error when they imagine that 'Travels in the Congo' depends for its value upon 'the simple truth' about this particular part of the African scene. What holds us is the spectacle of an intensely alive and complex modern intelligence in sudden contact with the lowest forms of human existence." W: McFee

+ — New Repub 59:188 Jl 3 '29 600w

"It is a tribute to the sincerity of the French Government that they chose a man of Andre Gide's caliber to conduct an investigation into the rumors. Of the widest culture and understanding, a rare specimen in that he is a cosmopolitan Frenchman, a man of absolutely sound balance—in short, one of the six most civilized fellows in his country—Andre Gide was sure to bring back the truth in so far as it was humanly attainable." L: Sherwin

+ N Y Evening Post p10m My 11 '29 800w

"Distinguished in manner, without any imported romanticism, but reflecting the spell of the Dark Continent . . . 'Travels in the Congo' is a book to place beside one's set of Conrad."

+ N Y Times p7 My 12 '29 1100w

"Gide's observation is unprejudiced, without romantic distortion of fact; his style, the perfection of simplicity." L. F. Hewlings

+ Outlook 152:106 My 15 '29 460w

St Louis 27:289 O '29

Sat R of Lit 6:335 O 26 '29 230w

"Gide is ever conscious of the spirit of Joseph Conrad in the land and his book is filled with references to that great man who preceded him up those same rivers. . . His book has a rare quality of interest." S. D. G.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '29 115Ow

GIELGUD, VAL HENRY. White eagles; a story of 1812. 279p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Constable] 29-23361

Napoleon's campaign in Russia, ending with the Moscow retreat, is the setting for this novel. Adam Konski, a Pole, becomes a member of the secret service for France—the "Sacred Flies." Among his companions are Charles Auric and his wife, Diane. Auric falls into the hands of the "Spider," a Russian woman, who manages to dominate him. Thruout the many hardships that follow, Adam and Diane are thrown together for mutual protection and fall in love. Diane renounces Charles as a traitor, and, following Adam's heroism in the last great battle, goes to him.

Boston Transcript p6 N 20 '29 290w

"The characters are striking if not entirely convincing, and their effect is considerably heightened by the careful historical background. Mr. Gielgud is himself of Polish ancestry, and his portrayal of the intense pride and patriotism of the Polish nobleman is one of the most interesting features in this novel."

+ N Y Times p30 N 24 '29 240w

"There are all the ingredients of sword-and-cloak romance, and Mr. Gielgud mixes them with a will. He has an impressive manner, a considerable power of evoking the past, and he can make fine words and splendid gestures do their part in stirring the imagination. It is not bad reading, but clearly he could do something better." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 148:277 S 7 '29 150w

"Mr. Gielgud has a very notable gift for historical romance. He writes in a style without self-consciousness; not a subtle style at all, but a fluent, vivid, high-spirited style. It is as if he enjoyed himself, and had a story to tell, and didn't care any too much how he was telling it, because the next incident was always pressing on, urgently demanding its chance to appear. Where an author seems to be enjoying himself, it is probable that readers will enjoy themselves, too. This is an exhilarating and exciting narrative." Alan Porter

+ Spec 143:227 Ag 17 '29 180w

"It is all very bustling and gory, but it often seems that the framework—which in fact contains one of the great tragic dramas of history—is rather wasted upon some of the incidents which Mr. Gielgud has set within it. The last part of the book, after the terrible lady has been got rid of and we come to a really fine picture of the miseries and heroism of the retreat, is the best. Mr. Gielgud is a skilled romantic portrait-painter."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p705 S 12 '29 250w

GILBERT, ANTHONY. Death at Four Corners. 301p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Collins] 29-3185

The discovery on the Blount estate of a dead man in clerical garb has far-reaching consequences for Sir Gervase and Lady Blount and for others in their social circle.

Bookm 69:xxvi Ap '29 40w

"Here's a meaty, well written and sufficiently scandalous item [with] a clever and unusual conclusion." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 27 '29 100w

" 'Death at Four Corners' is a good detective story with very minor faults. Its construction is excellent, its situations well worked out and logical, and its characterization adequate."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '29 200w

"It is an absorbing story even though the solution of the mystery seems a bit far-fetched."

+ N Y Times p20 F 3 '29 220w

Spec 142:434 Mr 16 '29 120w

"Livelier and more mysterious than the author's previous effort, 'The Murder of Mrs Davenport.' Surprise after surprise awaits the reader and the plot is not fully revealed until almost the final words."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 10 '29 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 7 '29 200w

GILBERT, LYDIA NORTHROP. Our most popular trees. 110p il $1.50 Sully

582 Trees—North America 29-22032

A small handbook containing short descriptions of forty-eight of our North American trees. The illustrations are in color, showing in detail the tree, bark, fruit, blossom and leaf.

"This tiny book is intended for use as a handbook by beginners in the study of trees and by those who are satisfied with elementary information concerning them. There is no attempt to give classifications or scientific nomenclature, or, indeed, any but the simplest information. The punctuation and the proof-reading are both rather deplorable."

N Y Times p47 D 8 '29 180w

"An attractive if elementary handbook of trees."

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '29 120w

GILBERT, PAUL THOMAS, and BRYSON, CHARLES LEE. Chicago and its makers; a narrative of events from the day of the first white man to the inception of the second world's fair; with a chapter on Chicago hotels and restaurants by Wallace Rice; Caroline M. McIlvaine, historical adviser. 1085p il $25 F. Mendelsohn, 2012 Congress hotel, Chicago

977.31 Chicago—History. Chicago—Biography 29-17415

GILBERT, P. T:, and BRYSON, C: L.—Cont.

"One-half of this book of over 1,000 pages is devoted to historical articles; the other half deals with famous men of Chicago, living and dead. The illustrations are countless, and for the student of American customs in the Middle West, and even the growth of the United States, they will be invaluable for years to come. The whole history of Chicago is traced in articles dealing with the wilderness, the earliest explorers, the days of Fort Dearborn, the coming of the land boom, the days of plank roads, when Chicago stuck in the mud; thence the history touches the Civil War, the great fire, the World's Columbian Exposition, and the modern rebuilding of the city."—N Y World

"The authors say that not only have they sought to portray the material achievements of the mid-Western metropolis but also have tried to catch and make known something of the spirit that has inspired its development. In both aims it is not too much to say that they have indeed been successful. All of those concerned with the work are longtime Chicagoans, versed in the lore of the more modern city, and they have had the enthusiastic cooperation of students of its history. Throughout the work the illustrations are particularly valuable and interesting, since they contain reproductions of many old prints, daguerrotypes and photographs."

+ N Y Times p14 O 6 '29 500w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p10m O 27 '29 900w

GILLMOR, FRANCES. Thumbcap weir. 305p $2.50 Minton

29-5706

A novel of the farm and fishing folk of the Bay of Fundy who wrest a hard living from the soil and the sea. Thumbcap Weir is built at great effort to catch shoals of herring on the tide. The building of the weir breeds trouble. Against the setting of this community feud is placed the story of the lovers Gid and Debbie.

Booklist 25:360 Je '29

"When Miss Gillmor learns to shade her characters a bit more delicately, her readers will get more pleasure from the freshness of her scene and the vigor of her descriptive faculty." Norah Meade

+ Bookm 69:558 Jl '29 150w

"Miss Gillmor has drawn a true, strong picture. She writes with conviction and directness, she escapes the little insecurities which creep into most first novels." L. G. Marshall

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Mr 10 '29 550w

"This is Miss Gillmor's first novel. She has chosen a new background for her story of these island fishermen and has drawn her characters with skill and understanding. Add to this the pure and limpid English in which the story is written and the simplicity and beauty of the descriptions of the scenery and we have an unusually fine and wholesome novel, which deserves to be widely read." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 16 '29 850w

Reviewed by E. L. Walton
Nation 128:537 My 1 '29 150w

"Miss Gillmor knows her country, its bays and weirs, its high farmland and rocky cliffs; and she knows how to set it before us with vividness and beauty. Unfortunately, her story is neither good nor original enough to keep the book alive or give it much significance beyond its value as a genre study."

+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 7 '29 580w
N Y World p11m My 5 '29 80w
Outlook 151:430 Mr 13 '29 20w

"The author has undeniably caught much of the beauty of her region, of sea and pines and sunny blueberry meadows; unfortunately, her sense of plot and character is not developed equally with her feeling for background."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:837 Mr 30 '29 120w
Wis Lib Bul 25:127 Ap '29

GILMAN, A. Practical bee-breeding. 264p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Putnam

638.1 Bees 29-2570

The book is written by a professional bee-keeper who is the inventor of a new method of "queen introduction," a group system for the large breeder and other breeding devices.

Booklist 25:271 Ap '29

"This handbook for amateur and professional apiarists by an experienced hand reveals clear evidences of original thought and practice."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Mr 10 '29 90w

"An important addition to bee literature."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 10 '29 120w

"When Mr. Gilman comes forward with certain new theories, and launches them with an assurance that they must be accepted forthwith, he is safe to arouse a certain amount of antagonism that a rather laboured style will do nothing to diminish. Yet he is a sound thinker, and the methods he advocates are practical and stimulating."

+ — New Statesman 32:770 Mr 23 '29 930w
St Louis 27:198 Je '29

"Mr. Gilman has written an extremely complicated and not too lucid statement of his theory and practice of the breeding and management of the various races of the hive-bee; and is more concerned with genetics, the science of crossing or line-breeding, the elimination of intractableness and the swarming instinct from the stocks, and the rearing of queens on a commercial scale, than with the actual production of honey."

Times [London] Lit Sup p13 Ja 3 '29 210w

GILMAN, MRS MILDRED (EVANS). Headlines. 309p $2 Liveright

28-23466

"Here, presented as the real stories behind the gaudy headlines of sensational journalism, are some excellent tales of life in a poor community on Staten Island. Each story has a headline for a title: 'Grim Reaper Takes Toll,' 'Wife Beater Gets Stiff Term,' 'Says He Is Not Tot's Father,' 'Rum Raid Nets Six,' 'Mysterious Apparition Terrorizes Neighborhood,' 'Jazz-Mad Youth Slays Family,' and so on, in the best tabloid manner."—N Y Times

" 'Headlines' might have gone wrong on any page with a shade too much pity here or a careless comment there. Mrs. Gilman saw that it didn't; her loyalty to an austerely impersonal writing style has its reward."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 11 '28 250w

"With a rare skill Mrs. Gilman pictures the eventful lives of the immigrants and their children; and interprets their family circle through tabloid headlines."

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 27 '28 130w
N Y Times p7 O 28 '28 530w

"This sort of thing may make a true raw slice from the melting-pot, but its lack of concentrated movement and definite theme, combined with the sheer brutality of these aliens, deprives the book of any solid hold upon one's interest and sympathies."

— + N Y World p10m D 16 '28 120w

"Mrs. Gilman in telling the unadorned truth, with discerning simplicity and a deep sympathy for suffering humanity, has made these stories into inspired realism, far more gripping than any synthetic newspaper version could ever hope to be."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:630 Ja 26 '29 330w

GILMORE, ALBERT FIELD. East and west of Jordan. 191p il $3 Stratford

915.69 Palestine—Description and travel

29-6774

These sketches of journeys in Palestine, Syria, and Egypt appeared for the most part in the Christian science monitor. Besides linking the places visited with events in Biblical history, the volume gives a brief account of modern Palestine and the Zionist movement.

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '29 480w
Christian Century 46:589 My 1 '29 30w

"Mr. Gilmore's chapters on the social and political problems of this land with so heterogeneous a population are stimulating and informative. His descriptive chapters dealing with the ancient religious monuments and sacred shrines are graphic and, without the slightest hint of irreverence, he has carefully avoided accepting at their face value all the claims as to the entire authenticity of the various spots held to be historic." W. J. Abbot

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 10 '29 820w

GILTINAN, CAROLINE (MRS LEO P. HARLOW). Veiled door. 101p $1.50 (6s 6d) Macmillan

811 29-8161

Mrs Harlow's delicate lyrics are intensely personal, and vibrant with religious emotion.

"Caroline Giltinan's 'The Veiled Door' is a volume of quieter verse, of brief lyrics in which the author pours out her emotions in a way that makes her book like a garden of sorrow." C: Divine

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Jl 14 '29 60w

"It has been twelve years since Miss Giltinan's book, 'The Divine Image,' was published. Excellent as was that first collection, this new book expresses a deeper humanity, an intenser glow of spiritual faith and a finer technique." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 8 '29 780w

"Caroline Giltinan Harlow has the gift—not too frequent in our crowded and complex days—of shooting straight. . . Hers is, like that of most modern singers, intensely personal poetry. But unlike many modern singers, she translates subjective experience into concrete drama, and projects the personal deeply and widely enough to unite it with the universal." K. B.

+ Cath World 129:245 My '29 550w

"Every poem is an intaglio. No other book of poetry that has appeared in recent years, with the exception of Miss Meynell's, has contained so much both exquisite and profound."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 28 '29 330w

"Behind the formal neatness and brevity of Mrs. Giltinan's verses there is little to be found. Often indeed the neatness is nonsensical."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p499 Je 20 '29 80w

GISSING, GEORGE ROBERT. Selections autobiographical and imaginative from [his] works, with biographical and critical notes by his son; with an introd. by Virginia Woolf. 318p $3 (7s 6d) J. Cape & H. Smith

B or 92 [29-14404]

"In the present volume Mr. Alfred Gissing has not done more than present a well-chosen anthology of the novelist's most personalised passages, linking them with just enough notes to give an outline, if not the detailed facts, of his father's career. As an introduction to Gissing's interest and virtues, at a time when both are re-emerging from the troubles of overpraise and undervaluation, it should be of decided value. One is struck, in seeing the extracts thus marshalled together, by the variety and the wide scope of Gissing's commentary on the life of his time."—New Statesman

Reviewed by Edwin Muir
Nation and Ath 45:163 My 4 '29 750w
Reviewed by Hamish Miles
New Statesman 33:12 Ap 13 '29 730w
Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 10 '29 600w
Reviewed by T. E. Welby
Sat R 147:181 F 9 '29 1200w

"It is doubtful whether there will ever be a boom in Gissing, for the material out of which he made most of his books is so drab that one lives in constant misery whilst with him. He recalls all the horror of a late Victorian childhood: the gloom of the gas-lit home; the monstrous spectre of Jehovah; the dusty saddleback furniture and the sense of illness and disease colouring the day; the distress of seeing one's parents victims of the industrial economics which ground them to despair before one's innocent eyes." R: Church

+ Spec 142:240 F 16 '29 1200w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '29 1250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p211 Mr 14 '29 90w

GIST, ARTHUR STANLEY. Administration of an elementary school. 308p il $1.80 Scribner

371.2 School superintendents and principals. School management and organization 28-15575

"The author treats the work of the principal from a functional point of view. The more important functions, such as the leadership of the community, the organization of the office, the management of school supplies and equipment, the development of a system of personnel administration, and the direction of extra-classroom activities, are fully discussed in separate chapters. Democracy in the management of the school is advised because leadership demands it and because pupils receive the best training for living in a democracy through participation in a democratic form of school life. The socializing opportunities which develop pupils for life-situations are especially stressed in the chapters entitled 'Personnel Problems,' 'Extra-Classroom Activities,' and 'The Platoon School.' "—School R

"Mr. Gist has built up from wide reading and from his successful experience in Seattle an exceedingly practical and readable book, which reflects the modern conception of the elementary school and its possibilities. . . There are undoubtedly those to whom this book will not appeal, for it is far in advance of what is still acceptable practice in many school systems. On the other hand, Mr. Gist has treated the problems in an intelligent, scientific, and practical manner." W. W. Beatty

+ El School J 29:391 Ja '29 500w

"Many helpful and practical suggestions designed to improve the administration of a school are given. The book is amply illustrated with various administrative devices, programs, forms, etc., in use in real school situations. Most of these are taken from schools in Seattle, Washington, or Oakland, California. The book should prove of value to principals in service who desire to improve their efficiency and to students in classes studying problems in school administration." E: H. Stullken

+ School R 36:789 D '28 340w

GIUDICI, DAVIDE. Tragedy of the Italia; with the rescuers to the red tent. 208p il $3 Appleton [12s 6d Benn]

919.8 Italia (air-ship). Krassin (ship). Arctic regions. Nobile, Umberto. Aeronautics—Voyages 29-3210

An unvarnished account of the tragedy of the Italia by the correspondent of the Italian press who interviewed the survivors of the Italia and the crew of the Krassin. Certain items of sensational import in another story of the Italia are ignored in Giudici's account.

Booklist 25:281 Ap '29
Reviewed by C. L. Skinner
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 F 3 '29 300w
Boston Transcript p4 Ap 6 '29 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p94 Je '29

"An intelligent and interesting piece of journalism. The translator, whose name does not appear, has done his work remarkably well. . . But certain points in the story inevitably arouse slight suspicions, which the author might perhaps have dispersed if he had dealt with them more openly."

GIUDICI, DAVIDE—Continued
+ — Nation and Ath 44:660 F 9 '29 500w
Nature 124:124 Jl 27 '29 170w

"His account of the two expeditions of the Krassin, and the rescue of all the Italia's crew except seven who were separated from the main body and were never found, is an excellent piece of journalism, direct and uncoloured, and those who have read only the sensational 'stories' which most newspapers printed at the time should read Signor Giudici's book for its plain statement of fact."
+ New Statesman 32:450 Ja 12 '29 220w

Reviewed by Earl Hanson
N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 26 '29 240w

"An extremely partisan account from the Italian point of view, which deliberately suppresses any details derogatory to the Italians, and gives not the slightest hint that there was any cause for criticism." H. L. Matthews
N Y Times p4 Ja 20 '29 800w
Outlook 151:200 Ja 30 '29 30w
St Louis 27:205 Je '29

"Many readers should welcome such an interesting story as that of Mr. Giudici."
+ Sat R 147:152 F 2 '29 180w

"With an almost overpowering mixture of Italian and journalese, he describes the meeting betwen relievers and relieved, and finally he goes on to tell us of the further unsuccessful searches of the 'Krassin' for the rest of the expedition. The fact that the book is by an Italian lends added interest to it."
+ Spec 142:53 Ja 12 '29 240w
Times [London] Lit Sup p995 D 13 '28 220w
Wis Lib Bul 25:98 Mr '29

GIUSTI, ARNDT. An artist passes. 238p $2.50 Dodd [6s Chatto & W.]
29-15479

In a sleepy Mexican village Pancho Ortega passes his days making crude drawings on whatever blank wall presents itself. The sister of an American engineer comes to visit, and falling in love with the amiable young Mexican proclaims him an artist. Her brother breaks up the affair; but the harm is done: a lazy, happy peasant is started on a cycle of sophistication, degeneration and crime that carries him as far as Paris and back at last to the starting point in Mexico.

---

"The author handles certain episodes with a shrewd sense of drama, and there is a satirical undertone in his writing which hints at a talent capable of definite development."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 S 8 '29 120w

"At one point he paints a good picture, but apart from that the element of surprise is sadly absent." L. L. Irvine
— + Nation and Ath 45:208 My 11 '29 60w

"It is a violent and even a silly story. We are asked to believe that a drunken, ignorant lout—our hero, ladies and gentlemen—who divides his time between painting masterpieces and philandering with unreal women, is an artist. It was his dull reiteration of the perverted bourgeois conception of artist that got us on our high horse. For such conception—if it may be graced with that title—is without basis in any reality save such realities as exist in the inhibited fancies of a shallow mind." Edwin Seaver
— N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 10 '29 220w
N Y Times p22 O 13 '29 620w

"In itself, the story is improbable and disagreeable: Pancho is a low type of creature, Annabelle fond, foolish and infatuated. But the book is written with considerable art. Mr. Giusti takes his theme just seriously enough; and his selective instinct is so certain that the story never gets heavy or out of hand. Within its small compass 'An Artist Passes' shows a wide acquaintance both with life and with art." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 147:774 Je 8 '29 200w

"This is an odd book; we do not sense the author's purpose, nor do we understand the significance of the central character."
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:63 Ag 17 '29 230w

"A hard, bright story which one reads without stopping because of a certain effortless ease of style, a stimulating, sardonic flavour, and a real novelty of theme. This is not a pretty tale, but it is a brilliant piece of work." R. A. Taylor
+ — Spec 142:870 Je 1 '29 130w

"This is an amusing and spirited novel in the picaresque convention, a little too bloodthirsty, however, to provide the innocent enjoyment the reader may expect from its kind."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p457 Je 6 '29 170w

GLADKOV, FEODOR VASILIEVICH. Cement; tr. from the Russian by A. S. Arthur and C. Ashleigh. 311p $2.50 Int. pub. [7s 6d Lawrence]

"Gladkov's narrative, the first novel to rise out of the turbulence of the Revolution, is a dramatic and pulsating tale. Vividly he portrays life under the Soviet rule—life as it affects the individual, but even more important than that, life as it is represented in the relationship of the masses to the economic policies of the nation. Through this story of a typical Soviet community run the interwoven threads of life of Gleb and Dasha—the inevitable human equation that even the ruthless system of nationalization or socialization cannot obliterate."—New Repub

---

"The book is written in a vigorous dramatic style, with a rapid tempo. It is permeated by the conviction that the times require energetic optimism, activity, and to the devil with psychology. It celebrates the Machine in terms that make Eugene O'Neill's apostrophes to Dynamo seem tame literary exercises." Dorothy Brewster
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Jl 14 '29 820w
Boston Transcript p4 Je 29 '29 170w

" 'Cement,' though an important novel, is not by any means a great novel. The author is woefully addicted to pathos and ornamentation; and not infrequently his pathos degenerates into bathos, and his ornamentation into a heap of obstructing details. His characterizations, too, are not always felicitous: not one of the main heroes is clearly delineated. Many situations are absurdly treated (the Party cleansing is a good example). The two lines along which the story unfolds——the factory and the home—are never welded into an artistically convincing whole." Joshua Kunitz
— + Nation 129:695 D 4 '29 500w

"It is obvious that Gladkov intends to draw the picture of his country in a state of painful transition, and the interest of the book lies perhaps in this aspect of it, rather than in its merits purely as literature. Its fault, considered as literature, is that the characters are presented more as a mass than as individuals; not one of them detaches himself at all clearly from his fellows." V. Sackville-West
Nation and Ath 44:620 F 2 '29 250w

"There are moments in this story when Gladkov seems to have been swept off his feet by the power of his own narrative. But these chaotic and somewhat incoherent intervals are rare. For the greater part, the work is clear-cut and lucid, moving forward with dynamic force; and the chord for the theme is a high, triumphant note of victory which drowns out the petty cries of discontent." A. J. B.
+ New Repub 58:367 My 15 '29 240w

"The novel, which has been freely and racily translated by Mr. Arthur and Mr. Ashleigh, is full of strong language and windy thought, the language being very much in the vernacular. Gladkov sees Russia in terms of sweat and filth, but he is not devoid of humour."
New Statesman 32:576 F 9 '29 200w

"His novel has interest. It is written with push and will power, its action develops quickly and effectively, at times with real dramatic swing. It must be said to Gladkov's credit that, in spite of his Communist enthusiasm, he describes the life and customs of the Communist millieu with perfect realism and without idealization. And the picture he draws is interesting." A. I. Nazaroff
+ N Y Times p2 Je 9 '29 500w

"The characters, scarcely articulate except in oaths and swear-words impugning each other's immediate ancestry, have a good deal of crude energy. As propaganda 'Cement' is a failure: it could only influence one against the art of reading." L. P. Hartley
— Sat R 147:185 F 9 '29 90w

"That 'Cement' fails at being a great novel is due more to its style than its substance. Its materials are magnificent, but too often their profound possibilities are but superficially exploited. There is so much incident and yet so little that stands out above the rest. There are many good scenes, but no great ones. There is no point of crescendo toward which the novel moves. It could have ended fifty pages sooner, with a few changes, or have run on for fifty pages more without violation of form. In the main it is only this lack of discipline, which weakens it as a work of art." V. F. Calverton
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1018 My 18 '29 1000w

Reviewed by R. A. Taylor
Spec 142:132 Ja 26 '29 380w

"A post-revolutionary author describes a recent phase of post-revolutionary Russia with a clear-eyed and far from despairing acceptance. The result is unnerving, fascinating, and in its unflinching way, magnificent. It is a fierce modern epic, born in troubled times, but it breathes with an immense energy."
+ Spec 142:1015 Je 29 '29 150w

"One of the most notable pieces of fiction that has come out of Russia during the last few years. It is a work of extraordinary vigour and enthusiasm, written from first to last from the point of view of a devoted supporter of the Revolution and of the Communist experiment, but quite as remarkable for its handling of the common aims and pre-occupations of the novelist."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p60 Ja 24 '29 600w

"A novel of great directness and vigor."
+ World Tomorrow 13:42 Ja '30 70w

GLADSTONE, HERBERT JOHN GLADSTONE, 1st viscount. After thirty years. 457p il $7.50 (21s) Macmillan

B or 92 Gladstone, William Ewart 29-7861

Mingled with his memories of his own life the son of England's great prime minister recalls many stories of his father's life. The volume has a more personal touch than Morley's well-known book on the elder Gladstone.

---

"After thirty years it is unfortunate that a book like this should be written. Viscount Gladstone, stung to the quick by slighting remarks about his father, has dashed to the defense with more warmth than understanding. W. E. Gladstone needs no defense. His name and memory already tower high above that of any nineteenth-century English statesman. It is both futile and undignified on the part of his son to enter into the journalistic arena, there to exchange buffets with that most charming of modern popularizers, M. Maurois, and to reply to gossipy stories retailed more frequently for their piquancy than out of malice. The most valuable part of this book, that dealing with the relation of Gladstone to the queen, contains extracts from Gladstone's diary and an important exchange of letters with Lord Balfour, all hitherto unpublished." W. P. Hall
— + Am Hist R 34:830 Jl '29 900w
Booklist 25:391 Jl '29

Reviewed by Donald Carson
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 28 '29 530w

Reviewed by Edmund Noble
Boston Transcript p2 F 23 '29 2250w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe
Nation 129:724 D 11 '29 250w

"Lord Gladstone's book on his father is not merely a pious tribute marked by good taste and judgment; it is a contribution to history from a first-hand authority." J. L. Hammond
+ Nation and Ath 44:403 D 15 '28 2500w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p5 F 10 '29 1250w

"An excellent supplement to Lord Morley's official 'Life.' " W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:274 F 13 '29 100w
St Louis 27:168 My '29
Sat R 146:870 D 29 '28 1150w

"The career of a dead statesman is his nation's affair or the world's. It is not a family matter. Viscount Gladstone, however, has written the present volume because he believes a son is justified in defending his father's capacities as a statesman against attack. . . Admirable as such filial conduct is, it can scarcely be admitted that family pride justifies efforts to rebut historical criticism. Viscount Gladstone in this respect has no right to 'claim the privileges of a son.' Had he important contributions to make to the history of his father's career and the times in which he lived, he would be as justified as anyone else in setting them forth. There is little such in his book." J. W. T. Mason
— Sat R of Lit 6:181 S 28 '29 800w

"We have read nothing more delightful for many years than Lord Gladstone's reminiscences of Mr. Gladstone as a father and a country gentleman—his gaiety, his interest in tiny things as well as in great, his consuming enjoyment of good conversation, his proficiency and enjoyment as a host, and so on. We must leave our readers, however, to discover the great biographical charm of this book for themselves. It touches points which never entered into Lord Morley's scheme, and could have been written only by a Gladstone."
+ Spec 141:928 D 15 '28 730w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 24 '29 1300w

"There is something at once heroic and pathetic, honourable and a little absurd, about this book. . . Yet, in spite of some futilities and extravagances of temper, this book was well worth writing, and no one else could have written it. Lord Gladstone is not only his father's son; he has himself been behind the political scene all his life. His book is full of interesting notes, out of his personal knowledge, on men who have a place in history."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p1001 D 20 '28 2000w

GLAESER, ERNST. Class of 1902; tr. by Willa and Edwin Muir. 397p $2.50 Viking press [7s 6d Secker]

29-20116

"Class of 1902" represents the young men of Germany during the war who were too young to go into action prior to 1918. The experiences of the boys at home during the war years form the material of the novel. Military training at school is a part of the life of the hero of the story, and his adolescent yearning for knowledge and experience, early love, and the hunger and privation in Germany during the war years.

---

Reviewed by F. C. Simpson
Bookm 70:334 N '29 270w

"Here is a direct and simple story of how the war looked behind the lines to German boys who were too young to fight even in 1919. . . Written in the first person, it has the mixture of naïveté and self-importance, of insight and awkwardness, that is natural and engaging in adolescence." Mary Ross
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 S 29 '29 650w

GLAESER, ERNST—Continued

Boston Transcript p2 O 11 '29 220w

"In the opening of 'Class of 1902' the amount of space given to the record of the boy's curiosity about sex and his experiments in love-making is out of proportion to the rest of the book, and throughout there is a slight jerkiness and scrappiness difficult to avoid in a narrative of this type. But the ecstasy of the German people at the outbreak of war, the waning of that ecstasy, the coming of disillusionment, the slow, irresistible invasion of the hideous truth—these things have seldom been better described. As far as one can judge without knowing the original, this makes another Muir classic in translation." L. L. Irvine

+ — Nation and Ath 46:52 O 12 '29 280w

New Statesman 34:16 O 12 '29 480w

" 'Class of 1902' is another significant document full of truth, of meaning, of the power to hold and move us; it pictures another side of the war which enlarges our perspective of it, adding knowledge beyond the knowledge of philosophic values gained in 'Grischa,' of physical suffering and youthful bewilderment gained in 'All Quiet.' " L: Kronenberger

+ N Y Times p7 S 29 '29 900w

Reviewed by Gustav Davidson

N Y World p11m N 3 '29 360w

"The fierce truth, the sharp, hard insight of the novel is made not only endurable but also rich because there is in it, also, tenderness and warmth. A good trio, these German war books, Grischa, All Quiet, and Class of 1902."

+ Outlook 153:188 O 2 '29 280w

"While the theme of this worth-while work is war's effect on the stay-at-homes, its underlying thought is Youth's oft-told, but little understood, struggle to solve the riddle of sex. Some of the finest interpretations of adolescent joys and sorrows have come from German authors. And this writer's sympathetic handling has not been excelled. 'Class of 1902' should be read for many reasons, not for excellence in method, for it is a disjointed work if one applies to it rigid standards, but for its splendid portraiture of character and chiefly for its able account of Youth's quest for the meaning of life. Frank Theiss in his 'Farewell to Paradise,' sounded unfathomed depths, but Glaeser scales far loftier heights." C. W. Walker

+ Portland Evening News p10 O 15 '29 550w

"It is a most disagreeable picture, its principal subjects being the manners of German middle-class society and the sexual preoccupations of children. The crudity of the civilization described is as astonishing as it is repellent. Let us hope that Herr Glaeser exaggerates. He has a fertile and lively pen, no more reticence than is absolutely necessary, and the ability to evoke a painful curiosity. One feels aloof and superior, as though reading a slightly scandalous manual of Natural History."

— Sat R 148:426 O 12 '29 300w

"What is peculiarly interesting in 'Class of 1902' is the angle from which all is seen—the trenchant and hostile angle of a child at odds with the grown-up world. . . It is here—in describing the grown-up world as seen from that other world of childhood and adolescence—that Glaeser has come closest to writing an enduring book." S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 6:235 O 12 '29 800w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Survey 63:166 N 1 '29 40w

"The unpleasantness of the characters, their sexual precocity, and the twist of perversion so common in German books on the War will probably limit the sympathy of the average British reader. In many respects, indeed, Herr Glaeser has made his story as repellent as novels concerned with the front, which shows that writers with the outlook of these young Germans do not need to go there for disgusting scenes. The battlefields may be horrible, but horrors can be found anywhere."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p938 N 21 '29 380w

GLASGOW, ELLEN ANDERSON GHOLSON. They stooped to folly; a comedy of morals. 351p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Heinemann]

29-17854

Three generations of women stooped to folly: Aunt Agatha, the oldest, spent the rest of her life atoning; Mrs Dalrymple went to Paris and became a woman of the world; Milly Burden went on her way as though it was of no concern, except to herself. Offsetting these three were two good women, Mrs Littlepage and her daughter Victoria Mary. The narrative is given entirely from the standpoint of Mr Littlepage, Southern gentleman of the present day, but of an older generation.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see N Y World p10m N 10 '29

---

Booklist 26:70 N '29

"Ellen Glasgow makes the traditional method, with slight modifications, serve brilliantly in 'They Stooped to Folly,' a study of the revolution in the moral code governing feminine conduct which has occurred within the span of one lifetime, or what is ordinarily reckoned as three generations. . . This group dilemma Miss Glasgow has analyzed in the spirit of classic comedy. The breadth of her inquiry and the penetration of her wit are a constant delight. Innumerable epigrams tempt to quotation, and to choose one is to slight others as good." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ag 4 '29 2200w

"Perhaps Miss Glasgow has been hampered in her work by a fear of sentimentality. Possibly she has an honest dread of being the author of a commonplace story of a small Southern town. Her bon mots about sex relationships are continuous and extremely amusing for the first two hundred pages. Then it seems as if the shafts of her wit begin to lose their accuracy. It is excellent drawing room entertainment, never even faintly redolent of the stable. Perhaps because of the author's good taste and discretion the bright flashes of humor go round and round in a somewhat circumscribed circle." D. F. Gilman

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '29 1700w

"Mr. Virginius Littlepage's responsibilities and attractions for and to that galaxy of ladies is the theme of an amusing satirical picture of southern life, shot with tragedy, but never tragic, for the author's sense of the ludicrous always triumphs over fate's gaudiest movements." Fanny Butcher

+ — Chicago Daily Tribune p7 Ag 10 '29 700w

"Here are the finest products of Virginian civilization of the Victorian period, carrying over into the present century, to be played upon by a world whose ideals and practices have been turned topsy turvy by the Great War. One suspects that Miss Glasgow has written a novel not for today alone, but one which, generations hence, will be read as a graphic picture of the struggle for moral readjustment at a turning-point in American civilization."

+ Churchman p17 O 5 '29 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p157 D '29

"Miss Glasgow's ironic insight, always genuine, always pleasing, reminds one of Rochefoucauld and the French epigrammatists: it is a perfect distillation of the advanced viewpoint of a given age. It is not idiosyncratic; in her wit we do not recognize the lineaments of a personality, but rather the distinctive features of an intelligent society. This explains her mastery of the comedy of manners, a mastery more than amply redemonstrated by 'They Stooped to Folly,' certainly the suavest and possibly the most penetrating of her novels." C. P. Fadiman

+ Nation 129:225 Ag 28 '29 700w

"It is difficult to trace the exact nature of the failure in Miss Glasgow's book. She writes competently and fully, and, in many instances, with real wit and intelligence. The problem in her latest novel is grievously misstated in its title, which places emphasis upon varying reactions to unfortunate love affairs in women of different periods." Louise Bogan

— + New Repub 61:50 D 4 '29 420w

"The style of 'They stooped to Folly' has the grace and dignity of an old Virginia manor. The content is ageless. Miss Glasgow portrays, with an irony so deft that it cuts deep without bruising, the founderings through sex of mortals who live in the 1920s and still shackle themselves to Sinai. Miss Glasgow, a truly civilized person, does not laugh out loud, but with a gift for joyous and ranking epigram shared on even terms with 'Elizabeth' she has written a delicately scathing travesty on morals and mortals fit to stand alongside 'Expiation' and worth more, we think, than the entire collected prose works of John Erskine." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 17 '29 300w

"It is safe to say that until there arises in this country a novelist who, like Galsworthy and Thackeray and Meredith, can combine the creation of full-bodied fictional characters with wit of observation, 'They Stooped to Folly' will remain unsurpassed in any year in its chosen field of the comedy of manners. And when it is surpassed perhaps it will be by Ellen Glasgow herself. It is our guess that this is precisely what will take place. And until then 'They Stooped to Folly' should remain the most delectable mingling of ironic wit and tolerance yet done on this side of the Atlantic." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 4 '29 1350w

"It is an amazing book, an exciting book, but an exhausting one. So much penetration, so much honesty, so much wit requires reading as well as writing. Reading it, one begins, presently, to start each new sentence hoping that it may be commonplace, to resent the cruelty of the galloping author who will not give the pedestrian reader's mind a breathing spell. As a reviewer, we dare not say it, but as a fellow reader we must confess that we enjoy 'They Stooped to Folly' more in retrospect than in first experience." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 152:590 Ag 7 '29 450w

Pratt p37 autumn '29

"Miss Glasgow in this 'comedy of morals' has again proved her right to be regarded as perhaps the leading woman novelist of America. No one of our female writers has her wit, her ironical insight into the foibles of human nature, her ability to reduce to an epigram the findings of her penetrating insight. This is not to say that 'They Stooped to Folly' is a completely successful book. Curiously enough its faults lie chiefly in its failure adequately to realize its female characters." Amy Loveman

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:19 Ag 3 '29 620w

"Miss Glasgow's mirror is a very clear one: it stands in the hard light of day and no shadows blur its tortured reflections. She has once again proved herself an able craftswoman: as usual her work is exquisite." B. E. Todd

+ Spec 143:641 N 2 '29 250w

"Miss Glasgow's book, one begins to perceive, is not merely lively and interesting; it is dangerously vital, perhaps beyond the ability of censor to apprehend. It is ironic with the keenness and subtle implication of choice and incisive comedy—more richly matured even than 'The Romantic Comedians' in comprehension and deft urbanity of human anatomizing." R. W. N.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '29 460w

"The Littlepage family is presented with the skill and acumen to be looked for from Miss Glasgow. It is all quite interesting, but the most interesting thing about this book is the emergence of the fact that as time goes on the social importance of the late War is becoming greater in the United States than anywhere else. Every American family—in fiction—has been profoundly affected. Miss Glasgow accepts this convention, but her stooping ladies would have been as engagingly foolish had they never sniffed the battlefields or heard a military band."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p1026 D 5 '29 450w

GLASPELL, SUSAN (MRS NORMAN MATSON). Fugitive's return. 324p $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d Gollancz]

Stunned into speechlessness by the loss of her husband and her child Irma Shraeder was recalled from the brink of suicide by her cousin Janet and bundled off to Greece. For years she lived as in a gentle dream among the peasants, who adored her. Then the suffering of a dog and the needs of two of her friends recalled her, first to speech and next to the full reality of life.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:372 D '28

---

"A splendid portrait of an unusual woman. . . The scenes in Greece, where Miss Glaspell has spent many years, are excellent. But the early chapters of the book, written in the new introspective style, are less successful."

+ — Bookm 70:xxvi D '29 100w

" 'Fugitive's Return' swells, surges, recedes and rises again in a fine rhythm. Like the sea, it awes you, leaving no room for laughter. Even where you do not believe, you dare not smile, for the tide that tosses Irma Lee must carry you beside her. Her story may overflow a little, in the fullness of emotion. It does go astray from the probable. But it keeps a soaring quality throughout. And Irma Lee will live in your mind as a warm, generous figure you are glad to know." V. P. Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 10 '29 900w

Boston Transcript p5 N 13 '29 600w

"Her writing is difficult to criticize simply because of its multiple moods. One feels that she has a rare zest for writing and enjoys experimenting with all its complexities, which for the ordinary reader is somewhat bewildering. . . Those who love good writing have an exciting treat waiting them in this book."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 4 '30 300w

"Considering the author, this is in some ways rather a disappointing novel. The ending seems improbable, but after all, anything is possible, if as Bernard Shaw maintains, this world is used as a lunatic asylum by other planets. Susan Glaspell writes well, and no matter what the plot, her work is always artistic and above and out of the ordinary." E. A. C.

— + Churchman p16 D 28 '29 120w

"Miss Glaspell writes with a deeply felt sincerity; but it is a sincerity marred by a certain self-conscious religious fervor. It is this feeling of overdone sincerity that one carries away from 'Fugitive's Return.' Too frequently, Miss Glaspell walks about on stilts." Myron Brinig

— N Y Evening Post p12m D 14 '29 800w

"As a craftsman Miss Glaspell moves by fits and starts. For pages, even for entire chapters, she entices one into believing that here is a supreme novelist. Then she will lapse to such a degree that interest flags, and the reader is left wondering if the author is fully aware of her story's destination. And it is this unevenness in her work that makes critical judgment difficult." Percy Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p7 N 10 '29 820w

" 'Fugitive's Return' is a novel that interests me immensely for its background and lucid writing, and very little for the central problem, which is the rehabilitation of a woman's faith in life. . . It is told in translucent prose, with a dignity that befits writing of a prophetic nature. But, like many writings that touch on metaphysical themes, it gets a little hazy, a little too emotional." Harry Hansen

+ — N Y World p15 N 4 '29 320w

" 'Fugitive's Return' seems unbearably strident, over-written, over-manipulated, from every point of view excessive." L. P. Hartley

— Sat R 148:618 N 23 '29 400w

GLASPELL, SUSAN—Continued

"The book has beauty and quality, but it has banalities and extravagances as well. As we read we are jerked from one situation to another, from thought to action, from Greece to America; there is no easy flow or rhythmical sequence. The movement of this strange book is as distracting as a nightmare, but, like a dream, half-realized in the morning, it gradually takes shape in the mind and impresses itself on the memory. I cannot help feeling that Miss Glaspell makes a too heavy demand on her readers." B. E. Todd

+ — Spec 143:727 N 16 '29 270w

"There are times when Miss Glaspell seems to freight quite ordinary motives with an unnecessary load of mysterious emphasis."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p1054 D 12 '29 500w

GLASSCOCK, C. B. Bandits and the Southern Pacific. 294p $2.50 Stokes

364 Southern Pacific railroad. Crime and criminals. Brigands and robbers 29-2059

"This volume is quite frankly designed to cast a friendly halo over what is actually criminal. The Southern Pacific Railroad according to the author, built a right of way both through the San Joaquin Valley in California and through the hearts of the settlers there and reaped the reward of train robberies and costly man hunts. The calm newspaper style of the author in presenting the evidence, as he sees it, for and against the outlaws, Chris Evans and John Sontag, believed responsible but never convicted of those particular crimes, adds to the vividness of his story of their offences, flights, escapes and punishments."—Portland Evening News

---

Bookm 69:xii Je '29 60w

"Mr. Glasscock spins a good, readable yarn about these courageous fellows. That the Sontags and Evanses are less famous than the Jameses or Daltons, who, by the way enter the story indirectly, is due probably to circumstances of time and place." T: H. Ferril

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 10 '29 350w

"Mr. Glasscock's book is reportorial and entirely factual. It would be difficult to write an uninteresting volume on the subject. With its dry style, its reluctance to dramatize, we prefer 'Bandits and the Southern Pacific'—which represents the approximate nadir in titles—to a whole stack of fictional Westerns." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p9m F 9 '29 100w

"If you can stand some illegality without shrinking and will not squirm at considerable blood letting, the story is recommended." A. D. Welch

Portland Evening News p5 Mr 26 '29 350w

St Louis 27:194 Je '29

GLASSTONE, SAMUEL. Chemistry in daily life. 250p $2.25 Dutton [6s Methuen]

540 Chemistry. Chemistry, Technical

A text book, and a source of information for general readers. The first part of the book contains a simple outline of chemistry; the latter part is devoted to the application of chemical principles to our daily food, fuels, metals, dyes, perfumes, medicines, and clothing.

---

Reviewed by C. F. Adams

Am J Pub Health 19:1276 N '29 330w

"Dr. Glasstone's book is of a type which should be very welcome. The author expresses the hope that the book will be found of interest to the general reader, useful as a basis of extension and similar lectures for adults, and suitable for use in schools, whether chemistry is taught or not. There can be no doubt that it will fulfil all these requirements satisfactorily. The information is generally accurate, and the treatment is more detailed than usual in books of this type, so that even advanced students will find much that is new to them."

+ Nature 124:224 Ag 10 '29 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:20 Ap '29

GLAZEBROOK, GEORGE PARKIN DE TWENEBROKER. Sir Charles Bagot in Canada; a study in British colonial government. 160p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 Bagot, Sir Charles. Canada—Politics and government [29-14573]

"This is a careful study of the work of Sir Charles Bagot, a British diplomatist, who was appointed Governor General of Canada in 1841. His principal task was to appease the French Canadians of Lower Canada, whose displeasure at British rule had been frequently manifested. This racial question as well as the imperial relation—the problem of responsible government—were the two problems confronting Sir Charles Bagot. The solution of both of these problems he advanced with a high degree of success."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"Bagot's brief but significant part in the developments is here for the first time described with the fullness that its importance deserves. . . The volume is a scholarly and important contribution to the literature of Canadian and Imperial history." R. G. Trotter

+ Am Hist R 35:185 O '29 330w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 26 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 1 '29 400w

Reviewed by D. McArthur

Canadian Hist R 10:155 Je '29 380w

"An admirable record of Sydenham's successor, Sir Charles Bagot, so far as his work in Canada was concerned, is given by Mr. Glazebrook."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p283 Ap 11 '29 420w

GLEASON, MARION NORRIS. Scenario writing and producing for the amateur; with a preface by C. E. Kenneth Mees. 308p il $3 Am. photographic pub.

808.2 Moving-picture plays 29-20548

A book of chief value to persons or groups interested in amateur cinematography, and who wish to learn how to write scenarios. It discusses the general principles on which a scenario is constructed, and gives examples of various types of scenarios.

---

Booklist 26:62 N '29

N Y New Tech Bks 14:40 Jl '29

GLEICHEN-RUSSWURM, ALEXANDER, freiherr von. Dandies and Don Juans; concerning fashion and love among the great; tr. from the German by Margaret M. Green. 273p il $5 Knopf

920 Dandies. Biography 28-29777

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Bookm 68:xviii F '29 130w

"Herr von Gleichen-Russwurm maneuvers a truly astonishing procession. Here are history, biography, romance and love's little lost sister dressed to kill. The reader is left with a brainful of exotic and sometimes nightmarish pictures. . . None the less his book is always readable, whether one takes his heroes as veritable kings of life, as magnificent ninnies or as—in the way of this world—a little of both."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 24 '29 300w

"The studies or sketches are all hastily assembled scraps of the biographical facts of the principals involved. In each case the material is of value only if the reader is familiar with the principal."

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 2 '29 250w

Reviewed by G: Joel

N Y World p11m F 3 '29 420w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '29 150w

GLENN, ISA (MRS S. J. BAYARD SCHINDEL). Transport. 299p $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf 29-26168

An army transport is bearing to the Philippines a group of army people representing every rank from non-com to colonel and from Judy O'Grady to the colonel's lady. For the first few days social contacts are polite if cautious. But as the ship heads steadily into the heat manners grow slack and tempers sharp. Gossip and scandal poison the air with malice. Revolting scenes take place. The morbid tension which holds the group is broken only when the ship docks.

Booklist 25:247 Mr '29

"The scheme of the book is clever, and it has been neatly carried out." T. S. Matthews

Bookm 68:688 F '29 450w

"Isa Glenn discloses people rather than symptoms, with a courage of disillusion that lies deeper than the brilliant clinical exhibitionism of, say, an Aldous Huxley. She goes beyond both cynicism and sentimentality, for they ignore either the heart or the head. True comedy does neither, and it is demanding, for its essence is to provoke a thoughtful smile. Here lies sophistication in its richest sense." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ja 6 '29 630w

"This transpacific voyage has certain moments of beauty, but Isa Glenn does not emphasize the tropical evenings as settings for high romance. No indeed. The last few days of the voyage bring about one hideous denouement after another. But there is good logic in the tragic developments of the story. Sordid, yes, but absolutely true. In contrast to the moral squalor of the multitude, the relationship between Dr. Prime and Mrs. Swan stands out like a lyric poem. It gives this story a kind of spiritual ballast without which it would certainly founder." D. F. Gilman

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 5 '29 1250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p46 Mr '29

"The authoress is to be congratulated on the results of this laboratory experiment in human behaviour: her style is unaffected, and the book makes easy reading."

+ Nation and Ath 45:314 Je 1 '29 90w

"Miss Glenn has advanced from her first novel, 'Heat,' where her people were swamped in their setting, to a point where each detail of setting and each bit of dialogue is used strictly to drive home her point. And in 'Transport' she succeeds; but the very tightness of this dramatic structure gives her novel a flavor of too strict a logic." L. S. Morris

+ — New Repub 58:51 F 27 '29 450w

"The material that goes to make 'Transport' is handled with an adroitness that is consummate. Miss Glenn can characterise objectively with the best of contemporary novelists. One feels no imperative, however, toward applying superlatives to her book as a whole, because she lacks the ability to stir the reader emotionally."

+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 6 '29 550w

"It is in all probability the most important of Isa Glenn's four novels, although every one of the others is an outstanding piece of writing." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv F '29 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '29 230w

GLOAG, JOHN, and WALKER, C. THOMPSON. Home life in history; social life and manners in Britain, 200 B.C.-A.D. 1926. 302p il $4 Coward-McCann

914.2 Great Britain—Social life and customs [28-11750]

Everyday home life in England from the days of the early Britons, progressing through the Celtic, Danish, Saxon, Roman and Norman dominations to 1926.

Booklist 25:158 Ja '29

"What is told about the eighteenth century, characterized by the authors as 'an age of unreality,' and the nineteenth 'an age of misfits,' is sketchy, as it could not, perhaps, avoid being where social classes multiplied and etiquette took many and varied forms. The book will be welcomed by those who have no time to read such a monumental work as Traill's 'Social England.'" W: Macdonald

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 F 17 '29 500w

"Their story is always told vividly, with full color and notable vitality, and they succeed in enduing it with a human, individual interest, not unlike that with which a novelist vitalizes his pages. They are uncompromising realists, however, and nowhere in the book does one find any tinsel or rosecolor in their portrayal of either the past or the present." F. F. Kelly

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 12 '28 1200w

"The expressed intention of the book is to answer three questions about the people of each period: Where did they live? How did they live? What did they think and talk about? It answers them well and entertainingly, and gave us a better picture of the state of culture in England in each period than we ever got from the history books." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 150:833 S 19 '28 160w

"The book is delightfully written, though at times somewhat beyond the grasp of the average high-school pupil. It has a number of very good illustrations and is excellent in general makeup. The Appendix contains selections of sources for social history not easily duplicated. Altogether, it is an excellent book to have on the shelves of the library." H. E. Wilson

+ School R 37:151 F '29 340w

Wis Lib Bul 24:344 D '28

GLUCK, ELSIE. John Mitchell, miner; labor's bargain with the gilded age. 270p il $3 Day

B or 92 Mitchell, John. United mine workers of America 29-10564

This biography of the president of the United mine workers of America and organizer of two successful strikes of the anthracite mine workers, in 1900 and 1902, is a study of the strongest labor union in the country and of the qualities of leadership that went into its building.

"Certainly John Mitchell was a figure worthy of thoughtful study, and the present account combines a swiftly-moving narrative with a running commentary that shows an acute awareness of the nature of a union's problems. . . But if this book is more than biography, it is also in a sense less than biography. At least it gives us less intimacy with the man than modern authors have led us to demand, and adds somewhat less than might have been expected to the already known facts of Mitchell's life. In consequence some of his controversies still remain shadowy." Carter Goodrich

+ — Am Econ R 19:480 S '29 1000w

Booklist 25:391 Jl '29

"Miss Glück has handled the many strains in the story extremely well. Herself familiar with the workings of trade unions, she has given a realistic picture of union politics, a vital factor in the story. The technicalities of the industry, in so far as they bear on issues and agreements, are easily and lucidly touched on. It is a story of the industry as well as of the miners' leader." J. A. Flexner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ap 21 '29 880w

Boston Transcript p10 My 25 '29 500w

"The biography is an excellent presentation of the economic background of American life in the eighties and nineties. It is more than that. It is a tale of the forces that created a leader." Theresa Wolfson

+ Nation 128:677 Je 5 '29 420w

"Miss Gluck's 'Life of John Mitchell' is more than a full-length portrait of a great labor leader; she has contrived to make it a vibrant epitome of an intensely dramatic phase of American history." R. W. Bruere

+ N Y Evening Post p10m My 4 '29 670w

GLUCK, ELSIE—Continued

"There can be no doubt that much research and a deal of hard work went into the making of this book. Unfortunately, Miss Glück's ability as a writer does not equal her zeal as a militant partisan of the cause of labor. She has gathered an abundance of material, but it is not well organized."

+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 7 '29 730w

"The book contributes little if anything to the common knowledge of the man and his work, certainly nothing of value that was not better told in the newspaper 'obituaries' that were printed following his death. One drops this book with a belief that Miss Gluck, at one time an organizer for the Cloakmakers International Union and more recently a teacher in the University of Wisconsin, was successful only in her choice of a subject and a title." J. J. Leary, Jr.

— N Y World p11m My 12 '29 350w

Outlook 152:468 Jl 17 '29 320w

"In an exceedingly sympathetic manner Elsie Glück has portrayed the life of one of the great labor leaders of the country. Although a slight assumption of some familiarity with the organization of the miners is present in the early pages of the book, nevertheless the very glossing over of the technical details of unionism has in itself contributed to the end the author has in view—an understanding of the character of the miners' leader." S. C. Wallace

+ Pol Sci Q 44:317 Je '29 120w

St Louis 27:271 S '29

"To understand the United Mine Workers of America, one must know the ten-year period that John Mitchell was its president. Elsie Gluck not only deals with the man in an interesting and sympathetic fashion, but presents him free from that mythology which so often mars the work of the sympathetic biographer. . . Her John Mitchell is a useful and informative work on a phase of a great union and the life of its most able and constructive leader." J: Brophy

+ Survey 62:204 My 1 '29 520w

Wis Lib Bul 25:159 My '29

"The story is splendidly told. . . There is light here for the student. It is a biography, of course, and not a history, but no such study of a major leader has been made for the modern reader." Martin Beardslee

+ World Tomorrow 12:281 Je '29 300w

GLUCK, SINCLAIR. Man who never blundered. 304p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Mills & B.]

29-4208

A beautiful girl and a young boy are kidnapped by a man who signs his frequent notes "the governor," and who prides himself on never making a blunder. With some amateur assistance the New York police department proves the governor is not infallible.

Bookm 69:xxvi Ap '29 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 10 '29 80w

"The story is quite preposterous, but it is full of action."

N Y Times p17 Ap 21 '29 140w

"The story, in some respects ordinary enough, in others is too far-fetched even for this kind of fiction, though no one who reads the book should claim it is wanting in interest and excitement."

— + N Y World p11m Mr 10 '29 120w

"We like Mr. Gluck's thrillers, although we feel that he's speeding up production a little too much. His first ones were better. Still, this is exciting enough." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 151:274 F 13 '29 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p669 S 20 '28 250w

GLUCK, SINCLAIR. Shadow in the house. 280p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Mills & B.]

29-17086

Harrison, millionaire, is shot by an arrow at his country estate. Since everyone of the household has practiced target-shooting, everyone is a suspect, and the detectives, Landis and Bernard, discover that a good many of them had strong motives to commit the crime. However there are very few clues, and little evidence. It is not until Graham, a young lawyer, is wounded by an arrow shot in the same manner as that which killed Harrison that Bernard discovers the murderer.

"Mr. Gluck has a most effective device for guarding his main secret. Moreover, the denouement is a surprise." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 25 '29 150w

"This is one of the best tales we have read in a long time. Mr. Gluck is a man of imagination. He makes the probable and possible serve his turn, which is always a comfort in a detective story. Nor does he deal overmuch in horrors."

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 28 '29 270w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 153:313 O 23 '29 80w

"A very good detective story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p669 Ag 29 '29 150w

GOD in the modern world; a symposium, by Dr A. A. David, G. A. Studdert-Kennedy, R. Ellis Roberts, and others. 290p $2.50 Dutton

230 Religion. God 29-7827

Distinguished Englishmen of different fields and faiths have contributed to this symposium of religious affirmations. Beginning with Dr David, Bishop of Liverpool, they are: G. A. Studdert-Kennedy, R. Ellis Roberts, Dr James M. Wilson, Viscount Haldane, Dr Percy Dearmer, R. G. Collingwood, L. W. Grensted, and Hugh Walpole.

"These essays are, of course, unequal in value, but they are capable of provoking thought in minds that still believe in thinking." C. M. Douglas

+ Churchman 139:16 Ap 20 '29 280w

Nation 128:567 My 8 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 9 '29 570w

GODDARD, HENRY HERBERT. School training of gifted children. 226p il $2 World bk.

371.95 Education of children. Ability. Precocity. Education—Ohio 28-14567

"The enriched curriculum as it has been worked out in the Cleveland schools is evaluated by Dr. Goddard and the methods presented for use in other school systems."—Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 25:105 D '28

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 F '29

Pratt p10 spring '29

R of Rs 78:adv29 Jl '28 180w

"The report should prove to be an inspiration to those interested in special classes for gifted children, but, whether interested or not in such classes, the teachers and supervisors who examine it carefully will gain many suggestions of value for more efficient education of the usual type. Dr. Goddard admits that he is a somewhat prejudiced observer, and, if he has erred in the report, it might seem that the error is one of over-enthusiasm." E. O. May

+ School R 37:233 Mr '29 600w

GODWIN, GEORGE STANLEY. Cain; or, The future of crime. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 108p $1 Dutton

364 Crime and criminals [29-17341]

A study of the problem of the treatment of criminals. The author attempts to define crime and the characteristics of the criminal in the light of past and present theories. He then takes up the history of punishment and prison conditions, with a brief account of the studies of modern scientists in relation to the physical and mental make-up of the criminal. The discoveries of modern science and their probable effect upon crimes of tomorrow conclude the book.

---

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 S 8 '29 130w
Nature 122:605 O 20 '28
New Statesman 31:196 My 19 '28 1650w

"Mr. Godwin glances at all the phases of this complicated and appalling problem and on each he has something to say that is suggestive and is evidently the outcome of much study and thought. Every one who is interested from any angle in the problem of crime will find Mr. Godwin's booklet stimulating and worth while."
+ N Y Times p14 Ag 4 '29 580w
Sat R 145:502 Ap 21 '28 230w

"Readable and provocative. Those unfamiliar with the subject apart from newspaper reports and ordinary gossip will find it stimulating."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p497 Jl 5 '28 800w

GODWIN, GEORGE STANLEY. Eternal forest; under western skies. 319p $2 Appleton [7s 6d P. Allen]
29-11749

The prologue tells how Captain Ferguson followed the River Fraser into virgin woods of Canada, found a likely place and made a clearing. The Fergusons vanished, leaving traces of their passing in the name of the settlement, Ferguson's Landing. The rest of the narrative is the story of the little community, and of the men and women who live out their lives in Ferguson's Landing.

---

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p9m Je 1 '29 80w
N Y Times p8 My 26 '29 480w

"The book is more notebook than novel. But it is of value, both accurately observed and economically written down."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1080 Je 1 '29 250w

"Mr. Godwin is essentially a story-teller—a rare thing in these days of nebulous novels—but he has tried to tell too many stories at once. His tale of the settlers in a Canadian Valley is crowded with interest, but the scene shifts continually." B. E. Todd
+ — Spec 142:633 Ap 20 '29 120w

"Mr. Godwin appears to know the people and the country well, and his descriptions of the technical side of the work of the pioneers are thoroughly interesting. . . Mr. Godwin attempts to describe intimately the lives of over fifteen people with the result that the reader's attention becomes wearied with tracing the various threads, which are only slightly related to each other. Nevertheless his picture of a community is impressive, and his style has something of the strength of the country of which he writes."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p457 Je 6 '29 150w

GOGH, VINCENT VAN. Further letters of Vincent Van Gogh to his brother, 1886-1889. ltd ed v 3 488p $7.50 Houghton [31s 6d Constable]
B or 92

"This completes the Van Gogh letters, two previous volumes of which were published in 1927. The earlier material covered the years 1872-1886; that at hand covers the last years of the artist's life, 1886-1890 (erroneously 1889 on the title page)."—N Y Times

---

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
Bookm 70:572 Ja '30 650w

"These letters together with the two other volumes comprise as intimate an autobiography of the spiritual struggles of man as has ever been penned. . . His letters belong among the great confessions of literature." T: Craven
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 D 15 '29 1200w

"These letters are monotonous with the anxious shifts of penury, warm with simple affection, and gay with impressionistic colour. Perhaps something will turn up; meanwhile, one must paint. . . Possibly this is the record of a neurotic character who had only himself to blame for what happened; and certainly it will have a place in the poignant literature of suffering." Barrington Gates
+ Nation and Ath 46:sup228 N 9 '29 420w

"This third and final volume of Van Gogh's letters to his brother Theodore is as full of interest as those which have already appeared. It completes one of the most moving testimonies in the history of art and of human experience."
+ New Statesman 34:229 N 23 '29 1500w

"It is not until Van Gogh arrives at Arles, where so much of his most important work was done, that the narrative, stabbed with flashes of true wisdom, even of wit, becomes genuinely gripping. The letters written during these fevered, crowded, essentially tragic months are of absorbing interest, heartbreaking, and—though all this represents life, not fiction—they weave a story possessing the structure elements of good drama." E: A. Jewell
+ N Y Times p4 D 8 '29 1000w
Sat R 148:520 N 2 '29 130w

"These letters make painful but heroic reading. . . For here is the story, naked and unashamed, of the conflict of spirit and flesh. But it is the story told in terms of the Olympians." R: Church
+ Spec 143:634 N 2 '29 1300w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '29 1300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p813 O 17 '29 1400w

GOGOL, NIKOLAI VASILIEVICH. Mirgorod; tr. from the Russian by Constance Garnett. (Collected works) 320p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Chatto & W.]
29-13373

The volume contains four short stories. The first, "Old world landowners" is a sketch of two old people on a country estate. "Taras Bulba," the longest of the stories, is a romantic tale of a Cossack chieftain. "Viy," a story of the chief of the gnomes, is drawn from peasant lore. The last story is summed up in its title, "How Ivan Ivanovitch quarrelled with Ivan Nikiforovitch."

---

"Many critics have called the tale Homeric—with a minor Byronic blemish in its irrelevantly romantic love episode—and its scenes of fighting, looting, boasting, feasting, torture and heroic death preserve a most picturesque barbaric tradition. It is a paean of Russian strength." Dorothy Brewster
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 5 '29 850w

"It has been described as an epic in poetic prose and the best historical novel of its time. In 'Taras Bulba' no attempt is made at historical accuracy, and the date of his story cannot be fixed with exactness. 'Its place in Russian literature is unique,' says Prince Mirsky."
+ Boston Transcript p9e Jl 3 '29 260w

"If you want to see what a great writer Gogol was and what some of the elements are which make for the greatness of Russian novels, you should read the recently published volume of his short stories." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 44:654 F 9 '29 240w

"Mirgorod is a collection of Gogol's stories of which the best and longest is 'Taras Bulba.' They are all confident, racy and redolent of the golden age when writers in Russia had the good fortune to be eminent, but not Victorian. The book is readable, and well translated. There is something gaily epic about it too." Cyril Connolly
+ New Statesman 32:471 Ja 19 '29 50w

"Such is Gogol's vitality and zest for life that nothing intimidates it, death least of all. He has a strong, but not subtle sense of humor, and he sees mankind in terms of their humours, not in terms of right and wrong. Almost alone of the great Russian novelists he is a sanguine writer: sanguine and sanguinary." L. P. Hartley

GOGOL, N. V.—Continued
Sat R 146:824 D 15 '28 230w
Reviewed by R. A. Taylor
Spec 141:828 D 1 '28 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p930 N 29 '28 1700w

GOIN' home, and other plays of the 1927 contest. 295p $2.50 Longmans
812.08 29-26263

The prize play in the Longmans, Green contest of 1927, Ransom Rideout's Goin' home, gives its title to this collection of six plays submitted in the contest. The first two are full length, the remaining four, one-act plays. Contents: Goin' home, by Ransom Rideout; The millionaire, by J. W. Tompkins; Strings, by Raymond Knight; The machine age, by Estella Kelley; Spring sluicing, by A. H. Ernst; Roads, by A. E. Peterson.

Booklist 25:278 Ap '29
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 F 17 '29 100w

"The title play, 'Goin' Home,' written by Ransom Rideout, of the English faculty of the University of California, seems a particularly striking piece of work."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 11 '29 230w

"Ransom Rideout's war play with interracial complications gives title to the volume. It is magnificently dramatic and somewhat less profane than 'What Price Glory.' Even a little progress in that direction ought to be appreciated."
+ Christian Century 46:589 My 1 '29 60w

"The 1927 National Playwriting Content, conducted by the Drama League of America and the play department of Longmans, was not exceedingly fruitful, judging by the four plays recently published in a single volume: Goin' Home." Edwin Seaver
— + N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 5 '29 200w
Theatre Arts Mo 13:386 My '29 60w
Wis Lib Bul 25:72 F '29

GOLD, MICHAEL. 120 million. 192p $1.50 Int. pub.
29-3997

Poignant sketches of the American worker and the bitterness of his life. By the editor of the New Masses.

"They are sincere, vivid, dramatic, the earliest ones are without self-consciousness, written out of passionate conviction, unstylized; and the book as a whole is romantic to a degree. Mr. Gold has flattered the rich by endowing them with enough imagination to wish to tread on the poor and to rejoice that they are doing so. And, by contrast, the poor he endows with nobility, generosity and tenderness, or sets down their want of these virtues to their poverty." Dorothy Van Doren
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 21 '29 430w
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 23 '29 130w

"He will represent for posterity even more than he does for the present the proletarian writer in one of his most curious and genuine forms. There is something candid about Gold's writing, singularly candid I should say, in which affectation is as alien as elegance. If one should describe Gold's writing as crude, one would have to admit that it is challenging in its very crudity." V. F. Calverton
+ — Nation 128:675 Je 5 '29 300w

"This book contains some of the best and some of the worst possible work of what seems to me, potentially at the least, to be a major talent. All of the pieces show a deep and conscious preoccupation with the American working class and the proletarian revolutionary movement; but whereas some spring from his own full, accurate, passionate perception and just intuition, others are tailored to meet a pattern of 'proletarian literature' and propaganda." M. P. Levy
+ — New Repub 58:79 Mr 6 '29 350w

"The inaccurate, unobservant caricaturing of the figures of wealth and the sentimentalizing of the figures of poverty reflect adversely upon Mr. Gold's artistic ability."
+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 11 '29 520w

"For some reason the semi-poetic form appears to check Mr. Gold's fine frenzy of hate as well as his imagination, and these declamatory pieces are tame compared to the crude and violent, but very real, work in straight prose."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1030 My 18 '29 200w

"The book has significance in that it reflects the belligerent class-consciousness and the 'hell-bent-for-revolution' state of mind of an increasingly large number of the younger working class, an aim which may in the not too distant future be realized unless our myopic nation bends itself to the task of bringing about a more equitable distribution of industrial and economic profits." G. E. M.
World Tomorrow 12:315 Jl '29 220w

GOLDER, FRANK ALFRED; BAILEY, THOMAS ANDREW; and SMITH, JOHN LYMAN, eds. March of the Mormon battalion from Council Bluffs to California; taken from the journal of Henry Standage. 295p il $3.50 Century
973.6 Mormons and Mormonism. United States—History—War with Mexico. Standage, Henry 28-23976

" 'The March of the Mormon Battalion' is the story of the westward journey of a body of men recruited from the Mormons of Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1846, to fight in the Mexican War. It is told through the medium of the diary of Henry Standage, a member of the Battalion, and other contemporary documents." —Outlook

Booklist 25:243 Mr '29
Boston Transcript p7 D 15 '28 220w
Churchman 139:28 Ja 5 '29 20w

"The journal is quaint and stirring pioneer reading, and presents a picture of much interest in itself."
+ N Y Times p24 D 2 '28 420w

"A fine picture of a stirring period." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv D '28 50w

"In addition to the adventures encountered along the way, the author paints an interesting and authoritative picture of California and the Old West before the days of the Gold Rush." M. B.
+ Outlook 150:1332 D 12 '28 100w
Wis Lib Bul 24:340 D '28

GOLDING, LOUIS. Prince or somebody. 266p $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf
29-9645

A story of macabre sex thralldom, with a touch of the bizarre in both characters and setting. Whether Fyodor is a Prince or not makes no difference to Merryl. At their first meeting love sprang, full-fledged, between them. Some time later a friend comes upon them in the Austrian Alps and, urged to live with them, witnesses the end of the affair. Merryl's love is generous, free; Fyodor's is a compound of passion, hatred and jealousy. But terrible as is the consequence of their dark passion neither one nor the other would be free from it.

"Smooth and scintillating, as well as diverting, foolery." Mary Ross
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 28 '29 650w

"Mr. Golding's best book to date. It will have accomplished its task if it has succeeded in pointing out that he is doing something which no other British or American novelist is doing; that his work has an independent and incalculable quality, a flavor underived and untransmittable." C. P. Fadiman
+ Nation 129:68 Jl 17 '29 780w

"It is not too much to say that in this novel Mr. Golding has simply gone to pieces. The theme, a man's jealousy for the past of the woman he loves, has scarcely been touched in English fiction, but Mr. Golding has not taken advantage of his opportunity as an innovator. He might even have done better if he had treated his theme pretentiously, but he has chosen to be alternately sentimental, facetious, and melodramatic."

— Nation and Ath 45:408 Je 22 '29 180w

"The story carries on to the end gayly and dramatically without slipping once from its plane of high comedy. . . In his rich development of the comic possibilities of his story Mr. Golding does not neglect its careful construction. All events are foreshadowed. Each spasm of laughter or terror fits neatly into the pattern. Mr. Golding has set himself definite limitations and has played about joyously within them." A. M. Stein

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 20 '29 600w

"Here is a theme somewhat out of the ordinary; and Louis Golding succeeds in making it interesting if not always quite plausible. As a study in abnormal psychology, it is arresting even though not penetrating, as a gently mocking and slightly amused study of two individuals in a somewhat curious relationship, it attains that air of sophistication and of worldly wisdom which the author no doubt intended."

+ — N Y Times p14 Ap 28 '29 500w

"It is all very cleverly done—very delightful. The author writes in the 'disinterested observer' vein. It is one of his favorite attitudes, and never fails to charm us."

+ N Y World p11m Ap 28 '29 250w

"Not the least bewildering thing about this book is why Mr. Golding should waste his graceful gift of prose upon such nonsense. . . The book is not pointed for satire. Nor for tragedy although there is bleak tragedy in it. Therein lies probably Mr. Golding's most serious fault as a novelist. One never knows what he meant to do."

— + Outlook 152:30 My 1 '29 230w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Sat R 147:806 Je 15 '29 200w

"Mr. Louis Golding has the extraordinary good fortune to employ under the banner of his name, and in his single person a whole army of artists. There are at least two novelists: Louis the mystic, the cabalist, the hagiographer; and Golding the romantic, the poet, the lad-in-love-with-the-lady-in-the-fairy-tale. There are, besides, the traveler, and the scholar; and finally, Golding of Oxford. 'The Prince or Somebody,' is by the romantic Golding; and it seems to me the happiest of his books." Robert Nathan

+ Sat R of Lit 5:949 Ap 27 '29 650w

"Comedy is dominant. . . The whole affair is told with much brio, and some mocking tenderness. One of the most lovable characters is Boris, a dog." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 142:908 Je 8 '29 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p472 Je 13 '29 880w

GOLDING, LOUIS. Those ancient lands; being a journey to Palestine. 274p il $4.50 Knopf [12s 6d Benn]

915.69 Palestine—Description and travel [29-9044]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Boston Transcript p1 Je 22 '29

---

Bookm 68:xii Ja '29 200w

"Other writers have threaded their way among the Jewish colonies which are slowly transforming the hills and arid plains of Palestine and come away with their impressions carefully sorted and neatly tied with statistics. These 'exacter pens than mine,' as Louis Golding calls them, need the corroboration of the poet's vision, the testimony of a mind and an eye alive to the inner significance of outward facts. It is this service which Mr. Golding renders to the cause and it is a service of eloquence and significance." Lisle Bell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 F 17 '29 550w

"Not alone for its beauty of style is 'Those Ancient Lands' noteworthy. The material itself is of absorbing interest. From the moment the journey begins till it is ended, there is much to enthrall and delight." C. K. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 22 '28 300w

"Mr. Golding makes of Palestine a pleasant place though he seeks to make it inspiring. He cannot arouse in the reader a sense of its contemporary validity because for him it is too insistently the archaic treasure-house of our Hebrew ancestors or the eventual Utopia of our Jewish grandchildren." Johan Smertenko

— + Nation 129:278 S 11 '29 300w

"If Dante was the voice of ten silent and Catholic centuries, this Oxford-bred Jew is the subtle mouthpiece of the twenty tangled and inarticulate centuries of the Diaspora, or dispersal." J: Chamberlain

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 13 '29 920w

St Louis 27:136 Ap '29

"There is much to provoke thought in this brilliantly written book."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 15 '29 600w

GOLDRING, DOUGLAS. People and places. 326p $3 Houghton

910 Balearic islands. Montenegro. United States—Description and travel 29-11476

Sketches of travel in the Balearic isles, the Riviera, Montenegro, Italy and Brittany, with some notes on a visit to the United States.

---

Booklist 26:26 O '29

"Here is a record of a gallant attempt to plunge headforemost and completely, if for a very short time, into various not too visited places, and for the duration of the visit to become as closely identified with the country as is allowed to an ordinary mortal of British birth." L: Colman

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 26 '29 320w

"Sophisticated without cynicism, sociable and sympathetic, Mr. Goldring has given his book an apt title, for it is by people that he remembers places. . . Always he recalls some person whom the reader, too, will thereafter associate with the place." R. C. B. Brown

+ N Y Evening Post p8m Je 1 '29 380w

"Traveling with Mr. Goldring does not consist of looking at the view alone. He has made it a point to get to know the people on the islands of Mallorca, Ibiza or in Montenegro. His impressions abound in many a well-turned character sketch. . . Various bits of folklore are interwoven with uncommon tales of history, and this association of items makes Goldring's journeys rich reading."

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 25 '29 580w

"Douglas Goldring writes with sophistication and ease, has an eye for the bizarre, the unique and the absurd, and a nice sense of humor which enlivens his observations."

+ Outlook 152:147 My 22 '29 80w

"Mr. Goldring travels with a happy and observant eye. As a consequence his chronicles are more often than not amusing—certainly they are when they deal with out-of-the-way places."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1061 My 25 '29 280w

"It may be said that he just talks, yet he talks so pleasantly and with so much clever sophistication that one does not weary of his conversation. It is the people in various places rather than the places themselves that form the chief topics of conversation in Mr Goldring's book."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 22 '29 580w

Wis Lib Bul 25:275 Jl '29

GOLDSCHMIDT, ADOLPH. German illumination. (Pantheon ser.) 2v pl $63 Harcourt [£9 9s Pegasus press]

096 Illumination of books and manuscripts 29-12169

Survey of the art of German manuscript illumination from the reign of Charlemagne at the end of the eighth century to the revival of learning in the monasteries toward the close of the reign of Otto I in the eleventh century. "A concise introductory essay gives a crisp account of the more complicated questions of relationship involved; then the real show begins in the form of plates left with their captions to tell their own story." (Sat R of Lit)

"Dr. Goldschmidt gives the completest picture hitherto drawn of the artistic movements which the Renaissance of Charlemagne brought into play. The fact that many of these illuminated manuscripts either remain in their original homes or that we can trace their movements from monastery to monastery enables him to work out the interaction of different styles with some detail." Roger Fry

+ Nation and Ath 45:48 Ap 13 '29 200w

"It might seem at the first glance as though a work on the Carolingian and Ottovian illuminators would not carry great interest to any but the specialists of that branch of art with which it deals. It is, however, an admirable feature of these Pegasus monographs that their authors have broken the mould of the old dry-as-dust commentator. . . In the hands of such a guide [as Dr Goldschmidt], the stiff hieratic figures of the plates take on a new reality." T. W. E.

+ New Statesman 33:48 Ap 20 '29 320w

Reviewed by E: A. Jewell

N Y Times p20 Ag 25 '29 130w

"Every one knows that Dr. Goldschmidt's erudition is unequalled among living medievalists. These books must be accounted the most notable recent contributions to the history of art. . . The plates are of quite extraordinary excellence, attaining indeed a new high-water mark in the art of reproduction." A. K. Porter

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1045 My 25 '29 1800w

"These splendid books are admirably reproduced, and include details, in many cases specially photographed for the work. The plates again are comfortably associated—generally by a running rubric—with the text, which is concise and scholarly."

+ Spec 142:829 My 25 '29 400w

"These two fine volumes are the work of one of the sanest and best-equipped of writers on early medieval art; no better guide than Dr. Goldschmidt could have been chosen. Into a very small compass—the introductions to the two volumes do not fill sixty pages between them—he has managed to compress the results of a lifetime of study."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p289 Ap 11 '29 1100w

GOLDSMITH, ELIZABETH EDWARDS. Ancient pagan symbols. 220p il $3 (12s 6d) Putnam

291 Symbolism. Mythology. Art and mythology 29-7583

A brief account of some of the more prominent symbols and symbolic figures found in the religious art of the earlier civilizations, such symbols as the lotus, tree of life, cross, serpent, sacred animals, triads, triangle, etc.

Booklist 26:19 O '29

"The brief and compact account given by Miss Goldsmith of the numerous symbols with which art, life and religion have made us familiar is extremely valuable."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '29 240w

"This well-illustrated little book should prove useful, though its information is not always as austere and scientific as is desirable in a work of reference. The author is inclined to be lyrical in expression and emotional in thought, which is a drawback when so many of the matters discussed are related to the mysticism of primitive peoples, upon which the coldest of cold reason needs to be cast if the darkness is to be illuminated. Allowing, however, for this fault, the book has many merits. The author is widely read, and in a somewhat desultory way has covered a wide field."

+ — New Statesman 33:560 Ag 10 '29 110w

"Plentifully illustrated, with a chapter for each symbol and its derivatives, Miss Goldsmith's book is informative and usable." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 6 '29 60w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 21 '29 120w

"The book is not distinguished by any really scholarly study of the religions or folklore of the different races involved, but reads like a miscellaneous collection of notes brought together without sufficient criticism."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p767 O 3 '29 160w

GOLDSMITH, MARGARET. Frederick the Great. (Paper bks.) 218p il pa 75c Boni [12s 6d Gollancz]

B or 92 Frederick II, the Great, king of Prussia [29-10687]

In the modern biographical manner Miss Goldsmith has presented Frederick the Great as a victim of an unhappy childhood and youth, and as an emotionally abnormal individual.

Boston Transcript p7 D 14 '29 230w

"As a work of art, the book does not reach any very great heights, but it is free from affectation and is invariably in good taste. . . But here lies the weakness of the book; the thing one never learns from it is how and in what Frederick was really great—one is never made to feel a truly powerful personality; he passes almost ghost-like, a dark, frozen shadow, a picture of mute suffering."

— + Nation and Ath 45:250 My 18 '29 150w

"We have searched through her book to find a single new fact: we toiled all night and caught nothing. It is true, as she says, that few people have the leisure to study Carlyle; but—to mention but one of her predecessors—she has added nothing to Mr. Reddaway's admirable account in the Heroes of the Nations series, and she has omitted much of importance that Mr. Reddaway has told. The battle scenes, in particular, are altogether inadequate; and the narrative of the war of the Bavarian succession is confused."

— New Statesman 32:544 F 2 '29 120w

"It is a biography in the traditional sense, although unencumbered by many details and very pleasantly written. But her book is excellent reading, devoid of sensationalism, impartial and genial. Those who are interested in Frederick the Great and have not the leisure to read Carlyle's six huge volumes will become acquainted with a living Frederick in Miss Goldsmith's biography." Emil Lengyel

+ N Y Times p36 N 17 '29 400w

"The brevity of the work should not lead anyone to undervalue its scholarly content; for the author had access to the source material on Frederick's life and all her training had equipped her for the task of writing a biography that should be accurate, as well as terse and readable. This book combines all three qualities."

+ R of Rs 81:17 Ja '30 100w

"Miss Goldsmith's book is a successful essay in the latest biographical manner. It is light, readable, interesting, and not, as far as we have noticed, inaccurate. Miss Goldsmith is wisely content to tell her story simply, without too much heavy underlining of passages for the sake of dramatic effect."

+ Sat R 147:290 Mr 2 '29 450w

Spec 142:287 F 23 '29 200w

"Miss Goldsmith has written what is in effect an essay of about 40,000 words, and has chosen perhaps wisely, to devote herself mainly to his character. In this respect she has achieved considerable success, but it is at the cost of comparative neglect of political affairs and almost complete neglect of military affairs. . . Yet the man himself emerges."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p151 F 28 '29 700w

GOLDSTEIN, BENJAMIN FRANKLIN. Marketing: a farmer's problem. 330p $3.50 (15s) Macmillan

338.1 Grain trade. Warehouses 28-25054

A history of the marketing of grain in the United States from 1828 to the present time. Surveys the history and development of water and railroad transportation and warehouse facilities, with special emphasis on the effect of the World war; recounts the legal history of attempted governmental regulation of grain marketing, and the various movements for farm relief, especially the Granger movement.

---

"As a case study of the chief grain market in the United States, and in its emphasis upon historical factors in explaining existing affairs, the work has something in common with the sociological approach and the cultural point of view. It thus differs from the usual volume on farm marketing, and should be suggestive and stimulating to further research in that field." T: C. McCormick

+ Am J Soc 35:337 S '29 250w

Booklist 25:269 Ap '29

"Critical students of farm relief, but more especially those interested in the marketing of grain, will find this book a storehouse of information."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 12 '29 300w

Reviewed by Herbert Gaston

N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 12 '29 450w

"The book is narrative, rather than analytical, but contains a large amount of information for the economist." Mildred Hartsough

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 25 '29 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p456 Je 6 '29 160w

Wis Lib Bul 25:70 F '29

GOLLOMB, JOSEPH. Subtle trail; another goldfish story. 276p $2 Macmillan

29-22692

Galt, psychoanalyst, discovers the use to which Colonel Granger's claustrophobia was put in connection with his death. His task in the story is to find the egotist responsible for Granger's death. By playing, psychologically, upon this man's greed and strange ambition, Galt brings about a final, poetic justice.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 24 '29 170w

"Well written, exciting, unusual." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:351 O 30 '29 40w

"It is a readable novel but not really a good detective story. Mr. Gollomb asks us to accept too many things which strain our sense of reality. It doesn't make his novel less readable but it does make it less artistic."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:491 N 30 '29 150w

GONCHAROV, IVAN ALEKSANDROVICH. Oblomov; tr. from the Russian by Natalie A. Duddington. 525p $3 Macmillan [10s 6d Allen & U.]

"Oblomov" was published in 1858, and has since ranked as a classic in Russia; the word "Oblomovism" is used by Russians as commonly as "Babbittry" in America, to characterize a specific type. The book has no plot: it is essentially a character study. It opens with Ilya Ilyitch Oblomov lying in his dressing-gown in bed lazily berating Zahar, his servant, for not cleaning up the flat. Oblomov, thruout the story, remains in a dressing-gown state of mind: he drifts, he daydreams, he makes no decisions, he is incapable of facing facts. Olga, a young girl, falls in love with him, but he does nothing about it. He ends by marrying his landlady.

---

"The book, despite the fact that it has little or no plot, no incidents, not very good 'characters,' nothing remarkable about its style, must be counted among the greatest novels. This absurd story about a lazy man who sleeps his life away in an old dressing-gown is transformed by the patient, subtle, relentless art of Goncharov into something tremendously exciting. Sentence by sentence, it is built up into a form of amazing sweep and vastness, a great epic, a terrible comedy, into one of those great works of art in which no one can say exactly where the tragedy begins and the comedy ends." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 46:318 N 30 '29 700w

Reviewed by Don Ryan

N Y Evening Post p7s Ja 4 '30 750w

"Goncharov's great novel, the second and a long way the best of the three he wrote, is something more than a classic of Russian literature. It is an embodiment of one side of the Russian character, an apotheosis of one aspect of the Russian soul. . . There is nothing else in Russian fiction which achieves the same effect of mental decay and fatalistic sentiment as 'Oblomov' or which is as illustrative of the negative habit of thought inherent in some degree or other in so many types of Russian temperament."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p919 N 14 '29 1000w

GOOD, CARTER VICTOR. How to do research in education; a handbook for the graduate student, research worker, and public-school investigator. 298p il $2.50 Warwick & York

370.1 Educational research. Dissertations, Academic 28-21644

"Materials relating to the various aspects of educational research are gathered from a wide variety of sources and are organized around such topics as 'Sources of Information,' 'Characteristics of Scientific Investigations,' 'Selecting and Defining a Problem for Investigation,' 'Technics Available for the Collection of Data,' 'The Organization and Interpretation of Data,' and 'Reporting Educational Research.' Quotations, summaries of studies, and citations to articles are used freely to develop the various topics, and a large amount of material is brought together."—School R

---

"One who does three years of graduate work in the department of education of the University of Chicago has usually served an illuminating apprenticeship in the activities of the world of scholarshp. And when he goes forth from the institution he is often better prepared than the faculty itself to describe and characterize these activities because of the vividness and recency of his consciousness of them. Such has been Dr. Good's preparation for writing this suggestive and informative volume." Franklin Bobbitt

+ Am J Soc 35:153 Jl '29 230w

Reviewed by W. S. Monroe

El School J 29:228 N '28 620w

"The book is somewhat disappointing, most of the disappointment growing out of certain dangers that characterize attempts to bring together material from a variety of sources A most important phase of the training of the research worker consists in preparing him to judge an article as to the soundness of the fundamental assumptions involved. This phase of the training in research has been but lightly considered in the book under discussion. Furthermore, when one makes a collection of materials from various authors, it is necessary to unify the materials since they frequently represent different points of view. This unification has been only partly accomplished." R. H Ojemann

— + School R 37:153 F '29 750w

GOODE, KENNETH MACKARNESS. How to turn people into gold; foreword by E. St Elmo Lewis. 221p $3.50 (12s 6d) Harper

658 Marketing. Business. Advertising
29-18138

Mr Goode tells how to advertise to get results. A knowledge of selling involves a knowledge of human nature: to create increased markets one must use the jiujitsu of advertisement. The book contains a number of practical suggestions for the advertiser.

Booklist 26:106 D '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 O 20 '29 200w

"Mr. Goode writes with a facile pen and with very great knowledge and he nimbly turns his theme round and round and views it on every facet and extracts from every angle something of interest for those who deal in any sort of merchandise. It is all done interestingly and convincingly and his pages are filled with illustrative instances, with argumentative figures and proving percentages. And on every subject that he treats he has fresh and sometimes startling ideas which will set his readers thinking."

+ N Y Times p30 S 22 '29 500w

GOODMAN of Paris (Le ménagier de Paris); a treatise on moral and domestic economy by a citizen of Paris; now first tr. into English with an introd. and notes by Eileen Power. (Broadway medieval lib.) 348p il $4 Harcourt [12s 6d Routledge]

914.4 Conduct of life. Home economics. France—Social life and customs. Cookery, French 29-26486

This quaint book, now for the first time translated into English, was written between 1392 and 1394 by a wealthy Parisian for the instruction of his young wife of fifteen. The first section deals with religious and moral duties and the ideal of womanly behavior, the second with household management and cooking.

Booklist 25:355 Je '29

"The value of the text is beyond dispute. Even to glance at the table of contents, prefixed to the translations, is to realize the range and practicality of the husband's instruction. Of all sections in the Ménagier's book that on the preparation and service of food is sure to command the widest interest among all readers save dyspeptics. Some of his recipes are mysterious today but his menus are uniformly impressive." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 18 '29 700w

"By her translation of this work Miss Power has rent the obscure veil of fourteenth century domestic French life, and has presented a vividly life-like picture of human nature." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 9 '29 750w

"Eileen Power's translation of 'The Goodman of Paris' accomplishes with great suavity and charm a task which must have presented innumerable technical difficulties. Miss Power has introduced the treatise with an historical commentary which is almost as instructive and delightful as the Goodman's own words." Freda Kirchwey

+ Nation 128:285 Mr 6 '29 1050w

"Much of it is long-winded, and its matter familiar to students of mediæval books and art. Yet it is so crammed with intimate details of everyday life, and translated into such readable archaic English, that we can dip into it again and again with renewed gratitude to Miss Power for so charmingly making it known to us."

+ Nation and Ath 44:662 F 9 '29 450w

"The records of his specimen dinner-parties, the flowers and vegetables in his garden, the medicines and home-made recipes, clothes, furniture and servants, give a vivid and unique picture of life in a fourteenth-century townhouse."

+ New Statesman 32:472 Ja 19 '29 750w

"The teacher of medieval history who passed this volume on the Fourteenth Century around among his pupils, while reading aloud to them from 'The Goodman of Paris,' would not find the class's attention wandering."

+ Outlook 152:549 Jl 31 '29 100w

"The entire volume is of exceeding interest, but the second, in especial, which sets forth the whole duty of woman as wife and housekeeper and which is a portrayal of the manner of regulation of a well-ordered medieval household, makes entrancing reading. We recommend it to all who would gain an insight into a long-past age."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:786 Mr 16 '29 150w

"Miss Eileen Power's readers may indeed be grateful to her for acting as interpreter between them and this delightful bourgeois of fourteenth century Paris."

+ Spec 142:23 Ja 5 '29 980w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1024 D 27 '29 1000w

GOODSPEED, EDGAR JOHNSON. University of Chicago chapel. 64p il $1 Univ. of Chicago press [5s Cambridge univ. press]

726.4 Chicago. University. Chapel 29-8827

"The dedication of the new chapel of the University of Chicago on Oct. 28 [1928] marked the completion of one of the noblest monuments of American architecture, a structure of true cathedral proportions and dignity. A descriptive guide book to this building, including a description of the plastic decorations which are one of its most notable features, has been written by Professor Edgar J. Goodspeed."—Christian Century

"Mr. Goodspeed's account is far more readable than is the usual guide to a great building and will interest not only architects but those who know the university."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 26 '28 200w

"Not only members of the university community but all who are interested in religious architecture will find it a worthy introduction to this significant and beautiful building." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 45:1331 N 1 '28 120w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 8 '28 700w

GOODWIN, ERNEST. Don Cristobal. 300p $2 Dodd
29-17047

While gallant Don Cristobal de Zaurigi is languishing in jail at Seville, a nefarious cousin who has adopted Cristobal's name abducts a young and high born Spanish girl and carries her off to an inn. Cristobal meanwhile escapes from jail and by a happy chance arrives at the inn on the night of the abduction. Tho he is but one honest gentleman against a crew of rascals Don Cristobal attempts a rescue and is thereupon plunged into such a train of desperate adventure as to delight his shrewd mind and romantic heart.

"The action is swift and continuous; and a good adventurously romantic time is enjoyed by all."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 23 '29 230w

"The story is delightfully told, and its very likable hero is a most welcome addition to our list of fictional acquaintances."

+ N Y Times p7 Je 16 '29 520w

GOODWIN, JOHN. Let it lie. 358p $2 Putnam
29-6790

The bride of a struggling English playwright sets herself to solve an old family mystery concerning a buried treasure. As a result of her diggings in the cellar she places her husband under suspicion of murder, from which her astute American uncle, a retired police commissioner, is with difficulty able to free him.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 31 '29 90w

"Although it is a trifle slow in getting under way, this story presents some interesting problems. There is a rather obvious attempt to deceive the reader by directing suspicion toward the wrong person—so obvious indeed, that it defeats its own purpose."
+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 21 '29 200w

"Mr. Goodwin holds the suspense up well, gives us a pleasant English atmosphere for the action, and writes as if he expected us to be fairly perceptive."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:935 Ap 20 '29 130w

GOODWIN, JOHN. Sealed orders. 371p $2 Putnam
29-16772

Felicia Drew was to inherit a fortune of two million on her twenty-first birthday. Had it not been for Anthony Kilpatrick, whom she hired as skipper on the yacht Arrow, sailing under sealed orders after the mysterious murder of Felicia's uncle, she might have lost both life and fortune. A gang of crooks, a rum-runner, and a scrappy Scotch engineer help to provide thrills for the tale.

---

Bookm 70:xxxiv O '29 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 25 '29 110w

"It is a quickly moving tale of love and adventure, told in a way that carries the reader along till the end is reached and leaves him well satisfied with the outcome." G. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 25 '29 380w

GOOLDEN, BARBARA. Waking bird. 306p $2.50 Day [7s 6d Chapman & H.]
29-22134

A story of first love set against a background of second love and second marriage. Drusilla and Lou, at seventeen and eighteen, are shyly and fervently attracted to each other. Drusilla's aunt, at forty, is carrying on a love affair with a fat and middle-aged gentleman; Lou's mother, whom he adores, runs away with a man some years her junior. These happenings introduce a bewildering and sordid note into the first-love experience of the young people. Drusilla is helped to a better understanding by the sane wisdom of her father, and Lou goes back to college.

---

"It is delicately and firmly handled, restrained and true. One might almost call it a bright tragedy. The characters, tending in all cases to become types, are nevertheless sufficiently realized to be interesting. The style is deft, the treatment economical."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 N 10 '29 280w

"She follows none of the over-capitalized theories as to sex and parent complexes but constructs a natural situation and an unstrained combination of possibilities that are refreshingly inoffensive in their details. It may not be too much to say that Miss Goolden has explained some of Hamlet's complexities in this unpretentious little tale. As a sympathetic study of youth's feelings and phases it is very welcome."
+ Boston Transcript p2 N 6 '29 400w

"Miss Goolden's novel is silly rather than vulgar, and no one not interested in Love should attempt to read it, for amorousness in one or other of its forms supplies all topics of conversation, all motives for action, and any ideas that it contains." L. L. Irvine
Nation and Ath 45:711 Ag 31 '29 50w

"Miss Goolden has succeeded in creating a pathetic little story about something beautiful that was foredoomed to failure. In order to make her boy and girl as young as she wants them, she has been forced to endow them with youthful spontaneities which will make the reader a little impatient, even while he recognizes their necessity."
+ — N Y Times p24 O 13 '29 550w

"A book that makes no pretense to particular importance, 'The Waking Bird' is a delicately done picture of youth upon the dark way toward disenchantment." Jonathan Daniels
+ Sat R of Lit 6:510 D 7 '29 300w

"Miss Goolden is a cool, sane critic of the modern scene, and nothing she writes is without its dignity and sense. This charming novel would have been something much more if the story had not been controlled by a relationship between son and mother in which Miss Goolden cannot quite make us believe."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p796 O 10 '29 250w

GORDON, DOROTHY, ed. Sing it yourself; collection of folk songs from "The young people's concert hour"; with a foreword by George H. Gartlan. 82p il $3.50 Dutton
784.4 Folk-songs. Songs 28-30036

Indian, colonial, and plantation songs from America and folk songs from the British Isles, France, Germany, Norway and Russia are here with words, music, explanatory legend and illustrations, ready for the youthful singer and a possibly adult accompanist. A beautiful book and a delightful collection, with the exception of a few difficult or uninteresting selections.

---

Booklist 25:325 My '29

"The difficulty with the book for young people is that so much of the music is intricate for youngsters to play. In fact, some of the accompaniments would be hard for any amateur to play, but should children find able pianists to accompany them they will love singing these songs themselves, as they are so bidden in the title. It is distinctly a well-made and well-selected collection." M. G. Bonner
+ N Y Times p28 D 16 '28 130w

St Louis 27:164 My '29

"There is so much beauty to be found in this volume from a few staves of music that the occasional unworthy song seems unnecessarily conspicuous. In the eighty-two large printed pages, only twenty-eight contain music, and those are often only half-pages. There must, of course, be room for text and illustration, but after remaining long in the companionship of 'Sing It Yourself' one cannot refrain from wishing that there had been more music and far less talk." L. D. Mannes
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:484 D 8 '28 800w

GORDON, JAN, and GORDON, CORA JOSEPHINE (MRS JAN GORDON). On wandering wheels; through roadside camps from Maine to Georgia in an old sedan car. 336p il $3.50 Dodd [12s 6d Lane]
917.3 United States—Description and travel. Atlantic states—Description and travel
28-29806

From Maine to Georgia the Gordons wandered in a rackety sedan in search of romantic America. In this happy collaboration of word and picture they write of incidents and encounters by the way,—in motor camps, along broad highway and narrow detour, in city home and farm house, at county fair and negro camp meeting—unanimously deciding from all these experiences that America is still one of the most romantic of countries.

---

Booklist 25:244 Mr '29

"There is a freshness in their viewpoint which will delight the weary reader. This is an admirable 'anti-Babbitt book,' a rare and amusing commentary on American life."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Ja 27 '29 180w

GORDON, J., and GORDON, C. J.—Continued

"Readers familiar with the European vagabondings of the Gordons will hasten to share these. And if they fear the impressions gathered cannot be as 'romantic' as those of France and Albania and Spain, because 'America is no longer romantic,' the Gordons reassure them." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 22 '28 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p70 My '29

"Their book is full of shrewd sense, and of unfailing humour; and the authors' sketches—there is unhappily only one illustration in colour this time—add greatly to its charm."

+ New Statesman 32:676 Mr 2 '29 200w

"In essence their book is a deftly mannered sketch of American folk life, not written, as so many visitor's diaries, either in malice or charity, but rather in a spirit of friendly inquiry, with a quotient of dry humor and accurate observation that stamps the volume as a self-revealing and entertaining contribution to our library of books about ourselves." Halsey Raines

+ N Y Times p11 Ja 6 '29 1450w

"These two English artists are keen observers of the American scene and they have done some clever character studies of typical American types." G: Joel

+ N Y World p11m F 10 '29 80w

"Shrewd, sensible, slyly humorous, cheerfully tolerant, they see and report on everything from artists' colonies to cotton fields, and discover much that is still picturesque in the American rural scene. The illustrations, in black and white and color, are charming."

+ Outlook 150:1373 D 19 '28 120w

"We are indeed deeply grateful for the picture of that other America which to the Englishman is as a closed book, and we 'guess' no one could interpret it with greater insight and understanding. The drawings are as good as ever."

+ Spec 142:92 Ja 19 '29 580w

"The American scene was one the authors were peculiarly well-fitted to observe, and the result is a book which is not only highly entertaining but valuable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 17 '29 760w

Wis Lib Bul 25:101 Mr '29

GORDON, TAYLOR. Born to be; with an introd. by Muriel Draper, a foreword by Carl Van Vechten. 236p il $4 Covici

B or 92 29-21297

"Taylor Gordon, black boy and singer of spirituals, makes his debut into the world of letters with his hand tucked gratefully into Carl Van Vechten's, that beneficent godfather to all of sophisticated black Harlem. Muriel Draper is his justifiably ecstatic editor, and Covarrubias supplies decors. . . In the course of [this autobiography] a colored boy who began his career as a diminutive uniformed page in White Sulphur Springs discovers himself, at thirty-six, sought-after entertainer and guest at parties where 'royalty' attends."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"Certainly this confiding autobiography is unique and attractive both in manner and material. . . Only an unreconstructed and choleric Southerner is likely to take offense at Taylor's ingratiatingly childlike and most legitimate delight in his good luck." D: C. Tilden

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 13 '29 900w

Boston Transcript p4 D 14 '29 420w

"Taylor Gordon—unless, of course, I am mistaken—has set himself to discover just what the world expects a Negro artist to be and then, with all the good humor in the world, has been it: simple, lusty, amoral, nomadic, sexually superior, sporty and laughter-loving. In this manner, he has succeeded in making a good three-quarters of his book amusing and even exciting, if not important." M. P. Levy

+ — New Repub 61:175 Ja 1 '30 380w

"The biggest thing in Taylor Gordon's book is just the straight story of his own gay, irresponsible, happy-go-lucky, sensual, sinful, lyrical life. I don't think I ever read a book where a man gets himself so completely, simply, excitingly into words. He never could master grammar, he tells us, and his spelling is his own; but he has style in that highest degree which consists in using the exactly right words to say with the utmost precision exactly what he wishes to say." Shaemas O'Sheel

+ N Y World p10m N 24 '29 380w

"It isn't often that one finds an autobiography written with the unaffected simplicity and childlike frankness found in Taylor Gordon's 'Born To Be.' Seemingly aware of the fact that every experience has its place in the varied scheme of character building, he sees no reason for withholding any incident of his extraordinary life, however sordid or sensual it might appear. . . After having read the unique account and reflected on its merits as an important contribution to literature, one finds oneself asking if the patronizing foreword by Carl Van Vechten and the introduction by Muriel Draper are not unduly ecstatic. As for Covarrubias's illustrations, they reflect so strongly the elements of travesty and burlesque that they are wholly out of keeping with a story that is presented in all seriousness." R. E. Kennedy

— + Sat R of Lit 6:514 D 7 '29 570w

Theatre Arts Mo 14:89 Ja '30 100w

GORDON-BARRETT, RICHARD REGIS. Motoring in Italy. 223p il $2.50 McBride [7s 6d Methuen]

914.5 Italy—Description and travel 28-29281

The first part of this pocket-sized guide for the motorist in Italy gives a brief general description of the country; the second part describes motor routes thru different parts of Italy and the conditions the motorist will meet; the third part tabulates the important Italian cities and the things to be seen in each.

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p44 Mr '29

"A most excellent travelling companion. Road conditions (which within late years have enormously improved), the right time to visit Italy's various districts, hints on suitable itineraries, and quantities of good potted history—they are all here."

+ Spec 141:219 Ag 18 '28 140w

"For motorists visiting Italy Mr. Gordon-Barrett's book will prove an exceedingly useful compendium of information. The major portion of it consists of a description of roads in the form of a diary of tours made by the author. Here a good deal of space might have been saved and used for more practical purposes by omitting many details of no general interest."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p734 O 11 '28 550w

GORE, CHARLES. Christ and society. (Halley Stewart lectures, 1927) 218p $2 Scribner [4s 6d Allen & U.]

261 Sociology, Christian. Jesus Christ 28-21925

"In these lectures Bishop Gore goes through the history of Christian association, dwelling with affection and honour on the Christianity of the apostolic and early patristic ages. It is Bishop Gore's aim to show that it is only by the attitude of the early Church—the life—association of good wills—that the potentiality of Christendom can be realized. In the last chapter he lays down the practical measures he believes our circumstances demand."—Spec

---

"Altogether these lectures are extremely well worth reading, as an illustration of a better application of the principles of Jesus to the (notably English) social order." Shailer Mathews

+ Christian Century 46:17 Ja 3 '29 860w

Pratt p9 summer '29

"To those who are familiar with Dr. Gore's career and former utterances there will be nothing new in this volume. It is, rather, a mature restatement of a vast amount of thoughtful social utterance in former years. It is forceful, sensible, informed. It goes to the heart of matters with no delays, and in good English. It would be hard to find a better book for beginners in the study of the Church and Society."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:498 D 8 '28 150w

"In its criticism the book is admirable; in its proposals it offers a good hope of reform." Alan Porter

+ Spec 141:57 Jl 14 '28 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p544 Jl 26 '28 1000w

GORE, CHARLES. Jesus of Nazareth. (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) 256p $1 Holt [2s 6d T. Butterworth]

232 Jesus Christ 29-9760

Bishop Gore's purpose in writing a new book about Jesus, is in his own words to further "the task of providing a fairly true and complete image of Jesus, as he lived and as he taught, expressed in modern terms and on a critical basis, fit to be put into the hands of the 'average reader.'" (Preface)

---

Booklist 25:377 Jl '29

Christian Century 46:897 Jl 10 '29 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p151 D '29

"A book which is not clever nor brilliant, but very timely and very wise." Barrington Gates

+ Nation and Ath 44:883 Mr 23 '29 900w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p1 D 22 '29 400w

St Louis 27:280 O '29

"Readers of all schools of thought must be deeply grateful for what Dr. Gore has given us. The freshness and vigour with which familiar facts and sayings are invested, the entire candour with which controversial points are discussed, the sober scholarship which is never obtruded but makes its influence felt on every page, give this little work a value quite disproportionate to its size." Evelyn Underhill

+ Spec 142:339 Mr 2 '29 850w

"Bishop Gore has produced a compact, clear, and critical life of the historical Jesus."

+ Spec 142:1015 Je 29 '29 60w

"As we read Dr. Gore's exposition of the life and teaching of Christ we are glad to acknowledge his qualifications for it and to appreciate the candour and vigour of his argument. Those who already agree with his general position will gratefully welcome and acknowledge that he does much to clarify their minds."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p152 F 28 '29 600w

GORE, CHARLES; GOUDGE, HENRY LEIGHTON; and GUILLAUME, ALFRED, eds. New commentary on Holy Scripture; including the Apocrypha. 697, 158, 743p $5 Macmillan [16s S.P.C.K.]

220.7 Bible. Whole—Commentaries 29-9126

"A Bible commentary which includes a substantial monograph on each of the sacred books, together with running textual comments and explanations."—New Statesman

---

"The fifty-six contributors to this commentary are all members of the Anglican communion. Is uniformity of point of view a sufficient compensation for lack of a wider representation? . . The inclusion of the Apocrypha is a notable advantage over other one-volume commentaries. The whole work is a treasury of exegetical and collateral material."

+ — Christian Century 46:589 My 1 '29 140w

"It is doubtful whether this commentary will do much except fortify those who are already committed to the Anglo-catholic position. To such it will serve as a source book to find reasons for 'the hope that is in them.'" W. P. Lemon

Christian Century 46:744 Je 5 '29 780w

"The tone of the whole book is that of a moderate liberalism. The several authors are quite aware of the critical problems at issue, but have succeeded in producing a book that should not seriously shock any intelligent reader. The volume is interesting and readable, and the amount of information to be found is truly amazing. The reader who digests this book should have a very good working knowledge of the Bible." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 6:235 Ap '29 350w

"The volume has many merits not least among which is the manner in which the publishers have made a volume of 1,600 pages and a million and a quarter words both attractive in appearance and convenient to handle." C. E. Purinton

+ J Religion 9:462 Jl '29 1200w

"This volume weighs 4½ lbs. and measures approximately 9 by 6 by 3 inches. Its pages are beautifully printed in good, legible type, and the binding seems equal to the heavy stresses involved. . . The work has been uncommonly well done, and the book is excellent value."

+ New Statesman 32:391 D 29 '28 150w

St Louis 27:156 My '29

Reviewed by Evelyn Underhill

Spec 141:sup869 D 8 '28 220w

"A wealth of scholarship has been expended on this volume and some of the more general chapters, such as Mr Clarke's 'Gentile Background of Early Christianity,' are excellent examples of condensed and luminous writing. Unfortunately the tone of the New Testament commentary is highly conservative, as might be expected from the fact that Bishop Gore is chief editor. But the arrangement of the book is admirable, and Old Testament problems are treated with scholarly candor."

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 D 21 '28 150w

GORE-BOOTH, EVA. Poems; complete ed., with The inner life of a child and letters, and a biographical introd. by Esther Roper. 653p il $3.40 (8s 6d) Longmans

821 29-14410

"Miss Gore-Booth was a rebel against much of the modern world. Miss Roper's biographical sketch shows a charming, sensitive woman whose life was lived on the edge of storm. She was sister to Countess Markievicz, friend of Roger Casement, sympathizer with extreme pacifists, worker amongst women in Manchester slums, but not much of this emerges objectively in her poems."—Nation and Ath

---

Boston Transcript p2 O 9 '29 300w

"[It] has been claimed for her that she is in the front rank of religious poets. There was a poet in her, but the best of her poetry, it seems, was lived, not written. Much of her copious early work is twilit, vague, and sweet with the choky charm of 'The Little Waves of Breffny.' Later, when her religious imagination concentrates definitely upon the figure of Jesus, her verse strengthens, its lights and shadows grow sharper, the mists begin to disperse." Barrington Gates

Nation and Ath 45:572 Jl 27 '29 230w

"After running through the 650 pages of her collected poems, we feel a sense of diffusion and thinness, of good intention leading to an accomplishment only of good verse. In one poem, however, 'The Little Waves of Breffny,' she has made a likely bid for immortality in the anthologies." R: Church

— + Spec 143:378 S 21 '29 120w

"We believe that her poetry would gain greatly in its appeal if it were selected. Much of her early verse, for example, is no more than melodiously fluent. The poems collected under the title of 'The One and the Many' represent a stage in her advance to fuller realization of the meaning of life and consequent sureness of expression. They contain incidentally much that is both beautiful and wise."

GORE-BOOTH, EVA—Continued
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p664 Ag 29 '29 1000w

GORE-BROWNE, ROBERT. Imperfect lover. 283p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Collins]
29-11015

The story of a man, his wife, and his mistress. Jim Warlock at thirty-five was a prosperous barrister and happily married. But a pretty little seamstress, Doris, falls in love with him, and becomes his mistress. Following her tragic suicide, only the sanity of his wife Clemency saves Jim and their future happiness.

"The force of a drama lies in its being inevitable. And Mr. Brown does not make you feel this. You are surprised by Jim's flippant behavior. You are disquieted by Doris's foolhardiness. You are more annoyed than sympathetic over Clemency's deadly dignity. You are never bound, as you should be, by the steel hoops of the tragedy. There is a trivial tone to 'An Imperfect Lover' which belies its dramatic theme."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 4 '29 380w

"It is not a wholesome tale, nor one that gives a convincing characterization of anyone except Clemency. She alone is consistent throughout. The style is good enough to redeem the faults of conception to a certain extent, and it is interestingly told, but as a whole it is out of focus."
— + Boston Transcript p2 Ag 7 '29 280w

"Mr. Brown has not gone deep enough into his characters psychologically. They all do what they might reasonably be supposed to do but they remain surface creatures. They seem to have no life aside from their activities. This fact and the introduction of several amusing minor characters give a lightness to the book pleasing enough in itself but slightly misfit with them."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:1197 Ji 20 '29 300w

GORMAN, HERBERT SHERMAN. Incredible marquis, Alexandre Dumas. 466p il $5 Farrar & Rinehart
B or 92 Dumas, Alexandre 29-22939

This dramatic narrative of Dumas, the incredibly romantic, takes him from his picturesque youth, based on the Dumas' memoirs, thru the remainder of a varied and active life to his death in 1870.

Booklist 26:115 D '29

"Among the fictionized 'debunking' biographies that threaten to overwhelm every second-hand bookstore in the country, Mr. Gorman's life of Dumas stands out like a solid oak plank. He has actually been at considerable pains to investigate and to try to understand the period which he discusses; he is fair as well as readable; and he treats his subject as a human being, not as a rather regrettable species of insect-pest." S. V. Benét
+ Bookm 70:327 N '29 600w

"Mr. Gorman has not proved unequal to his magnificent theme. His book has frequently the dash and color of a d'Artagnan romance, or of Dumas's own 'Memoirs'; with less verbosity, and without the glaring lapses in taste. A few inaccuracies here and there are quite in the Dumas spirit." Albert Guerard
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 S 8 '29 1400w

"From year to year moves the story of the life of this remarkable man, the greatest of French romancers, perhaps the greatest of all romancers. Mr. Gorman tells the story well, always with a sense of the dramatic, and sometimes of the melodramatic. But since the life of Dumas was both, his method and his manner are pardonable. We have in his pages not merely Dumas the writer of romances and plays, but Dumas the man of the world in every sense of that much abused phrase." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 14 '29 1700w

"Herbert Gorman has written a brilliant biography which retains all of the incredibility of Dumas' life while making the hero of it perfectly credible. The result is a remarkably real picture of a man whose own life was as gaudy, as romantic, as fantastic as that of his most popular hero." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Daily Tribune p13 S 21 '29 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p153 D '29

"Mr. Gorman's is a clever book—for many pages a readable book. It is stuccoed with erudition and has its quota of epigram. Somewhere between its attractive covers is a recognizable portrait of that rather simple, if enormous personality, Alexander Dumas, père. In the heavy plum pudding of its style are imbedded many appetizing raisins of anecdote. Yet I deem it fundamentally a bad book. . . The career of Dumas is overlaid with a thick layer of vaguely relevant expository and descriptive writing. Even this would not be so bad if Mr. Gorman had not availed himself, in the process, of a multitude of tawdry tricks derived mainly from Ludwig and Thomas Beer." C. P. Fadiman
— + Nation 129:436 O 16 '29 1900w

"Here is not merely a biography, the best that Dumas is likely ever to get in either French or English; here is a biographer, which is an event of some importance to a generation whose craving for 'true stories' is, seemingly, not to be sated. Here is a biographer who is, at the same time, a poet in prose. . . Dumas, the devourer of life, has been fortunate in being discovered by a man who loves life well enough to be able to write a Life of Dumas." S: Putnam
+ N Y Evening Post p7m S 7 '29 1150w

"Mr. Gorman has been brilliantly successful. He has not resorted to the bag of tricks of the modern psychological analyst. He tells his story from the inside out, rather than from the outside in, and is able to show us Dumas and the romantic movements with almost the enthusiasm of one who has sat through the opening night of 'Hernani' or attended a soiree at Nodier's." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p1 S 15 '29 2100w

"It is not a dry critical study. It is a readable, immensely colorful history of a man whose life was as huge, as rich and as romantically vivid as his work, by which latter he is chiefly known. We have seldom read as entertaining a biography." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 153:112 S 18 '29 110w

St Louis 27:342 D '29

GOSNEY, EZRA SEYMOUR, and POPENOE, PAUL BOWMAN. Sterilization for human betterment. (Human betterment foundation. Publication) 202p $2 Macmillan
Sterilization of criminals and defectives
29-17861

"This small volume contains a study of the results of more than 6000 sterilizations performed in California institutions, together with the authors' conclusions, and a rather complete bibliographical appendix. A discussion of the legal and constitutional aspects of sterilization is also appended, and the authors are at pains to point out the necessity for distinguishing statutes which provide for sterilization as a penal measure, from those imposing it solely for eugenic reasons. Enactments of the latter type are emphatically advocated, and the generally beneficial results of the California operations are expounded at some length. The concrete problem of state eugenic regulation, somewhat disturbing in its imminence, is brought out in sharp relief."—Harvard Law R

"For its thoroughness, wholesomeness and impartiality, this book is to be recommended highly."
+ Bookm 70:v Ja '30 70w

Boston Transcript p2 O 23 '29 220w
Harvard Law R 43:161 N '29 130w

GOSSIP, ARTHUR JOHN. Hero in thy soul; being an attempt to face life gallantly. 266p $2.50 Scribner [7s T. & T. Clark]

252 Sermons [29-14656]

These sermons by a persuasive Scottish preacher, minister of Beechgrove church, Aberdeen, are calls to courage in facing the worries and puzzles of everyday living.

"The literary quality of these sermons is of the highest. The language is not only full of eloquence and passion, but it has a mighty power coupled with chaste and beautiful English. . . This Scottish preacher dares you to rise to the heights of heroic manhood and challenges you to try the ideals of Christ and his religion. It is stimulating but it is all very practical and meets the difficulties and worries of daily life." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '29 700w

"It is conceivable, but not probable, that some members of the ministry will have no personal need for the inspiration and counsel of this book, but in their pastoral work they will find it worth while to consult it often, and learn how to help suffering men and women so that they shall face life gallantly." J. C. Healey

+ Christian Century 46:1280 O 16 '29 200w

GOTHEIN, FRAU MARIE LUISE (SCHROETER). History of garden art; ed. by Walter P. Wright; tr. from the German by Mrs Archer-Hind. 2v 459;486p il $25 Dutton [£4 4s Dent]

710 Gardens. Landscape gardening [29-898]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"The work represents a vast amount of independent research, and Frau Gothein has vitalized her history by peopling her many gardens with the men and women who built and enjoyed them. Because of this her book is a social as well as a garden classic. The 600-odd illustrations with which the volumes are provided are extraordinarily and variously interesting." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 3 '29 220w

"Although written in charming and always interesting style, it is a scholarly work, the outcome of a prodigious amount of research in the garden literature of past ages and of wide travel and close observation."

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 3 '29 450w

"Her two volumes are a mine of scholarship. The translation by Mrs. Archer-Hind is so excellent that not an echo of an alien idiom rings through its lucid English. Though the bibliography is negligible, the index is admirable. The narrative is a dignified representation of the rise and culmination of a great art." M. P. Smith

+ Sat R Lit 5:1052 My 25 '29 1350w

"It is a scholarly work, too long and too detailed for the average reader, but of exceptional interest and service to garden or landscape designer. The style in which it is written is not quite natural, but perhaps this is the fault of the translator rather than of the author. The illustrations are so profuse that it is possible to learn a considerable amount about the history of gardens just by looking at them."

+ Spec 142:61 Ja 12 '29 140w

GOTTSCHALK, LOUIS REICHENTHAL. Era of the French revolution (1715-1815); under the editorship of James T. Shotwell. 509p $3; trade ed $4 Houghton

944.04 France—History—Revolution. France—Politics and government. France—History—Consulate and empire, 1799-1815. Napoleon I, emperor of the French 29-9131

"This book is intended as a general introduction to the study of European history preceding and during the period of the French Revolution and Napoleon. As such, it has little pretension to being anything more than a presentation of the latest interpretations of that era. If this present study has any merit at all, it is not in any new interpretations or hypotheses that it sets forth but in its adaptation for American readers of the findings of the best European scholarship."—Preface

"In view of the author's aim two comments may be made: first, that as a general introduction to the era there is too little space devoted to conditions outside of France; and, second, and of more moment, the main points of his disagreement with other authorities might have been summarized or at least noted specifically in the preface. But aside from this criticism and an occasional inaccuracy the work has decided merit. . . The work as a whole is marked by proportion and moderation. . . A lively style—sometimes bordering on the colloquial and a skillful use of the concrete give the work value not only as a text-book but as a general account for the general reader." Eloise Ellery

+ — Am Hist R 35:105 O '29 600w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p40 S 29 '29 270w

"An excellent introduction to the study of European history preceding and during the period of the French revolution." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 25 '29 500w

"Professor Gottschalk is a leader among American historians devoting themselves to the study of France. His compact and soberly written handbook of almost 500 pages, with its excellent bibliography and other apparatus, is as useful a volume on its subject as America has produced."

+ Nation 129:177 Ag 14 '29 60w

"A solid piece of scholarship, Professor Gottschalk's work has the comparatively rare virtue of being readable without losing any of its authoritativeness." P. W.

+ N Y Evening Post p8m Je 1 '29 80w

"It is written in fluent style, readable without the least hint of 'popular writing,' and is marked by the author's penetrating, independent and original judgments on many controversial topics."

+ Outlook 152:149 My 22 '29 150w

GOULD, BRUCE. Sky larking; the romantic adventure of flying. 259p il $2.50 Liveright

629.13 Aeronautics 29-12777

Flyers have a common name for the "stubby, unromantic little control column which translates the whims of their fingers into mad loops, careening Immelmanns, twisting spins." That word is "joystick." It is the keyword of this book, which is chiefly devoted to the joys of flying and the romance to be found in man's latest field of adventure.

Booklist 26:16 O '29

"Certainly no one writing of aviation has made flying seem such a natural, reasonable and delightful means of getting about. In addition Bruce Gould answers in a thoroughly interesting manner nearly every question that the average person could think of to ask about flying." W. H. Wells

+ Bookm 70:110 S '29 400w

"It is a book which is charged throughout with the author's enjoyment of his subject. At the same time, Mr. Gould joyously carries a considerable burden of information. . . Yet, in the best sense, 'Sky Larking' does not find integration. Its almost boyish enthusiasms on the one hand and its history and fact on the other do not quite fuse. The book straddles, and if it maintains an equilibrium, this is achieved with a certain loss of dignity." F. E. Hill

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Jl 7 '29 1000w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 20 '29 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p104 Jl '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p152 D '29

GOULD, BRUCE—Continued

"It is good reading from cover to cover, and although it deals for the most part with subjects with which every experienced airman is thoroughly familiar, its appeal is catholic—to airman and ground lubber—for these subjects are treated with no sentimentality, but with strong imaginative appeal. There is real beauty in flying and that beauty Mr. Gould has brought out with great skill and great feeling." T. J. C. Martyn

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 7 '29 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 25:318 O '29

GOULD, GERALD. Collected poems. 256p $3 Payson & Clarke [12s 6d Gollancz]

821

A selection of the author's poems taken from his published volumes: Beauty the pilgrim; The happy tree; My lady's book, and a few of his early poems published in England in a series known as the "Augustan Poets."

"His is a musical, gentle and sincere muse, quite in the tradition of English poetry, thoroughly un-modern without being conventional. The fifty love sonnets are perhaps as fine as any production of the sort in the poetry of our century; and the sequence, 'Monogamy: Dramatic Romances', is particularly poignant and sincere poetry."

+ Bookm 70:xviii D '29 80w

" 'Wander-Thirst' reappears in Mr. Gould's collected poems, but his qualities have been better concentrated in other lyrics, such as the sad 'Mortality.' In Mr. Gould's poetry there is neither transforming energy of idea nor exploring activity in expression, but there is a personal distinctness."

Nation and Ath 46:18 O 5 '29 280w

"Mr. Gerald Gould [is] almost as diffuse in his own verse mannerisms as he is profuse in his appreciation of contemporary fiction. It needs a touch of satire to bring his work to life; but, when this occurs, he reveals himself as a critic unexpectedly and agreeably acid."

— + New Statesman 33:684 S 14 '29 150w

"Mr. Gould has a constantly poetical temper; his instinctive attitude towards the world is a poet's; his worst work in verse is still a poet's, his best among the most finely felt and exquisitely uttered poetry of our time. A few very early and a few occasional pieces excepted, his poetry has the primary merit without which secondary qualities matter little. . . There is no man of his generation to whom poetry comes more naturally, none who is more patient in waiting for its coming. He has no tricks, sets no snares, forces no note, and has made no habit of verse." T. E. Welby

+ Sat R 148:298 S 14 '29 1100w

"Mr. Gould combines dignity and austerity with mellifluence to a rare degree, and there is a superb finish about his best work. It is in the sonnet sequence in which he philosophizes about love and seeks the unifying principle in life which underlies all its apparent contradictions and frustrations, that Mr. Gould has found his richest and most individual note. The note, indeed, is so individual that it is sometimes a little vague. But the cadences are of rare beauty and are full of incidental illumination." Gilbert Thomas

+ Spec 143:sup543 O 19 '29 600w

GOULD, GEORGE GLEN, and GOULD, MRS FLORENCE (HOLDEN). Period furniture handbook. 271p il $2.50 Dodd [8s 6d Lane]

749 Furniture 28-30752

Describes, with illustrations, furniture of different periods and the characteristic details by which each period may be identified.

Booklist 25:238 Mr '29

"The clear, simple presentation of these furniture facts will make this a popular reference book for any one who needs to bone up on his 'periods.' "

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 31 '29 60w

"This little book by Mr. and Mrs. Gould is outstanding because of its great practical value, for it is as brief, as business-like and as simply written as anyone could wish. Experts may find such a book unnecessary, but those of us who are only too often in doubt about such matters will resort to its pages with grateful enthusiasm."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 9 '29 180w

Pratt p23 summer '29

St Louis 27:95 Mr '29

"This is, if anything, rather below the average popular handbook, though it is a more convenient size than some, being a handbook in fact as well as in name. This smallness of size, together with the extremely generous scope of the book—it ranges over the whole field of European furniture, except German and Scandinavian—has necessitated ruthless condensation."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p187 Mr 7 '29 180w

Wis Lib Bul 25:71 F '29

GOULD, WALLACE. Aphrodite, and other poems. 128p $2.50 Macaulay

811 28-24050

"Although the name of Wallace Gould has been familiar to students of poetry for some years, 'Aphrodite' is the first volume to present him to a more general public. What this larger public will make of him is an interesting speculation. His qualities, definitely his own, are such as will effectually keep him from quotation. He is witty, but his wit is special. He knows how to tell a narrative, but the stories will scarcely hold an average audience."—Sat R of Lit

"Wallace Gould is to-day working with his words to make them sing on the tongue. He is working as every artist must to realize his technique and to make it obedient to his will and feelings. When he succeeds his lines have a smoothness that amounts to a philosophy." W. C. Williams

Dial 86:66 Ja '29 580w

"It exhibits an adult—even profound—understanding of versification, an accurate, sensitive use of words, and an approach to life that is dignified and sad: sad, quiet humor without bitterness. The title poem is distinguished by its skillful and unobtrusive use of a difficult meter and by the simplicity and naïveté which Mr. Gould has made natural to his Olympian characters." M. P. Levy

+ New Repub 57:171 D 26 '28 550w

" 'Aphrodite' is a hard poem for the reader to begin on. But if you will come back to it and reread it after you have finished the book you will find it still lively with interest. Perhaps the best tribute one can pay to Mr. Gould's technique is that the reader is continually wondering how he gets such good effects with it. The technique does not seem good enough to be so effective. The memory of the poem is better than the poem. And that means skill." Margery Mansfield

+ N Y World p10m D 16 '28 820w

"His line has grace in spite of its length, clarity in spite of the poet's predilection for trope and extended metaphor. Although his loose free verse is most typical, Gould's occasional rhymes retain distinction."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:560 D 29 '28 150w

GOZLAN, LEON. Balzac in slippers; tr. from the French [by Babette and Glenn Hughes, Madeleine Boyd, and John O'Neill]. 351p il $3.50 McBride

B or 92 Balzac, Honoré de 29-9544

"As a literary close-up of an incorrigible romantic, this portrait of Balzac in his later years will find few equals. Its author was long Balzac's intimate friend, and he came to know his character, his habits and his eccentricities as if they were his own. To correct the false impression created by Balzac's absolute indifference to public curiosity, Leon Gozlan, some six or seven decades ago, produced his own version of his companion's inner life. It is now, for the first time, presented to the English-reading public in an admirable translation." —Boston Transcript

---

"Whether or not Balzac in Slippers is true or just, it is unquestionably entertaining. If it is not a good portrait, it is at least a hilarious cartoon." C. P. Fadiman

+ Bookm 70:103 S '29 680w

" 'Balzac in Slippers' came out nearly three-quarters of a century ago but it could hardly be more modern in tone." Albert Guerard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 S 1 '29 3000w

"It is preposterous, it is extravagant, perhaps. But it is Balzac, and Balzac as only his intimates could know him. It is as human and appreciative a portrait as we have recently encountered in the field of biography." M. G.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 20 '29 380w

"It may be the present publisher has not done so unwisely in resurrecting the marginations of one who was a contemporary and an intimate, thereby providing the American reader with what the modern reader appears to crave; close-up and more or less authoritative, even though not highly significant sidelights on the all-too-human great." S: Putnam

+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 9 '29 750w

"The Balzac that Leon Gozlan pictured in 'Balzac in Slippers' is not at all the Balzac of the novels, keen-witted, analytical, and furiously industrious; it is, instead, the Balzac who was childishly vain, who dreamed of vast fortunes from his plays, who hid from his creditors behind closed doors, and who, like most of the brilliant Frenchmen of his day, was fantastic and unpredictable. Gozlan gives us a Balzac that is not to be found in the weighty studies. It is a human man that emerges from the book, a man who hid from his creditors and maliciously got up in the middle of the night and pushed down an enemy's stone fence, and who possessed mysterious lady acquaintances whose addresses he never betrayed." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 21 '29 1350w

GRABENHORST, GEORG. Zero hour; tr. from the German. 306p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Brentano's]

29-20791

Hans Volkenborn, the hero of the book, is typical of the German boys who went to the front in their 'teens. From the misery and suffering around him he came to adopt a philosophy of fatality. After the war, broken in body and disillusioned in spirit, he returned to his former sweetheart, Anneliese, unfit to marry her.

---

" 'Zero Hour' is largely the autobiography of its author. His observations are not vitiated by the bias of nationalism. The country he loved is dead. He saw it dying with his own eyes, eyes untutored to systematic annihilation. The prose he writes is simple, poetic and trenchant without being savage or laconic. 'Zero Hour' is a courageous piece of war fiction. To the specialist, however, it can be nothing more than one more exciting account of the desolation of war." E. M. Benson

+ N Y Evening Post p12m N 23 '29 600w

"Had 'Zero Hour' been the first war book to reach us out of Germany, it would have meant something. It would have told us, not brilliantly but well enough, how sensitive young Germans went to fight. As it is, we have found all that out with far more vividness, with a finer sense of emphasis and truth, with a profounder feeling for humanity, in 'All Quiet on the Western Front.' 'Zero Hour' is closer to 'All Quiet' than any of the other war books are; but the similarity is one of subject-matter and of approach entirely; there is the greatest of gaps, between the two, in quality." L: Kronenberger

N Y Times p9 N 17 '29 600w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Survey 63:166 N 1 '29 100w

GRABO, CARL HENRY. Technique of the novel. 331p $1.50 (6s) Scribner

808.3 Fiction—Technique 29-1740

In a book designed especially for the young writer who wishes to learn the tricks of his trade and also for readers interested in technique, Professor Grabo of the University of Chicago analyses a number of novels to discover various narrative principles and devices. The chapters discuss plot, point of view, conduct of narrative, and actualism.

---

Booklist 25:314 My '29

"The entire book is a delight to read, and will prove as valuable to the professor of literature as to the layman."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 18 '29 230w

"An academic inquest into the mechanism of novel writing in which Professor Grabo of the University of Chicago takes the clock apart 'to show the functions of the wheels, screws and levers.' The purpose of a clock, however, is to tell time, and time is not in the wheels nor in the screws nor in the levers nor yet in all of them combined, and this is what most technical theses seem to forget."

— N Y Evening Post p9m D 22 '28 120w

Pratt p26 autumn '29

St Louis 27:133 Ap '29

"Though Professor Grabo is academic and a little pedestrian, and a number of his examples rather more conventionally chosen than they should have been, the examination as a whole is conscientiously carried through."

Times [London] Lit Sup p433 My 30 '29 420w

Wis Lib Bul 25:125 Ap '29

GRACE, HARVEY. Musician at large. 248p $2.50 (6s) Oxford

780.4 Music—Addresses, essays, lectures [29-9342]

"A collection of articles written during the past few years by 'Feste' of the Musical Times. These articles have been among the most delightful features of that journal. The special quality of 'Feste's' writing is the mingling of wisdom and kindly humour. A great many subjects are discussed in the book, among them a defence of opera, musical criticism, humour in music, Shakespeare's use of music, and three chapters on Beethoven. The chapter on musical criticism comes at the end of the book, and contains all the essential qualities of the author's writing."—Spec

---

"There is much of great value to be gleaned from Mr. Harvey Grace's learned yet witty and sensible essays. Every article is well worth reading, not merely for its opinions, but for the lively and pleasant manner in which they are expressed."

+ New Statesman 32:363 D 22 '28 180w

Spec 141:797 N 24 '28 100w

"The interest of the book varies, and occasionally there is nothing particularly substantial underneath the attractively deft and gay style, but, generally speaking, Mr. Grace's motley is only a cloak for serious artistry, and jest mixes easily with learning and indeed with something very like exhortation."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p927 N 29 '28 540w

GRAEME, BRUCE, pseud. See Jeffries, G. M.

GRAF, OSKAR MARIA. Prisoners all; tr. from the German by Margaret Green. 442p $4 (10s 6d) Knopf

B or 92 28-19960

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"There are engrossing passages in 'Prisoners All,' and, as an eye-witness of the fall of Kovno or the Revolutionary disturbances in Munich, Graf writes vividly enough. But we cannot endorse Thomas Mann's eulogium of the German edition, still less the English publisher's comparison of Graf with Rousseau. There is too much repetition of similar incidents, and too much inessential dialogue."

GRAF, O. M.—Continued

+ — Nation and Ath 45:84 Ap 20 '29 450w

"His narrative has mainly a pathological interest; much of it, when it is not the ravings of delirium, is hysterical and crudely egotistic. But the account of the Bavarian revolution, confused though it is as regards motives, is remarkably vivid in its glimpses of street-fighting, public meetings and prison episodes, and at least throws light on something other than the author's state of mind."

— + New Statesman 33:24 Ap 13 '29 230w

"Prisoners All is one of those autobiographies which aim at extreme frankness and outspokenness; the danger of this type of book is always that of lapsing into hysteria and self-dramatization, and we cannot feel that Herr Graf has wholly escaped this danger. . . The book might have been a great one, but, in our estimation, it fails to rise to the lofty heights which would alone make endurable a theme of such unrelieved tragedy."

— + Spec 142:906 Je 8 '29 460w

"Nowhere before have the actual events in Munich during the period of the Revolution been described with such fullness and vividness. . . The interest of this book is manifold, but chiefly it is the complete revelation of the psychology of an individual."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Mr 21 '29 1000w

GRAHAM, DOROTHY (MRS JAMES W. BENNETT). China venture. 328p $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d J. Murray]

29-1805

The first Jared Meade went to China in one of the firm's clipper ships. His fiancée followed two years later, but already Jared had succumbed to the lure of China personified in a singing girl. The next two sections of the book show history repeating itself in the lives of two descendants of the first Jared, one at the time of the Boxer rebellion, the other in modern China.

Booklist 25:322 My '29

"Miss Graham has done her work well. With a graceful style and singing phrases the novel swings along. In that it is a picture of the foreigner's China it has succeeded. No other writer has done more. Until one comes who with words and sentences can bring to us the interior of China, the life and people of the country itself, we can look for no more than a 'Chinese venture.'"

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 F 24 '29 300w

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 20 '29 1200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p63 Ap '29

"The three parts are more or less independent of one another, as each tends to be episodic, and it is doubtful whether Miss Graham has quite managed to weld them into a whole. She writes, however, with understanding and knowledge, which makes her story worth reading, in spite of the fact that her people, except for two or three of the youngest generation, are rather uninteresting. The Chinese atmosphere is well done, filled in with fact and detail."

+ — Nation and Ath 46:358 D 7 '29 150w

"The sketches of the women of China are swiftly but vitally drawn, and the portraits of the women of America, those whom the Meades marry and those they do not, are vigorous. The changing background has been well handled. The author has had unusual success in filling out the skeleton of thesis and symbol with so good a story. It is very readable."

+ N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 19 '29 370w

"Romance that is strong in characterization, interesting and original in plot development, and elucidating at the same time, is rare. 'The China Venture,' which deals with three generations of the Meade family in the Flowery Kingdom, has all these points and the added one of being well written."

+ N Y Times p9 F 3 '29 660w

"It is rich in dramatic situations, is exciting and holds one's interest but the characters, especially the Americans, do not ring quite true. This, we believe, is largely due to the stilted dialogue." Milton Byron

+ — Outlook 151:150 Ja 23 '29 100w

"'The Chinese Venture' is pleasant reading. Yet this is hardly Miss Graham's outstanding achievement."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:760 Mr 9 '29 250w

"The background gives appropriateness and point to the action of the three generations of Salem Americans in their contacts with the men and women and the spirit of the Orient. One gets not only good fiction but at the same time a sense of Chinese viewpoint."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '29 100w

Wis Lib Bul 25:102 Mr '29

World Tomorrow 12:425 O '29 30w

GRAHAM, EVELYN. Albert, king of the Belgians; an auth. biography. 314p il $5 Dodd [21s Hutchinson]

B or 92 Albert I, king of the Belgians. European war, 1914-1918—Belgium 29-20234

King Albert of Belgium is painted by Mr Graham against the heroic background of Belgian independence, the darker shadow of Leopold II, and the tragedy of 1914. King Albert's travels, marriage, home life, habits and tastes, as well as his relations with the various reigning houses of Europe, reflect the character and personality of the man who has attained his chief ambition in becoming "the people's king."

Booklist 26:115 D '29

"Despite its tendency toward the vague and the needlessly ornate, the volume manages to tell the story of the Belgian king's achievements in interesting fashion. His outstanding ability as a war leader and as a statesman in the modern spirit is duly appraised, and there are numerous glimpses of his domestic life." Lisle Bell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ja 5 '30 300w

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett

Boston Transcript p4 O 5 '29 1450w

"A welcome addition to the lives of the World War monarchs, Mr. Graham has done an excellent, if entirely non-critical, piece of work. The life of Albert of Belgium, in all its important detail, and with much unimportant detail which adds to the charm of the work, is written with an acute appraisal of his position on the European stage. Yet it is hard to believe that any man born of woman could be so faultless, so perfect, so Godlike, as the man that Mr. Graham has drawn as King of the Belgians."

+ — Current Hist 31:230 N '29 200w

"Mr. Graham has concocted a curious mélange of history (often slightly distorted), gossip, rumor, newspaper reports, extracts from King Albert's speeches, from state papers, from older and better books, and quotations from all and sundry that might serve his purpose. He writes in a careless, verbose, journalistic style, and his pages are abundantly garnished with platitudinous comment—sometimes with sheer banality, and even mawkish sentimentality."

— N Y Times p49 D 1 '29 300w

"Apart from its historical value, the book makes an appeal to Americans, who have always recognized the manly and heroic qualities of the Belgian King and have believed that even without the distinction of royalty he would inevitably have played a great rôle in the War." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 80:22 N '29 180w

"Mr. Evelyn Graham's account of his reign is superficial and none too well informed."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p1044 D 12 '29 250w

GRAHAM, MARCUS, pseud. See Marcus, S.

GRAHAM, R. B. C. See Cunninghame Graham, R. B.

GRAHAM, STEPHEN. Lay confessor. 290p $2.50 Knopf
29-9095

"The story opens in Moscow a year or two before the war with scenes of irregular student life, the endless coffee and vodka drinking, the interminable discussions upon religion, politics and the future. . . A French girl comes from Paris to live with an impecunious student, but soon leaves him for Epiphanov, 'the lay confessor,' who is a kind of minor Rasputin of the people. The deserted Sasha quickly goes to live with another girl, and it is the fortunes of these four that we follow through the early years of the war into the chaos of the first 1917 revolution."—New Statesman

---

Booklist 25:322 My '29

"There are times when one does not know whether Mr. Graham is writing a love story or an historical treatise. In this lack of selectivity he follows the tradition of the Russian novelists, and, like them, gains power at the expense of craftsmanship. . . Throughout 'The Lay Confessor' one is in contact with people of strong and for the most part undisciplined emotions. They are realistically portrayed, although the central figure does not sufficiently dominate the others. Only the conclusion is unconvincing." G. T. Hellman

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 F 3 '29 900w

"To us it seems that certain of the chapters of this somberly flashing novel, particularly those describing the Russian debacle in the west, when having started the ill-equipped, ill-led hordes on their terrible retreat, 'Mackensen kept them moving,' may well become a classic of the literature of the Great War, even as have those in 'Les Miserables,' of Waterloo." Frances Bartlett

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 9 '29 1300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p77 My '29

"Mr. Graham's novel is a profusely decorated structure almost bulbous with incident and documentary facts. Architecturally, it resembles the Kremlin. If its success in concentrating one's attention upon it is not very great, certainly the authenticity of its material cannot be at fault. Nevertheless, one wishes that the two or three finely drawn characters this densely populated narrative contains had been permitted to move in a scene in which decoration is suggested, rather than catalogued." R. E. L.

+ — New Repub 58:262 Ap 17 '29 120w

"The book is vivid and readable, but as history one has heard it all before, and as a novel one wonders what the point of it all is."

— + New Statesman 32:24 O 13 '28 200w

"A great deal of the interest attaching to 'The Lay Confessor' is ascribable to its author's intelligent recording of Russia's social history from 1912 to 1917 and to his sympathetic portrayal of a Russian psychology." C. P. Fadiman

+ N Y Evening Post p9m F 9 '29 600w

"One closes the book with the hope that Mr. Graham's next work will justify better his well-deserved reputation as a serious writer."

— N Y Times p14 F 24 '29 620w

+ — N Y World p11m F 10 '29 320w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:232 F 6 '29 100w

Pratt p40 summer '29

"As a novel 'The Lay Confessor' is too irresponsible to be called a success. It is written in a slip-shod style. But its snap-shots are most remarkable, they are so artless, so innocent of contrived effects. Of the qualities that belong to repose, whether in the beholder or in the object beheld, he knows little. His knowledge is certainly partial, but how penetrating it is!" L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 146:477 O 13 '28 380w

"'The Lay Confessor' hasn't the value of Mr. Graham's earlier books on Russia. But those to whom Russia is still an unknown region may find Mr. Graham's novel readable enough, and be comforted, as they read, by the knowledge that its author knew the old Russia, particularly its countryside and the people met along the open road, as well, probably, as any foreigner of his day, and better than most."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:984 My 4 '29 500w

"The first part of Mr. Graham's novel almost reads like a translation, not because of deficiency in English style, but because the naïve, dreamy, all-accepting narrative, with its sudden transitions, has such a sincerely Russian flavour. . . On the whole this is a dramatic story, woven into an intimate account of Russian customs very necessary to the Western mind."

+ Spec 141:745 N 17 '28 230w

"Mr Graham has the qualification of knowing Russia almost as a native Russian might, and of knowing the Russian writers, and of having caught their attitude and spirit, without having lost his English ability to follow a comparatively straight line between two points when he sets out to 'novelize' an aspect of Russia."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '29 250w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p160 F 28 '29 420w

GRAHAM, STEPHEN. Peter the Great. 339p il $4 Simon & Schuster [21s Benn]

B or 92 Peter I, the Great, emperor of Russia
29-20821

A biography of Peter the Great of Russia "dealing chiefly with the man rather than with contemporary history. But the author sensibly and straightforwardly tells us quite enough contemporary history to allow us to see the immense significance of Peter's achievements, even though we may be almost wholly unfamiliar with the history of that part of Europe."—Spec

---

Booklist 26:116 D '29

"'Peter the Great' brings to life the old Graham. Here is no political bias, no trace of reactionary sentiment, no hint of exuberant cocksureness. Here is fine prose, brisk narrative, good drama, impressive history." Maurice Hindus

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 D 1 '29 500w

Boston Transcript p2 N 9 '29 550w

Reviewed by E. J. Cleveland

Churchman p15 D 28 '29 120w

"Mr. Graham writes tersely, with an almost brutal starkness. But he is a chronicler rather than a historian. There are no references to sources, and he records the crudities so nakedly and with such relish that little doubt is left that he writes for a public that looks rather for realistic detail than for critical history. Such a public should find the book as thrilling as could be desired."

Nation and Ath 46:144 O 26 '29 350w

"Mr. Stephen Graham writes with the simplicity of a conscientious and, on the whole, commendably accurate chronicler telling the story of Peter's life year after year, event after event, and deviating but seldom from concrete facts into historical generalizations. His unpretentious narrative is, as a rule, interesting, although not very dramatic." A. I. Nazaroff

N Y Times p8 D 22 '29 620w

"The author has given a picturesque account of Peter's excesses. Yet we wonder if he has not enlarged on not very authentic anecdotes. The economic perspective should have been sketched in. The freakish sovereign seems to perform his antics in a vacuum. The background of that strange Russia in which Peter lived and which alone might make his actions intelligible, a Russia which, historians say, is really an instructive model of Western Europe arrested at the feudal stage, is left out. Actors can hardly perform without scenery or a stage." W: Frauenglass

GRAHAM, STEPHEN—Continued

— + Outlook 153:230 O 9 '29 450w

"Though the publisher tells us that this biography is based on an intimate study of original sources, we do not learn what these are. The book, in fact, detailed though it is, is popular rather than scholarly. It is unusually outspoken. The man who, at great cost, imparted a western veneer to Russia and who had his own son and innumerable others tortured to death is here exhibited as the definitely pathological case he undoubtedly was. Russia is still paying the price of his rule."

Sat R 148:398 O 5 '29 130w

"Evidently Mr. Graham, too, has fallen victim to the general demand for 'full-length biographies that give vivid and authentic portraits.' In fact, there is too much portrait and too little background. The narrative itself is thin and evasive, and the average reader will experience difficulty in following the course of events. There is an unhappy tendency to introduce important characters into the narrative with too little preparation. In style, too, the book is poorly done, and stands out in great contrast to other works of Mr. Graham. It is choppy and disjointed."

— Sat R of Lit 6:372 N 9 '29 300w

"Mr. Stephen Graham has written an absorbing biography."

+ Spec 143:414 S 28 '29 1050w

"Mr. Graham's book makes no contribution to our knowledge. He is not a historian, nor does he affect to be one; he gives no list of sources, nor any references to authorities. The book, in short, is intended for popular consumption, and from this point of view it is excellent. Among its merits strict accuracy of style and statement cannot be reckoned. But when all has been said by way of criticism, the fact remains that Mr. Graham has succeeded in giving an exceedingly vivid impression of Peter and his activities. It is a book which, once read, will not easily be forgotten."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p755 O 3 '29 1400w

GRAMMER, CARL ECKHARDT. Things that remain. (Bolen lectures, 1928) 219p $1.75 Macmillan

239 Christianity 29-21157

Discussing the modern state of religion, Dr Grammer attempts to answer two leading questions: How much of the old faith is left? Will enough of religion survive analytic processes to be entitled to the name of Christianity, and to be of any value for life?

"While Dr. Grammer is a liberal and broad churchman, he has done a piece of work which in many ways will please the conservatives; e.g., in regard to miracles and Providence. But he is constructive and evangelical in his reasoning and attitude, scholarly in his methods and reverent in his treatment."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 4 '29 400w

"This is a sane and balanced statement of the Christian position in the face of the psychological attack." E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 153:430 N 13 '29 50w

GRAMONT, ELISABETH DE. See Clermont-Tonnerre, E. de.

GRANBY, GEORGE. Secret of Musterton house. 273p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Mills & Boon]

29-7498

The secret of Musterton house has been kept for many years by the regal, silent wife of Colonel Litchet. The Colonel himself never guesses her relation to Anketyll who spends the night at Musterton house, nor to the man who is found dead in Anketyll's bed next morning.

"The author, presumably a novice in the arts, tackles his enigmas with a will and works up to a startling conclusion after somewhat too many extended narratives of the past. This is complicated but readable." Will Cuppy

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 24 '29 70w

"The detective, Michael Collon, has more human qualities than most fiction sleuths and has ample opportunities for displaying them. 'The Secret of Musterton House' is a detective story that is different."

+ N Y Times p20 My 5 '29 220w

Outlook 151:557 Ap 3 '29 90w

Sat R of Lit 5:1030 My 18 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 220w

"The genial, if rough, Irish inspector from Scotland Yard is a pleasant change from the type of detective usually presented, and is ready to let the skeleton rest in the seclusion of its cupboard as soon as he is satisfied that the ends of justice are not defeated thereby."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p671 Ag 29 '29 130w

GRANGER, MARY. Wife to Pilate. 275p $2.50 Payson & Clarke

29-5415

"This book, while supposedly the story of Claudia, the child-wife of Pontius Pilate, is actually a history of Pilate revealing him in an entirely new light. Claudia is the principal character, but her personality is so inconsequential compared with that of her husband that she appears primarily in the light of a foil for him."—Outlook

"Miss Granger has walked the threadlike path between those two grim dangers—pedantic reproduction and self-conscious modernization. The highest praise which can be given the book is that besides offering a delicate interpretation of a young girl's feelings and growth it adds something of vitality to the people and scenes of those august days when Christ 'suffered under Pontius Pilate.' "

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p32 Ap 14 '29 300w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '29 230w

"One both admires and pities Pontius Pilate as the author has portrayed him. The plot would be entirely inadequate with any other background or characters but it is perhaps pardonable under the circumstances. There is no drama until the middle of the book but it steadily improves from that point on." Milton Byron

+ — Outlook 151:350 F 27 '29 150w

World Tomorrow 13:41 Ja '30 60w

GRANT, ALLEN, pseud. See Smith, A. D. H.

GRANTHAM, MRS ALEXANDRA ETHELRED (VON HERDER). Porcelain pagodas and palaces of jade; musings of an old collector. 210p il $5 Dutton [15s Methuen]

730 Pottery. Jade. Art objects

An authentic description, by an old collector, of the historical background of Chinese crafts. The author discusses the art of pottery as developed thruout the various dynasties, the use of glaze and porcelain, carvings in wood and bronze, ivory and jade.

"This is an unusual book about the pottery of the Far East: unusual in that it is throughout colored by the romance both of the ceramic craft itself and of collecting. The reader need not be an expert to follow this fascinating narrative."

+ N Y Times p40 N 24 '29 150w

"With a profound knowledge of her subject, Mrs. Grantham does not fail to be informing, and she wraps up her facts in a fascinating and flamboyant maze of 'musings.' Mrs. Grantham's text, with its poetical expression, has the merit of invoking our enthusiasm, and is corroborated by many beautiful illustrations."

+ Spec 143:689 N 9 '29 120w

"Mrs. Grantham has written two hundred-odd pages, purporting to cover the whole range of Chinese art. It would be difficult for anyone gifted with the compressive power of Aristotle to fulfil such a task; the florid rhapsodizing of the present author has no possible function but as a more or less agreeable titillation to the jaded mind of the layman. The book is destitute of bibliography and index, and there is no single reference to the work of any of the learned authorities of the present century. The twenty-eight illustrations are indifferently reproduced, and the lack of any indication of the dimensions or whereabouts of the objects renders them of as little importance to scholars as does the lack of reference to them in the letter-press to readers of the book itself."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p875 O 31 '29 200w

GRANVILLE-BARKER, HARLEY GRANVILLE. His Majesty; a play in four acts. 127p $1.50 Little [5s Sidgwick & J.]

822 29-2145

A play dealing ironically with the uneasy job of modern kingship in the imaginary land of Carpathia.

---

Booklist 25:276 Ap '29

"The two characters [king and queen] are subtly and beautifully studied, and behind them lies a deep reservoir of understanding both of men and of European conditions. But the story in which they are set forth is long, slow while coming to its end, moving sluggishly and without those moments of dramatic climax which pick up the emotions of an audience." W. P. Eaton

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 F 17 '29 300w

Reviewed by I: Goldberg

N Y World p11m My 19 '29 240w

"It is all done with immense care and insight. Perhaps it is too long in parts and the diplomacy is sometimes more discursive than dramatic. None the less this is a play in which the dramatist would make the actors into the abstracts and brief chronicles of our time. He takes the actual conflict of history and shapes it to his compassionate purposes and his sense of comedy."

+ — Sat R 147:79 Ja 19 '29 400w

"It is the charm and disappointment of his work that to the end it maintains eagerness while failing to resolve doubt. It offers the unsatisfying but tempting pleasures of caviare."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p931 N 29 '28 780w

Wis Lib Bul 25:158 My '29

GRANVILLE-BARKER, HARLEY GRANVILLE, ed. Eighteen-seventies. 290p $3 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

820.4 English literature—History and criticism 29-18241

Essays by Fellows of the Royal society of literature. Contents: Preface; Lord Houghton and his circle, by The Marquess of Crewe; Novelists of the 'seventies, by Hugh Walpole; Some women novelists of the 'seventies, by Walter de la Mare; Andrew Lang in the 'seventies—and after, by G: Saintsbury; The poetry of the 'seventies, by J: Drinkwater; The women poets of the 'seventies, by V. Sackville-West; The theatre in the 'seventies, by Sir Arthur Pinero; Tennyson, Swinburne, Meredith—and the theatre, by Harley Granville-Barker; Critics and criticism in the 'seventies, by F: S. Boas; Oxford in the 'seventies, by R. W. Macan; Cambridge in the 'seventies, by W. E. Heitland.

---

Boston Transcript p4 O 11 '29 900w

"It is not always the most interesting subjects in themselves that make the most absorbing books, and this collection of essays is accordingly full of entertainment. On the theater in the seventies, possibly the least promising topic of all, Sir Arthur Pinero is exceedingly amusing."

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 S 21 '29 450w

"A somewhat sorry and dispirited performance. There is a high-toned air to the book, but it lacks substance. A fair match for the volume of 'Academy Papers' published by members of the American Academy of Arts and Letters in 1926." H. L. Mencken

— Nation 129:440 O 16 '29 500w

"The decade was not a very interesting one. It was an interlude between the dying down of the great Victorians and the first squeaks of the naughty 'nineties. Still, we should not forget the great æsthetic yearning which came in with the '70's and the Pre-Raphaelite brotherhood." Francis Birrell

Nation and Ath 45:569 Jl 27 '29 680w

"The purpose of this volume is so intelligent, the various contributors have done their business so thoroughly and so well, that it is only regretfully and after some hesitation that a reader admits to himself that the general impression he receives has, on the whole, been fragmentary and rather disappointing. It is difficult, at the same time, to see how it could have been otherwise. . . On the other hand, there is much to enjoy—the editor, Mr. Granville-Barker, treating of 'Tennyson, Swinburne, Meredith—and the Theatre,' Professor George Saintsbury's delightful appreciation of Andrew Lang, and Miss Victoria Sackville-West, whose essay ranks very high indeed among its companions, appraising an exuberant crop of female versifiers."

+ — New Statesman 33:444 Jl 13 '29 630w

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz

N Y Times p20 N 10 '29 600w

"The whole volume is a sort of kinema-show with moving pictures in colors thrown on a white sheet of paper. It is an instructive and worthy undertaking, with much also to amuse and stimulate." N. H. Dole

+ Portland Evening News p8 D 10 '29 1450w

Reviewed by J. W. Cunliffe

Sat R of Lit 6:361 N 9 '29 2000w

"The volume is not a heavy or academic exploration of the period, and there is not even much that is new in its pages. The most informative studies are those of Oxford and Cambridge. The Royal Society of Literature, however, obviously spent many pleasant evenings in retrospect; and we can now share their pleasure. No doubt those readers will find it most poignant whose own memories will be stirred and who will feel themselves some quiet regret for those good old days."

Spec 143:56 Jl 13 '29 750w

Springf'd Republican p8 N 2 '29 380w

"If these friendly researches into a vanishing decade fail to uncover any rich ore, they nevertheless result in a book that is rich in observation, analysis and, at times, humor." Vera Kelsey

+ Theatre Arts Mo 14:87 Ja '30 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p511 Je 27 '29 1850w

GRATTAN, CLINTON HARTLEY. Bitter Bierce; a mystery of American letters. 291p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Bierce, Ambrose 29-7626

"Mr. Grattan devotes only ninety-six pages to a consideration of Bierce's long and exciting career. In the critical portions of his book Mr. Grattan is on much surer ground, and writes with much force and plausibility. He divides his criticism into three sections: Literature; Ideas; Conclusions. Mr. Grattan discounts Bierce's reputation as poet, philosopher and wit, and stresses his ability as a short-story writer." —N Y Evening Post

---

Booklist 25:392 Jl '29

"Mr. Grattan has written a biographical sketch and a criticism of Bierce's work which, despite a certain dryness, might serve as a model for a first essay; he gives his sources, checks up references, strips away rumor and puts together the armature of fact upon which future descriptions of Bierce must be modeled. If I have any serious quarrel with Mr. Grattan's portrait, it is that in doing justice to the man of letters he has done something less than justice to the legendary Bierce." L: Mumford

GRATTAN, C. H.—Continued
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 24 '29 1600w
Boston Transcript p4 Ap 20 '29 420w
Cleveland Open Shelf p124 S '29
Reviewed by Carey McWilliams
— Nation 128:768 Je 26 '29 230w

"C. H. Grattan's 'Bitter Bierce' is intended as a sort of general introduction to the author. In the main it serves this purpose excellently." Napier Wilt
+ New Repub 58:338 My 8 '29 260w

" 'Bitter Bierce' does not make any fresh contribution to the available biographical information about Bierce. But it is one of the most carefully reasoned analyses of his work that have appeared, and one that should dispel a great deal of the misunderstanding that has grown up around the work of this rather sad and lonely figure in American letters." Carey McWilliams
+ — N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 9 '29 850w

"Mr. Grattan possesses the advantage of a cool critical mind and the consequent result of his labors is, perhaps, the best and most satisfying summing up of Bierce as a literary force that we have." Herbert Gorman
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 24 '29 1000w

"The author has produced a volume which ought to be in every library of American criticism. Here, for the first time, all the available facts about Bierce's life have been collected and sifted, and a comprehensive summary of his work is presented." Ernest Boyd
+ Outlook 151:470 Mr 20 '29 830w
Pratt p33 autumn '29
Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:18 My '29 140w
St Louis 27:271 S '29

" 'Bitter Bierce' abounds in errors, both of fact and of interpretation; it accepts without questions the old myths about Bierce and adds new ones. Its scholarship is shoddy; construction, clumsy; and style, impoverished: it is incompetent." Frank Monaghan
— Sat R of Lit 6:207 O 5 '29 900w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 120w

"The material is sufficient to give the reader a connected, if not complete, story. It is also sufficient background for the critical estimate, which is Mr Grattan's main purpose. While this might have been more carefully composed, it is spirited, intelligent and reasonably objective."
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '29 500w

"His study is a sensible and solid performance." S. T. Williams
+ Yale R n s 19:192 autumn '29 40w

GRAVES, ROBERT. Mrs. Fisher; or, The future of humour. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 95p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]
808.7 Humor 29-8758

A rather labored discussion of the future of humour by the author of a more amusing essay in this same series, "Lars Porsena; or, The future of swearing."

---

"His essay is a medley of stories—both good and bad—and after that a few thrusts at 'Punch' " Lisle Bell
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Je 9 '29 40w

"An excellent piece of humor of the present, incorporating samples of humor of the past and a forecast of what the human of the future would be if the slap-stick variety and the realistic farce were developed to their proper perfection."
+ Christian Century 46:1017 Ag 14 '29 50w
Reviewed by E. V. Knox
Nation and Ath 44:sup379 D 8 '28 1000w
Nature 124:685 N 2 '29 90w

"Mr. Graves, one feels, must have been uneasy in writing this essay. He was bound, in an attempt to forecast the humour of another generation, to attack current standardised humour (Punch, music-halls, journalese), and at the same time to develop hints of something new. He has succeeded in writing an amusing book, but actually he has had recourse to an old formula of Mr. Chesterton's in writing it. This consists in finding jokes where they do not exist."
New Statesman 32:166 N 10 '28 180w

GRAVES, ROBERT. Poems (1914-26). 217p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran
821 29-20836

Poems written during twelve years, collected and arranged by the author in five groups: 1914-20, consisting of early lyrics and Welsh ballads; the War poems of 1915-19; later narratives and lyrics, 1920-23; reflective poems; 1923-25; and a final group of recent poems, including nine published for the first time.

---

Booklist 26:110 D '29

"In many of the recent poems the critic is uppermost. 'Marmosite's Miscellany' is the best of these. The 'Miscellany' is representative of Mr. Graves's later poetry. The imagination of the intellect and the perspective of wit mark his work with greater accent than delicate lyricism or pure narrative." Ruth Lechlitner
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 O 20 '29 520w

"There are nursery rhymes, like 'Mirror, Mirror' and 'Blackhorse Lane,' folk-songs, like 'Henry and Mary,' ballads, like 'A Frosty Night,' and its counterpart, 'Apples and Water.' They fairly sing themselves, and one wonders whether any of them have been set to music, or whether Graves is as hostile to such marriages as to the escape of his poems into other men's collections. It is not that they fail to stand alone, but that the sheer lilt of them inevitably suggests a candle-lit piano and a singing voice." Babette Deutsch
+ New Repub 30:277 O 23 '29 1200w

"Mr. Graves is nothing if not industrious; his 'Collected Poems' and his bibliography prove the fact that he is never idle. Yet for all his labor, he never strikes below the surface. His satires lack force because they are projected against minor personalities engaged in petty literary warfare. His facility taints even his charming attempts at pastoral lyricism (suggestive of Davies) with a blight of doggerel." Horace Gregory
— + N Y Evening Post p10m O 12 '29 120w

"This volume makes one realize that Graves, in his unpretentious way, has been an untiring experimentalist, trying many forms, investigating the possibilities of internal rhyme, utilizing assonance and creating a score of new methods for disentangling conventional devices from conventional effects. One realizes, too, that Mr. Graves's search for originality is not the result of making novelty a fetish; it rises from a strong conviction that beauty can never be expressed in outworn terms, that a new vision demands new poetic resources." Granville Hicks
+ N Y World p11m O 6 '29 450w

GRAVES, WILLIAM BROOKE, ed. Readings in public opinion; its formation and control; with an introd. by Clyde L. King. 1281p il $6 Appleton
301 Public opinion. Publicity. Propaganda. Press. Censorship 28-28823

The book consists of over 200 selected readings from contemporary writers dealing with the influence of public opinion through all its various agencies—school, pulpit, press, theater, moving pictures, radio, literature, art and oratory, the work of private organizations like the Chamber of commerce and the public relations counsel, and the influence exerted on the public mind by political parties and leaders, the lobby, lawmakers, courts and censors.

"This volume is a valuable aid to the publicist or the student of human behavior. Although it was probably not compiled with the idea of offering a textbook on the subject, the author has placed at the end of each section topics for further investigation and discussion. This is an excellent volume to have handy on the bookshelf for reference and ideas." Anne Towse

+ Am J Pub Health 19:1275 N '29 400w

"Some of the observations reproduced, notably those by A. Lawrence Lowell, Walter Lippmann, Edward Alsworth Ross, Rollo Ogden, Ivy L. Lee, James Bryce, Graham Wallas, and Frank I. Cobb make real contributions to our knowledge of public opinion. Others are apparently intended to supply (what is certainly much needed) some scheme of fundamental explanation which might reduce to order and make intelligible the wide range of materials which the volume covers. Some of the best things in the book are by the editor. Professor Graves's analyses and documents at the end of the chapters are particularly valuable and stimulating." R. E. Park

+ Am J Soc 34:1192 My '29 360w

"For the teacher, this book furnishes a useful source of suggestion and illustration. The advanced student, also, might profit by the exercise of preparing, on the basis of this book, a more generalized picture of his own, with an attempt to weigh the factors involved. For formal classes the work could be used as a basic text, provided it did not overwhelm the immature undergraduate, who usually has less background than is commonly assumed." James Hart

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:473 My '29 560w

"Certainly no one interested in public opinion can afford to be without this book. It should be in every public and college library in the land." P: H. Odegard

+ Ann Am Acad 143:376 My '29 330w

Booklist 25:269 Ap '29

"Doubtless no more complete volume on Public Opinion has ever been edited. The story of the voice of the people is told in logical sequence by over two hundred eminent authorities. Every phase, every angle, is considered, from the explanation of the group mind to the power of radio in present day life. It is a complete survey, highly interesting and timely."

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 15 '28 100w

"The scheme is admirable, so far as the student is concerned, but for the technician who is seeking advice on method it is hardly useful. Although the social sciences are largely uncrystallized, enough data have been gathered to permit Professor Graves to eliminate the archaic notions expressed by many of the writers he quotes. And he has certainly been misadvised in regard to the importance of psychological study. The basis of any work on public opinion must be a knowledge of social psychology. Professor Graves has not sufficiently stressed this factor." Bernard Smith

+ — N Y Evening Post p8m D 29 '28 560w

"Bluntly, this is a cheap library of the best thought in the field, gathered with vast research, alertness, and a catholic mind. Little of importance is lacking and much that is unexpected and fascinating is given. . . This seems to me an indispensable source-book whether you need advice on a current problem, or the stimulus of sharp thinking, or use its groundplan as an outline for study of the entire field. It is a chart of social controls." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 61:743 Mr 1 '29 220w

GRAY, JUDD. Doomed ship; the autobiography of Judd Gray; prepared for publication by his sister Margaret Gray. 251p $2 Liveright

B or 92 28-29625

Judd Gray's story of his life, his infatuation for Ruth Snyder and their joint crime in killing her husband.

"This life story of Judd Gray is full of the characteristic rantings of a last minute convert. You have his life story, but there is little or no significance to the moral which he attempts to point."

Bookm 68:xi Ja '29 70w

"Such a man, such circumstances, writing on such a theme—who could expect anything but sentimental slush and tawdry appeals to prejudice? But the book is not cheap. It is an honest attempt to unravel the mystery of his perplexing fate." W. D. Lane

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 20 '29 800w

"It is to be regretted that this amazing autobiography by the recently notorious Mr. Gray will be read chiefly by sensation-seekers for the sake of whatever lurid information they may be able to extract. The readers who will examine the story for its psychological value, or for its testimony of human weakness, will be in the minority. Yet it is for such qualities that the book is worth reading. To those who wish to see how little different their own chances are from those of this spineless but pathetic man, the book is important." A. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 9 '29 530w

GRAY, WILLIAM SCOTT, and MUNROE, RUTH. Reading interests and habits of adults; a preliminary report. (Studies in adult educ.) 305p $3.50 Macmillan

374.1 Books and reading 29-8235

An inquiry into the reading habits of adults of various social groups undertaken by the dean of the College of education of the University of Chicago and Miss Munroe, formerly of the Cleveland public library, has furnished the interesting data for this report.

Booklist 25:308 My '29

"The authors have compiled painstakingly a body of data on the reading practices of young and old Americans which should be of interest to all who read, write or publish."

+ Bookm 70:vi S '29 190w

"An interesting and suggestive book to any one interested in adult education or in the influence of reading on general development."

+ J Home Econ 21:451 Je '29 160w

N Y Times p21 My 12 '29 330w

"This book about what adult Americans read, and why, should be in the libraries of every one interested both in the publication and distribution of reading matter and in the welfare of his fellows."

+ Outlook 151:548 Ap 3 '29 120w

St Louis 27:191 Je '29

Reviewed by Oak Amidon

Survey 62:456 Jl 15 '29 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p687 S 5 '29 70w

Wis Lib Bul 25:191 Je '29

World Tomorrow 12:378 S '29 30w

GREELY, ADOLPHUS WASHINGTON. Polar regions in the twentieth century; their discovery and industrial evolution. 270p il $4 Little [12s 6d Harrap]

919.8 Arctic regions. Antarctic regions 28-23632

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"A partly rewritten, condensed, up-to-date edition of Handbook of polar discoveries which has been out of print for some time."

Booklist 25:178 Ja '29

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 2 '29 500w

"General Greely has brought together a suggestive array of facts on the exploitation of the lands beyond the Arctic Circle."

+ Geog R 19:527 Jl '29 170w

"A well considered, compact and useful handbook that makes attractive reading." H: E. Armstrong

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 6 '29 1450w

Pratt p30 winter '29

GREELY, A. W.—Continued

St Louis 27:98 Mr '29

Times [London] Lit Sup p889 N 7 '29 330w

Wis Lib Bul 25:29 Ja '29

GREEN, MRS ELIZABETH ATKINSON (LAY). Negro in contemporary American literature; an outline for individual and group study. (Extension bul.) 98p $1; pa 50c Univ. of N.C. press [4s 6d Oxford]

810.9 Negro literature. Negro authors. Negroes in literature 29-1859

"For anyone interested in the negro and his place in American literature, this volume is excellent for reference. It is for individual and group use, forming a comprehensive outline of what the negro has done in every field of literary endeavor. Fourteen subjects have been outlined with a brief introduction at the head of each chapter. Complete lists of authors are then given, both negro and white authors who have written about the negro, together with the publishers."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 25:201 F '29

"It is a handy book to own; practically any question concerning contemporary negro writing may be answered at a moment's notice."

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 9 '29 100w

St Louis 27:54 F '29

GREEN, FITZHUGH. Bob Bartlett, master mariner. 211p il $1.75 (6s) Putnam

B or 92 Bartlett, Robert Abram. Arctic regions 29-16835

A life of Captain Bob Bartlett of Arctic fame, written for boys and girls.

Booklist 26:75 N '29

"It is a thrilling tale of voyages to tropic and to polar regions, of shipwrecks, narrow escapes, hardships, perils, adventures of many kinds, and Fitzhugh Green writes it in vigorous, dashing style."

+ N Y Times p12 N 17 '29 120w

"Mr. Green, who has eluded ice-packs himself, builds up a skipper at once hardy and sensitive, humorous and stern, and certainly every inch a man." T. M. Longstreth

+ Sat R of Lit 6:426 N 16 '29 120w

GREEN, FREDERICK CHARLES. French novelists, manners & ideas, from the renaissance to the revolution. 239p $3 Appleton [7s 6d Dent]

843.09 French fiction—History and criticism [29-10516]

The author, professor of French at the University of Toronto, discusses the evolution of the modern French novel and of the two tendencies which have most affected its course—romanticism and realism. A valuable feature of this outline is the inclusion of some of the minor novelists of the period, with descriptions of their work.

"As an approach to the study of the French novel, its manners and ideas during the period from the Renaissance to the Revolution, this work commends itself by its clarity of critical equipment and its expert knowledge of the field."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 5 '29 100w

"In the compass of little more than two hundred pages Professor Green has studied the subject with such clear prospectives that all the essential information appears in orderly sequence, and without that display of erudition which so often obscures and confuses the theme of a literary historian."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '29 190w

"Mr. Green's style is pleasant and unacademic. He has done as well with a bulky subject as we can reasonably expect of anyone." E. M. Benson

+ Nation 128:sup482 Ap 17 '29 100w

"It is not often that a literary study of such a wide sweep of detailed activities is so simply and readably handled."

+ New Statesman 32:334 D 15 '28 180w

"An excellent study of the French novel." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 23 '29 150w

"It is both an informative and entertaining record of the manners and ideas of the period surveyed and of their influence upon the novel. . . The whole book is a survey written with unusual spirit, with critical perceptions of varying styles, with appreciation of the historical method, and in readable prose. It is a valuable addition to literary history." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 11 '29 700w

"Professor Green's history of French fiction from the renaissance to the revolution is packed with information. Professor Green does his work neatly, thoroughly and unimpressively. While written in a perfectly readable style, his book is rather useful than interesting."

+ Outlook 151:513 Mr 27 '29 80w

"Professor Green has written a remarkable little book. The real cause of the unusual distinction of his book is that he has grasped his subject as a whole. His knowledge has not merely prevented him from succumbing to the traditional generalizations of criticism in his province, but it has enabled him to make new and more adequate generalizations of his own."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 7 '29 900w

GREEN, GEORGE HERBERT. Terror-dream. 126p $1.75 Dutton

135 Dreams. Psychoanalysis [29-11368]

This essay explains the significance of the terror-dream so frequent in childhood, and the light which it throws on common failures of adaptation in the school and the home.

Bookm 69:viii Ag '29 130w

"The book as a whole may be commended because it is an interesting and enlightening discussion of the interpretation of certain types of dreams which cannot fail to give the reader who is uninformed in psycho-analytic ways of thinking a very considerable insight, not only into the ways in which the meanings of dreams are arrived at but into the very great complexities of the subject of dream interpretation." W: A. White

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ag 18 '29 250w

GREEN, HENRY. Living. 269p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

In a style which dispenses with the definite article and other unnecessary impediments the author blocks out the daily business of living of the employees in a Birmingham factory, and particularly the story of Miss Lily Gates, who kept house for two of the workers.

"Such a method as this has very real advantages, but I feel that Mr. Green has achieved them at too great a sacrifice. He has given up unity and flow and a single focus point. His novel does not grow like a tree nor run like a river, but is put together like one of the thoroughly modern products of the Dupret works. I wish he would write a story that would be an organic growth instead of a piece of engineering, for he has shown himself to be a brilliant observer and an honest craftsman." R. M. Linscott

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ag 11 '29 600w

New Repub 61:204 Ja 8 '30 480w

"Just as in a telegram one ignores the strange diction and looks for the sense of the message, so the mind quickly acclimatizes itself to Mr. Green's practical, ungarnished prose. There are, however, dark moments when one asks oneself: Have these bare, uncouth arrangements of words been chosen to express an industrial civilization, or do they exhibit a regrettable familiarity with the work of Miss Gertrude Stein? A casual glance at such a passage as this would not encourage one to read the book. But it is well worth reading." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 147:716 My 25 '29 530w

"The plot in the novel is comparatively simple and unobtrusive; the strongest emphasis is always upon character and upon the social background that produces character. Using this emphasis, Mr. Green builds up a solid, workmanlike novel. . . As we read we grow accustomed to Mr. Green's terseness, which is even more accentuated than Mr. Hemingway's, and we feel its strength and intensity."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:258 O 12 '29 300w

"If Living gets less attention than it deserves, it will be because the author's absurd antipathy to the definite article, and his other unsuccessful experiments in technique, will deter the exasperated reader from realizing the cruelty, strength, and agony of his subject matter. But, if you are patient, the figures of an industrial tragedy grotesque, pitiful, tender, brutal, or foolish, emerge in accusing reality; and you know what life is like in an iron foundry, and on what trifles depend the destinies of many men and women." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 142:sup706 My 4 '29 110w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '30 150w

" 'Living' is interesting because behind every sentence the author's energy, his intense concentration on and belief in his work are visible. The reader is, as it were, taken by the scruff of the neck and forced into the town of Bridesly, Birmingham, into the factories and houses where the characters work and live. Mr. Green does not seem to care in the least whether the reader is thrilled, bored, delighted, or irritated by what he sees—he is simply concerned in showing him the existence of that town, that factory and those people. . . If Mr. Green had strained a little less violently to convey this feeling of actuality and had spent a little more time in giving his characters inward shapes as well as elaborately detailed outward shells, he would have succeeded far better in his primary purpose."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p768 O 3 '29 360w

GREEN, JULIAN. Dark journey; tr. from the French by Vyvyan Holland. 376p $2.50 Harper 29-18002

Julian Green's third novel, winner of the Harper prize, is like its predecessors a study in morbid psychology. The background of the story is provincial France and its central figure a young tutor whose life has been poisoned by monotony, disappointment and a dreary marriage. The chance sight of a young and beautiful girl looses emotions that burst the barriers of his pent heart and lead him on a dark journey of misery and sadistic crime, in which other lives, also lived out of the sunlight, are involved.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ja 13 '29; and Wilson bulletin 3:518 Mr '29

---

Booklist 26:70 N '29

Reviewed by Margaret Wallace

Bookm 70:202 O '29 170w

"His distinction, especially a distinction for so young a writer, is that he tells a straightforward story which becomes absorbing because of the depth and sureness of his insight and beautiful in its inevitability, without recourse to tricks of clever writing or manipulated event. It is solid stuff shot with intensity, at once as murky and as electric as an August thunderstorm. . . To dismiss it as sordid is to ignore the fact that it is just from such upgushings of unsuspected or despised emotion that the great tragedies—say, Hamlet—are drawn." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 25 '29 1050w

" 'The Dark Journey' is not entirely a work of genius, but it shows so obviously traits of genius that whether one likes it or not, whether one shudders at its content or sees it merely as a strange psychological study, whether one admires the almost stark style of the author or finds in his rare similes a strangely thrilling beauty, one cannot deny that there is something tremendous in it." F. B.

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p6 Ag 24 '29 700w

"Green's power is intense but his range, so far as he has yet revealed it, is narrow. He knows only the somber. These characters are without exception pathological, deformed personalities. Every one of them would be a problem for a psychiatrist. I can understand the awarding of the prize to him for consummate skill in doing what he set out to do, But why did he want to do it?"

+ — Christian Century 46:1513 D 4 '29 180w

"The psychology is above the average and the technique admirable. But it is a cold and pitiless book." L. L. Irvine

+ Nation and Ath 46:52 O 12 '29 120w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 60:156 S 25 '29 850w

"Mr. Green undoubtedly creates a world of a sort, but it remains between the covers of his book; it does not thence emerge into any contact with the world of common experience." E. S.

— + New Statesman 34:124 N 2 '29 800w

"He has imagination, intuition, a rare sense of detail. And in this third book of his, the amount of his detail does not impede the rapidity of his action, for he is structurally economical and the threads of his story, the fates of his characters, are woven skillfully together." L: Kronenberger

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 25 '29 1200w

"Through a medium of direct and limpid prose, the terrible climax of the novel is attained in a magnificent crescendo of agony and austere beauty. Mr. Green illumines his sinister characters with the radiance of poetic insight, dealing with light and shade like a Rembrandt. There is at all times a fine harmony of character and action with background."

+ Outlook 152:708 Ag 28 '29 450w

Reviewed by Johan Smertenko

Outlook 153:388 N 6 '29 240w

"Common sense shows us that The Dark Journey is as one-sided and ridiculous as the insipid 'glad' books. Its distinguished workmanship is little more than the coating that may keep it from decaying within a few years." R. G. Berkelman

— Portland Evening News p15 S 24 '29 580w

"The skill of this narrative is only surpassed by the author's much more characteristic excellence, his subtle and thorough interpreting of human motives. More than in 'Avarice House,' much more than in 'The Closed Garden,' he has related these morbid lives to a life outside, given them continuity and a background in the real world. And he has done so without sacrificing the great concentration which is his special strength. The town and its other inhabitants are alive; they share in the action and enrich the central characters. Through this broadening of his interests, he may yet fulfil the literary hopes that both France and America hold out for him." M. A. Best

+ Sat R of Lit 6:129 S 14 '29 850w

"As a study in murder itself the book has a condensed and sombre power; but as a study in the effects of murder it has the logic but not quite the substance of plausibility." V. S. Pritchett

+ — Spec 143:503 O 12 '29 420w

"Whatever the reason 'The Dark Journey' does not gain upon comparison with 'The Closed Garden.' It represents more ambitious undertaking rather than greater achievement."

Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '29 480w

"The whole is a picture of the damned, so powerfully drawn that even the prosaic landscape seems changed into some dream-Inferno.

GREEN, JULIAN—Continued
Admiration for the execution and the sombre force of this story cannot be qualified! what is wanting is that which should save its effect from being purely repulsive."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p816 O 17 '29 360w

Wis Lib Bul 25:323 O '29

GREENBIE, SYDNEY. Frontiers and the fur trade. 235p $3.75 Day

971 Frontier and pioneer life. Fur trade. Indians of North America. Trapping
29-7211

Mr Greenbie treats the frontier of America as merely an extension of the frontiers of Europe and the fur trade of this continent as an expansion of the European. He describes the fur trading and fishing interests in America and their part in American history, showing how the trapper was always the first to push through the wilderness and how the post settled by the fur trader later became the city.

"As a piece of vivid and impressionistic writing on a picturesque theme, the volume will doubtless have a certain popular appeal. But as a contribution to the history of the fur trade it can not be taken seriously. The author's presentation of his material is characterized by a vagueness or looseness of expression which is somewhat exasperating to one who is in search of accurate information." W. E. Stevens
— + Am Hist R 34:882 Jl '29 420w

Booklist 25:354 Je '29

Bookm 69:xiv My '29

"He tells his story with zest and exuberance, and sometimes with brilliance, though too often an otherwise excellent style is marred by a straining for effect and smartness. . . The narrative is an episodic one, loosely and sometimes incoherently strung together, and its sins of omission are manifold and serious. . . Even more serious is the manner in which Mr. Greenbie overstates his case: his all too-apparent lack of historical background and historical perspective."
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 Ap 21 '29 600w

Boston Transcript p4 My 4 '29 230w

Reviewed by H. A. Innis
Canadian Hist R 10:347 D '29 230w

Cath World 130:250 N '29 200w

Christian Century 46:967 Jl 31 '29 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p92 Je '29

"A clean-cut, very readable account of the pioneer America of the trapper, and the exploration of the wilderness in terms of peltry—mink, beaver, otter, sable and wildcat, muskrat, bear and seal." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 2 '29 60w

N Y Times p21 Ap 21 '29 350w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Ap '29 40w

"In this forest background he sees the main source of what is unique in our American culture, and the psychological and philosophical implications which he draws from this theory seem to us both true and interesting." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:440 Mr 13 '29 120w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:20 Ap '29 80w

St Louis 27:262 S '29

"Mr. Greenbie has dipped freely into both sources and secondary material and, from travel and reading, has produced a fairly readable series of journalistic articles which do not cohere into the form and substance of a book. The streams of history are deep, their waters, cross currents, and undertow, are the life-flow of centuries of mankind; and Mr. Greenbie is a floater. . . Loose generalizations and rhetoric are irritating in a book of history. The writing of history requires close reasoning from facts assembled in an orderly manner." C. L. Skinner
— + Sat R of Lit 5:798 Mr 23 '29 980w

GREENE, MRS ANNE (BOSWORTH). Lambs in March, and other essays. 274p $2.50 Century

814 28-25863

Essays on a variety of subjects, from an English childhood in the eighties, and Sketching Yosemite to five delightful chapters about farm life in Vermont, reintroducing several of the highly individual animals met in "The lone winter" (Book Review Digest, 1923).

Booklist 25:154 Ja '29

"When Mrs. Greene writes that 'six years of beauty on a mountain farm are enough to spoil one for other scenes' one recognizes that she is voicing her inner conviction. As for cities, they have become an alien world. Whether she writes about New Hampshire or Yosemite, it is always with the faith that is within her. Her tread is surest where the pavement ends."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 20 '29 220w

"For its humor, its humanity, its beauty, and tenderness and faith, this volume of essays, joyously and whimsically illustrated by Catherine E. Gray, will bring happy sympathy to many hearts." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p2 D 5 '28 1170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p29 F '29

"A strong and original book. It is full of the feeling of reality, a record of what many farmers experience, though few have the art to describe what they experience." C: Johnston
+ N Y Times p2 Je 30 '29 400w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 227:adv Ja '29 100w

"These essays speak in a pleasant, quiet, simple voice. If you like horses, the smell of wood smoke, snow-drifts, fog, the sound of thunder in the mountains, the feel of the hot August sun on your back—you'll like this book." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:74 Ja 9 '29 100w

Wis Lib Bul 24:342 D '28

GREENE, EVARTS BOUTELL, and MORRIS, RICHARD BRANDON. Guide to the principal sources for early American history (1600-1800) in the city of New York. 357p $7.50 Columbia univ. press

016.973 United States—History—Sources—Bibliography. New York (city)—Libraries
29-17492

A bibliography of the sources of American history from 1600-1800 to be found in New York City, with a directory of the principal libraries and other depositories. The materials are divided into printed sources and manuscript collections. The survey covers national, state and local history; and ecclesiastical, educational and commercial affairs within the years 1600-1800.

"This initial undertaking to list the source material for American history under subject headings is a praiseworthy piece of work which will prove a valuable aid to every student and librarian. It calls attention to many depositories of records not generally used." A. J. Wall
+ Am Hist R 35:413 Ja '30 550w

Am Pol Sci R 23:1057 N '29 130w

"For the genealogist, historian, or any other person interested in Colonial and Revolutionary history, and who wishes to do any research work in New York City, the book is invaluable."
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 2 '29 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1003 N 28 '29 220w

GREENE, GRAHAM. Man within. 316p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Heinemann]

29-20792

Outwardly this is a story of adventure in Sussex during the smuggling days, but it is the spiritual adventures of the "man within," the dual nature of the hero forever tormenting him, which most interests the author and, in turn, the reader.

"Mr. Greene's style is warm and glowing. His descriptions of the English countryside are very real and very alluring. A sense of values and a feeling for words keep him from sentimentality. The plot, given a bit at a time through the hero's mind, is adroitly handled." Paul Allen
+ Bookm 70:449 D '29 280w

"The finished skill with which Mr. Greene has integrated his materials into a complete and beautiful novel indicates a literary ability that has already been cultivated and disciplined. 'The Man Within' is a first novel, but it is an accomplishment, not merely the promise of future accomplishment." Enid Baird
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 O 20 '29 550w

Boston Transcript p5 N 13 '29 320w

"Mr. Greene not only succeeds in establishing his own style but by means of that style he creates an extraordinary lyric phantasm. As a study of a man of inherent moral weakness, of a coward and an unredeemed sinner whose one noble gesture occurs too late to be chastened of its futility, the interpretation is flawless. Moreover it is tense with mental mysteries and physical excitements, and it is expressed in language of rare purity, fluency, and richness, in a manner that is strikingly original, forceful, and graceful. It is a perfect adventure story of psychological treasure. One worries only lest the the author may have burned himself out in one trial." Florence Codman
+ Nation 129:468 O 23 '29 120w

"While it is possible to believe in each of the characters separately, it is difficult to believe in them in their connection with one another. However, Andrews, in himself, is a really good piece of work. Mr. Greene knows something about writing. His dialogue is, perhaps, too modern."
+ — Nation and Ath 45:602 Ag 3 '29 180w

"This is a first novel of excellent promise. . . The book, for one in which the psychological plays so prominent a part, is very dramatic."
+ N Y Times p6 O 27 '29 750w

"In the purity, fluency and discipline of his style, in the originality of his conception and in his sure sense of fictional values, Graham Greene sets with his first novel a high standard for future work." F. L. Robbins
+ Outlook 153:670 D 25 '29 350w

"An assured and competent piece of work. It is remarkable, too, that its author, a twenty-three year old London journalist, should have in his first novel forged a literary weapon sharp and sure enough to cut through the many lazy layers of public indifference. He has little or nothing of mannerism or trickery and he does not conceal his difficulties by carrying off his reader into an emotional region of pretty, but obscuring clouds." Bartlet Brebner
+ Sat R of Lit 6:287 O 19 '29 650w

"Mr. Greene has chosen a narrow compass, but moves therein with certainty and ease. The narrative is brisk; the setting, with its incidental glimpses of rural and country-town life, is picturesque but historically convincing; while the two main characters—Andrews, smuggler and 'informer,' with his dual nature, and Elizabeth, an ideal (but not sentimentalized) type of pure, serene, brave womanhood—are so vitally delineated that the closing tragedy comes with intense poignancy." Gilbert Thomas
+ Spec 142:982 Je 22 '29 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '29 530w

"To the not psycho-analytically minded it must seem incredibly perverse that Andrews should believe himself saved and not damned by his final exploits; but Mr. Greene has the right to choose his own psychological scalpel, and no one can deny that he wields it with a deftness astonishing in a first book."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p492 Je 20 '29 700w

GREENE, LORNA. Morning moods, and other poems; with an introd. by Anne Bosworth Greene. 109p $1.75 Century
811 28-30353

In a long introduction to these poems Anne Bosworth Greene sketches the short life of her daughter, the author, who at twenty-four was killed in an accident. The poems are in many moods. Love of nature and of music are the chief recurring themes.

Reviewed by C: Divine
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 17 '29 100w

"She has left the heritage which her brilliant young spirit possessed: a keen appreciation of sight and sound in nature, a recognition of the composers' meaning in orchestral music and a zest for living which impelled her to impart her joy in all these. Her delight was destined not to be dimmed, and so the little book stands as a record of radiant youth."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 5 '29 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p55 Ap '29

"In a quoted letter, the young poet admits that much free verse is so obscure and unintelligible as to 'arouse one to fury.' Her own work is marked by clarity, by delicacy of phrase, by beauty often tense, often exalted. To the present reviewer, most of it remains the lovely material for poetry rather than achieved poems." Shaemas O'Sheel
N Y World p11m Ja 13 '29 300w

GREENE, WARD. Cora Potts; a pilgrim's progress. 270p $2.50 J. Cape & H. Smith 29-17526

The odyssey of Cora Potts from the day when as a drab little person of fourteen she ran away from home with thirty-two dollars in stolen money, thru the period as Thelma La Monte, proprietress of a famous house, to that later day when as the mysterious but wealthy widow she married Captain Neal Carver.

Bookm 70:xxii N '29 160w

"The story has no particular importance or significance; the scope is narrow; the author has deliberately ignored countless opportunities with both characters and incidents; he occasionally strains words into unnatural expressions or false figures. But what of all this? Admit it as truth even, and add that Mr. Greene has written a novel which is entertaining and absorbing, with power and originality, a novel which not only will itself be read but will cause a second novel to be read as soon as Ward Greene writes it." Thayer Hobson
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 15 '29 1050w

Boston Transcript p4 S 4 '29 240w

"In this novel the scenery and setting are well done—e.g., the war time drives—but Cora is too bad to be interesting and her final success is not convincing. Ward Greene can really write, and it is too bad for him to waste his energy in merely producing a shocker."
— + Christian Century 46:1188 S 25 '29 50w

"This story is one of the most amusing and quaintly original novels which the South has yet contributed to American letters. . . Ward Greene has a pleasant and invaluable knack of making the most implausible material seem right and credible. His fantastic narrative carries the reader along without a murmur of dissent. Cora Potts herself is as vigorous and picaresque a figure as Jonathan Wilde."
+ N Y Times p14 Ag 25 '29 620w

"Mr. Greene had the good sense to realize that he had hold of a great comic story which would tell itself if the author only kept out of the way; and he never underlines the obvious. At first you laugh and shudder at Cora, but at the end you give her three hearty cheers. If the process that brings you to this is not art, it achieves a result that many artists may envy. The book will probably be assaulted by the guardians of our morals, so it is worth while to observe that it exemplifies the loftiest precepts of Christian morality, as set forth in the greatest of parables." Elmer Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 6:152 S 21 '29 670w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '29 330w

GREENLEAVES, WINIFRED. Trout Inn mystery. 314p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Collins]

29-20024

What happened to Mr Smith? Based upon the mysterious disappearance of this gentleman, the affairs at Trout Inn develop in several directions, not the least of which is the romance of Dick Talbot, Oxford undergraduate on a holiday, and Marny Schofield, daughter of an inimitable inn-keeper and his amazingly capable wife.

"Barring weak motives and a spell of hysterics near the end, Miss Greenleaves's story will suit the vast majority." Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 3 '29 130w

Boston Transcript p2 D 31 '29 300w

"A first detective story by a new author who shows her prentice hand in the first few pages, in which she makes her hero a little premature in scenting a mystery and a little too pushing in making its unravelment his concern. This initial fault, though it mars the story, does not ruin it, for the mystery of the disappearance of a guest at the Trout Inn is ingeniously contrived, and the manner of its solution is lively and entertaining."

+ — New Statesman 33:190 My 18 '29 60w

"The story is mildly interesting, but not tremendously exciting."

N Y Times p22 N 3 '29 130w

"Though one or two of the circumstances are a little far-fetched, the story is pleasantly written and is a good deal more natural than many of its kind."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Je 6 '29 120w

GREENWOOD, AUGUSTUS GEORGE (OWEN ARCHER, pseud.). Go as you please. 308p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Lane]

29-8010

The several young people of the story have taken from their elders a careless philosophy of "go-as-you-please." With no better standards to live by they run into disaster. When Joan's parents are divorced she turns down her old friend Basil and goes to live in a London apartment with her brother Ralph. She does not like his Bohemian way of life and marries a moody young man who wishes to save her from it. The moody young man is mad, and ultimately, when a period of melodramatic horrors has ended in divorce, Joan goes back to good old Basil and the country.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ap 7 '29 100w

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 9 '29 230w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 2 '29 40w

"There has already been so much said on the question of modern youth that repetition of the stock phrases and sentiments would seem to be an inadequate excuse for another novel on the subject. Certainly Mr. Archer's very evident skill as an author could have been better employed than in their recapitulation."

— N Y Times p7 F 17 '29 400w

"This novel is written earnestly about an earnest heroine. . . . One is rather inclined to attribute Joan's difficulties to her own lack of imagination and immaturity. She is certainly not the character to whom Mr. Archer can safely entrust the burden of his argument. For this reason, despite his sincerity, the obvious constructive intent of the book is not successful."

— Sat R of Lit 5:784 Mr 16 '29 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p521 Jl 12 '28 220w

GREENWOOD, ERNEST. Prometheus, U.S.A. 213p il $2.50 Harper

644.2 Fire. Fuel. Heating—History 29-8796

The story of the Fire-bringer, and a discussion of the effect of his gift on the history of mankind is background for an account of present-day uses of fire and fuel in industry and domestic life, and for a discussion of the way in which possession of the sources of fire and fuel is tied up with modern economics and politics.

Booklist 26:16 O '29

"It is a continuously fascinating recital, presented in a popular vein and with just enough recourse to statistics to make it impressive yet not enough to make it burdensome."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 16 '29 130w

"This book will undoubtedly prove to be of great practical assistance to those who are bothered by the domestic or industrial problems of heating. To all who read it, it will be entertaining." M. G.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 27 '29 210w

Wis Lib Bul 25:158 My '29

GREGORY, JACKSON. Mystery at Spanish hacienda (Eng title Rapidan). 293p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

29-17087

Rapidan, mysterious and itinerant character, has a cozy little house on wheels drawn by horses. On his way to the Spanish hacienda he saves a fugitive, Jim Terril, from death in the desert and helps him escape. This act leads him into the mystery of Bill Smith's supposed death, the part Señor Don Luis Alarcon plays in the mystery, and, most important of all, friendship with and love for charming Vega Alarcon.

"A good story of riding, shooting and romance."

+ Bookm 70:xxxiv O '29 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 22 '29 120w

"Here is mystery enough to puzzle and intrigue one, here is fighting enough to make it a brave tale."

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 4 '29 220w

"A better class 'Western,' with a really good twin mystery interest, round which all the excitement—there is plenty of gun-play—about Spanish Hacienda circles." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 17 '29 80w

Sat R of Lit 6:324 O 26 '29 130w

"Mr. Gregory handles the intricacies of his plot skillfully."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p750 S 26 '29 150w

GREGORY, JACKSON. Sentinel of the desert. 310p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

29-4210

Julian Hawk, known as Captain Colorado, rides thru Mexico of the old days on a secret mission. He meets strange characters: Pedro, the Monkey man; El Topo; Chavez, the Squirrel; Blondino, a border bandit; and Zambo, a white negro. But there was also Señorita Perrigo, whose name and station were so very different from what Julian supposed at first, and she was more important than the secret mission.

Booklist 25:322 My '29

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 17 '29 80w

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 16 '29 60w

"There is lots of swing, and the author 'steps on' his action with pleasing results." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p10m F 23 '29 60w

"The book is exactly what one would expect from the enumeration of its dramatis personae; and lovers of the usual thing in such stories will probably find it much to their liking."

N Y Times p19 Je 16 '29 160w

"Capt Colorado's exploits and escapes, together with his romances, are sufficient to keep the reader interested until the entirely satisfactory ending is reached."

+ Springf'd Republican p5e Je 2 '29 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p145 F 21 '29 180w

GREGORY, WILLIAM KING. Our face from fish to man; a portrait gallery of our ancient ancestors and kinsfolk together with a concise history of our best features; with a foreword by William Beebe. 295p il $4.50 (18s) Putnam
575 Evolution. Face. Man—Origin. Physiognomy 29-6464

The first chapter in this book is a highly graphic account of the evolution of the face and skull. The following chapters give the detailed story of the development of the features and a forecast of what the face of man may be a million years hence. The illustrations tell the whole story almost by themselves.

Booklist 25:348 Je '29
Bookm 69:xiv Je '29 100w

"The evolution of the different structures which go to make up the face is traced by Dr. Gregory in language which is sufficiently technical to be exact and yet simple enough so that its argument is plain to any one who wishes to give it careful attention. It is indeed a splendid illustration of the principle that a careful study of anything is the best introduction to a mastery of everything."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Je 23 '29 380w

"The volume is rich in evolutionary facts such as would be informing enough even apart from their relation to the countenance of man. It is written, moreover, in a spirit that would have made it well adapted for reading at the Dayton trial." E. N.
Boston Transcript p6 Mr 23 '29 680w

"Professor Gregory is entirely too modest in his statement that his book cannot expect much popularity in Tennessee. That is precisely the place where it should be popular, giving the fundamentalists a graceful way to capitulate and justify the ways of God to man. It is altogether a witty and fascinating volume, and might serve, among other things, as a suitable gift for those who are busy making the Almanac de Gotha." Gertrude Diamant
+ N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 13 '29 600w

"If you want to know how and from whom you inherited the features which you see each morning in the glass, you will be interested in this book. Each feature is treated separately, and it is a fascinating story that science tells." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:480 Mr 20 '29 120w
St Louis 27:196 Je '29
Spec 142:sup705 My 4 '29 580w

"A scientific account, well documented, profusely illustrated, showing the probable evolutionary stages from the fish to man is what the author actually offers. Any layman with care can understand this work." E. P. K.
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 29 '29 420w

"Lucid and richly illustrated narrative."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p381 My 9 '29 970w

GREIG, JOHN YOUNG THOMSON (JOHN CARRUTHERS, pseud.). Scheherazade; or, The future of the English novel. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 81p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]
823.09 English fiction—History and criticism 28-23330

The author finds no masterpiece among post-war novels; but he does find a mastery of technique which under the subjection of a new imaginative attitude towards the world—an attitude engendered by the widening horizons of philosophy and science—will create the masterpiece of the future.

Booklist 25:154 Ja '29
Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 42:356 D 8 '27 580w
Reviewed by J: Chamberlain
N Y Times p2 Jl 21 '29 600w

"Able and stimulating if not startling."
+ Outlook 150:1210 N 21 '28 100w

"One need not agree with everything that Mr Carruthers has said, and indeed his analysis of causes and conditions is far from convincing; but there is no doubt that he has placed his finger on a real fault of the modern novel, and on a fault that must be remedied if there is to be any real advance in fiction." H. K.
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 D 31 '28 600w

GREIG, MAYSIE. Satin straps. 301p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Long]
29-9796

The rather melodramatic love story of a little shop girl who divided all women into two classes, those who could afford satin lingerie straps, and those who could not. She belonged to the latter class, but her beauty brought her into the ranks of the satin strap class and there she stayed.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 16 '29 120w
Boston Transcript p3 Je 1 '29 430w

"The adventures of Jacqueline Grey, shop girl and model, provide material for an amusing tale. They are melodramatic, improbable, and not a little cheap, but nevertheless the story runs along quickly and amusingly."
+ — N Y Times p24 Je 9 '29 180w

GRENFELL, SIR WILFRED THOMASON. Labrador looks at the Orient; notes of travel in the Near and Far East. 298p il $5 Houghton [15s Jarrolds]
915 East (Far East)—Description and travel. Egypt—Description and travel. Palestine—Description and travel 28-25069

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:158 Ja '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 20 '29 150w

"As a book of travel it is not remarkable, but the Labrador doctor has keen eyes and broad sympathies and is a good traveling companion."
+ Christian Century 45:1430 N 22 '28 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p93 Je '29
N Y Times p23 Ja 13 '29 60w
Pratt p27 winter '29
St Louis 27:136 Ap '29
Wis Lib Bul 25:73 F '29

GREY, ZANE. Fighting caravans. 361p $2 Harper
29-20110

A romance of pioneer days on the old Sante Fe trail, in which Clint Belmet, friend of Kit Carson, fought his way through the plains, Indians and treacherous white men to peace and his one-time playmate, May Bell.

Booklist 26:119 D '29

"Here is a fine, upstanding, sympathetic interpretation of love and life in the Old West. . . One of Zane Grey's best, full of lively action, heart throbs, purple sage, shooting and pioneers. Best of all, those terrible moral lectures of Mr. Grey's are entirely absent this time." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 N 10 '29 140w

"Although the narrative moves slowly as a whole, the exciting episodes are recounted with more dash and spirit. But Mr. Grey should have taken more pains to make sure of the historical accuracy of some of his backgrounds if he wanted to paint a true picture of the times and place."
+ — N Y Times p26 N 17 '29 320w

"Zane Grey's latest romance transcends in interest most of his preceding tales because it smacks of reality. Indeed, it was needless to manufacture thrills here, for thrills were inherent in the unadorned records of hardy adventurers who blazed trails across western plains and planted homesteads."

GREY, ZANE—Continued
+ Springf'd Republican p6e D 15 '29 230w

GREY, ZANE. Wild Horse Mesa. 365p $2 Harper [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
28-23045

The pure and noble hero of this typical Zane Grey "western," champions an Indian girl and thereby makes an enemy. He later sets free a magnificent wild horse he has been at great pains to capture, and thereby wins the heroine.

Booklist 25:165 Ja '29

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 N 4 '28 150w

"Zane Grey has seldom provided greater contrasts in character than he gives us here or written a story of more romantic appeal."
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 3 '28 230w

Pratt p36 spring '29

"There is [here] the quality which probably accounts more than anything else for his immense sales—his ability to dramatize landscape, and to convey to dwellers in cities and in the small towns of the flatlands his own love for the painted mountains, and his sense of the latent romance that we all feel in the Rockies."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:410 N 24 '28 230w

"The story is told in the author's usual swinging descriptive style, and the action, if not always plausible, never lags."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 4 '28 400w

Wis Lib Bul 24:346 D '28

GRIBBLE, LEONARD R. Terrace suicide mystery (Eng title Gillespie suicide mystery). 329p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Harrap]
29-18936

Sir Giles Gillespie wrote to his son that he was going to end his life. However, when his body is found impaled on one of the iron spikes surrounding the terrace balcony, Inspector Collins decides that it looks more like murder than suicide. As events develop, it is evident that the actions of the butler, Thorne, bear watching. A beautiful woman who is the head of a gang of counterfeiters adds interest and complications to the story before the mystery of Sir Giles' death is solved.

"Written along typical Edgar Wallace lines with hidden rooms, plots and counter-plots, the story is intriguing."
+ Bookm 70:xxxii N '29 60w

"As a shocker it will do." Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 3 '29 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p317 Ap 18 '29 130w

GRIERSON, FRANCIS D. White camellia. 314p $2 Clode [7s 6d Bles]
29-6666

"Although the scene of this story is laid in England, an American secret order, whose insignia is the white camellia, plays an important part in it. Detective Inspector Sims of Scotland Yard is sent to Surrey to investigate the death of a scientist named Martin Stroud, who has, to all appearances, committed suicide. Sims takes with him his friend, Professor Wells, who has helped him in other cases, and these two soon find that there is more in the case than appears on the surface."—N Y Times

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 5 '29 100w

"The end of the story is dramatic and highly satisfactory to those who like to see villainy get its just deserts."
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 17 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '29 150w

GRIERSON, HERBERT JOHN CLIFFORD. Lyrical poetry of the nineteenth century. (Hogarth lectures on literature ser.) 159p $1.25 Harcourt [3s 6d Hogarth press]
821.09 English poetry—History and criticism
29-3190

In an introductory chapter the author deals with the eighteenth century lyricists—Blake, Wordsworth and Coleridge. The remaining five chapters take up the work of the lyric poets from Scott to Hardy, including Byron, Shelley, Keats, Tennyson, Browning, Arnold and the Pre-Raphaelite group.

Booklist 25:276 Ap '29

"The comments which Mr. Grierson offers are intelligent and sympathetic, revealing that immediate response to beauty which alone can justify any discussion of poetry. His impressive erudition never degenerates into pedantry. Though his judgments at times lack originality, they invariably suggest first-hand observation rather than the diligent perusal of 'authorities.'" Granville Hicks
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 F 17 '29 480w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 26 '29 650w

Dial 86:526 Je '29 100w

"Few critics could compress such illuminating and well-founded judgments into so few pages, or could discuss such diverse lyricists with a wisdom so calm and sympathetic. His erudition is vast but unpretentious, and the tone of the entire book suggests the loving familiarity with which one ought to regard living literature. One will look in vain, however, in Professor Grierson's book for any fresh insight into the nature of lyric poetry or any revealing interpretation of the successes and failures of the nineteenth century." Granville Hicks
+ — Nation 128:165 F 6 '29 200w

"His book contains no nonsense, a good deal of delicate appreciation, and an unflagging gusto. With its straightforward attack, its wealth of quotations, and its vigorous good sense, it is extremely useful both for students and for those on whose shelf of Victorian poets too much dust has settled." Barrington Gates
+ Nation and Ath 44:558 Ja 19 '29 220w

"Uncertainty over what kind of reader it aims for makes the volume a bit hard to evaluate. It contains very little that will be new or revealing to any one fairly well read in English poetry, although occasionally there is a shrewd suggestion." Edgar Johnson
+ — N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 26 '29 120w

St Louis 27:311 N '29

Reviewed by F. V. Morley
+ Sat R of Lit 5:826 Mr 30 '29 80w

GRIESE, FRIEDRICH. Winter; tr. from the German with a preface by D. L. Adler Hobman. 305p $2 (7s 6d) Longmans
29-9490

"Winter is peasant fiction of the kind best represented in writers like Selma Lagerlöf and Knut Hamsun. The poles of existence for this primitive peasantry in the North of Germany are drought in summer and snow in winter. Marriage is a step from one bleak farm to another. Life in the Long Row is precisely what it was a hundred years ago. . . Grita married Thord, although she knew that Jona loved her. The story thereafter alternates between its personal and impersonal elements, although the tragic development of the triangle theme certainly serves to sharpen the sense of impending disaster overhanging the whole hard-bitten little community."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Boston Transcript p2 Je 19 '29 170w

" 'Winter' is exceptionally good. The prose is rhythmic, simple and poetic and very adequate to the subject." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p11m My 4 '29 80w

" 'Winter' appeared originally in Germany two years ago. Since then it has definitely taken a place among the best presentations of the peasant psychology. The story is told sparingly and with intense reserve, and the intensity of emotion is felt rather than understood. The style is one of frank realism, but a realism that nevertheless seems to exist not for itself but for the deeper emotional values which it symbolizes."

+ N Y Times p16 My 12 '29 300w
Spec 142:908 Je 8 '29 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p400 My 16 '29 400w

GRIFFITH, WILLIAM. Greek gestures. 61p $2 Day

811 29-18352

This brief volume of epigrammatic verse, dedicated to John Erskine, consists of lines concerning certain famous Hellenes,—members of a race which, according to the author, has just such human characteristics as distinguish modern civilization.

---

"Completely successful fragments in the mode of the Greek Anthology: so successful, indeed, that they seem to imitate rather than enlarge the Greek epigrammatic manner. . . There is however a slight tendency to wittiness in some of the lines that is not Greek in feeling; it is, rather, the wit of the Roman satirists."

+ — Bookm 70:xvi N '29 70w
Boston Transcript p3 N 30 '29 230w

"Mr. Griffith touches things delicately. His verse is often thistledown. The laconic wisdom and humor of the poems of few lines that he has gathered together from his notebook do not, in this instance, quite make up for the slightness of his book. But it has, decidedly, the Greek accent."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:458 N 23 '29 100w

GRINNELL, GEORGE BIRD. Two great scouts and their Pawnee battalion; the experiences of Frank J. North and Luther H. North, pioneers in the great West, 1856-1882, and their defense of the building of the Union Pacific railroad. 299p $6 Clark, A.H.

970.1 Indians of North America—Wars. Pawnee Indians. Scouts and scouting. Frontier and pioneer life—The west. North, Frank Joshua. North, Luther Hedden
29-2718

"This is a story of the 'Last American Frontier' by one whose intimate acquaintance with the West dates back to 1870, and who has made a life-long study of the plains Indian and his habitat. The subject of the study are the North brothers, Frank J. and Luther H., who grew up on the Nebraska frontier of the 'fifties, in close touch with the Redmen of the region, especially the Pawnees. This early acquaintance with the Pawnees paved the way for the later organization by the brothers of the Pawnee Battalion for government scouting service in the wars against other tribes. . . The book is an attempt, not altogether successful, to establish the claim of the North brothers to inclusion in the select list of great Western scouts, along with Jim Bridger and Kit Carson."—Am Hist R

---

"The material is interesting in itself, but not especially well organized. For the student of history, the value of the work would have been considerably enhanced by the inclusion of a bibliography and the citation of authorities for important statements." J. B. Hedges

+ — Am Hist R 34:890 Jl '29 380w

"He has made the story absorbing in every page. The story is based on personal recollections of Major North, who has been known to the author for fifty years."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 13 '29 300w
Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:20 Ap '29 180w

GRINSTEAD, DURWARD. Elva. 353p $2.50 Covici

29-21209

"The real protagonist of 'Elva' is Ingrowing Hysteria. Mr. Grinstead, with an astonishing faithfulness to documents, has recreated the Salem witchcraft delusion of 1692. It was a serious business and Mr. Grinstead handles it seriously. The result is a novel of rather intense and painful power, cleverly welded and motivated by two abnormal passions—the hysterical outbursts of the precocious children who precipitated the tragedy and the ingrowing and passionately sexual love of Elva Pope for the Reverend George Burroughs. Elva is manifestly the heroine of the book and it is through her perverted passion that the reader comprehends to what lengths the dark subconscious in us may travel."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"I know of no more vivid recreation of the trials and examinations and hangings of the witch delusion than those to be found in 'Elva.' "

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 O 27 '29 550w

"Presented as fiction, as the story of Elva Pope and the effect of an idle, brooding Puritanism upon a very much alive woman, this novel offers a more faithful impression historically than most histories can boast of the witch-hunting in Salem." D: Loth

+ N Y World p11m N 3 '29 320w

"The book is crude and amateurish in style and construction, and Mr. Grinstead has been so negligent of his historic atmosphere as to permit himself the use of such modern slang as 'stunt,' 'phaze,' and 'Kind—nothing!' while wishing the reader to believe that he is writing of the seventeenth century. In spite of its many literary defects one must concede to the story a certain repellent power to seize upon—indeed almost to terrify—the imagination." M. P. Montague

— + Sat R of Lit 6:588 D 21 '29 480w

GROVE, FREDERICK PHILIP. Search for America; the odyssey of an immigrant. 392p $3 Carrier [12s 6d Brentano's]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"The search is intensely self-conscious, at times irritatingly so, yet on the whole, a more readable account, a more genuine work in the heterogeneous array of books on this inexhaustible subject is hardly to be found." Karsten Roedder

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 12 '29 420w

"An epic the power and color of whose telling only its readers can know. There are parts of it whose stark realism is unsurpassed in any book of its kind which we have read. And while certain criticisms, particularly those upon the difference between the theory and the practice of 'equal opportunity' in the United States, may sting at times, reflection will prove them not unreasonable." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 23 '29 1000w

"The book stands in a class of its own. It affords evidence of remarkable care in composition. The author says he has rewritten it eight times in thirty-two years."

+ New Statesman 34:supxii O 12 '29 230w

"His book deserves a good public, for it is of unusual interest and offers more fascination on each page than innumerable so-called creative writings."

+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 22 '28 230w

"It attempts nothing definite about America, or about humanity, and its value is, of course, enhanced by its fair-minded inconclusiveness. Mr Grove is the civilized sort of author who suggests rather than asserts—indicates rather than concludes." J: Chamberlain

N Y Times p8 D 30 '28 1400w

"The book is soberly written, but not very convincing."

— + Sat R 148:252 Ag 31 '29 180w
Sat R of Lit 5:785 Mr 16 '29 200w
Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 24 '29 560w

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD. Marriage crisis. 242p $2 (10s 6d) Longmans

173.1 Marriage 28-24799

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"To our way of thinking it is the best thing he has yet produced. It is not statistical and bears none of the ordinary marks of research technique. It is written directly out of rich experience and sound judgment." A. J. Todd

+ Am J Soc 34:939 Mr '29 320w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 45:1263 O 18 '28 100w

J Home Econ 21:133 F '29 100w

"Compared to Mr. Calverton's book, which is filled with facts, figures and statistics, this volume is a mere sketch and not a particularly interesting one at that." G: Joel

— N Y World p11m N 25 '28 180w

Reviewed by H. W. Kallen

Sat R of Lit 5:902 Ap 20 '29 120w

"Mr. Groves has few startling novelties to lay before us; yet he does, as the publisher announces, present us with a useful survey that will 'force every reader to take stock of his own opinions.' "

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p294 Ap 11 '29 860w

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD, and GROVES, MRS GLADYS (HOAGLAND). Parents and children. 196p il $2 (9s) Lippincott

173.5 Parent and child. Family. Children—Management 28-27547

Discussion of problems met in ordinary homes, and situations which must be explained to normal children. Partial contents: Before marriage—what? The family—its development and meaning; The emotional life of the child; What to tell children about death; How shall I answer my child's questions about life? The dangerous mother; Inside tips for fathers; Parenthood training.

---

"In a field teeming with daring and unfeeling exploiters, these authors stand out for their sound psychology and their sympathetic and constructive treatment of family relationships." H. G. Rowell

+ Am J Pub Health 19:702 Je '29 450w

Booklist 25:231 Mr '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p26 F '29

"Most of the material has previously appeared in magazine form and, while not closely knit together, is conveniently arranged and interestingly presented."

+ — J Home Econ 21:211 Mr '29 50w

St Louis 27:44 F '29

"Although this book might have caused quite a ripple had it been cast into the sea of literature dealing with child management some fifteen years ago, it is belated,—in the sense that much of its subject matter has already been incorporated in the thought of those whom it is apt to reach."

Sat R of Lit 5:490 D 8 '28 60w

"Parents would do well to read this book—and to ponder thereon. Here are no charts, diagrams or statistics to point the way, but the quiet and deep observations of experience. To gain insight and wisdom the Groves obviously have gone about the business of living by using their senses, plus common sense." Halle Schaffner

+ Survey 61:511 Ja 15 '29 320w

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD, and GROVES, MRS GLADYS (HOAGLAND). Wholesome parenthood. 320p $2 Houghton

173.5 Children—Management. Parent and child 29-12600

The authors of "Wholesome childhood" and "Wholesome marriage" have again collaborated in a book of advice for parents on such common problems of childhood as discipline, habit, sex education, wisdom in the use of money, emotional conflict, daydreaming, and adolescence.

---

Booklist 26:8 O '29

Bookm 70:xiv O '29 70w

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 31 '29 400w

Christian Century 46:897 Jl 10 '29 30w

J Home Econ 21:684 S '29 60w

"Professor and Mrs. Groves have notable ability for making lucid and simple statement of scientific matters without the sacrifice of accuracy. Their books can be understood and used without previous acquaintance with psychology. . . Added to this are the well-balanced judgment, the sanity and the common sense which characterize all their writings and give to their books a specially strong appeal."

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 11 '29 500w

"Mr and Mrs Groves preserve a sane middle ground, and conscientious parents who are in a position to give consideration to the more subtle phases of their children's training will find in this book much practical advice."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Jl 19 '29 180w

"The authors have insight and imagination, hence they know that we shall control human nature only by obeying it. This is not a manual of dogmatic formula, but it provides a sound and sympathetic interpretation, framed in simple language, focussed on problems liable to any home, along with a reference list aimed to introduce the reader to more technical and tested literature." Halle Schaffner

+ Survey 63:103 O '29 380w

"The findings of science and the wisdom of two generous and discriminating students of domestic relationships wrought into an illuminating guide for any parent. . . The book promises to be an influence for happier childhood and for fewer warped and unsocial oncomin adults."

+ World Tomorrow 13:42 Ja '30 130w

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD, and OGBURN, WILLIAM FIELDING. American marriage and family relationships. (Am. social science ser.) 497p $4.50; students' ed $3.60 Holt

173.1 Marriage. Family 28-22924

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"A very interesting and useful book. But it will probably serve a larger purpose as reference work than as text. Its greatest weakness, in the reviewer's eyes, is the lack of concrete material in Groves's chapters." S. A. Queen

+ — Am J Soc 34:1194 My '29 600w

Reviewed by A. I. Hallowell

Ann Am Acad 141:274 Ja '29 320w

"Gives an exhaustive statistical study which brings together, probably for the first time in easily usable form, the rather scattered data available. Intended primarily for use in the increasing number of college courses now dealing with such subjects but valuable also to any student of home relationships and parental education."

+ J Home Econ 21:211 Mr '29 100w

New Repub 58:25 F 20 '29 120w

"We are accustomed to seeing interesting material in the field of (and from the pen of) Mr. Groves, but it is unusual to see statistics so interestingly and concisely presented as Mr. Ogburn has presented these. Many of the faults of this book (including a poor and superficial index) would doubtless be corrected if it were divided into two volumes and each author given room to develop his subject more completely." M. G. Blanton

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:688 F 16 '29 200w

GRUENING, ERNEST HENRY. Mexico and its heritage. 728p il $6 Century [21s S. Paul]

972 Mexico. Mexico—History 28-21916

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"Mr. Gruening's volume is excellent—the best recent book on Mexico and the only one giving an adequate review of recent developments." C. L. Jones

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:210 F '29 660w

"Mr. Gruening has performed a service of the first magnitude both to Mexico and to the United States. For the first time, the American public has access to a work which explains Mexico's problems in terms of her historical development. The book is indispensable to every one who desires to acquaint himself with the internal situation in Mexico and to form a judgment of the principles that should guide our policy in dealing with Mexico." L. S. Rowe

+ Ann Am Acad 144:151 Jl '29 250w

"The author's treatment of the religious question is thorough and critical. In dealing with this highly controversial topic, he is particularly wise in furnishing documentary authority for almost every statement relative to the part which the church has played in the cultural, economic and political life of Mexico." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 46:489 Ap 11 '29 650w

"The volume is without bias; it is carefully documented and is accompanied by an excellent bibliography and a selection of illustrations representative of Mexican life."

+ Geog R 19:698 O '29 340w

"The present reviewer believes that no better book has ever been written on Mexico. If American students had such a work on every country of Latin America it would be possible for some of them, at least, to proceed with a clearer understanding. . . . The author is judicious in the handling of his evidence and is perhaps as free from prejudice as an advanced liberal can be." J. F. Rippy

+ Pol Sci Q 44:469 S '29 350w

Reviewed by E. A. Frank

Survey 63:48 O 1 '29 560w

"He has taken care to question representatives of every view and every interest; and he has taken pains, on the whole successfully, to be fair to everybody though his own sympathies are easily detected."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p195 Mr 14 '29 900w

"The volume contains a vast amount of sociological data, the subject matter is presented in an interesting way, and it is well documented." J: H. Latané

+ Yale R n s 18:828 summer '29 350w

GUDRUN. Gudrun; done into English by Margaret Armour. 215p il $2.75 Dutton [8s 6d Dent]

29-17273

"Miss Margaret Armour, known for her prose version of the Nibelungenlied, now offers us Gudrun. The background is the North Sea, and the time, not that of the migration, but that of the Viking piracy. The tale is of a maiden ravished from her home, and hotly pursued by her father, who falls in the fight. [But] instead of the tragic, we have the happy ending after long woe endured. Gudrun is the finished pattern of constancy and wifely love."—Sat R of Lit

---

"Miss Armour completes a task that has been lovingly and brilliantly accomplished."

+ Boston Transcript p10 Ap 6 '29 250w

"To English and American readers who are unacquainted with the language of the original, this edition of a delightful bride-stealing saga, with its war and woe, wooing and winning, ought to be exceedingly popular. The present rendering in 'slightly archaic' prose, simple and quaint, is faithful in meaning."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:813 Mr 23 '29 130w

Reviewed by Garnet Smith

Sat R of Lit 5:1156 Jl 6 '29 1150w

GUENTHER, JOHANNES VON. Cagliostro; tr. by Huntley Paterson. 445p il $3.50 Harper [10s 6d Heinemann]

Cagliostro, Alessandro, conte di, assumed name of Giuseppe Balsamo—Fiction 29-7863

This novel of the life of Cagliostro is written as a rich romantic tale in which the squat dark figure of this charlatan and rogue weaves in and out of the pageant of the court life of his times, commanding love, money and obedience from kings and queens, ladies of fashion and men of wealth, until his luck fails and his life is forfeit.

---

Bookm 69:vi Jl '29 300w

"Cagliostro was unique and incomparable and he appears in all his golden luster in Johannes von Guenther's irresistible and many-hued biography that is part truth and part legend and at all times steeped in magnificent romance." Donald Douglas

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ap 7 '29 720w

"This is unquestionably an important book. It is dramatic as a story and interesting as a freely rendered historical document. Mr. Paterson's translation is excellent." M. G.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 11 '29 500w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 46:746 Je 5 '29 260w

"Von Guenther's 'romantic biography' should deservedly go far toward popularizing the story of this almost legendary master of intrigue." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p16 Je 9 '29 2000w

"As history this 'biography' is not to be taken too seriously; as a melodramatic romance, however, it is a magnificent creation." Bernard Smith

N Y World p11m Ap 14 '29 750w

"A bit confused at times, as translations are apt to be, it is nevertheless a colorful and romantic book, and paints a vivid picture . . . of the society in which such impostors as Cagliostro flourished." W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:596 Ap 10 '29 100w

"The work is significant fiction. Occasionally, to be sure, the passion is a bit perfervid; very occasionally, the narrative halts momentarily, as it were, in order to admire itself, but on the whole, the book possesses the intensity of very brilliant art." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 6:130 S 14 '29 380w

"The novel has a sensational, nightmarish quality; its psychology is rhetorical, redundant, violent. But for those who like the cinema-novel, there is plenty of excitement. Most of us will prefer Dumas on the subject." R. A. Taylor

Spec 141:605 O 27 '28 350w

"Herr von Guenther's Cagliostro is probably more like the historical figure than the mysterious character on whom Dumas expended so much exuberance of fancy. Yet Dumas gives us a more convincing picture of the reputation and power of the great impostor. . . However much of a risen ragamuffin Balsamo was, he had some power the reality of which Herr von Guenther cannot give us and for which he can provide no substitute."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p1024 D 27 '28 220w

GUERARD, ALBERT LEON. Life and death of an ideal; France in the classical age. 391p $4.50 Scribner [15s Benn]

944 France—History. France—Civilization

28-24617

The classical age in France, as Professor Guérard conceives it, comprised the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. "It is safe to say that no one who has read Professor Guérard's masterly 'Reflections on the Napoleonic Legend' should miss reading this volume on 'France in the Classical Age,' the more so as this study of the Classic Ideal as the motive power of French civilization from Louis XI on

GUERARD, A. L.—Continued
presents the first Napoleon as dying classicism's supreme and final exponent."—N Y Evening Post

"In spite of our disagreement on many points of detail we find Professor Guerard's brilliantly written volume one of the most significant contributions yet made in this country to the study of the most important period in French literature and French history." Christian Gauss
+ — Am Hist R 34:580 Ap '29 560w

"Without being a catalogue and an appreciation of the various writers and schools of writers in those periods, it sometimes comes perilously near to that method of approach. . . None the less it is an entertaining and, generally speaking a readable volume." W. C. A.
+ — Am Pol Sci R 23:237 F '29 240w

"The book is as dignifiedly vigorous, as shrewdly genial, as pleasantly epigrammatic, as fluent and finished, as everything else which Mr. Guerard has done." R. T. House
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 2 '28 1100w

"Read with circumspection (for the generalisations are often on a sweeping scale), the book is a stimulating commentary for those who already have some knowledge of the groundwork of French history and literature. It is well indexed and has an appropriate bibliography."
+ New Statesman 32:644 F 23 '29 200w

"His interpretation is as brilliantly logical, as clearly demonstrated as it is novel, and his study of the Classical spirit in France, from the sixteenth century to the end of the first empire as that of a great effort which failed, 'as all forms of Fundamentalism are bound to fail,' is one of the most fascinating special studies in history that have come from the pen of a modern historian who possesses in the highest degree the art of humanizing the historic period without distorting its values." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 22 '28 130w

"The various volumes written by this eminent Franco-American scholar, critic, historian on Gallic civilization, culture, religion, literature and men of genius form a contribution to contemporary letters whose value and significance can hardly be overstressed." E. C. Beckwith
+ N Y World p10m D 23 '28 320w

"This book is not one of the finest penetration or of the exactest scholarship, but it is, as we have said, suggestive, interesting and readably written. . . Mr. Guérard in attempting this synthesis and analysis of an age is trying to do what historians so often fail to attempt from a consciousness of the extraordinary difficulties of the task. Such attempts, even if not perfectly successful, are extremely valuable."
+ — Sat R 147:439 Mr 30 '29 500w
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p90 F 7 '29 1550w

GUERIN, EDDIE. I was a bandit (Eng title Crime: the autobiography of a crook). 334p il $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [12s J. Murray]

B or 92 Crime and criminals 29-2061

"Eddie Guerin, whose escape from the penal settlement of French Guiana and refusal of extradition from this country were sensations of their day, has here told, with reservations, the story of his career, which, with two or three breaks, has been one of crime and imprisonment. The book should be of interest to criminologists, for its author gives some intimate glimpses of an underworld stretching from Chicago to Paris, and he compares from first-hand knowledge the detective, juridical and penal methods of the United States, France and England over a period of nearly half a century."—New Statesman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 My 12 '29 180w
New Statesman 32:450 Ja 12 '29 180w

"Thieves' autobiographies are all alike. I don't object to the fact that they are unreliable. Nobody with a groats-worth of brains expects a crook to tell the truth, even in the confessional, of which an autobiography should be the equivalent. What gets my goat, after reading quite a lot of them, is that they are all so pious. They are written—or dictated or re-written—in a penitential tone that anybody who has come into contact with the felonious gentry knows, absolutely knows, to be utterly spurious. Now Eddie Guerin follows in the classic and tiresome footsteps of the genre." L: Sherwin
N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 2 '29 850w
Reviewed by J: Carter
Sat R of Lit 5:878 Ap 13 '29 400w

GUEST, CARMEL (GOLDSMID) (MRS LESLIE HADEN GUEST). Yellow pigeon. 307p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Harrap]

29-8265

The novel introduces a group of women of different nationalities doing various kinds of war work in Belgium. There is little plot, but the personal experiences of the women, their own interests and the complicated threads which tie them together, are so vividly evoked as to seem a part of remembered experience.

"This is a book, as Mr. H. G. Wells says, to go with a few others as part of one's library of the realities of the War."
+ New Statesman 32:230 N 24 '28 230w

"This excellently written novel fills a rather outstanding space in the library of books about the war. It is like none of the others in that heterogeneous array, and the uniqueness of its point of view will be hard to challenge ever. You have the feeling after reading its succession of poignant and hilarious episodes that here one aspect of the war has been presented with definitive thoroughness and lucidity."
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 14 '29 700w

"The story is negligible; the general atmosphere and the individual portraits are extremely well done. There is scarcely a sentence without salt or sting in it; and it must be admitted that it is in satire, and satire of a 'catty' kind, that Mrs. Haden Guest shows herself at her best. When a writer has been ironical for a long time, the transition to pathos needs delicate handling; and the last episode of the book fails of its effect." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 146:782 D 8 '28 200w

"The strongly contrasted feminine types seem to have been drawn from living originals; an atmosphere of vivid reality pervades the tale, and it is written throughout with distinction. But even these favorable factors fail to obviate one's impression that the book, in large part, is needlessly slow-going and preoccupied with trivialities rather than with grim essentials."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1005 My 11 '29 120w

"Mrs. Guest shows us the effects of war in their mingled heroism and bestiality, and the actual story itself describes absorbingly and convincingly the reactions of various normally balanced people to conditions of tense excitement and tragedy. This is a true and vital book."
+ Spec 141:501 O 13 '28 170w

GUILD, MRS JUNE (PURCELL). Living with the law. (New republic dollar ser.) 266p pa $1 New republic

347 Law—United States 29-890

"Out of years of experience in working for those who are in trouble, [the author] has brought the knowledge that few people are acquainted with the laws under which they live. In this comprehensive little volume, she has gathered together and has organized the information that she considers essential to living with the law. Among the items included are the legal nature of marriage; conflicts in marriage laws; laws pertaining to divorce; the legal aspect of the child's relationship toward his 'natural' parents, foster- and step-parents; illegitimacy; legal responsibility of the mentally abnormal, etc."—Bookm

Reviewed by J. A. Tobey
Am J Pub Health 19:706 Je '29 180w
Booklist 25:233 Mr '29

"The language is far from technical; the book is easy to read and understand. It should prove of value to social workers, who may regret the omission of an index, but who will find the page-by-page table of contents a good substitute. And it should prove to be of considerable interest to the lay reader who would like to know a little about the law."
+ Bookm 68:xii F '29 150w

"Its chief merit lies not in any specifics, but in the general attitude toward courts and constitutions and legislation. The author sees behind forms to substance and offers discriminating and intelligent comments."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 3 '29 100w
J Home Econ 21:212 Mr '29 60w

"The book is well written, readable and, with few exceptions, accurate. The author is most at home with problems concerning marriage, divorce and children. A work of this sort seems simple when completed, but if conscientiously written, as this is, it requires tremendous study and research, and none the less so because the treatment is general rather than specific." A. G. Hays
+ N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 12 '29 520w

"The author has a notable abilfty in making these usually dry and forbidding themes simple, clear, readable, even interesting."
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 13 '29 350w

"Here is a well-considered and popularly written analysis of the 'tangled web of legal enactment and judicial opinion which hangs over the cradle of every new-born child and clings around him his whole life.' With such a condition in mind, the author—one of those rare persons, a lawyer with a social point of view—has written this book on topics parallel to some of the chief concerns of the National Conference of Social Work." M. L. Ernst
+ Survey 61:686 F 15 '29 380w

GUILLEBAUD, C. W. Works council; a German experiment in industrial democracy. 305p $6.40 Macmillan [16s Cambridge univ. press]
331.152 Employees' representation in management

"Now we have, for the first time in the English language, an authoritative and documentary account of the national collective agreement between the trade unions led by Legien, the German Gompers, and the capitalists led by Stinnes, then the German Pierpont Morgan, eliminating Monarchism and creating the Republic. This trade agreement was written into the Constitution and named by Legien the Magna Carta of Labor (p.4). It prohibited the employers' company unions and in their place ordered 'works councils', which Guillebaud describes, to be installed in the factories of the employers."—Am Hist R

---

"Mr. Guillebaud's book is a good piece of work, being comprehensive and well written. The author is an acute observer, and his discussion of the German arrangements suggests many interesting parallels and contrasts with our own labor scene." E: Berman
+ Am Econ R 19:140 Mr '29 680w

Reviewed by J: R. Commons
Am Hist R 34:346 Ja '29 400w

"The author evokes one's confidence by the scholarly impartiality with which he points out the mistakes made by both employers and employees, and sums up his conclusions in a very instructive chapter." A. R. Ellingwood
Am Pol Sci R 23:502 My '29 660w

"It is an excellent volume for those who wish to know more about a movement which in itself is demonstrative of the trend of modern industry."
+ Boston Transcript p3 S 22 '28 150w

"Affords interesting reading and valuable information for those persons who see in the works-council idea a movement toward democracy in industry. The book is a friendly interpretation of the works-council development in Germany from 1920 to 1926. If studied in connection with the Whitley plan in England and the so-called voluntary plans found in the United States, it affords a good picture of contrasting programs." E. C. Robbins
+ Harvard Business R 8:123 O '29 180w

"Mr. Guillebaud's book is admirably written, and its value is enhanced to the student by the appendices, which give translations of the text of the Works Councils Act and of the regulations governing elections to the Councils." E. H. Gilpin
+ Nation and Ath 43:302 Je 2 '28 680w

"Mr. Guillebaud writes a very full account and brings the story down to the end of 1926. He writes clearly enough, but the story is necessarily confusing, because the circumstances are confused and changing—like much else in the new Germany."
Times [London] Lit Sup p403 My 31 '28 1150w

GUITERMAN, ARTHUR. Song and laughter. 202p $2.50 Dutton
811

Popular, light verse representative of Mr Guiterman's work appearing in such periodicals as The Saturday Evening Post, The Ladies Home Journal, The American Magazine, The New Yorker, etc.

---

Reviewed by C: Divine
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 N 10 '29 80w

"Though Mr. Guiterman laments: 'Why can't I grow profounder, graver, wearier? My great career would grow so much careerier,' most of us find his cheerful silliness a relief in a day of cynics."
+ Boston Transcript p10 N 2 '29 150w

"Authentic light verse which has a place and virtue of its own." L. T. Nicholl
+ Outlook 153:509 N 27 '29 40w

"Readers who shun verse as the plague would do well to keep from reading the first ten pages of Arthur Guiterman's 'Song and Laughter,' unless they want their prejudices exploded. His variety of light sentiment, nonsense, funny story, and clever satire has something that will appeal to every man." R. G. Berkelman
+ Portland Evening News p5 D 4 '29 320w

"This volume, like his others, reveals kindly, shrewd humor and a natural gift of irony, coupled with a light sure touch and considerable felicity in making verse. Mr Guiterman's range of interests is wide, as is his common sense, and lack of pretentiousness adds to the charm of his work."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 13 '29 120w

GUNDELFINGER, FRIEDRICH (FRIEDRICH GUNDOLF, pseud.). Mantle of Caesar; auth. tr. from the German by Jacob Wittmer Hartmann. 319p $5 Vanguard press [15s Cayme press]

B or 92 Caesar, Caius Julius 28-27693

In three long chapters crammed with reference and detail the German author traces the long history of Caesar's mark upon mankind. The first chapter, the Mythical figure, analyses the impression of the Caesar image on the minds of his contemporaries; the second chapter, the Magic name, traces Caesar's sway over the imagination of the Middle ages; and the last and much the longest chapter, the Historical personality, follows the history of Caesar's fame up to the time of Napoleon.

---

Reviewed by R. E. Larsson
Bookm 68:701 F '29 1400w

"The author's grasp of the multitudinous details of the discussion cannot fail to awaken admiration. It is all an amazing story and well worth the pains which Dr. Gundolf has bestowed upon it. In places, the book is a bit difficult to read. This is probably not due to the trans-

GUNDELFINGER, FRIEDRICH—Continued

lator but is inherent in the original." G: M. Whicher

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Ja 20 '29 720w

"In a clear, scholarly study he tells the tale of the passing Cæsarian mantle, and interestingly shows how its texture and trimmings changed with its changing wearers, and according to the influence their own thought exerted on his actually and mythically established personality." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p8m D 22 '28 120w

"Cæsar has been a world figure so long that he serves the purpose exceedingly well, and the book—abounding in penetrating judgment—will find its way to historians, psychologists, and literary critics alike. But the author has done too much or too little. For most of us he has included too many insignificant writers while specialists will fail to find the explicit references which they may need."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:438 D 1 '28 250w

GUNDOLF, FRIEDRICH, pseud. See Gundelfinger, F.

GUNTHER, JOHN. Golden fleece. 421p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d M. Secker]

29-6661

The progress of Joan Tilford, a Chicago girl of good family, from strict adherence to her puritanical upbringing, thru casual affairs with men she did not love, to a more sane and wholesome outlook on life and love.

"The result of questioning and experiment on this type of person should be interesting both spiritually and sociologically. It is not, therefore, distaste for the subject which makes me say that I found 'The Golden Fleece' distinctly unpleasant. It is rather because Joan and Philip, for all the intellectual activity imputed to them, seem dull people, muddling through and missing the fine points by a wide margin on every issue."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p34 Ap 14 '29 450w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 22 '29 280w

" 'The Golden Fleece' needs thinning and combing out, otherwise it stands rather above the average." L. L. Irvine

+ — Nation and Ath 45:208 My 11 '29 120w

"We set out this career of an honorary harlot not under the rubric of immoral and dangerous books. This book is not dangerous, it is only perplexing; and it is perplexing chiefly as being typical of a number of novels which have reached England from America during the last few years." E. S.

— New Statesman 33:119 My 4 '29 380w

N Y Times p12 My 5 '29 400w

"The slowness of its pace will keep it from the rank which it might otherwise have. . . We know of no novel in which the whole close-woven fabric of life is more fully and honestly presented." Shaemas O'Sheel

+ — N Y World p7m Je 2 '29 320w

"The one disturbing feature of the book is that there is too much of Mr. Gunther in it. We are conscious of being taken on a personal tour by the author—megaphone in hand. But he is an enjoyable guide whom we should miss having." E. M. Benson

+ — Outlook 151:478 Mr 20 '29 140w

" 'The Golden Fleece' is not a bad book, but a remarkably stolid one to come from the pen of the author of 'The Red Pavilion.' Mr. Gunther has unhitched his wagon from Aldous Huxley's star and now he travels slowly." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 147:774 Je 8 '29 360w

"It is utterly inconsistent with Joan's character, as hitherto presented, that she should run away from home and abandon herself deliberately and intensively to lust. A year later, chastened and penitent, Joan becomes again—if we could forget the intervening adventures—a natural, lovable creature. But we cannot forget the interlude; and for Mr. Gunther to represent it as the price which Joan had to pay for early repression and ignorance is to insult the intelligence of his readers. It is a pity that Mr. Gunther should thus have surrendered part of himself, for at his best he writes admirably well and displays sensitive imagination." Gilbert Thomas

+ — Spec 142:752 My 11 '29 250w

GUPTILL, ARTHUR L. Drawing with pen and ink, and a word concerning the brush; introd. by Franklin Booth. 431p il $8.50 Pencil points press

741 Pen drawing. Architectural drawing. Drawing—Instruction 28-21718

" 'Drawing with Pen and Ink' presents a complete library for the pen artist. It is, moreover, a valuable self-instruction course. The beginning student of drawing is carried through a well developed, detailed sequence of steps—from requisite drawing materials, early practice in strokes, value study, outline drawing, object rendering in light and shade in naturalistic and decorative techniques, basic principles of composition, use of plaster casts, rudiments of life drawing and outdoor sketching to advanced chapters on professional architectural rendering, general illustration including colored ink drawing, and processes of reproduction."—School Arts M

Booklist 26:19 O '29

"With its many and varied specimens of line rendition, as manifested in magazine illustration and in architecture, this volume is an excellent reference work for the artist in black and white."

+ Bookm 69:xxii Ag '29 40w

"Basing his text on his experiences as a teacher at Pratt Institute and on his work as a professional illustrator, he has written the most comprehensive manual on black-and-white art that has yet been published in America."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 F 24 '29 150w

Pratt p22 winter '29

St Louis 27:53 F '29

"The 44 pages of the book include over 800 illustrations—clever marginal sketches and full page illustrations by the author which clarify every step of progress; and throughout, the work of leading illustrators and architectural renderers forms a veritable gallery of present day art of the pen."

+ School Arts M 28:380 F '29 140w

GUYOL, LOUISE HUBERT. Gallant Lallanes. 251p il $2 Harper

29-16078

Three valiant girls and their equally valiant mother strive to earn their living when their inheritance is suddenly swallowed up. They take boarders into their beautiful New Orleans home, altho the family looks with horror upon the proceeding. Marguerite, the beloved seventeen-year-old, wants to go to college, and they all do their bit until their goal is reached.

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 O 5 '29 200w

"Miss Guyol has told the kind of story which girls invariably find interesting. The atmosphere of the South which permeates the book is as charming as the characters."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 14 '29 420w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Outlook 153:590 D 11 '29 30w

"It is disappointing that Miss Guyol was not capable of meeting her opportunity with this book. For then through its pages hundreds of ignorant American children might have been tempted to make their first bow to the fascinating old city of New Orleans. As it is, the story is fade—to use the author's favorite French—and the characters are wooden; though now and then some of the charm and strangeness of the town does peep through."

— Sat R of Lit 6:410 N 16 '29 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '29 70w

GWYNN, DENIS ROLLESTON. Hundred years of Catholic emancipation (1829-1929). 292p il $4 (10s 6d) Longmans

282 Roman Catholic church in England [29-7096]

"Not only does Mr. Gwynn narrate the principal episodes in the history of English Catholicism during the last century, but he analyzes the change in the character of the Catholic body, the increase in the membership in both England and Wales, and the evolution of a new Catholic democracy."—Boston Transcript

---

"Mr. Gwynn has presented his material in a most interesting and scholarly manner and has produced a valuable contribution to present day religious history." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 20 '29 500w

Nation and Ath 45:sup140 Ap 27 '29 580w

St Louis 27:88 Mr '29

St Louis 27:329 D '29

"The story of the Oxford Movement has been told many times. It is not too much to say that Mr. Gwynn has dramatized it for all. The great characters who caused the spiritual upheaval live before us and live in an atmosphere whose stimulant quality he has had the skill to reproduce. To say that his book will delight his co-religionists is not to give him his due."

+ Spec 142:429 Mr 16 '29 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p281 Ap 11 '29

GWYNN, DENIS ROLLESTON. Struggle for Catholic emancipation (1750-1829). 290p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

282 Roman Catholic church in Ireland. Ireland—Church history 28-28976

"This narrative of the struggle of the Irish people against religious persecution in Ireland runs from the middle of the eighteenth century to the triumph of Catholic Emancipation under O'Connell. Much of the ground gone over in Father Amherst's The History of Catholic Emancipation is traveled here again."—Cath World

---

"Mr. Gwynn's book is a splendidly succinct survey of the many cross currents, political and ecclesiastical, of this trying period in Irish history. It is informative and not exhaustive; tempered, without endless historical concessions and queries and doubts." P. J. C.

+ Cath World 128:757 Mr '29 130w

"Detached and admirably lucid study of the struggle for Catholic emancipation."

+ New Statesman 32:702 Mr 9 '29 560w

St Louis 27:88 Mr '29

Sat R 147:385 Mr 23 '29 920w

Times [London] Lit Sup p949 D 6 '28 1500w

H

HACKETT, FRANCIS. Henry the Eighth. 452p $3 Liveright [12s 6d J. Cape]

B or 92 Henry VIII, king of England. Great Britain—History—Tudors, 1485-1603 29-9654

With strict fidelity to historical fact based upon a painstaking study of sources, with dialogue, even, quoted from the records, Mr Hackett has recreated Henry VIII and his times. The book is no mere record of wives forsworn but a revealing history of the network of politics in which Henry lived, of the great political figures of his day, both English and Continental, and of the six hapless women who at successive periods in his reign served the purposes of a king ambitious for power and the continuance of his dynasty.

---

Booklist 25:392 Jl '29

"In spite of certain flaws and inconsistencies, Henry VIII is a work which will be read today and is, in many respects, worthy to be read tomorrow." Olga Katzin

+ — Bookm 69:315 My '29 730w

"Whether or not this be history in its narrowly factual sense (on this point I am not competent to speak), Mr. Hackett has written a great book. . . Even if a cloud of scholars were to rise up in witness of error, I doubt if it would affect very deeply my conviction that this is a great book. It has the sweep and color of convincing reality, dissolving at a breath the net-work of stiff little facts that have impeded my earlier efforts to feel the past. Some one has said before that it takes an Irishman to understand the English." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ap 14 '29 1750w

"Mr. Hackett is not another Strachey, but he has acquired the knack of making his characters very interesting human beings, whose fortunes we follow with curiosity throughout his book. Our interest in them exceeds our interest in that complex drama of European politics in which they played their part." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '29 1700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p148 D '29

"Structurally viewed, his book follows the best traditions of English biography, with but an occasional leaning toward the highly questionable—because untested by time—immediacy of present-day biographical devices. As for his journalistic training and his exotic imagination, they are at once his forte and his weakness. At times his style is tight and crisp. Some of his compact characterizations of minor Elizabethans are little masterpieces in cameo. But journalism sometimes overpowers him. . . 'Elizabeth and Essex' is the only biography of the year which should be ranked superior to 'Henry the Eighth.'" R. F. Dibble

+ Nation 128:587 My 15 '29 720w

"A biography which has great merits and great faults. Its chief fault is its style. Mr. Hackett can, and for many pages often does, write extremely well. But he forces the pace madly and maddeningly, and tries to write much better than he or anyone else can. . . I found it a fascinating book. To read it is like looking into an aquarium in which, in a dim light, innumerable strange, beautiful, horrible, grotesque fish are continually flashing into view for a moment and then disappearing into the shadows." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 45:654 Ag 17 '29 1000w

"He has accomplished a feat which we associate rather with the French than with the English mind, a work of scholarship alive with imagination and gorgeously apparelled in style. He has gone to the front in the historical field by virtue of the qualities which he displayed in contemporary criticism, only now with more abundance." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 59:40 My 22 '29 1170w

"Mr. Hackett has written a very vivacious book, and steered his way with considerable skill among the devious currents and cross-purposes of the reign of Henry VIII. He has done more. He has given us some penetrating studies of character, not least of that most puzzling of mortals and kings, Henry himself. . . It is all cleverly done; but what is left of the style? This: the construction of the book is that of Emil Ludwig, and the style is a conflation of Froude, of Harrison Ainsworth, and of Hepworth Dixon."

+ — New Statesman 33:658 S 7 '29 2200w

" 'Henry the Eighth' is exuberant and overflowing in language, glowing, flaring and intricate. If it attains heights of brilliance and splendor, it falls into passages of tediousness, of lack of clarity. . . This book is a notable piece of scholarship and by no means negligible as art." Edgar Johnson

+ — N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 13 '29 1000w

"For vigor, for humor, for richness of prose Mr. Hackett's book, we think, is a long step ahead of any of its contemporary biographies.

HACKETT, FRANCIS—Continued

Henry was not, in all probability, the blood-swollen, uxorious devil that the book makes him. The portrait may be inaccurate, but it is splendid and fiercely colored and that is all the biography reader should ask." F: F. Van de Water

+ — N Y Evening Post p10m My 11 '29 220w

"Mr. Hackett has, we understand, labored over his book for several years. It is labor most brilliantly justified by results. A book like this upholds the dignity of contemporary letters." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 14 '29 1700w

"By no means a complete history of Henry's reign, Francis Hackett's book is a remarkable recreation of a gorgeous scene. His imagination plays upon it, dazzling, revealing. His style is witty, rich, at times almost overfluent. But his sharp sense of humor and his ardent appreciation of the violent qualities of the period of which he writes save him from using his subject simply to display his skill." F. L. Robbins

Outlook 151:586 Ap 10 '29 880w

Pratt p36 summer '29

"In literary style, as well as in method of presentation, Mr. Hackett's book attains a high level. Its readability assures it continued popularity. The reading of voluminous records in the European archives consumed years of time and gave Mr. Hackett an equipment for his work that none of the earlier biographers of Henry VIII. possessed." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:10 Je '29 180w

St Louis 27:206 Je '29

St Louis 27:271 S '29

"Mr Hackett fails to tell us. He takes at one moment the point of view of the historian and at another that of the novelist, but from neither does he attain to any clear vision of his subject. It is possible that if he had kept more closely to his point and eschewed incidental decorations, he would have been more successful. It is also possible that he has taken refuge in incidental decorations simply through despair of being able to achieve his main object." E: Shanks

— + Sat R 148:132 Ag 3 '29 1280w

"Years of work there must be in this book, but happily work that did not destroy an extraordinary quality of imagination but rather fostered it. The author has more skill in seeing a particular past time than many professional historians; he has a feeling of the climates and geography of opinion; he has an uncanny understanding of the English squirearchy—he is Irish born—and of its implications. Nor is that skill only exercised about classes; he sees individuals so vividly in his own mind's eye that we cannot forget his pictures, even if sometimes the colors seem too bright." Wallace Notestein

+ Sat R of Lit 5:875 Ap 13 '29 2050w

"Mr. Hackett has made a mighty good job of Henry and his wives. Every page of his book glitters and glows with colour—the moral and mental as well as the material coulour—of their age. It is not 'fine writing'; that seems to imply effort. It is the writing of a man who loves words for their own sake, who enjoys a vigorous or a witty phrase as one might savour a mellow wine or a fragrant cigar. A style like this cannot be achieved by taking thought. It is the expression of an intellect stored with treasure, of an imagination which thrills to the enchantment of the past." Hamilton Fyfe

+ Spec 143:224 Ag 17 '29 1250w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '29 680w

"Brilliant and inescapably readable book, but I suspect a good deal of the intricate richness of character and scene is a reconstruction by a Keltic imagination that however painstakingly it roots in document and actual deed (as this does after six years of research) in the end demands glamour even in a villain. But the essence of Henry is here, and the tale endlessly fascinating." Leon Whipple

+ — Survey 62:414 Jl 1 '29 480w

"As a popular sketch of a dramatic career, the book has its own appeal. Free from the embarrassing problems which obscure the historian's view, Mr. Hackett has produced a vivid picture of Henry. There is nothing novel in his interpretation, for, in spite of some disclaimers, he gives a forceful and emphatic presentation of the traditional Bluebeard portrait. . . The anecdotes and conversations which he has selected from the vast mass of material fit well into his theme, and are adroitly employed. There is good writing in the book, but to many readers the constant straining for effect will prove irritating."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p617 Ag 8 '29 700w

Wis Lib Bul 25:194 Je '29

"This is a brilliant book, and it presents a very vivid and colorful picture of the man and the times with which it deals. Mr. Hackett has addressed himself to his task with a genuine desire to ascertain the truth and to reveal it. But he has not always used his material with discrimination." Conyers Read

+ — Yale R n s 18:793 summer '29 520w

HACKETT, JAMES DOMINICK. Labor management; with an introd. by Sam A. Lewisohn. 681p $5 (21s) Appleton

331 Employment management. Factory management. Efficiency, Industrial 29-9191

An explanation of the technique of labor management and its application to modern times and conditions. Methods of personnel administration as they have been developed by various corporations are discussed. Labor turnover, wage determination, and wage systems are among the factors of labor management which the author analyzes.

"The book, on the whole, must rank among the most useful in its field." S. H. Slichter

+ Am Econ R 19:486 S '29 250w

Booklist 26:16 O '29

Times [London] Lit Sup p543 Jl 4 '29 50w

Wis Lib Bul 25:274 Jl '29

HADOW, SIR WILLIAM HENRY. Collected essays. 344p $6 (15s) Oxford

780.4 Music—Addresses, essays, lectures [29-14488]

The collected essays of Sir Henry Hadow, chiefly on music. There are papers on Beethoven, Brahms and the classical tradition, and on the tendencies and aspects of modern music.

"These essays, mainly about music, would be of major importance if only because of the paper on Beethoven. Where in any language could one find its match? Within a compass of less than thirty pages its author pretty nearly makes the grand tour of his tremendous subject and in prose of what sureness, solidity, distinction!" P. Bowdoin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Je 16 '29 600w

Nation and Ath 44:590 Ja 26 '29 80w

"There can be nothing but good said about these essays. Their range and erudition are backed up by keen thought and a sudden vividness of phrasing, and they are informed at all times by a quick sympathy with the very stuff of poetry and music." Jeffrey Mark

+ New Repub 60:26 Ag 21 '29 420w

"The excellent and readable volume stands—with no pretense of being a great book—as a product of the high kind of intelligence, sensitivity, scholarship and maturity which one might piously wish to find in every one connected with education and the arts." Axton Clark

+ N Y Times p13 S 1 '29 1000w

"The only disadvantage to the reader who may enjoy and profit by the wisdom of these 'Collected Essays' is that which may be felt in a programme of classical sonatas by a composer such as Mozart; a repetition in form rather than in substance, the same way of announcing themes, the same processes of development carried through each. But there is no need to read through the 'Collected Essays' at a sitting, though every one of them is worth reading and many will become still more worth re-study the longer the book is allowed to mature on the library shelf."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p37 Ja 17 '29 880w

HAFIZ. Hafiz, the Tongue of the hidden; an attempt to transfuse into English rubáiyát the spirit of the Persian poet, as felt by Clarence K. Streit. 96p $2 Viking press

891.5 28-25082

The monograph contains an English adaptation of the poems of Hafiz and a sketch of the Persian poet's life, together with a note on this adaptation of his poems.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 6 '29 180w

— Dial 86:265 Mr '29 140w

"Mr. Streit follows Cranmer-Byng in the use of quatrains, and achieves a considerable success. But the ampler versions of Gertrude Bell and Richard Le Gallienne are still the most interesting we have."

+ — Nation 127:527 N 14 '28 80w

Reviewed by J: W. Crawford

N Y Evening Post p8m D 29 '28 450w

"A book to be placed beside one's copy of FitzGerald's enduring English rendering of Omar the Tentmaker—is the adaptation into English by Clarence K. Streit of a portion of the 'Divan' of Hafiz. Mr. Streit's book is not a translation; the author has taken the translations of authoritative Persian scholars, and his work, to use his own words, is 'an attempt to transfuse into English rubáiyát the spirit of the poet.' "

+ N Y Times p6 D 23 '28 700w

St Louis 27:96 Mr '29

HAGBERG, KNUT HJALMAR. Kings, Churchills and statesmen; tr. from the Swedish by Elizabeth Sprigge and Claude Napier. 236p $2 Dodd [12s 6d Lane]

923.2 Statesmen, British. Great Britain—Biography [29-16420]

"This translation from the Swedish comes to us professedly as a foreign view of the English men and women with whom it deals. But the curious thing about these essays in biography is that they might all have been written by an Englishman. The persons considered are George IV., Victoria (Mr Strachey's), Edward VII., William II., Marlborough, Randolph Churchill and Mr. Winston Churchill, Palmerston (Mr. Guedalla's), Admiral Fisher, and pat on the moment, Mr. Lloyd George, Lord Birkenhead and Mr. Baldwin."—New Statesman

---

"Knut Hagberg has at least achieved the distinction of saying something interesting about people, most of whom have already been a good deal discussed. One reason, no doubt, is that he has a vivacious style and a marked gift of phrase-making, but he has also studied his subject and kept his mind free of illusions."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p31 S 8 '29 540w

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett

Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '29 1150w

"Mr. Hagberg writes admirably and shows remarkable penetration. The chapter on Mr. Lloyd George, who is viewed with mixed feelings, is particularly brilliant, and is probably the best balanced analysis of the Liberal leader that has anywhere appeared. The whole book is very readable and stimulating."

+ Nation and Ath 45:supl38 Ap 27 '29 200w

"Although Mr. Hagberg has nothing very new to say about his subjects, he is always entertaining; and on the whole we need not be dissatisfied with him as our interpreter to Swedish readers."

+ New Statesman 33:160 My 11 '29 160w

"Witty, controversial and stimulant." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 13 '29 90w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:14 S '29 90w

Spec 142:916 Je 8 '29 80w

"The essays are popular journalism, but of a standard far higher than is generally set in this country; and Mr. Hagberg has been fortunate in translators who have done justice to his brilliant gift of style."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p252 Mr 28 '29 900w

HAGGARD, AUDREY. Double axe. 289p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

From the day when he gave a cherished toy to the child Amantys, the fate of Korestes was bound up with hers. Treachery of every sort, miraculous escapes by the score, fell to his lot before this youth of ancient Crete could marry the woman of his choice, the fair-haired hostage at the court of Minos, king of Crete.

---

" 'The double axe' could stand a good deal of sharpening. . . Mr. Haggard's dialogue is incredibly sophomoric in its fake old style." Edwin Seaver

— N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 10 '29 110w

Sat R of Lit 6:276 O 12 '29 150w

"A colorful historical story of ancient Crete, somewhat complicated by romance."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '29 30w

"The book invites comparison with the 'Last Days of Pompeii,' but Miss Haggard is not quite a Lytton. Her archæology is accurate enough, and not paraded at the expense of the story."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p317 Ap 18 '29 200w

HAGGARD, SIR HENRY RIDER. Marion Isle (Eng title Mary of Marion Isle). 323p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

29-11679

A romantic story of the life of a London physician, who after several love affairs, found his happiness at last on a desert island off the Coast of Africa, with a lovely, unusual woman.

---

"The story is a bit jumbled, but it is most readable."

+ — Bookm 69:xxiii Ag '29 110w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Je 9 '29 150w

"The most that can be said of the story is that it is just readable."

— New Statesman 32:542 F 2 '29 140w

"This 'Last of Rider Haggard's great romances,' while it does not measure up to earlier ones, is readable, like all that the author of 'Allan Quatermain' wrote." F. H. M.

N Y Evening Post p4s Je 8 '29 150w

"There are many amusing scenes and characters in the novel, part of it is told gayly; in the beginning, at least, Andrew is a distinctly humorous person, and there is a conventional happy ending, yet 'Marion Isle' is a book touched with pain. This latest romance has far less of fantasy and thrilling adventure, and far more of ordinary human experience, than one usually finds in the tales of Sir Rider Haggard."

+ N Y Times p9 My 19 '29 480w

"This posthumous novel is a strange medley of realism and fantasy, of sentimentality and shrewd observation. . . The life of Andrew and Mary on the island, with the inevitable love climax, is described with both vigour and charm, though as an attempt to show the healthy simplicity which civilization has sacrificed to greed and sophistication the story is too far-fetched to be convincing."

HAGGARD, H: R.—Continued
+ — Spec 142:170 F 2 '29 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 10 '29 350w

HAGGARD, HOWARD WILCOX. Devils, drugs, and doctors; the story of the science of healing from medicine-man to doctor. 405p il $5 Harper [21s Heinemann]

610.9 Medicine—History 29-9803

"A history of the advance of medical science, but particularly the advance of obstetrics, which the author states is an index of the advance of civilization. One section is devoted to the story of anesthesia, one to the progress of surgery, one to contagious diseases, with a final section on Medicine through the ages, showing that medicine and civilization have gone hand in hand." (Wis Lib Bul) Illustrated from rare old prints, manuscripts, and paintings.

Booklist 25:382 Jl '29

"The advantage of Dr. Haggard's method is that his narrative really furnishes a cross-section of the history of mankind as seen in the most intimate relationships of the life of the people. The book is one of fascinating interest. The illustrations alone, with their full descriptive legends, are a liberal education. Dr. Haggard's style unfortunately lacks unity." Logan Clendening
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Je 23 '29 900w

Boston Transcript p4 My 11 '29 560w

"Every page is crowded with astonishing information." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 6 '29 500w

Reviewed by Van Buren Thorne
N Y Times p4 My 5 '29 1050w

St Louis 27:264 S '29

Sat R 148:390 O 5 '29 750w

"A fascinating, though at times harrowing, story of the long struggle of mankind against suffering and disease, from the days when disease was regarded as caused supernaturally by devils that had to be exorcized to the development of modern hygienic therapy and drug cures."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '29 1500w

"Dr. Haggard apparently has so much material available that, if anything, he scarcely can expand his presentation as much as he or his reader would like. The book simply teems with the most interesting subject matter which has appeared in the field of medical history." H. G. Rowell, M.D.
+ Survey 62:369 Je 15 '29 260w

"The mass of interesting material collected in this book will bring home to the reader the horrors from which applied science has helped us to escape."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p765 O 3 '29 1550w

Wis Lib Bul 25:191 Je '29

HALDANE, JOHN SCOTT. Sciences and philosophy. (Gifford lectures, Univ. of Glasgow, 1927-1928) 330p $3.75 Doubleday, Doran [15s Hodder & S.]

101 Science—Philosophy [29-17177]

"Professor Haldane's work is essentially an exposition, from the standpoint of the scientist, of the philosopher's faith that all the tentative constructions of reality as embodied in the special sciences, consisting as they do of 'abstractions' at the ascending stages of mathematics, physics and biology, must yield place ultimately to the attempt truly to construct the world in terms of spirit, in which for the first time, and in which alone, temporal as well as spatial finitude begins to be transcended."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Bookm 70:xii D '29 180w

"The Sciences and Philosophy is not a 'popular' work; but, because it is the spoken word, the style is simple and straightforward, without the baffling technicalities and unwieldy sentences of the 'text-book.' It is most readable. Dr. Haldane has a happy knack of illustrating his meaning by similes and examples which do not belong entirely to the province of science."
+ New Statesman 33:448 Jl 13 '29 260w

"Dr. Haldane belongs to that rare and valuable type, the man of science who is a man of vision too. In all his explorations of phenomena, his careful rejection of the unproven, he never forgets the mysterious nature of those realities which underlie the world of sensory appearance. His Gifford Lectures, of which the first series deals with the sciences as interpretations of reality, and the second philosophizes on the data obtained, are well designed to give scope to this double temper of his mind." Evelyn Underhill
+ Spec 142:975 Je 22 '29 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p374 My 9 '29 1600w

HALDANE OF CLOAN, RICHARD BURDON HALDANE, 1st viscount. Autobiography. 390p il $5 Doubleday, Doran [25s Hodder & S.]

B or 92 29-26332

Great Britain's philosopher statesman, Viscount Haldane of Cloan, was for forty years a member of Parliament, from 1905 to 1912 Secretary of state for war, and was also a distinguished lawyer. Tho almost all his life was spent in the midst of intensely practical affairs, he was thruout, by his own confession, "more absorbed and immersed in the study of the meaning of life taken as a whole than with its particular occurrences," as his interesting autobiography reveals.

Booklist 25:318 My '29

"Written in a direct and engaging style, Lord Haldane's book deserves a high place among the memoirs and autobiographies of the statesmen concerned with European politics in the pre-war era, not so much because of its contribution to history as because of its value as a frank record of a full, active and highly satisfying life." F. R. Dulles
+ Bookm 69:98 Mr '29 620w

"Aside from the personal aspects of his interesting career, which Lord Haldane has related with the simplicity and brevity characteristic of really great men, his autobiography has the further charm of being the record of one of the most active and influential jurists, statesmen, and non-professional philosophers of the generation just past." S. B. Fay
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ap 7 '29 2000w

Reviewed by Edmund Noble
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '29 2050w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe
Nation 128:sup478 Ap 17 '29 950w

"This is a profoundly interesting book and the genuine self-revelation of a man of rare and original character." J. A. Spender
+ Nation and Ath 44:723 F 23 '29 920w

"His book tells a story of useful activity such as no Lord Chancellor in the whole of English history can ever have equalled."
+ New Statesman 32:668 Mr 2 '29 1600w

Reviewed by L: Sherwin
N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 9 '29 1150w

"Throughout his 'Autobiography' Haldane writes with that sort of apparently transparent sincerity which characterized 'Twenty-five Years,' by Viscount Grey. But contrary to the case of Grey, his greater intellectual attainments give the book a high interest. Though largely an impersonal record of his career, it is also an interesting study of English educational, legal and political life." C. H. Grattan
+ N Y World p11m My 19 '29 760w

St Louis 27:271 S '29

"In openness and flexibility of mind, in range of knowledge, in disinterested labour in the art of government and the field of science, Lord Haldane was a much greater man than any of his contemporaries. This makes his modest narrative of his achievements and of the progress of his thought the most valuable work that has been published in this century." A. A. B.
+ Sat R 147:241 F 23 '29 1300w

"This book, as the life recorded in it, is a tonic, as much a tonic as the best of Meredith, as some of the essays of William James, or as C. E. Montague's 'The Right Place.'" Wallace Notestein
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1050 My 25 '29 1750w

"A certain atmosphere of coldness pervades these reminiscences as a whole, but they contain not a word of cynicism, or a word of party prejudice. Whoever reads them cannot but feel what a great deal of conscience and serious thought is to be found in the innermost circles of English political life."
+ Spec 142:288 F 23 '29 750w

"Slightly depressing reading, is of the greatest interest. Lord Haldane was 'more immersed in the meaning of life as a whole than in its particular occurrences,' and for this reason his autobiography is perhaps of greater interest to the philisopher than to the historian."
+ Spec 142:1015 Je 29 '29 60w

"The interesting private career, revealing a temperament, and the important public career, touching events in British and international affairs about which there is still controversy, are blended in a volume of substantial public interest."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p125 F 21 '29 4000w

"This book is written with the self-analysis of a philosopher, which gives it a rare quality among political autobiographies. Its interest is not merely in its narrative of events, it is even more in the portrait which the writer presents of himself and his own thoughts and motives in great and critical events. It will explain why his personality at times caused irritation and misunderstanding and why his memory is held in affectionate regard by the great mass of his countrymen." J. A. Spender
+ Yale R n s 19:166 autumn '29 680w

HALDEMAN-JULIUS, MRS ANNA MARCET (HALDEMAN), and HALDEMAN-JULIUS, EMANUEL. Violence. 374p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

29-17997

"A sociological study of a [Southwestern] minister who commits murder and because of his personal power and social prestige is acquitted. Parallel with this crime is the case of a Negro boy who commits murder under provocation and gets the chair."—N Y World

"It is doubtful if even the most trusting readers will believe in the reality of Parson Jordan, murderer, liar, and accomplished seducer. His incomparable effrontery and the measure of his and his relatives' placid acceptance of his Elmergantrian transgressions are altogether too exaggerated even to find place in a Methodist-baiter's nightmare. Where the authors are more restrained, as in their admirable interpretation of the selfishness, fear, or indifference which prevents enlightened individuals from coming to the Negro's rescue, they contribute something of value and succeed admirably in writing a straightforward, satisfying story."
— + Nation 129:448 O 16 '29 280w

"It is a fine piece of journalistic writing, in which the story has not been neglected for the demonstration of the thesis. The plot is swift and vigorous, the characterizations, although decidedly two-dimensional, are simple and effective."
+ N Y Times p9 D 8 '29 800w

"As a sociological study the book has merit. The study of social psychology of the lynching is well done. But as a novel the book has many obvious defects. The greatest flaw is that the cards are too obviously stacked to work out an indictment of the society in which the events recounted happened." C. H. Grattan
— + N Y World p11m N 17 '29 180w

HALDEMAN-JULIUS, EMANUEL. Outline of bunk; including The admirations of a debunker. 503p $4 Stratford

901 Civilization 29-4003

The whole panorama of bunk is outlined, beginning with a general chapter on the bunk-shooter and the debunker. Religion, war, morals, sex, history, public opinion, and mysticism receive their full measure of debunking, but are offset by chapters on the admirations of a debunker—the virtues of civilization, man's interesting past, the superior men of history, man's record as a thinker, laughter and courage, creative art, the triumphs of science and literature.

Bookm 69:xiv Je '29 80w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 17 '29 200w

"Mr. Haldeman-Julius's well-meant argument is over-done in some cases, under-done in others." E. N.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 F 16 '29 700w

Reviewed by Stuart Chase
Nation 128:510 Ap 24 '29 550w

"You can't afford to miss the parade of E. Haldeman-Julius. Expert in high school education, self-appointed father of the companionate marriage, advocate of rough and ready skepticism, he presents an amazing circus. His 'Outline of Bunk' is a direct descendant of the Arthur Brisbane editorials. He has the same broad sweep of generalities and raises the same clarion voice against the intolerance of the Middle Ages. Just what E. Haldeman-Julius would do without the Middle Ages it is difficult to say. Remove the Middle Ages and the 'Outline of Bunk' would fall pretty flat." Horace Gregory
— N Y Evening Post p11m F 23 '29 550w

"Mr. Haldeman-Julius is ardent in his convictions and aggressive in his presentation of them, and, of course, the world is always in need of crusaders of that intensity of feeling. But he would doubtless inspire more confidence if behind the illusions which to him are merely lies he could see at work the great forces of human needs, aspirations and evolutions. Bunk is one of the narrowest and crudest of words with which to explain the past."
— N Y Times p6 Jl 21 '29 570w

"An intelligent person will be annoyed by the endless string of platitudes that form the 'outline.' He will be exhausted by the heavy, pedestrian prose, and bewildered by the author's self-assurance in the face of all the chaos and uncertainty of modern scholarship. . . I can only add that if you are intellectually adolescent you will find 'The Outline of Bunk' a revelation, a terrifically exciting venture into the realms of 'truth.' And I must also admit that the book can do you no harm." Bernard Smith
— N Y World p10m Mr 24 '29 500w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Ap '29 180w

HALEVY, ELIE. Growth of philosophic radicalism; tr. by Mary Morris; with a preface by A. D. Lindsay. 3 pts in 1 554p $8.50 Macmillan [30s Faber & G.]

171.5 Bentham, Jeremy. Utilitarianism [29-5835]

This work on the English utilitarians shows how the thought of Bentham worked into the economics of Ricardo, James Mill and MacCulloch. In the first part Professor Halévy deals with the youth of Bentham and the origins and principles of the utilitarian philosophy. Part two traces the evolution of this doctrine from 1789 to 1815 in its application to law, economics and politics. Part three analyzes the

HALEVY, ELIE—Continued
Implications of philosophic radicalism on economics and the organization of justice and the state.

---

"M. Halévy has presented a masterful study of an important movement in English economic, political, and social history. The subject as a whole has not been covered before in so thorough a manner; and the result is a distinct and valuable contribution to economic theory and history." G: M. Janes
+ Am Econ R 19:428 S '29 1100w
Am Pol Sci R 23:792 Ag '29 240w
Booklist 25:343 Je '29

"Hardly a book for the lay reader, it is for the scholar and the statesman an outstanding example of logical analysis and historical research in the field of ideas. It comes late to readers of English, but it is timely none the less. The translation is perhaps too strict to be quite true for a book so comminuted and expert and precise, and the physical appearance is forbidding." H. M. Kallen
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 23 '29 500w

"Ample material, set forth in attractive style, is provided in this book for all who wish to realize the extent to which that school of thinkers and writers known as the utilitarians left their impress on nineteenth century England."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 9 '29 430w

"The book is of the very greatest value to all students of moral science, especially because the author is chiefly concerned to show the influence of physical science upon the traditional view of social life. It is very full of matter, both historical and philosophical; for Professor Halévy is a master both of the historical evidence he deals with and of the critical method."
+ Int J Ethics 39:372 Ap '29 160w

"His concise logical criticism, free from the French vice of excessive simplification, delights the student of philosophy. M. Halévy's book is of great importance, not only to the historian of thought, but to the thinker grappling with present-day problems." Emery Neff
+ J Philos 26:414 Jl 18 '29 1050w

"Built upon a wide knowledge, not merely of the printed sources, but also of the mass of Bentham manuscripts at University College, London, it is an indispensable book. Mrs. Morris has translated it admirably, though I miss in her edition three of the four important appendices to the first volume of the French original. Dr. Everett has affixed to it a useful bibliography, though he misdates Mill's 'Autobiography,' and leaves out one or two important works which should have figured there. These are of course, minor points. The essential thing is to have the book in excellent English. It ought to be widely read." H. J. Laski
+ Nation 128:286 Mr 6 '29 700w

"The book is extremely stiff reading, for philosophic radicalism is itself not a light and airy subject, and M. Halévy is so philosophical a historian that he carries his reader deeper and deeper into those dim and difficult regions in which grow the roots of men's political beliefs. Those roots, too, are very often the roots of history itself. This sedulous digging down into the social, political, and economic beliefs of the past is what makes M. Halévy's work at once so difficult and so valuable. And his method is peculiarly suited to a study of the growth of nineteenth-century radicalism." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 44:526 Ja 12 '29 880w

"M. Halevy has paid us the compliment of devoting his life to the history of English thought and politics in the nineteenth century; and now that he is an authority without rival on his chosen period, it is a pleasant return on the part of translator and publishers to have produced so excellent a version of the classical work with which he began his studies. Of the test of La Formation du Radicalisme philosophique, everything is included, except one or two appendices, and Mrs. Morris's translation is in every way commendable; it is careful and accurate, and reads as fluently as if the English were the original version. . . A great book. To read it is a liberal education." A. L. R.
+ New Statesman 32:443 Ja 12 '29 1150w

"M. Halévy's work is a study as indispensable as Sir Leslie Stephen's for the understanding of the Utilitarian school." G: E. G. Catlin
+ Pol Sci Q 44:591 D '29 1100w
Pratt p7 summer '29

"It is strange that the first adequate study of the greatest English school of social thinkers should be by a Frenchman. . . M. Halévy's work is thoroughly comprehensive."
+ Sat R 146:690 N 24 '28 480w

"The Master of Balliol in the short preface he contributes to this well-translated book, calls it the 'most illuminating work on the English Utilitarians.' It is so, not only on account of the author's exceptional gifts, but also because the subject is not the men, but the doctrine."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p19 Ja 10 '29 1750w

HALEVY, ELIE. History of the English people; epilogue, v 1, 1895-1905; tr. from the French by E. I. Watkin. 440p $6 Harcourt [25s Benn]
942.08 Great Britain—History—Edward VII, 1901-1910

"M. Halévy chose the year 1895 as the terminus of his work. That work is planned in seven volumes, of which only three have been written and published, bringing the narrative down to the year 1841. And now, with not unnatural impatience, before he has completed his task, M. Halévy has been unable to resist the desire to write the history of those tremendous nineteen years between 1895 and 1914, which were at once the epilogue of the nineteenth century and the prologue of the twentieth. Perhaps he is wise; at any rate, one is glad to learn that when he has completed the epilogue in two volumes, he will return to the Victorian play."—Nation and Ath

---

"If the second volume is like the first there will be no single work on the post-Victorian period of English history better worth reading than this." W: Macdonald
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ag 25 '29 550w
Boston Transcript p4 Ag 10 '29 1100w

"His knowledge is immense. There seems to be nothing in book, pamphlet, official document, or newspaper, throwing light upon the history of the period, which he has not read. Over and over again, too, by relating one apparently disconnected fact with another he shows an instinctive understanding of the English character and the way in which it manifests itself in our public life and institutions." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 45:162 My 4 '29 1100w
Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 60:50 Ag 28 '29 2050w

"M. Halvéy's present volume shows all the qualities we have admired in the earlier ones: a knowledge of our country perfectly portentous, and a power of marshalling it not less astonishing. He is no mere arm-chair historian. He has been everywhere and seen everything with his own eyes. He is, in fact, an Englishman in knowledge, a German in thoroughness, a Frenchman in liveliness, and a European in impartiality."
+ New Statesman 33:52 Ap 20 '29 720w

"Professor Halévy writes with almost unparalleled learning and with great acuteness from a standpoint distinctively individual, aiming at impartiality, if not wholly achieving it. It is unnecessary to say that no other account that has appeared approaches his for solidity and brilliance."
+ Sat R 148:353 S 28 '29 700w

"Beside his work most of that of his rivals seems thin and pale, and much of it very small beer indeed. For he brought to his study of British affairs in the nineteenth century two qualities as rare as they are desirable—a strong and original intellect and a knowledge of European affairs of the utmost value to a historian of England." W. C. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 6:616 Ja 4 '30 950w

"This book is one which is written with all the brilliance of a Frenchman combined with the objective survey of the unimpassioned historian, and is a volume of extreme importance which no thoughtful student of present-day history, as conditioned by its immediate past, can afford to neglect."

+ Spec 142:752 My 11 '29 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p427 My 30 '29 1350w

HALEY, J. EVETTS. XIT ranch of Texas, and the early days of the Llano estacado. 261p il $3.75 Trustees, Capitol reservation lands, 208 S. La Salle st., Chicago

976.4 XIT ranch, Texas. Texas—History. Ranch life 29-16527

The XIT ranch was originally a three-million-acre tract of land in the Panhandle of Texas given by the state to the Farwell family in exchange for a capitol building. The Capitol reservation, as it was known, was the largest ranch in the cow country of the West and its cattle bore the XIT brand. The book tells the story of the development of this enterprise and its connection with the history of Texas.

---

"The history is told by Mr. Haley in a style swift, packed, concrete, and exceedingly readable. The book transcends by far the purely local nature that its subject might imply." J. F. Dobie

+ Nation 129:254 S 4 '29 200w

"Ostensibly this book is the history of a great family property; actually it is a cross-section of Western life and development made accurate and concrete by its reference to one great project. Mr. Haley could have made a useful book merely by setting in order the records he has assiduously collected, but he has gone far beyond a mere factual presentation. He has given the XIT its setting in Western history. The book is documented and scholarly; it is also well written and interesting."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1110 Je 15 '29 300w

HALL, BERT, and NILES, JOHN JACOB. One man's war; the story of the Lafayette escadrille. 353p il $4 Holt [15s Hamilton]

940.44 European war, 1914-1918—Aerial operations. European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives 29-10557

Lieutenant Hall was one of the original members of the Lafayette escadrille. This story of the exploits of the famous escadrille and of his own later adventures in England and on a mission to Russia, is composed largely of extracts from Lieutenant Hall's diary.

---

Booklist 25:354 Je '29

"It is one of the really valuable documents of those years. It is not a literary accomplishment, but historians and novelists may go to it a hundred years hence to discover what kind of men fought in the war of many nations. And they will chuckle over it as over a minor Pepys' diary." F. E. Hill

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 16 '29 900w

"The unvarnished account of a modern soldier of fortune. It is plain and homely; there are glints of grim humor in it and moments of spacious laughter; and now and again comes a period of dissociation that is most refreshing." D. C. Lunt

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 15 '29 180w

"Humor, charming turns of phrase, extreme frankness about his personal affairs, feminine and otherwise, and an extensive first-hand knowledge of his subject, make this the most interesting book on aviation since the war." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '29 400w

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden

Nation and Ath 45:799 S 21 '29 280w

"If one can stomach the sauces of the American language, there are two good reasons for reading One Man's War. The first is that it contains some rattling good yarns, told with wit, brevity, and spirit. Strange things did happen even in the war of attrition, and here are some of the strangest. The second reason is that the human accent and attitude of this diary are exactly representative of one section of the war. Anyone with experience of air patrols will feel a warm stir of memory as soon as he takes up this book. Hundreds of men talked, felt, and stood up to the war like this. It may not be nice reading, but it is, in its tough and blatant way, the real thing."

+ — New Statesman 36:476 S 28 '29 720w

"The schools used to teach that there are two English languages, book English and spoken English. Bert Hall writes the spoken tongue. Gathering skill from practice, he finally writes it with the nervous economy, sudden color, profane emphasis, and bitter humor of the talk when good fellows get together round a bar. He has the born talker's capacity to take you with him, make you see through his eyes, yearn over what tugs at his entrails, laugh at what tickles his funny-bone." Clarence Britten

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 27 '29 850w

"A tale fit to keep the reader on the edge of his chair with his breath short and his eyes unwinking from beginning to end. It is a hard-boiled story of the events and people that surrounded one hard-boiled fighting flier through the greater part of the war, and it is taken from the record of the flier's days as he wrote it down in his diary."

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 28 '29 500w

Pratt p32 autumn '29

"His narrative is full of vivid descriptions of the splendours and terrors of aerial warfare, and few writers have made us realize more keenly the fascination of the duel in the air. A note of genuine pathos occasionally breaks into his engaging devil-may-care and sometimes rather coarse humor."

+ Sat R 148:398 O 5 '29 220w

Sat R of Lit 5:1177 Jl 13 '29 330w

Springf'd Republican p10 My 31 '29 460w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 62:314 Je 1 '29 310w

Times [London] Lit Sup p734 S 26 '29 850w

Wis Lib Bul 25:321 O '29

HALL, HAZEL. Cry of time. ltd ed 99p $2.50 Dutton

811 28-24504

A posthumous volume of poetry by the young invalid poetess, author of "Walkers" (Book Review Digest, 1923). In her mysticism the author strikes a note not unlike that of Emily Dickinson.

---

"Her poems, read separately or as a whole, constitute one of the clearest, deepest and most individual testaments presented by any modern poet. Although Hazel Hall was an invalid, she did not write a sick poetry. Her work, on the contrary, possesses a solid and wholly unsentimental health that might put to shame the most robust of her contemporaries." W: Troy

+ Bookm 68:693 F '29 380w

"Charged with exquisite meaning is this posthumous volume of Hazel Hall's poetry. She died in 1924 at Portland, Ore. To the discriminating, few names in the modern movement outweigh hers. If fame is more than accident, it seemed inevitable, as I read these poems, that some day Hazel Hall must be rediscovered." T: H. Ferril

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Mr 3 '29 500w

" 'Cry of Time' belongs not in the main stream of poetry, but in its side currents. While its peculiarities may antagonize some of its readers, and its mysticism trouble others, the volume is undoubtedly interesting, and a number of the poems in it are of high quality."

HALL, HAZEL—Continued
+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ja 5 '29 280w

"This poetry is so tenuously delicate that only its cumulative power could have made the world note it. There are in it things as subtle and sudden as Emily Dickinson, and things as accurate, sharp and metallic as E. E. Cummings; but Hazel Hall was so far from being derivative that her poems are stamped with an almost fiercely individual impress." Shaemas O'Sheel
+ N Y World p11m N 25 '28 250w

Reviewed by E. L. Walton
Sat R of Lit 5:884 Ap 13 '29 400w

HALL, JOSEF WASHINGTON (UPTON CLOSE, pseud.). Eminent Asians; six great personalities of the New East. 511p il $5 Appleton

920 Biography. Asia—Biography 29-19316

Sketches of six great personalities of the new East: Sun-Yat-sen, father of the Chinese republic; Yamagata and Ito, Japan's opposing statesmen; Mustapha Kemal, the modernizer of Turkey; Josef Stalin, Russia's "iron man"; and Mahatma Gandhi, saint and prophet of India.

Booklist 26:116 D '29

"His information is the outstanding virtue of Mr. Hall's book. For the presentation of this information he is well equipped with a style usually simple and direct. His good fortune is that he has five remarkable stories to tell and he knows them well enough to tell them well. These stories have more adventure than Mr. Zane Grey could invent. . . I could wish that in his otherwise dependable book Mr. Hall had spared us the use of inexact and unserviceable generalizations." Isidor Schneider
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 S 22 '29 850w

"A valuable book. It sums up the recent history of Asia in quick, graphic outlines and tells in the most interesting possible way, the story of the men who have done most to make that history. Mr. Hall's style is lucid and backed up by sound information and research." L: Sherwin
+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 21 '29 900w

" 'Eminent Asians' is to be commended for its style, its sincerity and its historical completeness." Gardner Harding
+ N Y Times p4 N 10 '29 1600w

"This is a book which meets in a satisfactory way a general need. . . The paper on Stalin is especially significant, while that on Sun Yat Sen brings the reader to share Mr. Hall's evident prejudice in favor of the Chinese."
Outlook 153:189 O 2 '29 110w

St Louis 27:341 D '29

Times [London) Lit Sup p931 N 14 '29 350w

HALL, JULIAN HENRY. Alma mater; or, The future of Oxford and Cambridge. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 96p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

378.42 Oxford.University. Cambridge.University [29-9079]

Mr Hall, a recent undergraduate at Oxford, sees the future university determined by the undergraduates of the present. His book is inspired by H. G. Wells's "Open conspiracy" and is influenced by the Wellsian educational ideas.

Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '29 100w

"Prophecy of this kind is easy enough and may be entertaining with its brusque dismissals, but it is scarcely useful. It is a sad view which Mr. Hall takes of the quadrangle and its egoists, and we can only trust that in his survey of young scepticism he has been more picturesque than realistic. On the whole his book, which has a rather charming simplicity of mind, acts as a lively stimulus to gloom."
— + Sat R 146:822 D 15 '28 480w

"It is a pity that an undergraduate's damp squib should have been allowed to figure among the fascinating intellectual fireworks of the 'To-day and To-morrow Series.' Mr. Julian Hall, recently of Balliol, has failed conspicuously to grasp his opportunities in Alma Mater or The Future of Oxford and Cambridge. He has simply given us a rather tiresome by-product of an intelligence moulded to its present form by too deep draughts of Wells (H. G.)."
— Spec 142:88 Ja 10 '29 200w

"This is a small book, but for all that it contains it might have been smaller. It grew out of a reply to an undergraduate's attack on Mr. H. G. Wells in a Sunday paper. It is a pity that the reply was rejected by the editor, as it was probably the better for being both shorter and less elaborated than the book. . . Mr. Hall's ambitious little brochure is much too superficial and schematic."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p23 Ja 10 '29 480w

HALL, RADCLYFFE. Unlit lamp. 385p $3 (5s) J. Cape & H. Smith

29-17048

"An English girl, of talent described but not demonstrated, is kept from normal love by her devotion to an older and thoroughly destructive girl, and from the life with that other girl for which she yearns by a perfectly natural if tiresome sense of filial duty and by pity for her selfish, silly mother. Fate and a fundamental lack of vitality chain her to a seaside town, where a succession of family invalids keeps her busy until her middle forties when her mother's death releases her; and she stumbles to the distant bedside of a sick cousin where the book mercifully leaves her."—Outlook

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Jl 14 '29 1000w

"The book might be read as a rather powerful rendering of a motive which was becoming prominent in fiction at the close of the last century, that of the conflict of generations, of which Turgeniev gave the classic example in 'Fathers and Sons.' But in the case of Jean Ogden as in that of Mary Olivier and of the hero in 'Sons and Lovers,' there is a definite sexual element in the struggle. This shifting of values, literary and vital, shows how far we have moved from the nineteenth century and its ideal of renunciation." R. M. Lovett
+ New Repub 60:132 S 18 '29 950w

"A well constructed, well-written story, which displays a strong dramatic sense and a very considerable talent for characterization." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 10 '29 800w

"It is beautifully written in a sensitive and well-balanced prose, unmarred by the overmetrical cadences which flawed the workmanship of 'The Well of Loneliness,' and, in a slighter degree, that of 'Adam's Breed.' The characterizations are superbly accurate and convincing."
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 21 '29 700w

"The theme of 'The Well of Loneliness' brought Radclyffe Hall into a prominence to which the literary quality of her work gives her no claim. 'The Unlit Lamp' is a solid, competent, common-place novel in the English tradition."
+ — Outlook 152:512 Jl 24 '29 250w

HALL, TROWBRIDGE. Egypt in silhouette. 278p il $3.50 (15s) Macmillan

916.2 Egypt—Description and travel. Egypt—Social life and customs 29-610

History and legend are combined with modern travel impressions in these brief sketches of ancient cities and shrines in Egypt of today.

Booklist 25:317 My '29

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Bookm 69:xxiii Ap '29 160w

"Mr. Hall is the latest of those who have sought to put the eternal fascination of the country into words, and he has done so with considerable success. While he has not uncovered any new truths, he has interpreted the familiar ones in readable fashion, maintaining a nice balance between description and personal reactions."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 7 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p2 F 13 '29 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p94 Je '29

Times [London] Lit Sup p439 My 30 '29 50w

HALL, WALTER PHELPS, and BELLER, ELMER ADOLPH, eds. Historical readings in nineteenth century thought. (Century hist. ser.) 306p $1.75 Century

304 Social sciences 28-30477

A source-book presenting biographical sketches and the text of representative readings from the leading social philosophers of the nineteenth century. Contents: On a piece of chalk, by T. H. Huxley; Is there a social science? by H. Spencer; Communist manifesto, by K. Marx; Law and authority, by P. Kropotkin; Doctrine of non-resistance to evil by force must inevitably be accepted by men of the present day, by L. Tolstoy; The condition of labor, by Leo XIII.

"This book should prove useful not only as a volume of readings for college courses but also as an addition to the library of any general student of modern social thought."

+ Am J Soc 35:161 Jl '29 60w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 10 '29 150w

HALL-QUEST, ALFRED LAWRENCE. It's not our fault; why we can't be good! 399p $2.50 Liveright

170 Ethics. Moral conditions. Social conditions 29-9523

Sin has remained unchanged thru the ages. This Dr Hall-Quest establishes as he examines the standards set up in different eras by religion, philosophy, law. He next discusses the causes of wrong-doing within the individual, and from without in his environment. In the brief section with which the book closes, Dr Hall-Quest suggests the golden rule as the cure for sin.

"In method, style, and achievement the book takes a well-earned place among those popularizations of knowledge which are performing vital service in bridging the gap between science and the lay mind." C. D. Clark

+ Am J Soc 35:513 N '29 250w

Bookm 69:x Je '29 170w

"The volume is entertainingly written, amazingly comprehensive in its massing of information, and delightfully upsetting to closed minds and fixed ideas. But I doubt if it is really so devastating as the author would apparently have us believe. It gives one pause, after reading 375 pages of flaming rebellion against established codes, to find the conclusion of the whole matter in nothing newer, more radical, more sensational, more terrible, than the Golden Rule." J: H. Holmes

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Je 2 '29 900w

"Although there is much valuable information in the book, probably not hitherto brought all together, the author is now and then very superficial. In the hope of making the book readable, Dr. Hall-Quest has attempted flippancy and popularized language. People who are seeking to understand human conduct will be annoyed by frivolity." P. L.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 1 '29 450w

"Into the book's four hundred pages is compressed an amazing amount of widely ranging observation of the story of man's immorality and of comment and comparison and closely reasoned suggestion upon the significance of that story for the conditions of our own time."

+ N Y Times p21 My 19 '29 470w

Outlook 152:350 Je 26 '29 200w

HALLIBURTON, RICHARD. New worlds to conquer. 368p il $5 Bobbs

918 Spanish America—Description and travel. South America—Description and travel 29-28351

Richard Halliburton describes his travels and adventures in Mexico, where he explored Popocatepetl; in Yucatan, where he dived from the ancient sacrificial altar of the Mayas into the Well of Death—from Nicaragua to the Panama Canal, thru which he swam; in Peru, the land of the Incas, and other South American countries; Devil's Island, where he surveyed conditions at the prison colony; ending with a trip to Robinson Crusoe's island, where the author relives for three weeks Crusoe's story.

"Mr. Halliburton is not, in our opinion, a very good reporter. A flood of ecstatic adjectives and superlatives are there, but odd details that we want are missing. The best of the book is in the chapters dealing with the French penal colony. Here the author has some real suffering and tragedy to work with. How new his material is we do not know, but his observation is informing and detailed. And then, just as the reader is beginning to enjoy himself, he is plunged back into the Rover Boy play-acting of the Robinson Crusoe 'adventure.' " Beverley Smith

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p32 D 8 '29 470w

"Let us dub him Peter Pan Halliburton and laugh at his pranks, even while secretly holding that there is becoming a surfeit of them. Who knows? Perhaps this Peter will some time grow up, and then, as so often the elders do, we shall wish we had the child back."

N Y Times p6 D 15 '29 550w

"Halliburton is a showman, a man who turns himself inside out for the amusement of his audience, who takes falls with a smile knowing that with it goes applause and a living. His persistence is unquestioned; his good nature sticks out in every chapter. Life to him is a book of magic; he gives little thought to what lies behind the appearance of romance. . . His greatest asset, and his worst failing, is his ability to cover ground quickly. As a result everything is half baked, half digested." Harry Hansen

+ — N Y World p15 N 28 '29 900w

"Mr. Halliburton has plenty of courage, and also a quality which, besides his supreme gift for publicity, endears him to many readers. When he thinks about a foreign land he remembers what he, as a small boy, would have wanted to do there. Then he goes and does it."

+ Outlook 153:670 D 25 '29 180w

HALLIDAY, EVELYN GERTRUDE, and NOBLE, ISABEL T. Hows and whys of cooking. (Univ. of Chicago home economics ser.) 179p il $2 Univ. of Chicago press [10s Cambridge univ. press]

641 Cookery 28-23652

"On the basis of their research work and teaching in the department of home economics of the University of Chicago, the authors have set forth the 'whys' and the 'hows' of some of the fundamental cookery processes—the cooking of vegetables and the making of muffins, cakes, biscuits, pastry, candy, and ice cream. They have stated some of the problems to be solved, for example, the preservation of color and flavor in the cookery of vegetables and the control of crystallization in the making of candy. They have brought their scientific training to the analysis of these problems and shown the reasons why certain things occur. Finally they have given working directions, the 'hows,' for preparing the food."—J Home Econ

Booklist 25:57 N '28

"There has been no one book to which the teacher might turn for a clear presentation of some of the scientific principles involved in various cookery processes. Since Miss Halliday and Miss Noble have presented material of this type, their book will be welcomed by all teachers of cookery—and the more so since it is, in addition, delightfully written." Day Monroe

HALLIDAY, E. G., and NOBLE, I. T.—Cont.
+ J Home Econ 20:595 Ag '28 450w

"The book is, as it were, a rationale of cooking, setting forth not merely results but causes."
Sat R of Lit 5:716 F 23 '29 140w

HALLIDAY, RICHARD. Fanfare. 339p $2.50 (7s 6d) Putnam
29-18150

Anne Baldwin, a widow at 18, has one life ambition for her small daughter Betty. Thru years of hard, ruthless scheming, she succeeds in opening the doors of New York and Hollywood to Betty, who becomes a famous screen-star. But Betty's love for young Peter McCormick triumphs over her mother's ambition.

"In many ways an arresting novel, 'Fanfare' marks the debut of a fresh and vigorous talent. The most obvious merit of Mr. Halliday's work is its abundant vitality. Its vitality apart, 'Fanfare' possesses at least three major merits. One is narrative interest; read purely as story, this novel enlists and retains the reader's attention. Another merit, more important than the talent for narrative, is powerful and convincing characterization. A third merit of 'Fanfare' is novelty of material." Lloyd Morris
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 S 15 '29 880w
Boston Transcript p4 N 13 '29 360w
N Y Times p26 S 8 '29 380w

HAMBLIN, STEPHEN FRANCIS. American rock gardens. (Farm and garden lib.) 125p il $1.25 Judd [7s 6d Routledge]
716 Rock gardens 29-9738

"An attempt to present in a new way the complicated process of constructing and operating a rock garden. Includes list of shrubs suitable for rock gardens and lists of collectors of American rock plants. Useful to both amateur and professional. The author is Director of the Botanic Garden at Harvard."—Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 25:350 Je '29

"With excellent simplicity Mr. Hamblin tells the story of the hows and whys and whats, illustrating his book with unattractive but useful diagrams."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 28 '29 80w

"Mr. Hamblin's directions and suggestions for building and planting a rock garden are so lucid and in such detail that one can certainly follow them."
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 11 '29 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p89 Je '29

Reviewed by M. S. Jennings
Springf'd Republican p7e D 29 '29 400w

HAMILTON, ALEXANDER. Industrial and commercial correspondence; anticipating [his] report on manufactures; ed. by Arthur Harrison Cole; with a preface by Edwin F. Gay. (Business hist. studies) 334p $4 Shaw, A.W.
338 United States—Manufactures. United States—Commerce. China—Commerce. West Indies—Commerce. United States—History—Constitutional period, 1789-1809
28-6092

"This volume contains all the extant material collected by Hamilton for his report on manufactures; letters to Hamilton relating to our trade with China and the West Indies; letters relating to the Society for Establishing Useful Manufactures which sought prematurely to demonstrate the ripeness of the time for production by power-driven machinery; and finally Hamilton's Report on Manufactures preceded by an essay on the Report by the editor, Dr. A. H. Cole."—Am Econ R

"While the volume brings to light no new material, it renders available to students everywhere this highly valuable body of correspondence which may very properly be considered 'as original data for a broad industrial survey of the United States in 1790-1791.' It is at least a sort of first census of manufactures, since no data were collected on that subject for the census of 1790." G. O. Virtue
+ Am Econ R 18:724 D '28 570w

"Every person interested in American history, and particularly in its economic aspects, is under deep obligation to Professor Arthur Harrison Cole. Unlike most source volumes, an appendix showing where the documents reproduced may be found in the Library of Congress and an index are included. This volume should be made easily available to every student of American economic history."
+ Hist Outlook 19:295 O '28 200w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:619 D '28

HAMILTON, BERTHA M. Please come to my party. 149p il $1.75 Little 793 Entertaining. Games 29-20297

"A novel book of children's parties, written as a narrative, but giving complete directions for each detail, from the making of the invitations to the planning and serving of the refreshments and conducting the guests to their homes. Twelve complete parties are described, one for each month of the year, as well as several substitute parties."—St Louis

Booklist 26:125 D '29
St Louis 27:316 N '29

"Practical suggestions for at least a dozen children's parties which have the advantage of being possible of execution by the children themselves." Catherine Woodbridge
+ Sat R of Lit 6:429 N 16 '29 70w

HAMILTON, COSMO. Little gold ring, and other stories. 382p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Hurst & B.]
29-22419

Seventeen good old-fashioned love stories decked out in modern trappings, in which we meet the girl who tried to be modern but repented and wore a little gold ring; the ladylike ladies' maid who married the rising young novelist; the romantic young girl who tried to seduce a middle-aged artist and was rescued by her young lover in a William Hart costume, and so on.

New Statesman 33:282 Je 8 '29 100w
N Y Times p20 D 8 '29 450w

"Though it is evident there is not a masterpiece in the lot, not more than three of the tales are completely without merit, which leaves the book with fourteen acceptable specimens and a goodly average in quality for the collection as a whole."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:486 N 30 '29 120w

"In these short stories Mr. Hamilton exhibits the fluency and inventiveness that we have learnt to expect from him. . . Despite their satire, the stories are too often interspersed by subjective comments of an unnecessarily ingenuous nature, and the conclusion we cannot help drawing is that they have been inserted with half an eye on the magazine-reading public."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p476 Je 13 '29 220w

HAMILTON, DAVID OSBORNE. Pale warriors. 332p $2.50 Scribner [7s 6d J. Cape]
29-6459

The story of a beautiful, heartless woman and of her extraordinary hold on her "pale warriors," young gallants who put themselves at her disposal and go to no end of trouble to be trampled on.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ap 28 '29 200w

"On the disastrous climax we softly shut the book, all of its brightly sophisticated dialogue, its charming bits of description superseded by the utter detestation felt for its leading character." H. F. M.

— Boston Transcript p3 Ap 20 '29 550w

"A distinguished and rather unusual first novel. The story is admirably dramatic, and the parable is put over with force; but we almost never share the emotions of the characters. . . There is something unsatisfactory about certain aspects of 'Pale Warriors'; and the cause of the trouble seems plain. Mr Hamilton appears to have written his novel under the rather anachronistic influence of the earlier Henry James. One result of this is that the characters tend to talk a language which must have been impossible even at the time when James was first writing. Now I suggest that Mr. Hamilton has gone astray in taking over James's impossible young men and introducing them into a contemporary novel." Edmund Wilson
— + New Repub 59:158 Je 26 '29 1050w

"David Hamilton has written some poetry; this is his first novel. He has made the most callous improbabilities probable and a heartless, soulless woman desirable. The result is an altogether diverting story."
+ N Y Times p30 Mr 24 '29 380w

"David Hamilton has written his gay, ironical novel with sufficient lightness to keep it always amusing and with sufficient reticence to keep it intriguing."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1058 My 25 '29 200w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '29 200w

HAMILTON, GILBERT VAN TASSEL, and MACGOWAN, KENNETH. What is wrong with marriage. 319p $3 Boni

173.1 Marriage. Sex 29-6431

"Dr. Hamilton persuaded a hundred married men and a hundred married women, including fifty pairs married to each other, to answer an enormous volume of questions, under conditions framed as carefully as possible to prevent the examiner from suggesting the replies. The result is analyzed and compiled by Kenneth MacGowan, with a copious apparatus of statistics, charts, graphs, and curves."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 25:343 Je '29

Reviewed by Katharine Anthony
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Jl 14 '29 1200w

"The book represents in addition to its factual material an unusual and delightful coöperation between a wise and experienced psychiatrist and a gifted writer." H. M. Adler
Chicago Daily Tribune p9 Je 15 '29 50w
Cleveland Open Shelf p82 Je '29

"Though no one would consider the information exhaustive or the conclusions final, it is not surprising that the book, which is entertainingly written, is provoking wide and varied comment."
+ J Home Econ 21:371 My '29 100w

"A certain caution must, as the authors fully realize, be used in drawing conclusions from the facts which they present. In the first place the number of subjects is not large enough to furnish wholly satisfactory results from the standpoint of the statistician and in the second place the group is not even intended to represent a cross-section of the public. But though these facts must constantly be borne in mind the book remains superlatively interesting as a study of the behavior of a group and more illuminating than anything of the sort which has ever appeared." J. W. Krutch
+ — Nation 128:sup476 Ap 17 '29 620w

"The results of this study shed more light than a host of second-hand generalizations. The greatest value of the research, however, undoubtedly lies in the method which it inaugurates and in its promise for the future. It would be most unfortunate if the study were dropped at this point. If 2,000 or, better still, 20,000 men and women from different economic, racial and occupational groups could give careful evidence on these questions which Dr. Hamilton has worked out, we should have the material on which to base something like an adequate judgment about the marriage relation." Helen Everett
+ New Repub 59:45 My 22 '29 860w

" 'What Is Wrong With Marriage' is spiritedly written, though somewhat repetitious." Florence Haxton
+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 30 '29 930w
Reviewed by F. F. Kelly
N Y Times p7 Ap 21 '29 660w
Outlook 151:556 Ap 3 '29 30w
Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:14 My '29 30w
Reviewed by Elmer Davis
Sat R of Lit 5:873 Ap 13 '29 2250w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 150w

"The authors deserve credit for 'their courage and their patience in collecting and analyzing these data and in braving the ridicule and criticism which they are sure to invite. Dr. Hamilton and Mr. MacGowan have done the public a favor in debunking some of the mysteries of marriage." K: A. Menninger, M. D.
+ — Survey 63:51 O 1 '29 450w

HAMILTON, NORAH ROWAN. Both sides of the Jordan; a woman's adventures in the Near East. 320p il $4 Dodd [12s 6d H. Jenkins]

915.69 Palestine—Description and travel. Trans-Jordan—Description and travel. Syria—Description and travel. Petra, Arabia—Description and travel [29-1099]

An English woman narrates in informal, conversational style events and impressions of her travels in Palestine, Syria, and Trans-Jordania.

"The book possesses a variety and freshness which the reader will welcome."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 2 '29 100w
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 25 '29 950w

"Mrs. Rowan-Hamilton's account of a journey to Palestine, Petra and Syria has an amateurish air. She does not pretend to any particular knowledge of the places and peoples she saw, beyond what she gathered as she went along. Nevertheless her story is well told in its slightly excited manner."
— + New Statesman 32:supxli D 1 '28 150w

"Some travel books seem to be full of words. Miss Rowan-Hamilton's is one: she has more than 100,000 of them. The impression of verbosity is due to what we must frankly say is bad editing. Someone should have told the author what to omit and how to present her pictures in an attractive frame. These tricks of the trade apart, there is much first-rate material in the book, descriptive, political, and archaeological."
+ — Spec 141:712 N 10 '28 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p849 N 15 '28 500w

HAMILTON, PATRICK. Midnight Bell. 307p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Constable]

29-29433

Bob, a waiter at the Midnight Bell, a London public house, falls in love with Jennie, a pretty young prostitute and accomplished gold-digger. She pretends love for him while extorting money gifts from Bob's rapidly diminishing small bank account. At last she promises to go for a week's holiday with him, and he withdraws the remainder of his money for the trip. Jennie, however, fails to meet him; Bob gets desperately drunk, and awakes the next day in a doss house, penniless.

"Dickensian, sensitive, a little slight. . . The trouble about Jenny as a central character is that she has nothing to say—and even so her vocabulary can scarcely stand the strain." L. L. Irvine
Nation and Ath 45:567 Jl 27 '29 650w

"The tale of the young waiter, so anxious to improve himself, who takes in John o'London's Weekly and aspires to be an author, who has savings in the bank and squanders them all on an absolutely irreclaimable street-walker, is full of a pathos that is at once robust, simple and humorous. The brainless cunning and feckless greed of Jenny, together with the spell she cast over Bob, are beautifully depicted. There seems to me to be no false note until the very end, when, after a final deception, Mr. Hamilton sends Bob off to sea." E. S.

HAMILTON, PATRICK—Continued

\+ — New Statesman 33:439 Jl 13 '29 400w

"There are tenderness and beauty in Mr. Hamilton's book and a sardonic lilt, gleeful but not corrosive. There are moments when the writer's high-souled dedication to Jennie will seem somewhat overdrawn. One cannot help wondering whether even the most perfect knight would squire unquestioningly a lady with a temperament so intimately resembling a vacuum cleaner; whether even the stoutest variety of the idealism, which is one of the few prerogatives still remaining exclusively to man, could stand this continual drain upon trust and cash. If the author has overdrawn here, it is easy to forgive him, for the engaging grace of his subordinate sketches. 'The Midnight Bell' is worth while." F: F. Van de Water

\+ — N Y Evening Post p6s Ja 4 '30 400w

"Patrick Hamilton's study is entirely unstrained and lacking in apparent self-consciousness. He approaches his characters with no hint of apology or show of defense. The situations which he depicts are simple, and the emotions he evokes are fresh and genuine. . . He has added, in his last pages, a generalization upon Bob's history which may, it is true, make Bob seem a somewhat more significant individual, but which mars the integrity of a story concerning an essentially insignificant human being."

\+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 5 '30 750w

"This is a really fine story of aspiration, failure, despair and the re-birth of hope in a valiant soul. Both Bob and Ella the barmaid are authentic creations."

\+ Outlook 154:71 Ja 8 '30 70w

"It speaks much for the delicacy of Mr. Hamilton's art that, dealing with a coarse theme, he is himself never coarse, and for his charm and humour that, while he denies us the climax to which the story seems from the start to be moving, our interest is sustained till the end. The minor characters and the incidental public-house scenes are so delightfully drawn that we regret their comparative slightness."

\+ Spec 143:257 Ag 24 '29 160w

" 'The Midnight Bell' is a generous, warm-hearted book; and, in describing the nightly clientèle of the saloon bar, Mr. Hamilton gives the reader some comic relief which would almost be strong enough to carry the book had the story of Bob's sentimental education sunk to the bottom of that morass of false pathos which is never far away from novels that deal with the lives and loves of women of the streets, but which Mr. Hamilton deftly avoids."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p574 Jl 18 '29 400w

HAMILTON, WALTON HALE, and WRIGHT, HELEN RUSSELL. Way of order for bituminous coal; with the aid of the council and staff of the Institute of economics. (Inst. of economics. Investigations in industry and labor). 365p $2.50 Brookings [10s Allen & U.]

338.2 Bituminous coal. Coal trade—United States. Coal mines and mining—United States 28-13292

"The authors discuss the coal industry in reference to national economy, its effect upon the wageworkers, its disorganizations (resulting from the lag of control in unregulated, competitive development), and its failure in reasonable performance. The inference to be drawn from the contradictory recommendations with which the study closes is that not even the tools for analysis of the industry's problems are as yet at hand."—Am J Soc

Am J Soc 35:160 Jl '29 50w

Booklist 25:233 Mr '29

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:11 F '29

"The reader may not approve of the plan suggested, but he will find in this small volume much to stimulate thought on this vexatious subject."

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 3 '29 240w

Reviewed by N. J. Ware

Survey 61:243 N 15 '28 150w

HAMILTON, WILLIAM HAMILTON, ed. Holyrood; a garland of modern Scots poems; with introductory essay. 224p $2.50 Dutton [6s Dent]

821.08 Scottish poetry—Collections [29-17955]

"The compiler, W. H. Hamilton, has chosen widely, his purpose being to represent as much of contemporary Scottish work as possible. The Celtic wistfulness is a dominant characteristic of this collection; and if there is something alien in the dialect here and there, one is but reminded of Burns."—N Y Times

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 13 '29 70w

"Somehow the Celtic revival of literature that started off so bravely in the early '90s missed fire in Scotland. . . There is very little verse here that is downright bad. Nearly all of it is sustained by lyrical pleasantry and unaffected simplicity. Here and there are a few lines of real magic, reminiscent, no doubt, of the romantic movement that began with Robert Burns, but still valid and convincing." Horace Gregory

\+ N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 6 '29 450w

"Few of us are familiar with the poetry of present-day Scotland; and this book, therefore, opens new fields." Percy Hutchison

\+ N Y Times p21 Je 23 '29 250w

St Louis 27:339 D '29

"In spite of the title, only 39 of the pieces are in Scots. The proportion is too small. However weak it may be in other directions, Scots is still an admirable vehicle for song and satire; for these purposes Scottish poets still find it their most natural medium. A truly representative anthology would have contained a good deal more of the vernacular."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p719 S 19 '29 700w

HAMMERTON, JOHN ALEXANDER. Barrie; the story of a genius. 500p il $5 Dodd [16s S. Low]

B or 92 Barrie, Sir James Matthew 29-20254

A devoted admirer of Barrie follows him from Kirriemuir to London, telling the story of his development into the most popular dramatist of his time, largely thru the medium of his correspondents and reporters and the memories and anecdotes of his friends. The history of the plays and their production is told in detail, especially the fortunes of "Peter Pan."

Booklist 26:116 D '29

"Sir James Barrie for his sins has been made the subject of a rather stodgy biography, which is a pity; for whatever his sins may be, stodginess has never been one of them. Mr. Hammerton, with a scholar's sober devotion to truth, has tracked an enormous number of facts to their lurking places in books of recollections written by Barrie's contemporaries, in newspapers, in the works of the playwright himself, and in the memories of his friends, scrutinizing each fact carefully and sifting out all the nonsense." Garreta Busey

\+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p28 D 8 '29 750w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p2 S 28 '29 1750w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 O 11 '29 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p154 D '29

"Mr. Hammerton's book, while not particularly valuable for its literary criticism—he surprisingly admires Barrie's worst play, 'Der Tag' —is indispensable as a biography. He admirably accomplishes what he set out to do: to give us the facts of Barrie's life and career from earliest childhood to the summer of 1929." W: L. Phelps

+ — Nation 129:524 N 6 '29 1100w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:24 N '29 170w

St Louis 27:342 D '29

"The book lacks that instinct of authorship which alone can transmute a second-hand chronicle into a living truth, though it has value as a painstaking and honest record. . . Too much space is taken up by criticisms of other people's opinions, statements, and prejudices, and these are not usually significant enough to merit so much attention. As a collection of anecdotes and episodes the book is interesting, but it has too much of Who's Who about it and too little of How and Why to give it value as an important biography."

— + Spec 143:sup449 O 5 '29 950w

"It proceeds with stolid, industrious tread from one magazine article to another, from playlet to playlet, from speech to speech. It reads sometimes like a gigantic and discreet obituary notice written by a man who was determined to drag in somehow every press-cutting in the pile before him. . . But a reader who rewards Mr. Hammerton's industry with his own and who brings to this compilation a hunger and thirst for knowledge of Barrie will find much to please him. The comments on the works are usefully informative; and the author, though his praise may sometimes seem extravagant, has the courage to speak openly of demerits when he sees them."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p735 S 26 '29 700w

HAMMETT, DASHIELL. Dain curse. 272p $2 Knopf

29-15286

"Here is a story which opens mildly enough with the theft of eight small diamonds worth all together somewhere in the neighborhood of a thousand dollars, a crime too utterly trivial to engage the attention of a writer of detective stories. The theft of the diamonds is a mere preliminary and has very little to do with the rest of the story except to introduce the detective who tells it and who is in the thick of the stirring events that follow."—N Y Times

---

Bookm 70:xxv S '29 60w

"This speedy tale is more than competently narrated by a cop with a picturesque line of vernacular and professional lingo. Recommended for its weird characters and really astonishing speed. The author is an ex-Pinkerton operative." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ag 11 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p2 S 4 '29 200w

"The best feature of the book is the racy narrative style of the author's detective mouthpiece."

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 18 '29 230w

"We can think of only one story of the kind other than this second book of Mr. Hammett's, and that is his first book." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 152:552 Jl 31 '29 140w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '29 150w

HAMMETT, DASHIELL. Red harvest. 270p $2 (7s 6d) Knopf

29-9097

A hard-boiled detective arrives in the corrupt town of Personville on a private case, to find his client murdered. He stays on to discover the murderer and to clean up the town in an exciting train of faction fights, double-crossings and killings.

---

"It is doubtful if even Ernest Hemingway has ever written more effective dialogue than may be found within the pages of this extraordinary tale of gunmen, gin and gangsters. The author displays a style of amazing clarity and compactness, devoid of literary frills and furbelows, and his characters, who race through the story with the rapidity and destructiveness of machine guns, speak the crisp hard-boiled language of the underworld." Herbert Asbury

+ Bookm 69:92 Mr '29 500w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 17 '29 120w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '29 420w

"The mere fact that an author of obvious intelligence can write such a tale and persuade an American publisher to print it throws a valuable light on American conditions. If there is anywhere on the North American continent a town even remotely like Personville, then it is a sociological phenomenon which we must take into our reckoning, and I cannot believe that Mr. Hammett has made up Personville purely out of his desire to have a background for sensational happenings." E. S.

New Statesman 33:500 Jl 27 '29 240w

"It is written by a man who plainly knows his underworld and can make it come alive for his readers, the action is exciting and the conversation racy and amusing. . . We recommend this one without reservation." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 151:274 F 13 '29 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 10 '29 200w

HAMMOND, WILLIAM E. Dilemma of Protestantism. 150p $2 Harper

284 Protestantism 29-11362

This statement of the dilemma of Protestant churches in America lays bare the causes of dissatisfaction within the church and criticism without. In the final chapter Mr Hammond points to a way out of the dilemma.

---

"Mr. Hammond has produced what is in many ways an excellent book. He writes with precision and frequently with vigor. He has a clear eye and does not hesitate to state frankly what he sees. But as so often happens in cases of this kind, the author is much stronger in criticism than he is in construction. He diagnoses ills, but gropes for cures." J: H. Holmes

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 1 '29 470w

"After the many negative criticisms of the Protestant church which have demanded our attention lately, it is refreshing to find one which, if thorough, is constructive. Mr. Hammond, as pastor of a community church, has had an opportunity to get a view of Protestantism in the large which is appreciative as well as critical. He presents his viewpoint well, showing perception and good taste, in addition to a sound knowledge of his subject." R. R. M.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 26 '29 450w

Christian Century 46:967 Jl 31 '29 130w

J Religion 9:660 O '29 280w

"No franker statement of the perils and dangers which beset the Protestant churches and particularly their clergy has appeared in recent years." E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 152:230 Je 5 '29 70w

St Louis 27:329 D '29

HAMPE, THEODOR. Crime and punishment in Germany, as illustrated by the Nuremberg malefactors' books; tr., with an introd. based on Wm. Smith's 'Breeff description of Norenberg' (1594) by Malcolm Letts. 175p il $3 Dutton [10s 6d Routledge]

343 Crime and criminals—Germany. Punishment

A translation of the work of the director of the Germanic museum at Nuremberg. This book is the result of Dr. Hampe's studies of the Nuremberg malefactors' books, reflecting the crimes and different punishments for them, such as barbaric executions, employed in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

HAMPE, THEODOR—Continued

"Crime and Punishment in Germany is an extraordinary record of mediæval atrocities and superstitions, but it is more a collection of instances than a single picture. The book is thorough and very readable, and contains a good introduction by Mr. Letts, the translator."
+ New Statesman 33:788 O 5 '29 300w

"As we read of these people's crimes and debaucheries, culminating in their abominable sufferings on the scaffold, we realize that we are meeting only abnormal types. At the end of it all we know no more of the real Nuremberg than our descendants will know of London if they depend for their knowledge upon the police-court reports in the Sunday papers. Dr. Hampe has done his best: whenever anything of real general interest turns up in this German 'Newgate Calendar' of his he is on to it like a flash. But our reluctant impression is that most of his labour as an historian has been wasted. On the other hand, there is no denying the horrid fascination of the subject, quite apart from its historical import. This is a hard book to put down."
— + Sat R 148:358 S 28 '29 200w

HAMSUN, KNUT. Chapter the last; tr. from the Norwegian by Arthur G. Chater. 378p $3 Knopf

29-18548

"The story deals with the proprietors and inmates of a mountain sanitorium, and of Daniel who owns a small farm hard by. The last is a typical Hamsun character; a small pioneer farmer, attached to the soil, stolid and primitive. Then there is pretty Julie d'Espard, a pitiable character who is tossed about by circumstance and who finds happiness at last with Daniel on the farm."—Boston Transcript

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:514 Mr '29

"Chapter the Last is rather more loosely constructed than any of Hamsun's previous narratives; but the qualities of large humanity, shrewd humor and profound perception are here in the degree to which he has accustomed us. At this date there is little more to be said about one who is so indubitably a great writer that he cannot sink below the level of almost continuous beauty and honesty. The least chapter in this relatively unpretentious novel puts to shame almost all contemporary American writing." C. P. Fadiman
+ Bookm 70:312 N '29 400w

" 'Chapter the Last' has the stuff to endure through many changes of the literary mode." M. C. Dawson
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 S 22 '29 1000w

"Although 'Chapter the Last' lacks the epic quality which made 'Growth of the Soil' famous, it is much richer in characterization and incident. The characters are treated with sympathy and understanding. The incidents are all dramatic and although there is a note of irony throughout the book, it is always used to intensify the drama in the lives of the characters and never degenerates into cynicism." H. G. K.
+ Boston Transcript p3 O 11 '29 750w

"Mr. Hamsun has written more interesting books but he has not done any better writing than 'Chapter the Last.' His prose is balanced and supple, firm enough to support deep tragedy, pliant enough to make effective satire." Florence Codman
+ Nation 129:468 O 23 '29 170w

Reviewed by Howard Coxe
New Repub 61:149 D 25 '29 550w

"If there is tragedy here, nakedness of passion, sordidness of motive, littleness of spirit, there is, besides art unexcelled, a note, if not of triumph, at least of hope and of spiritual emergence." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p9 S 22 '29 1700w

HAND, MRS MATILDA BUTLER. Romance of old Cape May. 280p $2 Dorrance

28-31013

Her father scalped, her mother dead from shock, little Mary Selkirk is brought up by kindly English settlers on Cape May. The story of her romance with the son of her foster mother is drawn against a setting of Revolutionary days. The war affects the fortunes of the lovers but does not separate them forever.

"The story is carefully written with reference to facts, and an attempt is made to picture the life of the Cape May region, but it is not convincing."
— + Boston Transcript p3 Ja 2 '29 300w

"A story of consuming interest, with historical setting, that will engage the readers in Philadelphia and Southern New Jersey, because of the lively local color." S. B. Meeser
+ Crozer Q 6:134 Ja '29 50w

"Mrs. Hand has written a pleasant old-fashioned tale of Revolutionary days. 'A Romance of Old Cape May' is embellished with much sentiment and affection, and it should appeal to those who enjoy fiction based on early American life and in particular to those who are descendants of the settlers of this particular region."
+ N Y Times p9 D 2 '28 200w

HANKINS, FRANK HAMILTON. Introduction to the study of society; an outline of primary factors and fundamental institutions. 760p il $4 Macmillan

301 Sociology. Anthropology. Biology. Society, Primitive. Social psychology 28-20456

"This text is based frankly upon the belief that a beginning course in sociology should not attack social problems nor deal with any one type of sociological interpretation, but should be broadly introductory. . . He deals with 'the origin of man and his diversification into races;' with 'the primary factors in social life—the geographical, the biological, the psychological, and the cultural;' and with 'the fundamental arrangements whereby man has solved the major problems of living together in groups, namely, material culture, myth, magic, religion, science, the family and the state.' "—Ann Am Acad

"The inaccuracies of the book and its bias make it unusable as a text where a balanced presentation is the teaching objective. But most sociology teachers will not be irritated by the first since they will not recognize them. The second will make a positive appeal to a goodly number of teachers who want their textual material in line with the popular prejudices. The book, therefore, is likely to have a good sale and a wide use. It will do its part in the struggle against tolerance and democracy." E. B. Reuter
— Am Anthropol 31:501 Jl '29 1100w

Reviewed by M. G. Smith
Am Econ R 19:160 Mr '29 360w

"Mr. Hankins' manner of writing English is not the best for textbook purposes. A book for that purpose should give an orderly presentation, in lucid English, of the best modern thought on the field covered. The present book is lacking on each of these points. Nevertheless it will probably have considerable sale as a text. Its disposition to glorify the whites and the economically prosperous classes is in line with the prevailing popular prejudices; from the point of view of many teachers this will more than compensate for any and all its shortcomings." E. B. Reuter
— + Am J Soc 34:918 Mr '29 1120w

Reviewed by Hornell Hart
Ann Am Acad 141:276 Ja '29 220w

"An excellent text book."
+ Bookm 68:xxxvi O '28 40w

"In simple language, and though writing with the college student in view, he gives us a wealth of lore such as should be assimilated not only by the general reader, but also by our law-makers, politicians, business men and workers of whatever specialty in the social field." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 25 '28 600w

J Home Econ 21:284 Ap '29 60w

"For students or laymen who have already some foundation in the readings on social science, the Hankins volume is well worth reading. While there may be some disagreement with Hankins on his emphasis of the eugenic ideal, we have to grant him that he has gone as far as any one, so far, in putting sociology on an objective scientific basis." Nels Anderson

+ Survey 61:385 D 15 '28 80w

HANNAY, JAMES OWEN (GEORGE A. BIRMINGHAM, pseud.). Major's candlesticks. 334p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Methuen]

29-16170

"It seems that Coolarrigan Castle, the home of Major West, had been burned down by Irish revolutionists in 1921, some of the peasants thereabouts believing it high time 'for us to be yous and for yous to be us,' and that the major had, like the lady who saved seventeen pocket handkerchiefs while the ship was sinking, got away with seven candlesticks of antique make. Alas, he dropped them into the Shannon while making his escape, and who but the Rev. J. J. Meldon would insist upon going back after them three years later? And who but our author would think of injecting these two worthy gentlemen into a series of Irish outrages, masquerades and miscellaneous adventures concerned with gelignite, analytical chemistry, Jurassic deposits and scrambled Gaelic?"—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"If you like a fine blending of whimsy and satire this book of Birmingham's is a perfect bonne bouche."

Bookm 70:xxiv S '29 100w

" 'The Major's Candlesticks' contains, naturally, much characteristic Birmingham satire—and none of your kindly, or half-baked satire, either—on everything from religion and politics to English railways and industrialism, all worked amusingly into a swift story that you shouldn't miss." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ag 18 '29 280w

"George A. Birmingham, who used to be one of our chief delights, returns with 'The Major's Candlesticks' to prove we are all wrong and that he actually is somewhat of a bore." F: F. Van de Water

— N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 10 '29 60w

"Mr. Meldon is a little exhausting. He is so determinedly witty and ingenious at all times. . . It is a matter of de gustibus. The book is for those who enjoy a sort of humor that inevitably recalls the gaslight and stuffed horsehair furniture period."

— + N Y Times p12 Jl 28 '29 500w

"If it is whimsy you like and a laugh that broadens over 334 pages, then it is 'The Major's Candlesticks' you should be reading. If it is information you are wanting about the Irish, then it is Mr. Birmingham who can give you more of it in his neat, humorous, and sardonic way than you are likely to get from the profound proletarian dramas of Mr. Sean O'Casey."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:166 S 21 '29 280w

"The story is full of delightfully impossible situations and moves at a rollicking pace. Beneath its burlesque there is some true satire upon racial differences."

+ Spec 142:985 Je 22 '29 150w

"Without straining a point, the author works in satire on Irish politics and the functioning of government bureaus, taking a crack at the fad for Gaelic and dwelling humorously on the Irishman's aversion to governmental authority."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '29 210w

"George Birmingham has been keeping Meldon in his cedar for many tiresome years, and the result is most satisfactory. The post-Treaty Meldon is a riper, richer, more mellow product than the curate of 'Spanish Gold.' "

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p400 My 16 '29 560w

HAPGOOD, NORMAN. Why Janet should read Shakespere. 257p il $2.50 Century

822.33 Shakespeare, William 29-18654

"Mr. Hapgood is not content with literary appreciation alone. Not the least interesting portions of his book are those containing statements by actors of the stamp of Ellen Terry, Otis Skinner and Margaret Anglin on the difficulties of playing Shakespearean roles. The author also discourses at length on such charming and irrelevant subjects as which one of Shakespeare's heroines would make the best wife, or why is it harder to find a perfect husband in Shakespeare's plays than a perfect wife."—N Y Evening Post

---

Booklist 26:110 D '29

"Mr. Hapgood has very little that is original to say but he collects the old and new opinions of players and critics into an interesting readable book. It is by no means a short-cut to culture and nowhere is Shakespeare called 'the Bard'. It should send every reader back to the plays with fresh enthusiasm."

+ Bookm 70:viii Ja '30 100w

"Mr. Hapgood goes into the subject lightly, of course, as one must who is writing a comparatively brief and general volume, but with him lightness is not superficiality. Here is charm, color, character." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '29 520w

"No lover of Shakespeare should forego the pleasure of reading Norman Hapgood's new book; it is a most delectable banquet most enthusiastically served. His enthusiasm for the Swan of Avon is delightful and unlimited and infectious, and his knowledge of the vast Shakesperean literature seems hardly less adequate than his knowledge of the plays themselves." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p5m S 14 '29 230w

"Norman Hapgood did not choose a name that does justice to the volume; the title conveys the mistaken impression that the contents are designed for juvenile reading only; and, accordingly, it is necessary to begin this review by pointing out that almost any student of Shakespeare and almost any lover of literature will find much to edify him in Mr. Hapgood's agreeably written and earnest pages."

+ N Y Times p16 O 27 '29 400w

"A fresh, stimulating treatment of the great dramatist. This book holds the interest from beginning to end. It is enthusiastic and vital, and, as it is charmingly devoid of technical discussion, should give to the literary layman as well as to the Shakesperean scholar a new appreciation of the creator of the best in English literature." H. E. Mayo

+ Portland Evening News p13 S 17 '29 900w

HARDY, FLORENCE EMILY (DUGDALE) (MRS THOMAS HARDY), comp. Early life of Thomas Hardy, 1840-1891; comp. largely from contemporary notes, letters, diaries and biographical memoranda, as well as oral information in conversations extending over many years. 327p il $5 (18s) Macmillan

B or 92 Hardy, Thomas 28-28538

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:210 F '29

"If the chief value of the biography of a literary man is to aid us in interpreting his work through his experience of life, The Early Life of Thomas Hardy must be pronounced a success." R. M. Lovett

+ Bookm 69:96 Mr '29 1260w

"This compilation contains the raw material for a biography, carefully gathered, competently assembled, and practically inclusive of all the information essential to the making of a complete chronicle." E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 12 '29 1500w

HARDY, F. E.—Continued

"Lovers of Hardy's books will enjoy to the full this volume by his widow, a biographical record collected with rare discrimination from the novelist's diaries, notebooks and letters." A. M. S.

+ Cath World 129:374 Je '29 400w

"Compiled largely from Hardy's own memoranda and correspondence, this intimate biography has much of the quality and the value of an autobiography."

+ Christian Century 46:204 F 7 '29 100w

"Not particularly dramatic or even emphatic, Mrs Hardy's life of Hardy is still far from being a chronicle of minor matters. The reader is impressed rather with the number of central questions it answers, the number of things which in an unpretentious and unhurried way it makes clear." C: K. Trueblood

+ Dial 86:150 F '29 1350w

St Louis 27:100 Mr '29

"The whole book, one feels, is just as Hardy himself would have written it, the whole 'atmosphere' precisely that with which he himself would have clothed it if he had ever got further than the chapter-headings and the rough, occasional notes which he was at last induced to commit to paper. . . It is a remarkable work—as secure of its place as Hardy's own writings."

+ Sat R 147:112 Ja 26 '29 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 25:30 Ja '29

"The book is a model of good taste. One may here see Hardy in many aspects as artist and man. With a little effort of the reader's imagination the portrait becomes nearly complete." Wilbur Cross

+ Yale R n s 18:580 spring '29 1050w

HARING, DOUGLAS GILBERT. Land of gods and earthquakes. 203p il $3.50 Columbia univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

915.2 Japan—Social life and customs 29-4961

Brief essays on the Japanese, their life and customs, by a man who has lived among the people. Illustrated from photographs.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 16 '29 130w

"Uncommonly delightful book of uncommon value. If one be disillusioned of various 'polite fictions' long established regarding land and people, one closes the book with a greater liking for the Japanese themselves. Which is precisely what Mr. Haring hoped. At least we like to think so. With delectable informality, and commenting genially, and often amusingly, he makes known to us various characteristic phases of Japanese life today." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 24 '29 830w

"Long residence there, insight, sympathy, a sense of humor and a lively style make this an agreeable and informing book about that country of contrasts."

+ Christian Century 46:419 Jl 17 '29 20w

Nation 129:257 S 4 '29 20w

"Mr. Haring was undoubtedly at home in Japan. If he lived as easily and as charmingly as he writes, and dealt with his neighbors as justly and as sympathetically as he tells of them now, his stay was one more excellent reason why the Japanese find it hard permanently to dislike the Americans." Gardner Harding

+ N Y Times p5 Je 9 '29 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '29 600w

"This book irresistibly reminds the reader of many earlier collections of 'pretty-pretty' essays, where panegyrics on the Japanese people and their 'fairyland' were queerly intermingled with brief sketches attempting to convince the foreigner that the Japanese are, after all, men of the same stamp as himself. . . Cherry blossoms, smiles, and tea all make another bow to a foreign audience, and the same stories are re-told. But in one or two brief chapters (all too brief) Mr. Haring shows a refreshing wit."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p443 Je 6 '29 700w

HARKNESS, GEORGIA ELMA. Conflicts in religious thought. 326p $2 Holt

201 Religion—Philosophy 29-18346

A textbook on the philosophy of religion which aims to give a simple statement of the major problems of religious thought with some suggestions for their solution.

---

"The author writes clearly, disposes her material in orderly fashion, is conversant with the best thought of our day on the subjects she discusses, is fair in argument, does not claim too much, confesses hesitation now and again and is uncertain on some matters. From her teaching experience, her training, with wide reading and much reflection, she has written a book admirably adapted to meet the intellectual needs of our educated youth, and adults, too." Daniel Evans

+ Christian Century 46:1377 N 6 '29 520w

"This book is lucid in style and thoroughly fair in its presentation of the various views about these religious problems. It would be decidedly worth while as a guide book for leaders of groups who are willing to do honest thinking in this field. We recommend it highly." E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 153:271 O 16 '29 120w

HARLOW, ALVIN FAY. Old post bags; the story of the sending of a letter in ancient and modern times; introd. by Joseph Stewart. 499p il $5 (21s) Appleton

383 Postal service—History 28-25325

The highly interesting story of the development of the mail service in different countries of the world is here unfolded by the author of "Old towpaths" (Book Review Digest, 1926) and illustrated from old prints and modern photographs.

---

"This is a very attractive book. It tells pleasingly all, or nearly all, that the ordinarily well-informed person can desire to know about an institution, to which, in general, he gives but little thought. That it has an interesting story is obvious, and here it is told very well. But the title of the book is apt to mislead. Read along with the rather long subtitle, the purpose of the writer is plain enough, but a title should not require an explanation."

+ Am Hist R 34:633 Ap '29 350w

"Old Post Bags is written in a popular style, spiced with anecdotes and adventures. Unfortunately for the student, it is inadequately documented, and one is left without any clue to the source of many of the most interesting materials." C. D. Clark

+ — Am J Soc 35:138 Jl '29 520w

Booklist 25:193 F '29

"There is not a dull page in the entire book, and the numerous illustrations, most of them contemporary prints or photographs, only enhance the interest of the text." W: MacDonald

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 10 '29 720w

"From beginning to end—description, anecdote, reminiscence, stories of daring, often perilous adventure—the book is delightful. The many illustrations, from old engravings and woodcuts add to its interest, its revelation." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 15 '28 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p103 Jl '29

"The book is as valuable for reference as it is interesting for straight reading."

+ N Y Times p16 F 17 '29 450w

Sat R of Lit 5:804 Mr 23 '29 400w

"The account of the early Colonial posts in America, so often interrupted by Indian and other marauders, and the gradual development of the present system, is an exciting chapter in the country's history. Indeed, the latter half of this interesting and admirable book is taken up almost entirely with the New World; the story of its mails is told as carefully, with the same feeling for dramatic and amusing detail as the first part of the book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 3 '29 950w

Wis Lib Bul 25:69 F '29

HARLOW, VINCENT TODD, ed. Voyages of great pioneers. 380p il $2 (6s); also in 2v ea $1.25 (3s 6d) Oxford

910 Voyages and travels [29-26886]

Selections from the original narratives of the following explorers, with biographical notes: Friar William of Rubruck; Marco Polo; Columbus; Vasco Da Gama; Sir Humphrey Gilbert; Sir Martin Frobisher; Sir Francis Drake; Sir Walter Raleigh; Sir James Lancaster; Tasman; Captain Cook.

Booklist 26:65 N '29

"Mr. Harlow has done his task competently and interestingly, and his publishers have greatly assisted him by excellent bookmaking and twenty-four most useful contemporary illustrations of persons, maps, places, instruments, and ships. Within the limits of his choice it is hard to imagine a better introduction for students of almost all ages to European expansion."

+ Hist Outlook 20:306 O '29 200w

HARPER, FRANZ. Plus and minus; tr. from the German by Derick Wulff. 330p $2.50 Covici

29-16431

"Fedor, the Vagabond, lives by the flux of chance. He has only two tempos: the red series and the black. In the red series, money and beautiful women. In the black series, no money and no beautiful women. In the red series, he travels from Berlin to Venice, from Paris to Nice, in a limousine which contains a love couch, a library, and a feast. In the black series he keeps to his bed in some ignominious boarding house. During one of the black series, he falls violently in love with the exquisite, exacting Laura Viasto. So, through the whirligig of his fortunes, he juggles with fate to secure her. At the last, by a fantastic compromise with the black furies which pursue him, he wins her."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"When one becomes used to the mad, whirlwind pace of the story, one finds real characterization and style. It is exciting, colorful and fascinating in its originality."

+ Bookm 70:xiv S '29 110w

" 'Plus and Minus' falls into the category of those nightmares from which you wake up with a loud cry of relief."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 S 8 '29 280w

"Mr. Harper's book belongs to the genre of 'The Madonna of the Sleeping Cars,' and provides diverting light reading. The complications which arise in Fedor Harolsen's pursuit of his lovely lady, together with the swiftness of the action, afford compensation for a style that is somewhat chaotic and for the strained sophistication and rather wearing animation of the characters."

Nation 129:310 S 18 '29 110w

"All the adventures, in love, in poverty, in extreme fortune, that Fedor the Vagabond undertakes, are marked by grotesqueness. About half of these exaggerated episodes justify themselves as sardonic humor, by the grains of truth one recognizes in them. But the other half, unmistakably stamping the book as being an exhibition of Teutonic revelry, are episodes that depend on little but exuberance, and extravagance, of invention; in each of these, a point is sadly lacking." K. F.

— + New Repub 60:331 N 6 '29 130w

"It is in the forceful and at times subtly satirical writing of Mr. Harper, his colorful and extravagant depiction of a baroque segment of European society and the complicated and intriguing pattern of Fedor's characterization that he is at his best."

+ N Y Times p30 D 1 '29 550w

"The book seemed to us flatulent, hollow trash, tricked out in gaudy colors to conceal its inherent mediocrity and otherwise embellished by a flashy, sensuous style. Sometimes this kind of thing is done wittily and is substantially entertaining, but we have not found it so here."

— Sat R of Lit 6:218 O 5 '29 150w

HARPER, GEORGE MCLEAN. William Wordsworth; his life, works, and influence. cheaper ed rev 621p il $5 Scribner [16s Murray]

B or 92 Wordsworth, William

In the years which have elapsed since this book was first published (1916) there has been a great revival of Wordsworthian study and fresh sources of information have been brought to light. In preparing this new and cheaper edition in one volume Professor Harper has availed himself of the new material including fuller details about Wordsworth's relations with Annette Vallon at Orleans.

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p11m My 11 '29 120w

Springf'd Republican p10 My 3 '29 660w

"Since its first appearance in 1916, Professor Harper's 'Life' of Wordsworth has rightly taken its place as the standard biography of the poet: it is not only the most complete repository of the facts of Wordsworth's life, but it also corrects the false emphasis of the previous lives by Christopher Wordsworth and Professor Knight."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p589 Jl 25 '29 1700w

HARPER, SAMUEL NORTHRUP. Civic training in soviet Russia. (Univ. of Chicago. Studies in the making of citizens) 401p $3 Univ. of Chicago press [13s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

914.7 Citizenship—Russia. Education—Russia. Russia—Social conditions. Russia—Intellectual life. Russia—Politics and government 29-10648

A detailed and documented study of the program in civic education carried out by the Soviet government. The study is based on an extensive reading of the Soviet press and literature, supplemented by a visit of three months during the summer and autumn of 1926.

"An extraordinary book, highly creditable to American scholarship, invaluable for the study of contemporary Russia, a real contribution to political science." C: A. Beard

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:1006 N '29 180w

"Mr. Harper's information is exceptionally rich, accurate, and reliable, and his interpretation is based upon a clear understanding of the events and of the spirit of the Russian Revolution. His book is, therefore, unquestionably one of the most valuable contributions to the literature on Soviet Russia." Alexander Gourvitch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 My 26 '29 350w

"It is packed with facts from cover to cover. Professor Harper's book presents the ripe fruits of familiarity with conditions of that country bred of long residence and repeated visits dating back to 1904. It is in no sense a 'tourist's book,' but the outgiving of a profound student of Russian affairs, who neither criticizes nor condemns, but is content to chronicle and describe." W. J. Abbot

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 Jl 31 '29 1000w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

Nation 129:252 S 4 '29 780w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p11 Je 23 '29 1150w

"Mr. Harper's book represents one of the most valuable documents yet produced on education in general in the Soviet Union. Significant statistics are given without the book's being burdened with terrifying tables. An extended bibliography is appended which will be valuable to readers wishing to go more deeply into the problems of Russia." L. M. Wilson

HARPER, S: N.—Continued
+ Pol Sci Q 44:599 D '29 1000w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:30 N '29 150w

"In the restraint of the presentation and the keen but objective analysis, one senses the competence which comes of twenty years of background in Russia. The author has very evidently been a wide and continuous reader of the Soviet press and is thoroughly acquainted with Soviet propaganda literature and textbooks which are closed to most people. The book is not an oeuvre de vulgarisation, but a report written by a university scholar for his papers. It has no allurements to attract the reader other than excellent typography, faultless proofreading, a good index, and an unusual bibliography." W: C. Huntington
+ Sat R of Lit 6:55 Ag 17 '29 1000w

Reviewed by C. D. Burns
+ Spec 143:162 Ag 3 '29 400w

"It is excellent not only because he has the scholar's patience in the ascertainment of truth, but because he is handling a problem which he readily accepts."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p501 Je 27 '29 1200w

HARPER, WILHELMINA, comp. See Youth's companion (periodical). Girl of Tiptop.

HARR, LUTHER ARMSTRONG. Branch banking in England; with a foreword by Edmund Platt. 139p $2.50 Press of the Univ. of Pa. [10s 6d Oxford]

332.1 Banks and banking—England. Banks and banking—Branch banks 29-6029

"The author is strongly imbued with the virtues of branch banking exemplified in Great Britain; and the whole book should be viewed as an argument to persuade American bankers to abandon our unit independent bank system and substitute a consolidated system of metropolitan banks with branches, presumably nation-wide. The chief thesis in the argument is that the adoption of centralized branch banking is the obvious remedy for the unwarrantably large number of bank failures such as have befallen our country since 1919."—Am Econ R

Reviewed by R. B. Westerfield
Am Econ R 19:314 Je '29 420w
Times [London] Lit Sup p456 Je 6 '29 30w

HARRE, THOMAS EVERETT, ed. Beware after dark! the world's most stupendous tales of mystery, horror, thrills and terror; with an introd. 461p $2.50 Macaulay

29-16668

Tales of strange adventure, terror and the unknown by some of the world's most famous writers of mystery stories. South sea island superstitions, strange discoveries of archeologists, inhuman monsters in deep seas and jungles, and ghosts that walk in the night form the material for many of the tales.

"Masterpieces of mystery and horror fiction. Not recommended for people inclined to hysteria."
Bookm 70:xxxiii O '29 60w

"In his wordy introduction Mr. Harré, with perhaps pardonable pride, describes his selections, truly enough, as rare, memorable, exotic, fascinating, gripping, fantastical, weird, eerie, bespelling, harrowing, glamorous, gruesome, splendorous and shuddersome. And why not, when he starts with E. F. Benson's 'Negotium Perambulans,' takes Gouverneur Morris, Irvin S. Cobb, Lafcadio Hearn, Ellen Glasgow, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Leonid Andreyeff, Arthur Machen, Robert Louis Stevenson and E. Phillips Oppenheim in his stride and winds up with Gertrude Atherton in her most startling moment?" Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 D 15 '29 180w

"Here are tales as grim and full of horror as can be desired."
Boston Transcript p2 O 30 '29 300w

HARRIS, WALTER BURTON. East for pleasure; the narrative of eight months' travel in Burma, Siam, the Netherlands, East Indies and French Indo-China. 399p il $8.40 Longmans [21s E. Arnold]

915 East—Description and travel

Mr Harris writes of an eight months' tour of southeastern Asia, a trip thru Burma to Bhamo, and a journey from Bangkok, via Singapore, to Java and the Dutch East Indies. The last part of his itinerary took him to French Indo-China. He compares the colonizing administrations of three powers, Great Britain, Holland, and France, and brightens his travelogue with colorful description and anecdote.

"Merely as a readable account of varied scenes—many of them right off the conventional highways—the book, both for quantity and quality, deserves high rank among modern works of travel. Mr. Harris has a keen, but never superficial, eye; and his pen responds sensitively, yet never facilely, to every turn of his many-sided vision. But he has given us more than a fascinating kaleidoscope. His volume is a political survey of real value, written with insight, sympathy, courage, and sincerity."
+ Nation and Ath 46:324 N 30 '29 340w

"If Mr. Harris went East for pleasure he went with open eyes, an open mind and, we may imagine, an open notebook. The result is a refreshing blend of personal experience, attractively written description and well-informed commentary. His book is no mere compilation of a passer-by, full of hasty generalizations, but the product of a richly stored mind, and is the most thoughtful disquisition on Far Eastern affairs to have appeared since Sir Hesketh Bell's 'Foreign Colonial Administration in the Far East.'"
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p859 O 31 '29 900w

HARRISON, GEORGE BAGSHAWE. Elizabethan journal; being a record of those things most talked about during the years 1591-1594. 452p il $5 Cosmopolitan bk. [31s 6d Constable]

942.05 Great Britain—History—Elizabeth, 1558-1603. Great Britain—Social life and customs. Great Britain—Intellectual life 29-7946

"In this book the author with admirable background of research and scholarship makes, from original sources, such a journal as might have been kept by an alert and intelligent observer in England from 1591 to 1594."—Outlook

Booklist 25:387 Jl '29

Reviewed by T. S. Matthews
Bookm 69:335 My '29 400w

"The work has been performed thoroughly; the scholarship is painstaking, the range of reading whence the information is drawn is very wide; and the whole is vitalized by an enthusiasm that is infectious." S: C. Chew
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 My 12 '29 1000w

"Since we have not got an Elizabethan Pepys, the next best thing is certainly Mr. Harrison, recording day by day the things which people were talking about in London during the years 1591 to 1594. . . He has done his work extraordinarily well, and the result will certainly be essential to all students of the period, to say nothing of being an excellent bed book for any lover of the picturesque, the curious, and the immortal commonplace." Eileen Power
+ Nation and Ath 44:723 F 23 '29 780w

"Mr. Harrison, in collecting from pamphlets and news-letters, proclamations and state papers a day-to-day story of four years of Elizabeth, has produced a book of fascinating interest, and rightly he retains the style of the period when he himself condenses the news of the day. The illustrations are attractive and the notes at the end judicious."

+ New Statesman 32:298 D 8 '28 720w

"Those at home in its ambient will enjoy Mr. Harrison's book; those who are looking for palace backstair gossip and royal amours will find it disappointing." F. H. M.

N Y Evening Post p6m Je 22 '29 130w

"One of the most absorbing books of social history to come to public light in recent years. This synthetic journal renders for the Age of Shakespeare a service somewhat similar to that afforded by Pepys's Diary to the Restoration period." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 7 '29 1600w

"Lovers of the period will enjoy it. History teachers should know it."

+ Outlook 151:556 Ap 3 '29 50w

"The book is done by one who knows the ritual and routine of scholarship, but who is also aware of what will interest readers and who has no little knack of picking out characteristic aspects of the time. It is a good combination of the Daily Mirror and the Morning Post." Wallace Notestein

+ Sat R of Lit 5:858 Ap 6 '29 520w

"The diary is full of quotable passages. Taken as a whole it presents a most vivid picture of London life and London thought in Shakespeare's time and will serve henceforth as the inevitable background for any pen-portrait of Shakespeare himself."

+ Spec 141:791 N 24 '28 550w

"The volume is entertaining reading, and will be profitable to those seeking a first impression of Elizabethan life. Students of the period may also find it useful as a sort of check-list of topics, because of the excellent index and careful references to sources in the notes: they will employ the text, however, at considerable risk, for two reasons. In the first place, Dr. Harrison has read his proofs carelessly. . . A more fundamental reason why it will be perilous to use this 'Journal' as a book of reference is that the entire body of material has been recast in neo-Elizabethan English. . . The result is not always pretty or even comprehensible." Tucker Brooke

— + Yale R n s 19:414 winter '30 900w

HARRISON, HERBERT SPENCER. Pots and pans. (Beginning of things ser.) 95p $1 Morrow [2s 6d G. Howe]

739 Pottery [28-23444]

"A small, illustrated outline history of ceramics tracing their beginnings to primitive days."—Pratt

---

"It would be hard to cram more of significant fact and sound psychology into a narrow compass than Mr. Harrison has succeeded in doing in this little volume. Written in an easy style, with delightful flashes of humor, it is a model of popular exposition, all the more because of its far from obtrusive use of the diffusionist position." R. H. Lowie

+ Am Anthropol 31:504 Jl '29 850w

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 N 18 '28 60w

Pratt p22 summer '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:27 Ja '29

HARROWER, MOLLY. Plain Jane. 73p il $1.50 Coward-McCann

821 29-8657

A collection of gay little verses for children, text and drawings after the manner of the famous collaborators Milne and Shepard.

---

"The poems show a delicate appreciation of the mind of a small child, and reflect the thoughts of the very young. Kathleen Hale's illustrations add no little to the charm of the book."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 4 '29 120w

"Miss Harrower and Miss Hale are not quite such experienced collaborators as A. A. Milne and Mr. Shepard. But the rhymes are amusing, and the drawings very well adapted to them. Plain Jane's wit is not so subtle as Christopher Robin's, and her inventiveness not quite so surprising; but she ought to find many friends."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:890 Ap 13 '29 80w

HART, BASIL HENRY LIDDELL. See Liddell Hart, B. H:

HART, MRS FRANCES (NOYES). Hide in the dark. 317p $2 Doubleday, Doran

29-17389

The thirteen March Hares met again for a reunion house party, after ten years of separation. Over the gaiety of the reunion hung the shadow of the absent member, lovely fair-haired Sunny whom they all loved, and who had killed herself ten years before. There was a mystery about her death, but the house party cleared up many mysteries, although it required a murder to do it.

---

Bookm 70:xxvi S '29 60w

"Once you plow through the desperately vivacious opening chapters—and, for that matter, Miss Hart's sense of fun may strike you as splendid—you will come upon as neat a stabbing as ever took place at a Halloween party at the old manor house just after the lights were turned out. . . The author distributes suspicion cleverly among those present and piles up a stirring climax."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 18 '29 100w

"Thrilling the latter half of the story certainly is, and though the first part may seem a trifle banal, after all, the conversation of modern young people usually does. But the tale does not grip us tensely till the hiding game begins. Mrs. Hart is at her best when she writes of the grim and the sinister, and if the reader will persevere he will find a terrible and mysterious tragedy." G. B.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '29 520w

N Y Times p17 S 1 '29 270w

"The writing is pretentious and has a taint of the cheap magazines, but the plot is plausible and cleverly worked out, and the story holds the interest from first page to last." F. L. Robbins

+ — Outlook 152:671 Ag 21 '29 70w

"The story is leisurely and gracefully told and with a charm not always associated with the writing of a mystery novel. Several descriptive passages are noteworthy and the handling of the considerable love element is skilful."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:218 O 5 '29 260w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '29 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p877 O 31 '29 200w

HART, JOSEPH KINMONT. Social interpretation of education. (Am. social science ser.) 458p $4.50; students' ed $3.60 Holt

370.1 Education 29-9198

In a book written avowedly "to unsettle our educational complacencies." Dr Hart discusses the shortcomings of modern education and shows how the schools have become academic and divorced from life. In his interpretation education is inherent in community experiences and the new type of school must develop into an agency to reflect the whole of life.

---

"Aside from the value of a general critical discussion of present-day schools and their outputs, Dr. Hart's treatment offers several contributions of high value to special students, schoolmen, and to lay citizens." D. H. Kulp II

+ Am J Soc 35:500 N '29 350w

Booklist 26:102 D '29

"The thinking reader of Dr. Hart's book will find in it a stimulating discussion of the true nature of education."

+ Bookm 69:x Jl '29 200w

HART, J. K.—Continued

Boston Transcript p3 Je 1 '29 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p116 S '29

"Professor Hart's book is a competent, thorough if repetitious, technical yet humane social criticism of schools past, present, and future." Clarence Britten

+ — Nation 129:200 Ag 21 '29 630w

Reviewed by E: T. Devine

Outlook 152:189 My 29 '29 110w

"It is an honest book; that is, the author has set down just what he sees without omissions or inclusions which are designed merely to gain or maintain favor. In this respect, it is an exceptional book in a field where shelves are sagging with unprofitable expositions of the obvious. For one who wishes to go straight to the point and get a proportioned view, the book is a bit irritating. It seems to be the musings of a man who is looking at the actual realities but mulling them over first from one angle and then from another, repetitiously, without particular order, sequence, or plan. The treatment is lacking in constructiveness." Franklin Bobbitt

+ — School R 37:787 D '29 900w

Wis Lib Bul 25:273 Jl '29

"The author's indictments of current practice do not seem flawless to the reviewer; some details of his argument are, the latter believes, notably less clear or pertinent or on less secure footing than others; his epigrams and figures of speech are often perilous. After this is said, an unreserved, cordial, and even urgent endorsement can be given the book for the signal service its author performs in pursuing successfully his major purpose."

+ — World Tomorrow 12:378 S '29 170w

HART, WILLIAM SURREY. My life east and west. 363p il $4 Houghton

B or 92 Actors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 29-11495

In a succession of swift, graphic pictures Mr Hart recalls for the reader the chief events of his life, from a boyhood spent among the Indians on the Dakota plains, to the frequently hazardous incidents in the making of moving pictures which has filled the later years of his life.

---

Booklist 26:28 O '29

"The author is forthright, sympathetic and unpretentious, and his life story will be a treat for the many who miss him sadly on the screen."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 16 '29 120w

"Mr. Hart is to be commended for remembering so much, or for having had the foresight to keep such complete diaries through so many years. He has, moreover, written a book of diverse interest for people of varying tastes." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 1 '29 1200w

"A very interesting autobiography, eminently readable, intimate, breezy and exciting. It is curious to see how considerably Mr. Hart has adopted the technique of the movies in the telling of his story. The first chapter, dealing with the actor's boyhood, is a series of flash-backs and close-ups, without any obvious time sequence. The resultant vividness and sense of dramatic reality are quite surprising." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p9m My 25 '29 180w

Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 20 '29 90w

"A long and tumultuous tale, which Mr. Hart tells effectively, with the dramatic instinct that constantly brings out the action, the emotional situations, the tense moments."

+ N Y Times p14 Je 2 '29 400w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 228:adv Ag '29 90w

Wis Lib Bul 25:322 O '29

HARTE, GEOFFREY BRET. Villas of Pliny; a study of the pastimes of a Roman gentleman. 72p il $7.50 Houghton

913.37 Pliny (Gaius Plinius Caecilius Secundus) the Younger. Rome—Social life and customs. Architecture, Roman. Architecture, Domestic—Italy 29-12145

"There is more in Mr. Harte's volume than the descriptions of these villas [of Pliny]; in fact they occupy less than half of the pages. There is a sketch of Pliny's life and career; a version of the letter in which he tells us how he passes his day at his Tuscan villa; a description of Roman baths, of a triclinium, and a feast. Many details are given of the viands consumed at the extravagant banquets of the rich, and some of them are strange indeed."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"The essay makes agreeable reading and will undoubtedly give pleasure and reasonably accurate information to many persons who would be reluctant to expose their minds to the untender mercies of a scientific, scholarly treatment of the same subjects." G: M. Whicher

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 19 '29 1100w

Boston Transcript p5 My 11 '29 380w

+ Sat R of Lit 5:819 Mr 23 '29 100w

HARTLEY, DOROTHY, and ELLIOT, MARGARET M. V. Life and work of the people of England; a pictorial record from contemporary sources; the fourteenth, seventeenth centuries. 2v 81;80p il ea $2.50 Putnam

914.2 England—Social life and Customs. England—Social conditions (26-13706)

Two volumes have already been published in this series. They picture life and work in England during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries (Book Review Digest, 1926). In similar form, thru contemporary pictures and quotations from contemporary sources, the authors give in the present volumes graphic glimpses of daily life in the England of the fourteenth and seventeenth centuries.

---

Booklist 25:355 Je '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 Ap 21 '29 100w

"Nothing has been omitted that could make the study of each century vivid and interesting. Admirable as these little books are for teaching purposes, they can also be heartily recommended to anyone who cares to possess an amusing collection of historical illustrations."

+ New Statesman 33:364 D 22 '28 220w

"The book has charm and quaintness for the grown-up reader as well as the young student. Most of the pictures are realistic and crude in drawing, but a few of them have a delightful decorative quality."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 28 '29 240w

"This illustrated history of fourteenth-century England, containing forty-nine plates of reproductions from contemporary sources will put both the student and general reader in closer touch with their subject. It is an attractive volume which, for the sake of the pictures, the most informed would do well to possess."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 10 '29 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p935 N 21 '29 200w

HARTLEY, LAWRENCE ARTHUR, ed. Elementary foundry technology, with special reference to gray iron and steel. (McGraw-Hill vocational texts) 423p il $3 McGraw

671 Founding. Iron founding. Steel 28-28950

"A vocational school textbook. Features elementary physics and chemistry, and their applications in foundry work; good attention also is given to foundry equipment and practice."—Pratt

---

Booklist 25:272 Ap '29

"This book is commended to all those who wish instruction in foundry practice given in plain language and right up to date." R: Moldenke

+ Chem & Met Eng 36:97 F '29 300w
Pratt p18 autumn '29

HARTMANN, CYRIL HUGHES. Magnificent Montmorency; the life and death of Henri, duc de Montmorency, 1595-1632. 285p $3.75 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

B or 92 Montmorency, Henri II, duc de [29-11216]

This biography supplies the only modern account of the career of that great nobleman, Henri II, duc de Montmorency, 1595-1632, marshal of France, who was executed for opposition to Cardinal Richelieu and rebellion against Louis XIII. His wife, Marie Félice des Ursins, famed for the holiness of her life, after Montmorency's death took the veil.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Mr 17 '29 150w
Boston Transcript p4 F 2 '29 730w
Cleveland Open Shelf p140 N '29

"Mr. Hartmann has acquired much genuine information on the age of Louis XIII, and Montmorency is a good subject. But his book is not so successful as was his very lively sketch of the Duchesse de Mazarin. The texture of his writing is so flat that he is positively difficult to read. This is additionally unfortunate as there is no other life of Montmorency; one was badly needed, and Mr. Hartmann was the man to do it." Francis Birrell

— + Nation and Ath 44:586 Ja 26 '29 230w

"An excellent biography of the chronicle type written in a laconic style which enhances the picturesque quality of the events recorded. It is highly readable and well enough documented to satisfy the student."

+ Outlook 151:229 F 6 '29 220w

"There is no biography of him in English and none of recent date in France, though his wife, famous for her piety and for her devotion to Montmorency, was accorded three during the last century. Mr. Hartmann, therefore, has justification for his venture. . . The leading authorities Mr. Hartmann has used competently and has constructed a pretty complete history, though there must be a good number of manuscript sources in France which he has not tapped. So far as Montmorency and his wife go his record is a good one, but it is devoted to them rather to the exclusion of contemporary events, and, perhaps for that reason, is one-sided."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p979 D 13 '28 800w

Reviewed by J: M. S. Allison

+ — Yale R n s 19:174 autumn '29 380w

HARVEY-GIBSON, ROBERT JOHN. Two thousand years of science; the wonders of nature and their discoverers. 362p il $4 Macmillan [12s 6d Black, A. & C.]

509 Science—History

An historical outline of science from its beginnings with Thales to modern developments in bio-chemistry. Under each period the chief advances in astronomy, geology, physics, chemistry and biology are given.

Boston Transcript p4 N 30 '29 150w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 46:1610 D 25 '29 70w

"Not only is the book an interesting popular introduction to the history of science; it should prove a most valuable work of reference to those who, lacking the time for serious scientific study, yet often have occasion to make themselves familiar with the general trend of this science or the other. For such the scheme of this book is admirable."

+ New Statesman 34:sup xvi N 9 '29 160w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 153:630 D 18 '29 40w

"A concise but masterly volume. Its fullest and most interesting portion is devoted to one of the clearest accounts that we have yet seen of the new Atomic Theory, the Quantum Theory and the doctrines of Relativity, which have revolutionized our conception of the physical universe."

+ Spec 143:sup545 O 19 '29 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p879 O 31 '29 150w

HASBROUCK, ALFRED. Foreign legionaries in the liberation of Spanish South America. (Studies in hist., economics and public law) 470p $6.75 Columbia univ. press [27s King]

980 South America—History—Wars of independence, 1806-1830 28-21429

Thousands of foreign legionaries, chiefly from England and Ireland, went to South America during the early years of the nineteenth century to help fight for the independence of the Spanish colonies, under the leadership of Bolivar, the Liberator. This book tells the story of these men, and their campaigns, with some account of individual legionaries and their later fortunes, and of the soldiers from other nations who fought in the common cause.

"The book is well written, with vivid word pictures of battles and an occasional touch of friendly humor, and makes interesting reading. It deals with a subject before practically untouched, and is one of the best monographs so far produced from the meagrely-tilled field of Latin-American history." M. W. Williams

+ Am Hist R 34:403 Ja '29 400w

"Mr. Hasbrouck occasionally descends to the mechanically picturesque; but in the main he is content with sober scholarship. He is scrupulously fair in his apportionment of praise and blame; he leaves the reader to judge the rogues, and is happier in narrating the achievements of the honest men."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p769 O 25 '28 1300w

HASTINGS, ARCHIBALD CHARLES GARDINER. Gone native. 319p $2.50 Macaulay 29-7490

"In this simple tale of redemption from drink through love, in an African bush decor, Victorian characters of approved type go through the appropriate motions and emotions in Ingola, Inyanga and thereabouts."—N Y Evening Post

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Je 9 '29 80w
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '29 150w
N Y Evening Post p7m Je 15 '29 150w
N Y Times p16 Ag 4 '29 230w

HASTINGS, WILLIAM THOMSON, and MASON, KENNETH OLIVER, eds. Essays from five centuries. 486p $2.25 Houghton

824 English essays. American essays 29-10399

In this volume are gathered fifty-six specimens of the work of British and American essayists from the latter part of the sixteenth century to the present time, with biographical and bibliographical notes on the essayists.

"The anthology is one of extraordinary merit." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 8 '29 120w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p9m Je 1 '29 80w

"Long range and suitable selection characterize 'Essays From Five Centuries.' This book may be commended because the bulk of its contents is to be read for substance as well as style."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Jl 12 '29 60w

HATCH, ERIC. Couple of quick ones. 201p $1.75 McBride

28-27593

"In tossing off this little book, the author, a young broker, has doffed his hat in the directions of F. Scott Fitzgerald and Christopher Morley. The narrative, or, to be specific, the journal, of Martin Jones, son of old Schuyler Jones, begins where Fitzgerald sometimes left off, with the young graduate at the not so tender mercies of the business world. The Morley touch comes when the aforesaid youth wakes up one morning in Pickwick Arms at Greenwich to find himself married to the wrong girl."—N Y Times

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ja 13 '29 100w

"Everyone mentioned by this mildly humorous young man is either quite intoxicated or planning how to become so. The book might be condensed into an article which readers of cheap magazines would enjoy. It is pretty poor work from an intelligent standpoint. It is silly, monotonous and commonplace."

— Boston Transcript p3 N 17 '28 150w

"The book makes no pretense whatsoever at seriousness. It is always amusing, with several really hilarious highspots."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 13 '29 400w

"Hatch's 'A Couple of Quick Ones' rushes through the smart life of to-day somewhat in the way that Billie Baxter ran over the popular recreations of his own time. . . Some of the humor is quite humorous."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:440 D 1 '28 200w

"The humor is rather obvious in spots, but on the whole, the story is lightly amusing."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '29 100w

HATCH, RICHARD WARREN. Into the wind. 362p $2 Macmillan

29-7725

A New England farm boy is born with a hankering for the sea. He runs away from home to be a sailor, but finds work in a ship yard and transfers his passion from sailing ships to building them. In everything that he does young John meets with bitter opposition—at home, from the father of the girl he loves, who is also a ship-builder, and from other enemies—but John triumphs over them all and wins his heart's desire—a ship, and a girl.

---

Reviewed by E. L. Walton

Nation 128:537 My 1 '29 130w

"A novel of real distinction. . . One might wish the tempo of Mr. Hatch's novel to be quickened somewhat, but would not have it if it were to be at the expense of the excellently developed detail and solidity of the whole the author has given his book nor of the fine balance between action and thought." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p11m My 4 '29 150w

"Here is a plot that, manifestly, has decided elements of vigor—vigor that cannot help forcing its way into the pages of the book. The tale is told interestingly, even though rather long drawn out in places—particularly in the beginning; and, while the style in parts is a little too choppy for effectiveness, the author has given us upon the whole a telling picture."

+ — N Y Times p6 My 5 '29 330w

Outlook 151:548 Ap 3 '29 180w

"It is an ordinary plot and would make an ordinary novel were it not for the pains the author takes in sketching the two figures. As it is, it is something more than ordinary."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1005 My 11 '29 80w

"The author not only tells a strong, and absorbing story, but he puts flesh upon the ghosts of a dead and vanished industry that made America famous."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '29 580w

HAUSER, HEINRICH. Bitter waters; tr. by Patrick Kirwan; preface by Liam O'Flaherty. 245p $2.50 Liveright

29-29525

" 'Bitter Waters,' translated from the German, is the Gerhart Hauptmann prize novel for this year. A young sailor from Germany on shore leave at Tampico. He falls in love with an Indo-Japanese girl who does business in the red-light district, takes her home with him and marries her. Together they go to his abandoned shack on the little island of his birth; they build, they keep house together, the future looks quite possible. In time they are wiped out by a flood. They get back to the city and he ships again, leaving her in a place not very unlike the place he found her."—N Y Evening Post

---

"It is a remarkably passionless story built on the assumption that for the strong it is not difficult to be brave. In detail it shows a fine grasp of a difficult technique. It is neither a poetic nor a moving book except as a dispassionate observation of natural causes and sequences can be said to touch the heart. With the single exception of the girl, Chiquita, who emerges toward the end in a dull flame of color, the characters pass by, distant as shadows on a screen. It is in its keen, terse style, its almost strained aversion of the sentimental, its salty vigor of pronouncement that 'Bitter Waters' is most truly reminiscent of the sea." Eugene Lohrke

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 29 '29 850w

Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water

N Y Evening Post p12m D 14 '29 450w

"One notes a fine precision in Hauser's style, a hardness, an objectivity, a brutality somewhat reminiscent of Gorki and a simplicity somewhat reminiscent of Hemingway. With its lack of subjectivity, philosophy and idealism and its insistence on the lean, bare emotion and the vigorous act, 'Bitter Waters' is a very unusual first book to come out of Germany." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p13m D 14 '29 270w

"One of those unusual first novels that mark the arrival of a powerful personality. The story of two humble, storm-tossed characters who belong to the riffraff of life, it becomes a revelation of the need for human companionship in the most lonely of hearts, and the intuitive battle of the mating instinct against environment, heredity and man." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p11 D 6 '29 1100w

HAWES, JAMES ANDERSON. Twenty years among the twenty year olds; a story of our colleges of today. 259p il $3 Dutton

378.73 Colleges and universities—United States. Students. College sports 29-2925

For twenty years Mr Hawes has been travelling secretary of the D. K. E., visiting universities and colleges all over the United States and coming into intimate friendly contact with student bodies. His book presents an enormous amount of material on student life in our colleges today.

---

Booklist 25:308 My '29

"Mr. Hawes has written one of the most interesting and, on the whole, well informed books that I know of, about American colleges. The title is jazzy; the book is not. For the most part it is of impeccable solemnity as supposedly befitting its subject. This is a highly sophisticated, gentlemanly travelogue among a large number of colleges by a man who probably knows intimately as much as anybody about college life all over the United States." J: T. Gavit

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 F 24 '29 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p117 S '29

"Mr. Hawes's book is only mildly interesting and not extremely well organized. As a narration of casual experiences his book is entertaining; as a document of real importance to American colleges and American education it is doubtful." Edwin Seaver

— + N Y Evening Post p8m F 9 '29 100w

"Destined to have historical value, though not, perhaps, because of the information it contains as to 'democracy in the colleges,' drinking among undergraduates and the percentage of church attendance at Yale and Wisconsin. The careful student of this subject will perhaps turn to Messrs. Edwards, Artman and Fisher, who have done a thorough, conscientious job. Mr. Hawes is ingenuous and discursive, not by any means a practiced writer, but full of meat and easy to read." R. L. Duffus
+ — N Y Times p3 F 17 '29 750w

"Mr Hawes bases his judgments upon first-hand observation and study, and while he writes rather inexpertly as to style, he does seem to know what he is talking about. He is not pessimistic about the future of the race." Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Ap '29 100w

Pratt p11 summer '29

"It seems to be Hawes' purpose to present facts in their proper setting and to indulge sparingly in generalization. His book does make it clear that persons familiar with American college life a generation ago find a new set of conditions present today." W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:20 My '29 170w

St Louis 27:263 S '29

Times [London] Lit Sup p486 Je 20 '29 480w

HAWES, JOHN BROMHAM. 'You—and the doctor. 181p $2 Houghton

610 Medicine, Popular 29-8118

Intelligent and friendly talks to the plain man on his relations with the doctor, and on the significance of certain common ailments.

"This book by Dr. Hawes has 'punch' to it, holds the interest, and, best of all, offers advice that is sound and easily understood by the layman." M. E. Champion
+ Am J Pub Health 19:1389 D '29 270w

Booklist 25:382 Jl '29

Boston Transcript p8 Mr 30 '29 380w

"A readable, sensible book written in the hope of showing the layman not only how to avoid diseases by careful watch of his physical well-being, but also how he can use the services of his physician to the best advantage."
+ J Home Econ 21:370 My '29 60w

St Louis 27:283 O '29

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '29 200w

"Dr. Hawes' views on the domestic medicine catch-all, injudicious exercise and over-rated cathartics can all be enthusiastically endorsed by his confrères, though there will not be universal accord on some of his technical pronouncements." L. H. Cotter
Survey 62:258 My 15 '29 160w

Wis Lib Bul 25:274 Jl '29

HAWK, JOHN. Murder of a mystery writer. 248p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Skeffington] 29-10739

At the dinner table John Falcon, famous mystery writer, laughingly asks his guests to suggest a murder for his next story. His wife makes the only suggestion. And in the morning Falcon is found at his typewriter murdered in the manner his wife had described. The murderer is obviously one of the guests; which one, Mortimer Sark discovers.

"Plenty of action and excitement."
+ Bookm 69:xxvi Jl '29 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 5 '29 100w

N Y Times p24 My 19 '29 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p297 Ap 11 '29 130w

HAWKS, ELLISON. Boys' book of remarkable machinery (Eng title Book of remarkable machinery). 296p il $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Harrap]

621 Machinery 28-22947

All sorts of engines and types of machinery are described and illustrated here for the interest of the boy with a mechanical turn of mind. He is shown how steam engines and gasoline engines work, and what the remarkable machinery on ship board, in the steel forging mill, the printing plant and elsewhere, can do.

Booklist 25:216 F '29

N Y New Tech Bks 13:47 O '28

"The book is written for boys; it is easy-flowing and simple, and sure to hold the attention of anyone interested in the mechanical slaves of man. It would seem that everything, from the enormous steel manipulating machines weighing hundreds of tons, to the delicate calculating machines of the bank clerk, has been accurately dissected in this one volume for the edification of a modern boy's curiosity, whether he be fifteen or fifty!"
+ Sat R of Lit 5:737 Mr 2 '29 150w

HAWTHORNE, NATHANIEL. Heart of Hawthorne's journals; ed. by Newton Arvin. 345p $3 Houghton

B or 92 29-10491

A selection of passages from Hawthorne's American, English and Italian note-books, from his notes for new stories and from letters to his wife, including some extracts from the manuscript volumes omitted by Mrs Hawthorne.

Booklist 25:357 Je '29

"As compared with the journals of Emerson and Thoreau, these seem thin until one reflects that they were compiled for an entirely different reason from theirs. Hawthorne's notes are the jottings of a writer of fiction, with such a writer's eye for significant detail. When he puts down ideas, these almost always suggest either character or plot. His journals will therefore be most interesting either to writers or to students of his subtle spirit." R. M. Gay
+ Bookm 69:445 Je '29 430w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Je 23 '29 1500w

"If in the future we are asked what 'biography' of Hawthorne best visualizes him we shall answer, the one he unconsciously wrote himself in his journals. In them, as in no other verbal portraiture, he is a living, breathing human being—the man, too often forgotten in the 'genius.' And the quintessence of their revelation is comprehended in the selections Mr. Arvin made." Frances Bartlett
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 20 '29 1450w

"If anyone ever doubted that Hawthorne was a great and interesting man, here is the evidence to the contrary. . . The sketches here of Melville, Emerson, Thoreau, Ellery Channing, Browning, Bryant, and Tennyson are little masterpieces in their kind, and none of them is altogether free from the indispensable touch of malice—which is sometimes called detachment, and might be called condescension."
+ Nation 128:624 My 22 '29 200w

"We doubt if any biography of the author of 'The Scarlet Letter' would give us so complete a picture of the man, the writer, and his times. Especially interesting are Hawthorne's comments and opinions of the many contemporaries he came in contact with." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p9m My 25 '29 220w

"With admirable selectiveness Mr. Arvin has managed to extract just those portions of the journals that are most revelatory of Hawthorne, most interesting in themselves and most valuable as a picture of the time. . . 'The Heart of Hawthorne's Journals' gives an extremely clear picture of this reticent and solitary American, a picture that, as a whole, is not without a quiet charm and certain serenity." Herbert Gorman
+ N Y Times p2 Ap 21 '29 2000w

HAWTHORNE, NATHANIEL—Continued

"A reader can open the volume at random and proceed backward or foreward from that point without getting into any real desert country."

+ Outlook 152:469 Jl 17 '29 120w

"The unaffected vivacity of these observations is delightful. The book, as a whole will give a truer picture of Hawthorne than some biographies that have been written. It is conscientiously indexed."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 750w

HAY, JAMES. Hidden woman. 258p $2 Dodd 29-928

A beautiful, mysterious woman, living under an assumed name in a health colony in North Carolina, is murdered. The colony is highly excited over the occurrence, especially Dora Grattan who lives next door. Robert Braceway, a private detective, and Dora Grattan, working together, solve the case.

"An absorbing story."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 6 '29 180w

"The solution, while satisfactory enough in a general way, leaves some loose ends to be accounted for."

+ — N Y Times p20 F 3 '29 180w

"The book, as well as most of Mr. Hay's other mystery novels, is considerably superior to the average native product of this type."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:735 Mr 2 '29 150w

HAY, RICHARD C. Sales management fundamentals. 249p $3.50 Harper

658.8 Salesmen and salesmanship 29-5001

The principles of sales management presented and discussed by an expert of long experience in the field. Endorsed by the New York sales managers' club.

"Teachers of sales management will find Mr. Hay's volume useful either as a reference book or as a textbook used with supplementary material." E. T. Grether

+ Am Econ R 19:295 Je '29 280w

Booklist 25:348 Je '29

"With an unusual record of successful activity behind him, he has drawn upon his broad experience to impart to others some knowledge of the fundamentals of sales management."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 13 '29 150w

St Louis 27:308 N '29

HAY, THOMAS ROBSON. Hood's Tennessee campaign. 272p $3 Neale

973.7 United States—History—Civil war—Campaigns and battles. Hood, John Bell 29-4457

This monograph, which was awarded the Robert M. Johnston military history prize by the American historical association for 1920, is a critical study of the Tennessee campaign of 1864 which hastened the fall of the Confederacy. The verdict reached by the author is unfavorable to President Davis and General Hood.

"As an authoritative study of a campaign which had much to do with the fall of the South, 'Hood's Tennessee Campaign' is a valuable contribution to our military history, well written, sound and intensely interesting." C. H. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '29 350w

"The book is too specialized to enlist the interest of the general reader, but it will be of considerable value to students of the Civil War."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1100 Je 8 '29 100w

HAYCOX, ERNEST. Free grass. 274p $2 Doubleday, Doran 29-4996

Major Gillette has brought his big herd of cattle from Texas to land newly opened in the Dakotas. His foreman, San Saba, double crosses the major and kills him. Tom Gillette, arriving from the East now has the family honor to avenge, the property to defend, San Saba to kill, and the girl to win. He is able.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 17 '29 70w

"A very good tale."

+ Boston Transcript p10 Mr 30 '29 200w

"An exceptionally good yarn." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p9m F 2 '29 50w

HAYES, DOREMUS ALMY. Heights of Christian blessedness; a study of the beatitudes. 393p $2.50 Abingdon press

226.2 Beatitudes 28-30085

"Dr. Doremus A. Hayes, for many years a teacher in Garrett Biblical institute, has added another volume to his already numerous writings on the New Testament. In this book which, together with two former volumes, completes a trilogy, Dr. Hayes admittedly sets out 'to give a literalistic, idealistic, pacifistic, Quaker, Mennonite, Christian interpretation of the beatitudes.' While each of the beatitudes is discussed separately, it is assumed in the beginning that all the beatitudes belong inseparably together. . . Owing to the author's conviction that war is the worst malady threatening modern civilization, the largest proportion of space is given to the seventh beatitude. 'Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God.' "—Christian Century

"As an interpretation, balanced and thoughtful, of all the Beatitudes, it is hardly a success. There are brave words and a prophet's passion in the message. The challenge to Christian people is mixed with his heart's blood. As an indictment of war and of the Church it cuts to the quick, but as a New Testament scholar's careful, thoughtful interpretation of Matthew v, 3-10, it falls short." T. C. R.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ja 30 '29 400w

"The entire book bears the imprint of rich scholarship, maturity of religious experience, earnestness of purpose, and tenacious devotion to a cause. To the historical critic, however, this volume leaves much to be desired. The discussion assumes the character of a homily which, though beautifully idealistic, lacks scientific inquiry into the problem of living the Jesus life in a society that differs so radically from the world of Jesus' day." O. V. Jackson

— + Christian Century 46:1091 S 4 '29 480w

J Religion 9:326 Ap '29 60w

HAYNES, RENEE. Neapolitan ice. 296p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Chatto & W.] 29-13831

Sylvia Verney's student days at Oxford are quickened by friendship with her cousin Crispin and darkened by unhappy circumstances at home. When the affair with Crispin is frustrated life seems to Sylvia "like a Neapolitan ice that is bitter in every layer."

Bookm 70:xxi S '29 120w

"Quiet prose which has moments of beauty when it stays simple, to become labored, however, in pursuit of metaphors. This is a book that leaves a bittersweet flavor, an apéritif leaving a desire for more."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 F 17 '29 220w

"For what is obviously a very youthful novel, marred by the inevitable youthful faults, 'Neapolitan Ice' is a rather amazingly impressive piece of work. Not only does it promise much for the future of its young and most British author, but it is in itself a little classic of a point of view."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Mr 9 '29 250w

New Statesman 31:86 Ap 28 '28 280w

"This is as satisfying a first novel as one could hope to come across."

+ N Y Times p8 F 10 '29 620w

"The sentimental potentialities of the story are capably restrained, the character drawing notably skilful, the style of an urbane purity. The young author should be decidedly worth watching."

+ N Y World p11m Ap 7 '29 150w

"The real triumph of the novel is in the creation not of a group, but of an individual, Sylvia, who is one of the most refreshing English girls in recent fiction."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1005 My 11 '29 150w

"One gets a quite charming impression of bright irresponsible creatures moving about in a clear golden air. . . The candid and eager intelligence of Sylvia makes the whole story very engaging. This first novel has distinct qualities of style, words being used with an admirable exactitude. It has vivacity, sensibility, and promise." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 140:653 Ap 28 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 24 '29 250w

"Miss Haynes has the distinction of having written one of the rare books about an Oxford women's college which are in the least like the real thing. . . Miss Haynes writes simple, nervous English and expresses sensations which are keen and genuine."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p337 My 3 '28 130w

HAYWOOD, WILLIAM DUDLEY. Bill Haywood's book; autobiography. 368p $3.50 Int. pub.

B or 92 Labor and laboring classes—United States. Trade unions—United States

29-1577

The autobiography of William D. Haywood, head of the radical labor movement in America, is the simply told story of his forty years' fight for organized labor, of the causes he championed and the strikes he led up to his departure for Russia in 1921. A friend and co-worker of Haywood has added a chapter giving a brief account of his life and work in the Soviet union.

---

Booklist 25:284 Ap '29

Bookm 69:viii Ap '29 100w

"What the book lacks in gloss and pictorial simplicity, it more than makes up in the raw material of American life that it exposes. The book is rich in hate and warmth and light on quarrels that still endure. . . There is no weariness in the book, no cynicism about method, no weakness. This is a war book by a revolutionist. Its defects are materials for the historians, its virtue is that it exposes a war that too many of us pretend does not exist." Ernestine Evans

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ag 25 '29 980w

"The reading of this book will disquiet us complacent folk, but it will at least keep us from being too surprised—and too inactive?—when the next sinister event occurs." W. L. Chappell

Christian Century 46:651 My 15 '29 130w

"His book is not careful history. It rambles and misses significant organization detail. But it achieves a certain historical effect by its sharp closeups of pioneer life and its fragmentary but dramatic narratives of the Rocky Mountain labor wars." Art Shields

+ — Nation 129:121 Jl 31 '29 760w

"If his book resembles those of the literary gossips in technique, it does not in mood. There is no brilliance or gaiety, only bitter humor; no lightness of touch or sophistication, rather simplicity and the intense seriousness which comes out of dealing with poverty." M. P. Levy

New Repub 58:311 My 1 '29 580w

"The chapters dealing with labor struggles are excellent sources for historians. Haywood made no attempt to prettify the conflicts, and the episodes in which he played so important a role are recorded truthfully, with all their bloody details." Bernard Smith

+ N Y Evening Post p11m F 23 '29 520w

"If you do not mind reading of courage and self-sacrifice for an international ideal of which you will probably not approve, you should read what Bill Haywood has to say. It is a pity that he says it with epithets, but when you read his story you wonder that he can be so restrained." J: Carter

Sat R of Lit 5:878 Ap 13 '29 1100w

"His book is not satisfying. It is dressed up, like labor on Sunday, talking for company. . . The story is not new, but it is full of human interest and human life on that little known level where men do world's work. I doubt whether we see his like again for the machine technology rules against his kind, and the frontier is gone. It is good to have what he thought he was, and to be reminded of the bitter struggle of which he was one incarnation, a blind force, lit with a native sweetness and idealism; the gentleness of greatness." Leon Whipple

+ — Survey 62:314 Je 1 '29 280w

"The book . . . is long, diffuse, and too arbitrarily seasoned with manifestos, diatribes and denunciations of opponents and colleagues for a reader unfamiliar with strategic positions in the industrial battle-ground to follow in detail the struggle in which Haywood was a leader of the Reds.' "

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p526 Jl 4 '29 1000w

HAZARD, PAUL. Stendhal (Henri Beyle); tr. from the French by Eleanor Hard. 315p $3 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Beyle, Marie Henri 29-9533

M. Paul Hazard, an eminent French historian, has written a witty and interesting biography in the best Maurois and Strachey tradition, of Henri Beyle, a contradictory genius who had a pronounced influence on French letters.

---

Booklist 25:392 Jl '29

Reviewed by H. N. Doughty, Jr.

Bookm 69:434 Je '29 450w

"As a moving piece of work unified in its conception of the development of an astonishing mind and liberally interlarded with that 'color' that orientates a personality in his time, 'Stendhal' is one of the most successful of recent biographies." Herbert Gorman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ap 14 '29 1300w

"M. Hazard's study gains mastery as it progresses and ends in quite a blaze of glory. The last fifty pages of this biography leaves no doubt of M. Hazard's exhaustive understanding of the subject matter, in the projection of which the virtues assuredly outweigh the faults. . . If the rest of the book were on a literary par with the last fifty pages Hazard's 'Stendhal' would be among the finest of the new biographies. Even so the new biographers ought to study it as a model of tact and good taste." J. F. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p8 Ap 20 '29 750w

"His book is about as well done as its particular sort of thing can be. Not only is he clever and tremendously fluent but he is also as intelligent as he will allow himself time to be. He gets as deep into his subject as one could possibly get while constantly avoiding the composition of a single paragraph which could not be read in the subway; but the question is simply whether or not it is advisable to ask so little of one's readers." J. W. Krutch

Nation 128:650 My 29 '29 860w

"For the uninitiated, the work remains fascinating as a psychological romance. It is the searching and sympathetic tale of a disappointing destiny, the tender and ironical presentation of a rare and puzzling character. It is a study in lop-sided genius, the plumbing of depths within depths of failure. The artistic effect of the book is extraordinarily subtle and yet not cryptic: for, constantly alert and entertaining in style, it is exquisitely sad in spirit." Albert Guérard

+ New Repub 59:131 Je 19 '29 830w

HAZARD, PAUL—Continued

"Of an often disagreeable, frequently silly and confused person we have a constant view; of his clarity and wisdom we see almost nothing. Yet the book is fast and interesting, it gives many facts, and for the reader familiar with the novels it should be an enlightening study and a necessary supplement." Lionel Trilling

+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 20 '29 900w

"M. Hazard, one of the most profound and brilliant of contemporary French historians, has cast formal scholarship and convention aside and produced a spiritual portrait that demands a place upon one's shelves beside the works of Strachey and Maurois. Much has, and doubtless will again, be said about Stendhal that M. Hazard has not seen fit to include—his treatment of the novels, for instance, is startlingly debonair—but it is doubtful whether the man himself and his underlying characteristics will ever be set forth with more wit or penetration." C. B. Chase

+ N Y Times p5 My 5 '29 1400w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 152:113 My 15 '29 70w

"Recommendation can be made safely for two reasons; first, because its subject, Stendhal-Beyle, is one of the most complicated and fascinating figures in the nineteenth century and secondly because its author, Professor Paul Hazard, recognized as one of the most distinguished French literary historians, here proves himself also one of France's most accomplished, humane, and humorous men of letters. . . . Professor Hazard's unpretentious volume will amuse anyone interested in the riddle of life and will help make Stendhal intelligible to those who are content not to force him into any one all-inclusive formula." Christian Gauss

+ Sat R of Lit 5:973 My 4 '29 1100w

Reviewed by Albert Feuillerat
Yale R n s 19:163 autumn '29 320w

HEADLAM-MORLEY, AGNES. New democratic constitutions of Europe; a comparative study of post-war European constitutions with special reference to Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Finland, the kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes and the Baltic states. 298p $3.50 (8s 6d) Oxford

342.4 Constitutions. Political science [28-28390]

"The War, as we were once fond of proclaiming, was fought to make the world safe for democracy. In what sense has the peace made democracy constitutionally safe in the new States of the Continent? This is the question which Miss Headlam-Morley investigates with a real wealth of learning and a high degree of political insight."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Boston Transcript p3 D 22 '28 1000w

"An extremely useful analysis of the Constitutions of post-war European States from the point of view of both their form and working. The book is full of information which it is by no means easy to find elsewhere."

+ Nation and Ath 43:472 Jl 7 '28 50w

New Statesman 31:494 Jl 21 '28 150w

N Y Times p14 Je 9 '29 610w

Times [London] Lit Sup p475 Je 28 '28 1300w

World Tomorrow 11:474 N '28 50w

HEALY, TIMOTHY MICHAEL. Letters and leaders of my day. 2v 678p $10 Stokes [42s T. Butterworth]

B or 92 Ireland—History 29-5524

The veteran Irish statesman, who was appointed governor general of the Irish Free State in 1922, has written the memoirs of a life spent amid the turmoil that was Ireland.

---

Booklist 25:357 Je '29

Reviewed by Norah Meade
Bookm 69:201 Ap '29 350w

"Well-seasoned with his wit and knowledge of men and affairs, they make it a very palatable dish, though at times highly seasoned with venom. All the letters were written in the heat of conflict, and Healy makes no attempt to soften the harshness of verdicts that must have been influenced by moods and high-running emotional tides. One wishes that the mellow tolerance that informs his attitude toward the young makers of the Irish Free State had inspiried him to revise his estimate of his contemporaries." Norah Meade

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ap 21 '29 1000w

"It is a remarkably serene and dispassionate account, when one remembers the horror and tragedy, the grim struggle, which marked the history of Ireland during the six decades of which he writes. . . Now that the land has become tranquil and law-abiding, he tells the story of the struggle, not with bitterness, but with a kindly tolerance and understanding and acceptance of what it has brought." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Mr 30 '29 1000w

"One takes up his book with expectancy. Disappointment follows. The story he writes is a moving record, indeed, but it moves so rapidly that it quickly degenerates into mere record and nothing more; it is grand galop from the beginning; an abundance of material poured out feverishly, but with no historical discrimination and analysis." J. E. K.

— + Cath World 129:505 Jl '29 580w

"Mr. Healy's two volumes are full of 'good stories.' To the political historian they are of the greatest value, though he may not always agree with Mr. Healy's interpretation of the facts. Finally, Mr. Healy's judgments on the various famous politicians, with or against whom he has acted during a long life, are always interesting." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 44:359 D 8 '28 780w

"Mr. Healy's many gifts cannot be said to include a talent for formal and ordered narrative, but he has few rivals in the terse summing up of a man or a situation. It is true this book sprawls and sprawls badly. No effort has been made to cut out what is so much dead wood to a generation that lacks any intimate knowledge of the Parnellite movement, and Mr. Healy's sense of perspective is entirely his own. He does not hesitate when it suits him to deal with events that marked turning points in political history in the baldest outline, while he elaborates at interminable length petty squabbles and intrigues that everyone else but himself has forgotten."

+ — New Statesman 32:360 D 22 '28 1400w

"Though it is far from being the most important part of his book, Americans will be engrossingly interested in the view of them taken by this sharp-witted Irishman in his many visits to this country. He is far more penetrating than nine-tenths of our foreign callers." C: W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 3 '29 1230w

"Anecdotal biography—or autobiography—is a genre in which Irishmen should excel; and certainly it has seldom been more entertainingly done than by the witty, courtly, dexterous Tim Healy. He has produced two fat volumes stuffed full of good stories, jests and flashes of characterization. Looking back from mellow old age—he is now seventy-four—and the dignified post of Governor General of the Irish Free State across fifty years of parliamentary struggle, he surveys men and events with bland humor." Allan Nevins

+ N Y World p10m Mr 31 '29 1160w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Outlook 151:390 Mr 6 '29 400w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:14 S '29 140w

Spec 141:888 D 8 '28 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p926 N 29 '28 1050w

HEALY, WILLIAM, and others. Reconstructing behavior in youth; a study of problem children in foster families. (Judge Baker foundation. Publications) 334p $3.25 (18s) Knopf

362.73 Children—Charities, protection, etc. Adoption. Children, Abnormal and backward. Juvenile delinquency 29-5910

"This book is based upon the results of a nine-year study of the effects of foster home care on the behavior of problem children. The study was undertaken after extensive work with juvenile delinquents had convinced the authors that home environment is one of the most conspicuous factors in delinquency and that institutions fail to prepare their charges for a better social adjustment after release."—New Repub

Booklist 25:379 Jl '29

"The volume has a double value—first in its exposition of the possibilities and methods of reconstructing youthful lives, and second in showing to the public what valuable social and scientific work the Judge Baker Foundation of Boston is doing."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '29 230w

"No fault can be found with the conclusions of this exceedingly careful and interesting study." Augusta Alpert

+ New Repub 59:105 Je 12 '29 620w

HEARD, GERALD. Ascent of humanity. 332p $3 Harcourt

901 Civilization—History. History—Philosophy. Progress. Man. Individualism 29-16319

"An essay on the evolution of civilization from group consciousness through individuality to superconsciousness." (Subtitle) The author sees evolution as a result of psychical rather than physical features; from primitive societies in which individuality had not developed, by gradual degrees to the emergence of the individual as priest, king, philosopher, man of science, till the period which we call the Renaissance when he stands alone, "intellectually sublime, morally a monster." Henceforth it becomes the business of man not to acquire but to understand.

"Mr. Heard advances his theories modestly and rather for discussion than for uncritical acceptance. Obviously the phenomena which he describes are open to interpretations different from that which he gives." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 129:423 O 16 '29 2350w

"The wealth of historical and miscellaneous knowledge upon which Mr. Heard draws in order to explain and support his theory is remarkable, and gives to his pages a richness which reminds one of the richness of the richest plum cake. That kind of plum cake is notoriously indigestible, and the mental indigestibility of Mr. Heard's book will tax all but the strongest stomachs." Leonard Woolf

— Nation and Ath 45:829 S 28 '29 1600w

"While there are numerous criticisms that could be lodged against Mr. Heard's theory of history and social change, especially against the mystical aspects of his spiral theory of historical evolution, one cannot but praise the general character of his study. 'The Ascent of Humanity' is one of the most striking and provocative books of our decade. As suggestive as Spengler, Mr. Heard is less majestic but on the whole, more profound." V. F. Calverton

+ New Repub 60:22 Ag 21 '29 1500w

"The importance of Mr. Heard's book is that he views history as a record of changes in the scope and quality of consciousness. He builds hypotheses with which one may or may not agree; but no historian could read this book without gaining a new conception of the possibilities latent in his craft. This does not, indeed, mean that all histories ought to be written from Mr. Heard's point of view; but it does mean that henceforward historians will be aware of the enormous conventionalisation of facts which they are adopting if they omit the considerations which Mr. Heard has emphasised."

+ New Statesman 34:supxiv D 7 '29 470w

Reviewed by G. B. Munson

N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 27 '29 900w

"It is unfortunate that Mr. Heard, in propounding a philosophy of history which directly antagonizes that set forth by Spengler in 'The Decline of the West,' should have phrased so much of his thought in involved and crabbed language. Only here and there, after a long and tortuous exposition, does he permit himself a few paragraphs of pages so straightforward and clear as to show that he can, when he chooses, write simply and well."

+ — N Y Times p10 O 13 '29 1400w

Reviewed by L. H. Titterton

N Y World p11m Ja 5 '30 200w

St Louis 27:329 D '29

"It is a bold, panoramic view, with a sweep so vast and an objective so intensively maintained, that the strain on the reader's vision is severe and unremitting. But it is worth the effort. . . Those who deal with the larger phases of man's destiny, read in his past and projected to his future, cannot afford to neglect this comprehensive generalization." Joseph Jastrow

+ Sat R of Lit 6:51 Ag 17 '29 1050w

"He has read widely and has a great deal of interest to say. His speculations are provocative, and, even if we cannot accept his thesis, he has at least thrown open new and suggestive avenues of inquiry." J. H. Driberg

+ Spec 143:sup457 O 5 '29 1350w

HEARLEY, JOHN. Pope or Mussolini. 256p $2.50 Macaulay

282 Church and state in Italy. Roman question. Popes—Temporal power. Mussolini, Benito. Italy—Fascist movement. Concordat of 1929 29-14114

Mr Hearley, whose experience as an attaché of the Embassy in Rome and later as a correspondent has supplied him with the material for his book, discusses the question of the Vatican vs Fascism as arbiter of Italy's destiny, finding in neither the happy solution of the problem.

"His volume should be looked at by every one concerned with his subject for its valuable collection of documents culled from that floating and soon inaccessible archive—the newspaper." Arthur Livingston

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Jl 14 '29 700w

"One might go on indefinitely picking out certain debatable conclusions (the facts given are correct, although many are not given), but the book does not merit the effort. One can but hope that it will inspire some one less partisan and less hurried to make a study of the whole question in its historical, diplomatic and ecclesiastical aspects which will do justice to the momentous question and will satisfy all by its impartial conclusions and accurate exposition."

— Boston Transcript p2 Jl 31 '29 380w

Christian Century 46:1016 Ag 14 '29 170w

Reviewed by W. J. Abbot

Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 3 '29 900w

"He writes in a tart manner, aiming many a winged and barbed word at the Vatican and the clergy. He gives lively character sketches of the two protagonists. But his phraseology is usually too fervid to convey precise information." Hiram Motherwell

+ — Nation 129:230 Ag 28 '29 380w

"Written with much sympathy and with a remarkable insight into those personal characteristics which really count, we have thirty-six pages devoted to Pius XI and thirty-four to Mussolini and Fascismo with due attention paid to the political, social, economic and spiritual development of the latter." Walter Littlefield

+ N Y Times p3 N 24 '29 1650w

"While 'Pope or Mussolini' does not pretend to be more than a journalistic study of the situation, its very timeliness and interrogational challenge makes of it, as the first book of this type since the Concordat, a volume of international interest." V. F. Calverton

HEARLEY, JOHN—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 6:108 S 7 '29 660w

HEBEL, JOHN WILLIAM, and HUDSON, HOYT HOPEWELL, eds. Poetry of the English renaissance, 1509-1660; sel. from early eds. and manuscripts. 1068p $5 Crofts [21s Blackwell]

821.08 English poetry—Collections 29-13807

This volume of over a thousand thin paper pages is a representative selection of all the poetry other than dramatic from the beginning of Henry VIII's reign to the Restoration. The editors have been scrupulous about the preparation of the text, consulting original editions and manuscripts wherever possible. The volume contains biographical notices and textual notes.

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p6m Je 15 '29 80w

" 'Poetry of the English Renaissance' is such a combination of scholarship and literary appreciation as one rarely finds." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p2 Je 23 '29 180w
Springf'd Republican p12 Jl 5 '29 90w

"Though every reader is sure to miss some of his own favourites, he will also be moved to admit that the selection deserves to be called representative, and is well arranged. In spite of its more than one thousand pages, the book is not cumbersome."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p563 Jl 11 '29 220w
Times [London] Lit Sup p709 S 19 '29 1300w

HECTOR, GERTRUDE MARY. Peeps at arts & crafts. 92p il $1 Macmillan [2s 6d Black]

709 Art—History. Art industries and trade [29-10376]

Very brief and simply written stories of several of the arts and crafts with illustrations of outstanding examples of each, including pottery, metal work, weaving, architecture, and painting. The whole is condensed into a small volume of less than one hundred pages.

"Miss Hector has a good deal of knowledge, and outlines the general history of art in a fairly intelligent, though essentially 'popular,' manner." Angus Davidson
Nation and Ath 44:sup386 D 8 '28 60w
Times [London] Lit Sup p924 N 29 '28 80w

HEGEL, GEORG WILHELM FRIEDRICH. Science of logic; tr. by W. H. Johnston and L. G. Struthers; with an introductory preface by Viscount Haldane of Cloan. (Lib. of philosophy) 2v 404;486p $10 Macmillan [32s Allen & U.]

160 Logic [29-8561]

One of the most important of Hegel's works, Wissenschaft der logik, is in this translation made available to the English student of the Hegelian philosophy.

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 10 '29 750w

"I am not acquainted with the German text, but, as far as I can see, the translators have done their work admirably. But Hegel's Logic cannot but be desperately hard reading, not merely because of the author's obscurity of expression, but because of the obscurity of the thought expressed." C. E. M. Joad
Nation and Ath 45:52 Ap 13 '29 300w

"Even if the dialectic, with its triads and transitions, has not found universal favour, Hegel's Logic is still a storehouse from which later English philosophy has drawn inspiration and argument, and to which the English reader can now turn for its own uncouth and undiluted vigour."
New Statesman 32:799 Mr 30 '29 120w

HEGEL, GEORG WILHELM FRIEDRICH. Selections; ed. by J. Loewenberg. (Modern student's lib.: philosophy ser.) 468p $1 (3s 6d) Scribner

193 Philosophy 29-8405

Selections containing the essence of Hegel's doctrine, with an introduction by the editor.

"Will be welcomed for the compact form in which is presented the system of one of the greatest of German philosophers. The volume is edited by an authority and supplemented by a lucid and informative introduction."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 9 '29 130w
St Louis 27:303 N '29
Times [London] Lit Sup p526 Jl 4 '29 750w

HEGEMANN, WERNER. Frederick the Great; tr. from the German by Winifred Ray. 541p il $5 Knopf [18s Constable]

B or 92 Frederick II, the Great, king of Prussia

"Herr Hegemann describes this book as being directed against 'reactionary Prussianism and the god of its idolatry, Frederick the Great.' It purports to be a record of six conversations which took place at Naples in 1913. The protagonist in these talks is a certain Manfred Ellis, an American millionaire-scholar. The method pursued is to allow Ellis to make the attack upon Frederick's character, aims and influence, and then overwhelm all objectors with his prodigious learning. Among the other participants in the conversations are Thomas Mann, Lytton Strachey and the late Georg Brandes. The celebrated actress, Cecile Sorel, appears long enough to leave a pleasant feminine fragrance."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The exaggeration is altogether too patent and seriously weakens the impressiveness of the book. This is a great pity, for Herr Hegemann often argues soundly and makes out a convincing case for certain items in his indictment. To appraise the work properly would be the task of a specialist. There can hardly be a doubt, however, that many of Herr Hegemann's contentions will have to be granted, and that Frederick will appear hereafter stripped of some of the glamor with which Carlyle and the Prussian historians have invested him. Most interesting of all is the fact that this book should have come from a German." W: K. Stewart
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 D 15 '29 800w
Boston Transcript p6 N 16 '29 750w

"In this monument of Teutonic erudition, ferocity and elephantine playfulness, the author at once delivers a murderous onslaught on Frederick the Great's reputation, and erects a monument to the conversational powers of one Manfred Ellis, an American polymath. . . Herr Hegemann had given us over five hundred closely-printed pages of dialogue or monologue in which Ellis, fortified by mountains of authorities recently purchased from his second-hand bookseller, confronts all comers on the subject of Frederick, and he and his interlocutors hurl anecdotes, statistics, quotations, and arguments at one another in a truly terrifying manner. From this bombardment the character, habits and achievements of Frederick, and the veracity and intelligence of his eulogists, emerge completely pulverised."
— New Statesman 34:202 N 16 '29 230w

"Herr Hegemann's appraisal of Frederick the Great is one-sided, but it is propounded with so much knowledge, skill, satire and conviction, and the book is so interesting that it must be described as an extraordinary achievement. This is all the more remarkable because the author finds no redeeming virtue in the character of his unheroic hero." Emil Lengyel
+ — N Y Times p5 N 17 '29 1750w

"The reading displayed is encyclopædic, and much of the book is very valuable; but all is spoiled by a warped judgment, an unfair method of argument, and iron prejudice."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p757 O 3 '29 900w

HEGNER, ROBERT WILHELM; ROOT, FRANCIS METCALF; and AUGUSTINE, DONALD LESLIE. Animal parasitology; with special reference to man and domesticated animals. (Century biological ser.) 731p il $6.50 Century

591.69 Parasites. Worms, Intestinal and parasitic. Protozoa, Pathogenic 29-8866

The work has been prepared as a textbook, with the hope that it may also be of use to doctors and veterinarians. "There is, at the present time, no textbook of parasitology in the English language that includes the many recent additions to our knowledge of this subject. Since the war, parasitology, especially those phases of the subject that concern the parasites of man, has practically been revolutionized." (Preface)

"The closing section on medical entomology covers a large field and has been handled with skill. There are new and significant illustrations, carefully worked out keys, clean-cut accounts of measures for control and prevention of insect vectors, and discussions of the relations of insects to various diseases. This book will be of particular value to technicians in public health laboratories and as an important work of reference for public health workers." C. A. Kofoid

+ Am J Pub Health 19:838 Jl '29 530w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 15 '29 400w

HEIDEL, WILLIAM ARTHUR. Day of Yahweh. ltd ed 565p $5 Century

296 Jews—Religion. Jews—Rites and ceremonies. Festivals 29-5901

A study of the origin, meaning, and observance of feast days and holy days in Hebrew ritual, and a comparison of these Jewish ceremonies with similar observances among other ancient peoples of the Orient.

"The book is an important contribution to the literature of religion, and although its appeal is chiefly to scholars, the general reader will find parts of it fascinating."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 23 '29 130w

Boston Transcript p7 Je 22 '29 380w

"The book is a valuable contribution to the study of the history of religion and the comparison of religions." J. M. P. Smith

+ J Religion 9:488 Jl '29 350w

HELM, KATHERINE. True story of Mary, wife of Lincoln. 309p il $4 (16s) Harper

B or 92 Lincoln, Mary (Todd) (Mrs Abraham Lincoln). Lincoln, Abraham 28-28395

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:210 F '29

"There is interesting material here: the picture of Mary's childhood, the appealing little telegrams on practical matters between herself and 'A. Lincoln,' the letters of her heart-broken widowhood. Yet, what was Mary thinking during those difficult and unpopular days at the White House? Her written words are discreet, but they may cast just sufficient light on previous pictures of Mary Todd to clear our impressions of her."

+ Bookm 69:vi Mr '29 100w

"Katherine Helm has in this volume essayed to tell 'the true story' of 'the most misunderstood woman in American history.' The reader who takes title pages seriously is doomed to disappointment. The diary is in slight evidence, and great liberties have been taken even with the recollections. Imaginary conversations, with the supposed accompanying facial expressions . . . are freely inserted, until what might be fact and what is fiction cannot be distinguished. Weapons already weak are rendered still weaker for the difficult task of pleading an unpopular cause. The result is what might be expected—a pretty story that is neither history nor biography. . . Until new evidence is introduced we will have to look elsewhere for our most misunderstood woman." Avery Craven

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 5 29 800w

"It embodies the admiration of a niece very proud of her famous relative, convinced that she was a person of unusual charm, and naturally indignant because of the harsh things that have been said about her. The book is frankly a eulogy." N. W. Stephenson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ag 18 '29 780w

Cath World 129:762 S '29 240w

"A substantial addition to the very large and constantly growing Lincoln literature. Through its pages the vivacious girl, the ambitious wife, the grief-stricken widow passes, her figure drawn by kindly hands and lovingly. The faint perfume of the aristocracy of the old south pervades this volume." E. D. Jones

+ Christian Century 46:201 F 7 '29 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p93 Je '29

"Even though Miss Helm resorts to a stacking of the cards which would get any poker player shot in his chair, she does not manage to make her heroine appear in the better light." Raymond Holden

— New Repub 59:348 Ag 14 '29 540w

Reviewed by R. J. Davis

N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 5 '29 820w

St Louis 27:61 F '29

"Her portrayal of Mary Todd's earlier years at Lexington, Kentucky, as well as of her life as the wife of Mr. Lincoln, is told with the flow and conversational detail of a charming fictional narrative. The reminiscences are too fully and confidently presented to be unsupported by footnotes or other means of identification. There is a great deal that contradicts the point of view with which Lincoln biographers, following the Herndon tradition, interpret Mrs. Lincoln." L. E. Robinson

+ Sat R of Lit 5:882 Ap 13 '29 770w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 3 '29 800w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '29 270w

"Well-written and authoritative biography. Primarily no doubt, it is intended to clear Mrs. Lincoln's memory of the clouds of spiteful legend which had gathered about it, and in this it is wholly successful; but, incidentally, it throws a more intimate light on Lincoln himself, and brings into yet clearer relief the combined strength and gentleness of his character."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p176 Mr 7 '29 500w

Wis Lib Bul 25:30 Ja '29

HEMINGWAY, ERNEST. Farewell to arms. 355p $2.50 Scribner

29-20658

Lieutenant Henry, an American, is enlisted with the Italian army on the Italian-Austrian frontier. He is quite severely wounded, and while convalescing continues a love affair he had previously begun with an English nurse, Catherine Barkley. The story ends in Switzerland, where Catherine has a baby, born dead, and herself dies a few hours afterwards.

Booklist 26:119 D '29

"One cannot help thinking that 'A Farewell to Arms' is a symbolic title; that it is Hemingway's farewell to a period, an attitude, and perhaps to a method also. . . Pity, love, adventurousness, anger, the emotions on which his earlier books were based, almost to the entire exclusion of ideas, are less violently stimulated in a world at peace The emotions as a whole are more colored by thought; perhaps they are weaker and certainly they are becoming more complicated. They seem to demand expression in a subtler and richer prose." Malcolm Cowley

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 O 6 '29 2200w

HEMINGWAY, ERNEST—Continued

"To say that 'A Farewell to Arms' is a good book, is not praising Mr. Hemingway. Aside from certain annoyances that are difficult to overlook, it is an excellent novel of the war, with perhaps too little motivation for its tragic conclusion. The man who tells the story, Lieutenant Henry, is a character not definitely drawn, but in his sweetheart, Catherine Barkley, is a very fine portrayal of a woman who was not afraid. Conversation throughout the book is so accurately reproduced as to sometimes be boring. Yet no one can deny that Ernest Hemingway is one of the best writers of dialog of the younger American school. This is his one point on which all critics seem to agree." A. C.

\+ — Boston Transcript p2 O 19 '29 720w

Cleveland Open Shelf p143 N '29

"His book is not merely a good book but a remarkably beautiful book; and it is not merely modern, but the very apotheosis of a kind of modernism. . . It is certainly Hemingway's best book to date." C. P. Fadiman

\+ Nation 129:497 O 30 '29 1000w

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine

Nation and Ath 46:319 N 30 '29 600w

"The writings of Ernest Hemingway have very quickly put him in a prominent place among American writers, and his numerous admirers have looked forward with impatience and great expectations to his second novel. They should not be disappointed: 'A Farewell to Arms' is worthy of their hopes and of its author's promise. The book has more in it than 'The Sun Also Rises'; it is more of a story; and it is more carefully written. Sometimes this care is too evident." T. S. Matthews

\+ New Repub 60:208 O 9 '29 1800w

"This is a novel with many good qualities, which are all (a rather more unusual thing) directed to the same end. To make one phrase of it, Mr. Hemingway communicates his experience whole and unimpaired." E. S.

\+ New Statesman 34:267 N 30 '29 950w

"On the surface, the newer story is more effective than [his] earlier novel. There is more drama, the movement is more nearly continuous and better sustained. And the story of the love between the English nurse and the American ambulance officer, as hapless as that of Romeo and Juliet, is a high achievement in what might be termed the new romanticism. And yet for the present reviewer 'The Sun Also Rises' touches a note which Hemingway caught once, and, in the very nature of the thing, cannot touch again." Percy Hutchison

\+ N Y Times p5 S 29 '29 1500w

"Farewell to Arms has as you read it that quality of warmth, of actuality, of closeness that only your own personal experiences have for you. . . This book enriches you." W. R. Brooks

\+ Outlook 153:270 O 16 '29 160w

" 'A Farewell to Arms' is both a disappointment and a justification. In none of his other books has Mr. Hemingway hit such high spots, or fallen to such depths. The first few chapters are well worth re-reading, not only for the fine descriptions, but to familiarize the reader with a setting that is, at first, vague and confusing. It is a book worth buying, than which no more need be said." Jo Pattangall

\+ Portland Evening News p10 O 15 '29 400w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Sat R 148:684 D 7 '29 650w

" 'Farewell to Arms' is an erotic story, shocking to the cold, disturbing to the conventional who do not like to see mere impersonal amorousness lifted into a deep, fierce love, involving the best in both man and woman, without changing its dependence upon the senses, nor trafficking with social responsibility. It deals with life where the blood is running and the spirit active—that is enough for me. As for Hemingway's frankness of language, to object to it would be priggish. There is no decadence here, no overemphasis on the sexual as a philosophy. Rather, this book belongs with those studies of conjugal love which just now are interesting the French. If you set out to write of the love life of a man and his wife when that love life is central in their experience, why that love life is what you write about and frankness belongs to the theme." H: S. Canby

\+ Sat R of Lit 6:231 O 12 '29 2000w

Reviewed by B. E. Todd

Spec 143:727 N 16 '29 380w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 10 '29 380w

"It is as laconic as Hemingway's earlier stories, superficially 'hard-boiled,' but below this protective shell of nonchalance runs a force of emotion stronger and more direct than this author has hitherto allowed himself." Mary Ross

\+ Survey 63:166 N 1 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p998 N 28 '29 1000w

"Mr. Hemingway's way of writing in vigorous short sentences with the accents falling on the essential elements, in easy rhythms with recurrent phrases, gives the effect of letting the story tell itself under press of emotion. In the more dramatic passages, such as the brilliant narrative of the retreat after Caporetto, and in the talk of the army men, it seems natural and forceful. In other passages it grows monotonous." H. M.

\+ — Yale R n s 19:vi winter '30 270w

HENDERSON, DANIEL MACINTYRE. Crown for Carlotta. 297p $2.50 Stokes

Charlotte, empress consort of Maximilian, emperor of Mexico—Fiction. Maximilian, emperor of Mexico—Fiction 29-18165

The romance of Maximilian, archduke of Austria, and his fascinating princess Carlotta. Leaving their home and friends in Europe, with high hopes of founding an old-world kingdom in the new, the young couple passed thru great difficulties and experiences, which culminated in the madness of Carlotta and the execution of Maximilian.

---

Booklist 26:119 D '29

"He has adorned this more than twice told tale with much gay gossip, anecdote and historical chit-chat and achieved a book which, if jerky and restless in style, is readable, full of movement and conversationally colorful."

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 20 '29 300w

Boston Transcript p6 N 13 '29 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p127 S '29

"In view of Count Egon Corti's admirable two-volume study of Maximilian and Carlotta, published only last year, this slight, sketchy historical novelization of the unfortunate princess's career (plus an 'American interest' in the shape of Prince Salm-Salm's United States wife) seems supernumerary. Its style is jerky and disjointed." F. H. M.

— N Y Evening Post p5m S 14 '29 150w

HENDERSON, HELEN WESTON. The enchantress; being the life of Dianne de Poytiers, mistress of King Henry the Second of France (Eng title Dianne de Poytiers). 234p il $4.50 Houghton [10s 6d Methuen]

B or 92 Poitiers, Diane de, duchess of Valentinois 29-1453

An agreeable retelling of the picturesque story of Dianne de Poytiers, married at fourteen to the elderly Louis de Brézé, who on his death became the mistress of Henri II and virtual queen of his court. The author draws also a sympathetic portrait of Dianne's rival, the real queen, Catherine de Medici.

---

Bookm 69:vii Ap '29 80w

"An unusual figure, she moves with startling clarity against the colorful background of the Renaissance."

\+ Boston Transcript p8 N 21 '28 180w

"Miss Henderson writes extremely well, and she has used great skill in weaving into her own vivacious narrative the very extensive first-hand materials she has accumulated." A. B. Parsons

+ Nation 127:691 D 19 '28 230w

"It is a picturesque and readable story that the author has told for us."
+ N Y Times p17 D 23 '28 380w

"Readers of Dr. Van Dyke's splendid Catherine de Medici will naturally not find here the massed detail of that book. But they will find the same scholarship without pedantry, the same careful presentation of fact, the same unprejudiced judgment and the same thorough readability."
+ Outlook 150:1373 D 19 '28 90w

Reviewed by W. S. Hayward
Sat R of Lit 5:954 Ap 27 '29 550w

"This is quite an able and thoughtful study of a famous and interesting woman, which lacks only a touch of greater distinction to lift it well out of the ruck of historical biography. It displays sound knowledge not only of the actual events of its subject's career, but also of the atmosphere of the period."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p46 Ja 17 '29 210w

HENDERSON, YANDELL, and DAVIE, MAURICE REA, eds. Incomes and living costs of a university faculty; a report made by a committee on the academic standard of living appointed by the Yale university chapter of the American association of university professors; with a foreword by James Rowland Angell. 170p $2 Yale univ. press [9s Oxford]

378.12 Cost and standard of living. College professors and instructors 29-1324

A statistical report on the incomes and living expenses of the faculty of Yale university. The comparative salary schedules which are given for other occupations present a caustic commentary on the rewards of the teaching profession.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 F 17 '29 220w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 6 '29 80w

Reviewed by Day Monroe
J Home Econ 21:681 S '29 600w

"The present book exposes much of the heart of this important matter. If should be studied not only by contributors to endowments and those who administer academic budgets, but by every person who is interested in education and scholarship." Horace Taylor
+ N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 26 '29 820w

"While not all readers will make the same interpretation of data that is made by the editors, the thoroughness and frankness of the report entitle it to be considered as a model for other academic institutions and other occupations on corresponding cultural levels."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 27 '28 620w

HENGEVELD, HENRY JOHN; DISNEY, C. P.; and MISKELLA, WILLIAM JAMES. Practical railway painting and lacquering; a handbook for railroad men. (Practical finishing ser.) 242p il $3.50 Simmons-Boardman

698.1 Painting, Industrial. Car painting and finishing 29-11309

"Treats of the painting and lacquering of locomotives, freight and passenger cars, and electric railway cars, and of the painting of railway bridges, buildings and water service. Describes materials, spraying and other equipment, and details of operations. Written by railroad men having first hand practical knowledge of the subjects."—Pratt

N Y New Tech Bks 14:25 Ap '29
Pratt p23 autumn '29

HERBST, JOSEPHINE (MRS JOHN HERMANN). Money for love. 296p $2.50 Coward-McCann

29-19024

The story of Harriet Everist, a young actress, whose first experience with love brought her much misery, and who goes thru the book trailing clouds of mercenary projects in her efforts to capture a new lover.

For biographical sketch of the author see N Y World p10m N 17 '29

"This is the type of book that makes one wish with a fanatic's fervor for some law to protect the novel form. All you need for a novel apparently is a so-called slice of life. Miss Herbst has given us one cut from a joint that under no circumstances could have been succulent, and she has served it with a very watery sauce." Norah Meade
— Bookm 70:316 N '29 320w

"Miss Herbst has been at infinite pains to present these clumsy, dull, microscopically small people. To delineate them in a medium appropriate to their qualities, Miss Herbst has written 'Money for Love' on a dead level of drab phrases, free of exaltation or elevation of any sort whatever. She has accomplished to perfection, I fancy, exactly what she set out to do. One wonders, however, if the job was worth doing." Florence Haxton
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 6 '29 1000w

Boston Transcript p2 O 16 '29 150w

"The story is told in an American lingo carefully denuded of all picturesque qualities; the people talk small because they think and feel small. The whole book is a triumph of perfectly sincere understatement. I have the highest admiration for Miss Herbst's gifts, for the technical dexterity with which she arranges the elements of her narrative, for her realistic observation. The dissatisfaction that I feel with regard to books such as 'Money for Love' is probably due to a personal defect. That elementary, perfectly non-aesthetic response known as reader-interest is simply not aroused." C. P. Fadiman
— + Nation 129:592 N 20 '29 530w

"Technically the story is very well manipulated: past lives and events are revealed gradually and skilfully, and the flow of the story is even and sure. The writing, on the other hand, is too far reduced to a formula. Miss Herbst's simple sentences are so colorless they become monotonous; she has nothing of Hemingway's raciness or bite, and she cannot easily be forgiven, at her stage of development, her elementary blunders in usage. Within its own limits, as a well-told story with suspense, as a true picture of the kind of people, neither too simple nor too complex, who have not been overdone in modern fiction, 'Money for Love' is surely successful. But these limits are heavily circumscribed."
+ — N Y Times p6 S 22 '29 1000w

"Only a fine ironic writer could invest such a story with interest or dignity. Josephine Herbst has written a commoplace novel in a consistently commonplace style."
— Outlook 153:110 S 18 '29 130w

"In this novel Josephine Herbst has given us a picture of defeatism in life, and in the philosophy of life, that is neither very striking nor very dramatic. The limitations of her novel reside more in the nature of its execution. Certainly no one can quarrel with the realism of her material. If anything, it is too realistic; its material is so drab that it practically never grips the attention of the reader at all."
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:298 O 19 '29 220w

"The only notable thing about this novel is its apparently slavish imitation of Ernest Hemingway's manner. What is sauce for Mr. Hemingway is by no means sauce for Miss Herbst. Mr. Hemingway's still waters run deep; Miss Herbst's do not."
— Sat R of Lit 6:570 D 14 '29 220w

HERFORD, OLIVER. Excuse it, please. 172p il $2 Lippincott

817

Humorous, light verse on a variety of light, semi-sophisticated subjects, illustrated by the author.

HERFORD, OLIVER—Continued

"Of approval there is abundance to bestow upon Mr. Herford's verse, and little if any blame."

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 4 '29 400w

"Whimsicality is a substance far more dangerous to the possessor than deadly drugs. To be a master of this treacherous, perishable quality requires firmness, delicacy, a youthful heart and the wisdom of age. To the person who snaps that there isn't any one with all those virtues we merely point to Oliver Herford. 'Excuse It Please!' is his latest volume of verse and pictures. He never has done a better." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p12m D 14 '29 100w

HERGESHEIMER, JOSEPH. Swords and roses. 327p $3.50 (7s 6d) Knopf

973.7 South—Biography. United States—History—Civil war. Confederate States of America 29-9116

In a style deliberately intended to recreate the flash of its discarded swords and the perfume of its old-fashioned roses, Mr Hergesheimer writes of the days and persons of the vanished South before and during the Civil war. A study of the civilization of the "Deep South" is followed by nine biographical essays dealing with some of its figures—William Yancey, Varina Howell Davis, General Beauregard, General Johnston, Captain Maffitt, General Forrest, Belle Boyd, the spy, General J. E. B. Stuart, and John Worsham, a foot soldier with Jackson in the Shenandoah Valley.

---

Booklist 25:354 Je '29

Reviewed by G. H. Grattan

Bookm 69:325 My '29 400w

"His style here departs from any of his former books, since its simple forthrightness is in direct contrast with the mannered prose which has given him his place among the foremost contemporary stylists. . . In his story of the war which on both sides was surely, of all wars, most decent and legitimate, Mr. Hergesheimer is sufficiently the novelist to offer no argument, to hold no brief. But his æsthetic and emotional responses belong to the South, before and during the war, and these responses are beautifully stated." Emily Clark

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ap 7 '29 1400w

"Mr. Hergesheimer's style is always entertaining. Its chief characteristic is an elaborate casualness, a quick, almost dancing, rhythm. He is so objective that you suspect him of pointing out only those facts which he himself has chosen, after some deliberation, to point out. And he does everything by giving significant detail." G. K.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 1 '29 520w

Cleveland Open Shelf p140 N '29

" 'Swords and Roses' is neither good history nor good romance. It leaves its author's reputation exactly where it was, because it only proves that Mr. Hergesheimer cannot write this kind of book." Barrington Gates

— Nation and Ath 45:800 S 21 '29 800w

"The book is carefully documented; with the eye of the skilled writer of fiction, Mr. Hergesheimer has woven a spacious pattern of minute, significant detail. He is to be congratulated for a superior performance of a task that might otherwise have gone undone." Allen Tate

+ New Repub 59:50 My 29 '29 1260w

Reviewed by Edgar Johnson

N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 20 '29 620w

Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water

N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 20 '29 230w

"Perhaps enough has been said to convince the reader that in 'Swords and Roses' he will find a book so exceptional in its selection of material, so individual in approach, so distinguished in manner, so serene in beauty, that he will seek it out forthwith. All that lies behind in the development of Joseph Hergesheimer has gone into the making of this book; and all the chivalry and courage and romance of the old South." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 7 '29 1800w

"The essays are a combination of facts, rather automatically retailed, and fine writing. And just as the fine writing is finer when it serves a fictional purpose, so the facts are more impressive stripped than dressed by these elaborate, facile fingers which shade and color them so definitely."

— Outlook 151:587 Ap 10 '29 520w

St Louis 27:207 Je '29

"The main effect of all his efforts is that Mr Hergesheimer's language gets between the reader and what he is trying to describe. I rather incline to the view that it gets between the author and what he is trying to describe." E: Shanks

— Sat R 148:245 Ag 31 '29 1500w

Reviewed by A. H. Meneely

+ Sat R of Lit 5:947 Ap 27 '29 1250w

"There are times when the reader wishes that fewer dates and battles had been mentioned and more of 'the humanity of the man' brought out; this is especially true in the chapter on Gen Beauregard. However, Hergesheimer has written pleasantly, authoritatively and well."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '29 680w

"We do not question the sincerity of Mr. Hergesheimer's æsthetic emotion on the behalf of the South and vanished romance, but only observe that such a book reveals better than any criticism the limits of emotion as an inspiration."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p648 Ag 22 '29 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Easterby

— Yale R n s 19:177 autumn '29 320w

HERITAGE, MARTIN, pseud. See Horler, S.

HERODOTUS; ed. by Gordon King. 274p il $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

888.1 Greece—History 29-23807

Ten stories from the works of Herodotus, the Greek, selected and edited by Gordon King and illustrated by Boris Artzybasheff.

---

"Boris Artzybasheff has quite let himself go in the direction of sly fun. For though it is of course entirely appropriate to provide these faces with 'the archaic smile,' you can't convince me that the look in the eye of the soldier watching Artemesia sidling forth to war is altogether archaic, or the gestures purely decorative by which Xerxes and his uncle indicate that nothing can be done about the hollowness of life." M. L. Becker

+ Bookm 70:444 D '29 100w

"Gordon King's selections are excellent and his editing does not lose the old Greek flavor in making the stories easy reading for the young. . . To read these stories is to walk the ancient world with a boon companion. Keenly observant, insatiably curious, he lets us miss nothing: Greeks and Persians at war, the Egyptian's method of killing crocodiles, phantoms on the battlefield, and so on." C. L. Skinner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 17 '29 420w

Boston Transcript p5 N 27 '29 300w

"It is a distinct achievement on the part of Mr. King to have caught and conveyed the freshness which is the peculiar appeal of Herodotus, and which is based partly on his method of presentation and partly on the fact that he wrote from actual observation and reflection rather than from scholarly research."

+ Nation 129:598 N 20 '29 70w

"Mr. King has not tinkered much with the old tales but Artzybasheff's illustrations make the people look as if they were next of kin to the characters of a modern comic strip."

N Y Times p12 N 17 '29 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Outlook 153:591 D 11 '29 70w

HEROLD, STANLEY CARROLLTON. Analytical principles of the production of oil, gas, and water from wells; a treatise based upon a system of fluid mechanics particularly adapted to the study of the performance of natural reservoirs; with a foreword by Cyrus F. Tolman and a final summary by Ernest K. Parks. 659p $7.50 Stanford univ. press [35s Oxford]

532.5 Petroleum. Hydromechanics 28-23440

"This work is essentially a mathematical and physical treatment of the laws governing the movements of liquids and gases in porous reservoirs, a subject of great interest to a large number of geologists. It is divided into four parts, the first of which (104 pages) very properly treats of elementary principles. Production from wells is taken to depend on three major factors or types of control: hydraulic, involving constant pressure; volumetric, decreasing pressure; and capillary. In the three remaining parts of the book each of these is discussed at length; the longest section (188 pages) is devoted to the last. In detail are given the methods of analyzing the available data to determine which factor is of major importance in any given pool."—J Geol

---

"If the assumptions made are true under any set of actual field conditions, and providing the deductions offered can be applied by the production engineer, the book with its ten appendixes should be of great value in the application of scientific theory to petroleum production and conservation." D. J. Fisher

\+ J Geol 37:190 F '29 180w

"We have here undoubtedly the most valuable and original contribution to our knowledge of the fundamental principles underlying the production of fluids from wells. . . The book is full of originality tempered with a well-curbed imagination."

\+ Nature 124:645 O 26 '29 500w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:11 Ja '29

HEROLT, JOHANNES. Miracles of the blessed Virgin Mary; tr. from the Latin, with a preface and notes by C. C. Swinton Bland, and an introd. by Eileen Power. (Broadway medieval lib.) 148p il $3 Harcourt [7s 6d Routledge]

232.931 Mary, Virgin. Miracles [29-11735]

"The cult of the Virgin is the most characteristic flower of medieval religion." Countless miracles were ascribed to her, and the present collection contains one hundred of these written down in the mid-fifteenth century by Johannes Herolt, a Dominican friar of Basel. With illustrations from the original work.

---

"A quaint and altogether charming collection of anecdotes. The excellent translation has preserved the mediaeval flavor and is entertaining and informative reading." J. H. T.

\+ Churchman 139:28 My 4 '29 40w

"Strengthened by Miss Eileen Power's allusive and scholarly introduction, this collection of miracles is elevated from the status of the naive curiosity to that of the suggestive psychological document, without losing its amusing qualities in the process. The style is fittingly simple and each story short enough—usually less than a page in length—to save the volume from monotony."

\+ New Statesman 32:508 Ja 26 '29 150w

Spec 142:204 F 9 '29 630w

HERRICK, CHARLES JUDSON. Thinking machine. 386p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press

153 Thought and thinking 29-26879

"Professor Herrick's book is an exposition of a thorough-going mechanistic or behavioristic theory of mental action and of the whole course of human conduct."—Christian Century

---

Booklist 26:54 N '29

Bookm 70:xii O '29 100w

Boston Transcript p4 S 14 '29 480w

"In a style extraordinarily lucid Professor Herrick presents the findings of the modern psychologists of the school to which he belongs, displays those mechanisms by which thought and emotion operate in relation to bodily processes, and discusses the possibility and the technique of controlling conduct. . . The influence of such a book should be potent in two directions: It should remove much of the existing prejudice against behaviorism and mechanistic psychology; and what is more important, it should be an antidote to the bumptiousness of some of the behaviorists who appear to think that nothing exists which they cannot explain." W. E. Garrison

\+ Christian Century 46:1091 S 4 '29 480w

"The book is a very readable summary of some of the most recent studies which have been made in biology and psychology and is a vigorous answer to the behaviorists, who have been loud in their contention that consciousness is not to be recognized as of any scientific importance." C: H. Judd

\+ El School J 30:307 D '29 480w

"Professor Herrick has done an effective bit of popularization. He has the vigorous touch of the expert hand, trained in the laboratory and inspired by the investigative interest that has explored as well as reported." Joseph Jastrow

\+ Nation 129:688 D 4 '29 480w

St Louis 27:303 N '29

"It was important that a book of this type should be written, and it is fortunate that it has been done so well. It may be said to be the biologist's version of psychology. . . Whatever one's reaction to the philosophical issue underlying his position, the value of the contribution remains. Here is a clearcut, interesting account of the varieties of natural mechanisms set forth in a lucid, logical array." Joseph Jastrow

\+ Sat R of Lit 6:108 S 7 '29 750w

HERRING, EDWARD PENDLETON. Group representation before Congress. (Inst. for government research. Studies in administration) 309p $3 Johns Hopkins

328.368 Lobbying 29-6686

"A careful, disinterested, firsthand study of present-day lobbying, its development and varieties, and the essential rôle it now plays in bringing the opinions of special groups to bear upon the course of federal legislation."—J Home Econ

---

"This is an absorbing book. It is scholarly, it is eminently readable, it is indispensable to those who would understand the political scene. Here is the substance and reality of the process of government." P: H. Odegard

\+ Am Pol Sci R 23:469 My '29 800w

Ann Am Acad 144:160 Jl '29 100w

"Dr. Herring's present book is the best and most detailed of the more comprehensive surveys of the lobby that has yet appeared."

\+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '29 170w

\+ J Home Econ 21:284 Ap '29 100w

"What Europe has done by formal legislation, such as the setting-up in Germany of the Reichswirtschaftsrat, we have informally accomplished by means of the lobby. The significance of this development has been fully portrayed for the first time in this admirable study." M. W. Royse

\+ Nation 129:122 Jl 31 '29 720w

"In method and content the work is scholarly—a dependable, informative volume packed with the sort of knowledge, historical and current, that any one searching for information of this kind would want. But also, out of all this material that might so easily have taken dry and dreary form, he has made a delightful book that has color, vitality, interest."

\+ N Y Times p14 Je 2 '29 620w

"As a preliminary survey of a field demanding careful study Mr. Herring's work is significant indeed." S. C. Wallace

\+ Pol Sci Q 44:310 Je '29 260w

HERRING, HARRIET LAURA. Welfare work in mill villages; the story of extra-mill activities in North Carolina. (Univ. of N.C. Social study ser.) 406p $5 Univ. of N.C. press [23s Oxford]

331.827 Labor and laboring classes—North Carolina. North Carolina—Social conditions. Welfare institutions for laborers. Cotton growing and manufacture 29-3929

"Miss Herring's first-hand investigation of welfare work in 322 of the 500 mills of the state is a satisfying contribution to our knowledge of a phase of the general subject heretofore enveloped in discord."—Survey

---

"The method is frankly descriptive—there is not a single general statistical table—but every phase of the life in a mill village is described and discussed with understanding, and, at times, with almost uncanny penetration. The author knows her people, the stock from which they and the mill managers sprang, and the peculiar relations which still exist between employer and employed." Holland Thompson
+ Am Hist R 35:148 O '29 470w

"One cannot but regret that the study did not include the vital question of wages and hours or the attitude of employers to unions. For it is largely over these subjects that the chief disputes are being waged in the present controversies. In the field covered, the study is admirably comprehensive and impartial and of much human interest." H. W. Laidler
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 26 '29 250w

"The author, research specialist in the University of North Carolina claims that the volume is no more than an introduction, despite obvious literary merits, an evident scholarship and understanding that gives the volume a stamp of authoritativeness." W. M. T.
+ Boston Transcript p10 Ap 6 '29 480w

"Miss Herring has produced precisely the sort of factual studies needed for the proper evaluation of the smug generalizations which pass current for knowledge about the mill village." H. E. Jensen
+ Christian Century 46:966 Jl 31 '29 600w

"Dignified and impeccably thorough, it gives no picture of the attitudes of the mill worker." Winifred Raushenbush
Nation 128:675 Je 5 '29 40w

"Careful piece of research." E. P. K.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '29 115ow

"Accurately acquainted with the development of the cotton manufacturing industry in the South, she begins her study of the mill communities without preconceived thesis, sets forth with interest and clarity the important things she sees and hears, and reaches worth-while conclusions." Broadus Mitchell
+ Survey 61:690 F 15 '29 400w

HERRING, PAUL. Sir Toby and the regent. 307p $2.50 Lippincott [7s 6d Low]

A romantic tale of merry England in the days of the Prince Regent, George IV, when Beau Brummel lorded it over Brighton. The love story of Trixie Coverdale and Sir Toby mingles with cock fights, prize fights, near elopements and first class rescues, and finally comes to a happy end.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 N 10 29 150w

Boston Transcript p4 N 9 '29 550w

"The attempt to re-create the 'Merrie England' of old, in the days of Beau Brummell is not altogether successful, despite the glittering and theatrical array of elegantly attired and scented young men and languishing young ladies who mince through its pages."
— N Y Times p7 D 22 '29 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p796 O 10 '29 170w

HERSCH, VIRGINIA. Bird of God; the romance of El Greco. 332p il $2.50 Harper

Theotocopuli, Domenico, called El Greco—Fiction 29-19242

All that is known or can be located about the life of Theotocopoulous Domenicos, the mysterious sixteenth century painter called El Greco, has been carefully studied by the author and from it she has made this novelized biography. His life and art is studied from the days in Crete among the ikon painters, thru his various residences in Venice and Rome and finally in Spain.

---

"Mrs. Hersch's book is thrilling historical romance and does not depend upon the greatness of its subject for its interest. It is certain that she has steeped herself in El Greco, and in the gorgeous times he adorned, and she makes her reader see and feel the great man against his proper background. 'Bird of God' is not a book for a single reading, not in the least because it lacks clarity and simplicity, but because it is so rich." Herschel Brickell
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 6 '29 1200w

"A picture of the high glory of the Renaissance, a story of dramatic living. Mrs Hersch presents her book with a style inspired by the vitality of her subject. The book also has the value of being the only one in English on El Greco."
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 19 '29 400w

Reviewed by Florence Codman
Nation 129:682 D 4 '29 350w

"This brilliant interpretation of a great character, whose life will always be shrouded in the mists of a forgotten past, is frankly fiction. But to read the book always with an eye to separating fact from fiction is to waste both the author's time and one's own. The story is so good, and so beautifully told, that one can easily lose oneself in its pages, and with very little persuasion believe that the El Greco who is met here is really the man who lived and suffered and loved and painted nearly four centuries ago."
+ N Y Times p7 N 10 '29 820w

"She has strained, all too obviously, after a something in her writing which shall reflect the nameless excitement of her hero's compositions. It may, of course, be our fault that the result seems to us deplorable. Perhaps the wings of her prose flash too swiftly for our comprehension. But it seems to us that she makes her 'Bird of God' not flash, but flutter. The style is vague, elliptical, oblique, a kind of false exclamatoriness." Shaemas O'Sheel
— N Y World p11m N 3 '29 350w

" 'Bird of God' has many passages of impressive beauty. Though the novel is historical, its period-flavor remains properly subordinate, and though there is little plot, the stream of narrative flows uninterruptedly, gathering force and significance as it goes. The most gratifying of all Miss Hersch's accomplishments in the novel is her sensitive and penetrating analysis of El Greco's growth from adolescence to full maturity, of the gradual development of his highly individualized artistry." R. B. MacDougall
+ Sat R of Lit 6:472 N 30 '29 550w

HERTZ, FRIEDRICH OTTO. Race and civilization; tr. by A. S. Levetus and W. Entz. 328p $7.50 Macmillan [18s K. Paul]

572 Race problems. Civilization [28-18359]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"It is one of the best as well as one of the most readable analyses of racial theories which has appeared. Dr. Hertz pays scant attention to the evidence of the biological sciences and devotes most of his space to historical arguments in establishing his thesis, a fact which will be regretted by many as will also his neglect of practically all of the recent American sources." Donald Young
+ — Ann Am Acad 143:381 My '29 120w

"Hertz has written by all odds the most thorough criticism of the vast literature of so-called 'racial science' that has come to my notice. While both the general tenor of his arguments and their main factual content have already been made familiar to students of such matters in this country, the wealth of his information and the acuteness of his observations make his work a worthwhile contribution." F. H. Hankins

+ Pol Sci Q 44:127 Mr '29 680w

"Our author fails to arrive at a fully balanced view. He upsets the Nordicists most effectively, but does not convince us that races are equal. But his work is a valuable addition to racialist literature. It is scholarly and rich in bibliographic data. Moreover, it has been translated into excellent English." F. H. Hankins

+ — World Tomorrow 12:135 Mr '29 600w

HERTZLER, JOYCE ORAMEL. Social progress; a theoretical survey and analysis. (Century social science ser.) 589p $4 Century

301 Progress. Civilization—History. Sociology—History 28-16996

"A sociological study of the forces that make for the progress of mankind. General but thought-provoking. Intended primarily for advanced students of sociology."—Wis Lib Bul

"Much more important contributions to the literature of scientific sociology will be made by those who devote themselves to the study of the processes whereby social change is effected, without direct reference to the progressive or retrogressive character of the changes. But there can be little doubt that this book is of just the sort that many colleges and universities wish to have taught to their advanced undergraduates." F. N. House

Am J Soc 34:401 S '28 300w

Cath World 129:252 My '29 80w

"The author makes no original contribution of his own. He has organized and summarized the work of others and has contributed toward the popularizing and humanizing of social knowledge, but the problem of establishing 'personal and social ideals' with sufficient objectivity and concreteness to make them a matter of widespread agreements and a basis for social policy still awaits solution." H. E. Jensen

Christian Century 46:201 F 7 '29 500w

"Theoretical sociology is striving mightily in these days to get its case stated to the world. Professor Hertzler, in this comprehensive survey of social progress, contributes a generous share. His book is long—so long as to retire the print to a type and lining not pleasant to the eye. In addition the critic of little things may pick at the grammatical structure here and there. The text is sown with split infinitives, as thick, almost, as plantain on a greensward. But these are minor details in a masterly work." R. W. Kelso

+ — Survey 61:514 Ja 15 '29 320w

Wis Lib Bul 24:300 N '28

HERVEY, HARRY CLAY. Red ending. 315p $2.50 Liveright

29-21217

The psychological study of a youth, Belano Farrell, hampered at every turn in his search for a normal existence. His dominating brother, Dominy, cowed the boy into submission; his mother, who was passionately devoted to Dominy, held Belano at home after the death of her beloved son. Then came a comrade of Dominy's to lie about his friend's death and to take his place with the mother. All these things Belano suffered, but when the intruder took the girl he loved Belano killed him, and committed suicide.

"A mediocre performance, little out of the ordinary, but in its unrelieved futility, its affectation of verbal ornament and ineffectual philosophy, it conveys, in flashes, the atmosphere of the decadent South. . . Mr. Hervey's characters are overdrawn and his story grows monotonous, but he has made old Charleston a living and motivating force." Sara Haardt

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 10 '29 480w

"The book is movingly and beautifully written. It should add materially to the reputation of its young author."

+ N Y Times p7 S 22 '29 700w

HERVEY, JOHN G. Legal effects of recognition in international law; as interpreted by the courts of the United States. 170p $3 Press of the Univ. of Pa.

341 Recognition (international law). United States—Foreign relations. Laws—Reports and digests 28-26889

"The prolonged non-recognition of the Soviet government by the United States has raised for the courts to solve, a number of legal problems concerned with the recognition of new states and of new governments in old states. This study summarizes the leading cases, English and American, and suggests the methods of future solution."—Cleveland Open Shelf

"In finding our way through the labyrinth of cases, Dr. Hervey has provided us with an excellent guide. The purpose of the book is expository rather than argumentative. The cases are arranged in logical categories and discussed with some fullness. The material is exclusively Anglo-American, the study being in no sense comparative. The author has carefully and ably prepared a digest of a complicated body of cases." C: Fairman

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:780 Ag '29 350w

Reviewed by N. D. Houghton

Ann Am Acad 142:461 Mr '29 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p99 Jl '29

HERZBERG, ALEXANDER. Psychology of philosophers; tr. by E. B. F. Wareing. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 228p $3.50 Harcourt [10s 6d K. Paul]

101 Philosophers. Psychoanalysis [29-11107]

The purpose of the book is to answer the question why anyone becomes a philosopher, what are the qualities of a man's mind that make of him a great thinker. The author draws up a list of thirty such thinkers, from Socrates to Nietzsche, and studies the psychological traits that led these men to become philosophers.

Reviewed by Dorion Cairns

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 N 3 '29 480w

Boston Transcript p6 S 28 '29 380w

Reviewed by Paul Weiss

New Repub 60:274 O 23 '29 400w

"An interesting, provocative, but somewhat unsatisfying book." Evelyn Underhill

+ — Spec 142:sup699 My 4 '29 720w

"Mr. Herzberg gives us a memorable if somewhat depressing catalogue of the weaknesses of the flesh and spirit by which the members of his intellectual aristocracy were assailed or beset, and one can hardly base antipathy to his conclusions on the selection and arrangement of his material, especially as he is essentially fair-minded and shows no tendency to burke obvious difficulties."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p662 Ag 29 '29 1550w

HERZOG, PETER W. Morris plan of industrial banking. 126p $2 McGraw

332.3 Loans. Banks and banking—United States 29-1653

"This book was awarded first prize for 1927 by the Chicago Trust Company for 'research relating to the financing of business enterprises.' The study is divided into ten chapters and gives a good description of the origin and the development of the Morris Plan of Industrial Banking. As a manual of useful information it has a place in the economic publications of the present day."—Am Econ R

HERZOG, P: W.—Continued

"For one who wishes an accurate description of what Morris Plan banks do and the manner in which the business has developed, this is perhaps the best available source of information in such small compass. As a critical appraisal it lacks conclusiveness and does not impress the reader as the last word that can be said on this type of banking." C. O. Fisher

+ — Am Econ R 19:497 S '29 1400w

St Louis 27:158 My '29

Times [London] Lit Sup p384 My 9 '29 140w

HESLOP, HAROLD. Gate of a strange field. 288p $2 Appleton [7s 6d Brentano's]

29-14298

Written by a man who has spent most of his life in the British coal mines, this is a graphic tale of a miner's life. Joe Tarrant at fourteen leaves school and goes to work in the mines; at sixteen, he hates them, and dreams of the sea and knights and fair ladies. But stern reality and two special ladies claim him.

"There is an uncompromising realism in the grim, poverty-stricken lives of the miners and their families here pictured, and many passages recall vividly 'The Portion of Labor,' by Mrs. Freeman. The book will be chiefly remembered for its somberness and for the author's own strong belief in the cause of the worker."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ag 25 '29 300w

"The charm of this novel is its simplicity, lean, sparse narrative. Mr. Heslop has mastered the art of elimination, the concentration to be gained by wise selection." W. E. H.

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 7 '29 400w

+ Nation 129:449 O 16 '29 170w

"The sheer honesty of the book makes it powerful. Style blends with story. Dialogue is used sparingly, for in these hard lives there is little time for chatter. One does not miss the poverty of humor because there is no humor in utter weariness. . . One wearies of the recurrence of the word proletariat, and one wishes this book might have been more fortunately titled, but even with these minor drawbacks Harold Heslop has revealed something greatly worthwhile in this tragedy."

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 4 '29 500w

"The author was once a miner himself. He knows of what he writes, obviously, and he writes what he knows in a direct, lucid, and natural style that makes the picture very real."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:98 Ag 31 '29 200w

"A good deal of praise must be accorded to the writer, not only for his fairness and honesty, but also for his narrative skill. The latter is clear, direct, and economical, and enables him to present the story as well as his own reflections in a vivid manner."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p277 Ap 4 '29 280w

HESS, LAWRENCE CUTHBERT. See Cuthbert, Father.

HESS, LEONARD. Tomorrow's voyage. 308p $2.50 Washburn

29-20655

"Through the misty, sea-dreaming eyes of Samuel Jones we are presented with Hell's Kitchen as it flowered in all its pristine and fetid grossness during the dog-days of Anthony Comstock. What Samuel wanted was to ride the high seas beside fragrant Amanda Stark on the good ship Ventura. That demanded brawn and all Samuel had was dreams. [And what he found was] tragedy—in the guise of Carrie Sodger, the neighborhood Cleopatra."—Sat R of Lit

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 15 '29 500w

"Mr. Hess writes with a clear, cold, distinctive beauty, a rhythm and poetry rarely encountered in prose. Ignoring entirely the more conventional mode of story telling, he has evolved a stirring and dramatic tale rich in human values and told it in a manner which reveals unusual gifts both of style and characterization."

+ N Y Times p28 N 17 '29 480w

"It is doubtful whether Mr. Hess had any real justification for his typewriter style—the book would be even more effective written fully and with form. But granting its zigzag movement it has undeniable force and effect." Marie Luhrs

+ — N Y World p11m D 8 '29 220w

"His first novel and a splendid one it is."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:262 O 12 '29 200w

HESSE, HERMANN. Steppenwolf; tr. from the German by Basil Creighton. 309p $2.50 Holt [7s 6d Secker]

29-18164

A strange, introspective study of a man of fifty, who regards himself as a dual personality. He considers himself half man and half wolf of the steppes. The book has been a best seller in Germany, where it kept pace with "The Case of Sergeant Grischa."

"No review, whatever its length, could ever do justice to this amazing book. . . For anyone who is not afraid of being disturbed and who strives towards a sympathetic understanding of modern intellectual Germany, Steppenwolf is indispensable."

+ Bookm 70:xxii O '29 200w

"Carp and gird though some may and others will at the utter fancifulness of 'Steppenwolf,' it cannot help pleasing a numerous clientele; for the reader can read into it, or out of it, whatever his fancy elects to look for. If he is so deplorably constituted as to feel that Mozart is dead because the saxophone is alive and sickening, 'Steppenwolf' will appeal to him as a thing of slime. If on the other hand the reader chances to realize the patent truth that Mozart is being better rendered today than ever before, he will find Hesse's 'Steppenwolf,' written only the other day, a thing of beauty, and a joy for just so long as he holds fast to the truth that the casting out of devils has been an occupation or a job since the very beginning of time." A. W. Porterfield

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 S 8 '29 980w

"It is a strange and subtle and very beautiful book, this. Its subtitle, 'For Madmen Only,' is deserved, for it seems as if every madness of the post-war era, every devilish vice, every perversion, and every despair of a seer who having beheld one insensate catastrophe looks helplessly on while another approaches, is mingled here as in a witch's broth. Yet beyond all this madness the Steppenwolf finds at last a sanity."

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 4 '29 400w

Nation 129:780 D 25 '29 200w

" 'Steppenwolf' opens with the promise of a novel of ideas. Haller, the hero, is introduced as a genius of suffering. 'He belonged to those who have been caught between two ages, who have fallen from all credit and innocence.' But his documents, which we are led to hope may be a revelation of his character, turn out to be a peculiarly unappetizing conglomeration of fantasy, philosophy, and moist eroticism." L. L. Irvine

— Nation and Ath 45:208 My 11 '29 180w

"In America, whether his book is taken as a symbol of intellectual insanity in the country, Germany, or in the man, Harry Haller, it will be read and discussed widely."

+ N Y Times p7 S 29 '29 500w

"Herman Hesse has described his own book with a precise understanding rarely given to novelists. He speaks of it as a document composed of partly diseased, partly beautiful and thoughtful fantasies and as a record not merely of one soul's sickness but of 'the sickness of the times themselves.' The analysis is perfect, for there is a curious smell of decay in 'Steppen-

wolf,' and some of us think that the same odor pervades the entire spiritual life of our generation." Bernard Smith

N Y World p11m O 27 '29 680w

"The novel is divided into passages of action and reflection—reflections upon the dual nature of Harry Haller, interesting at first but boring after unlimited repetition, and action which consists of snatches of the life of the underworld, all rather orgiastic and suggestive of organized and joyless vice. . . 'Steppenwolf' has its compensations, however. A passionate love of music runs through it, infecting the reader with its ardour." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 147:746 Je 1 '29 330w

"This is an absorbing book for the psychologist, though merely bewildering, probably, to the average novel reader. Its absorption in the duplications and splits of personality recalls the interest of the German Romantic Revival in doppelgänger and shadow-selves. If you read without prejudice and with the close attention such a book demands, you will not only be held by the fascination of the enigma it presents but be pierced continually by a wisdom which scatters shafts of light. Mr. Creighton's translation fortunately makes it clear that the writing is frequently of alluring beauty." R. A. Taylor

Spec 142:790 My 18 '29 420w

"Ingenious as some of the philosophical passages are, the 'Wolf' idea wears an obstinate air of unreality all through the novel. Mr. Basil Creighton's translation is excellent."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p378 My 9 '29 240w

HEWART OF BURY, GORDON HEWART, 1st baron. New despotism. 311p $5 Cosmopolitan bk. [21s Benn]

354.42 Great Britain—Politics and government. Legislation—Great Britain. Great Britain—Parliament 29-24336

By the "new despotism" the author, who is (1929) Lord chief justice of England, means the danger which threatens the institutions of self-government thru the steady encroachment of the executive upon the powers of the legislative and judiciary. His book is a strong argument against bureaucracy—the practice by which Parliament delegates wide powers of legislation to government departments and commissions.

Boston Transcript p4 N 30 '29 750w

Nation and Ath 46:288 N 23 '29 1000w

"Lord Hewart calls his book a 'little essay' which is not intended to be more than a brief introduction to his topic. But in fact he has framed a formidable indictment of the 'new despotism,' and marshalled a mountain of evidence on which to hang the criminals."

New Statesman 34:126 N 2 '29 1500w

"Lord Hewart's new book is a political event of first-rate importance. This is shown by the fact that the Government, cleverly disarming criticism, have already appointed a committee to examine its argument."

+ Sat R 148:500 N 2 '29 1500w

"Lord Hewart proves his case. He gives chapter and verse for all his accusations. No doubt is left in our mind about the encroachments. . . Since the danger which Lord Hewart has exposed is a very real one he deserves unstinted thanks for the clearness of his exposition."

+ Spec 143:687 N 9 '29 1100w

"What the Lord Chief Justice has written is not a judicial pronouncement, but a piece of brilliant advocacy. It is, moreover, advocacy of a deliberately popular kind, Lord Hewart's business being to impress his jury—the public."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p883 N 7 '29 2000w

HEYER, GEORGETTE. The masqueraders. 344p $2 Longmans [7s 6d Heinemann]

29-1191

A romance of eighteenth century London in which the two young Merriots, brother and sister, find themselves implicated in the Stuart rebellion and take to masquerade to save their heads. Their father, known as "the old gentleman," is an inveterate masquerader and amply accounts for his children's success in that line.

Booklist 26:32 O '29

"It is a thrilling story brimming over with fun."

+ Bookm 70:xxii S '29 80w

Reviewed by V. P. Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 11 '29 350w

Nation and Ath 44:26 O 6 '28 250w

"Miss Heyer has a lucid though artificial style sprinkled with irritating inversions; and she brings off the whole masquerade plausibly enough, but rather too glibly."

+ — New Statesman 31:768 S 29 '28 250w

"Quite charming, quite light reading." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 10 '29 100w

"In spite of the frequent clumsiness of the eighteenth century dialogue, 'The Masqueraders' has wit and action and suspense. Miss Heyer omits none of the conventional devices of eighteenth century romance—there are duels and masked balls and highway robberies and tense scenes at the gaming tables. The complications are very adroitly woven and tangled and solved, and the action flows without a break to the dénouement."

+ N Y Times p6 S 1 '29 500w

"The characters are charmingly dressed dolls. And the plot could not be described as original."

Outlook 152:672 Ag 21 '29 120w

"The tale is told rapidly and wittily with events bombarding events and one encounter invariably leading to another. The characters are gaily bedight and they manage to be clever or dull just as each occasion demands for the furtherance of the good-natured, swashbuckling plot."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1181 Jl 13 '29 240w

"It is a picturesque and engaging story." R. A. T.

+ Spec 141:273 S 1 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '29 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p669 S 20 '28 250w

HEYER, GEORGETTE. Pastel. 313p $2 (7s 6d) Longmans

[29-9797]

Compared with her glowing sister Evelyn, Frances is as pastel to primary color. She falls in love with Oliver but Evelyn wins him. Frances marries Norman who has waited long and patiently for her. Frances's married life is keyed to a quieter tone than Evelyn's, but on the whole she is the happier.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Jl 14 '29 120w

"A thoughtful and realistic portrayal of the dreams and longings of a romantic girl who all her life has had to take second place. We sympathize with and love Frances because, whether we admit it or not, many of us have had similar longings and have had the same discouragements."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 15 '29 70w

"Miss Heyer proves once again that the oldest theme can yield new charm in the hands of a competent artist." Gilbert Thomas

+ Spec 142:755 My 11 '29 80w

"A very readable, pleasant novel, which keeps to the surface of things and introduces us to some friendly and agreeable people."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p472 Je 13 '29 250w

HEYWARD, DU BOSE. Half pint flask. 55p il $1 Farrar & Rinehart

"In a simple, straightforward manner, without any unnecessary argument or rhetorical discussion not bearing on the main idea of the story, the author shows the disastrous effect of conjur-

HEYWARD, DU B.—Continued
ing on the consciousness of a white man who has taken a flask from a grave in a negro burying-ground. By their concentrated mental efforts, the outraged negroes, through their knowledge of the occult and ready practice of black magic, succeed in reducing the man to a state of abject terror and helplessness."—Sat R of Lit

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Boston Transcript p1 F 23 '29

---

"This is quite a wonderful story, a vivid and impressive account of native life, touched with the spirited imagination of a sympathetic and literary on-looker."
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 11 '29 300w

"In respect to the art of the story of 'The Half-Pint Flask,' as apart from the creepy matter of which it is compounded, there is one criticism to be made. As in every story in the horror group, the character which is the butt of the disagreeable happenings is, perforce, a 'plant.' And the assumed narrator is also. Thus there is at the outset a hazard of artificiality which the author must surmount. And it seems to us that Mr. Heyward does not get over his hurdle quite cleanly."
+ — N Y Times p6 S 29 '29 700w

"Aside from the remarkable economy of words and deft handling of subject matter, 'The Half Pint Flask' has a Poe-like atmosphere of mystery and suspense that is quite impressive. Due to his fine understanding of the psychology of the primitive negroes of his section of the country, Mr. Heyward has written a tale of unusual force and vitality." R. E. Kennedy
+ Sat R of Lit 6:205 O 5 '29 360w

HEYWARD, DU BOSE. Mamba's daughters. 311p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Heinemann] 29-3497

Mamba comes out of the darkness of Charleston's underworld, the Catfish Row of "Porgy," to work without pay in the Wentworth's kitchen, for the sake of the distinction which would come to her from being connected with quality white folks. The story of old Mamba, her daughter Hagar, and Hagar's child Lissa, runs along parallel with that of her adopted family.

---

Booklist 25:248 Mr '29

"Altogether, a book that haunts your senses as well as your memory." M. C. Dawson
+ Bookm 69:91 Mr '29 630w

"If there are any structural defects in this drama of old Charleston and the new South, I find them immaterial. The apposite fact is that Mr. Heyward has achieved a novel of sustained power and truth, a novel that presents, with clarifying force, a revelation of both the past and present in a poetical prose that is itself a genuine revelation of beauty. Tenderly, yet with an infinite acuity, he has recreated the magic passion of a vanished past, but, further than that, he has commemorated, with an enduring charm, the gallantry of its pessimism, the gallantry of its folly, and the gallantry of its song." Sara Haardt
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 F 3 '29 1700w

"We have rarely had the pleasure of reading a novel written with such sustained effectiveness and literary excellence." D. F. Gilman
+ Boston Transcript p4 F 2 '29 1200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p125 S '29

"I suspect that Mr. Heyward has been able to let himself go more freely with this material simply because it is at a safe remove from his personal life and emotions. Nothing prevents his telling all he knows about Hagar, and the result is an extraordinarily interesting person whose fate we follow eagerly." A. B. Parsons
+ Nation 128:sup486 Ap 17 '29 500w
Reviewed by L. L. Irvine
Nation and Ath 44:844 Mr 16 '29 140w

"The negro chapters are well done, with knowledge and a vivid sense of life; the white characters are less successful."
+ — New Statesman 32:706 Mr 9 '29 140w

" 'Mamba's Daughters' is a novel compact of many surprisingly humanized characters, of a proliferation of incidents, of shifting social and spiritual values, of excellent dialogue in the mouths of both negro and white, and of a human compassion that steers beautifully clear of both sentimentality and that sardonic approach to life that has usurped the ancient title of 'realism.' But Mr. Heyward has not been afraid of sentiment where sentiment is called for, and he has leavened his book with humor in character, incident and conversation." J: Chamberlain
+ N Y Times p2 F 3 '29 1250w

"Much of the writing in Mamba's Daughters is flat and commonplace, and the story goes to pieces sadly at the end. There are parts of it, notably in the early chapters, that are excellent, but Mr. Heyward's evident efforts to fuse the stories of a white family and a black family do not seem to the Landscaper to come off at all." Herschel Brickell
— + No Am 227:adv Mr '29 220w

"Mamba, indomitable and shameless old woman, and Hagar, great tragic figure, are characters that will live in the memory."
+ Outlook 151:228 F 6 '29 530w
Pratt p36 spring '29
St Louis 27:251 Ag '29

"Parts of 'Mamba's Daughters' are excellent, although for me it never reaches the best of 'Porgy' either in material or in style; but parts of it are quite weak and here and there it is downright dull." Herschel Brickell
— + Sat R of Lit 5:703 F 23 '29 1200w

" 'Mamba's Daughters' is not, perhaps, as fully focused as the play, 'Porgy,' in that interest is split between the black and the white world. Yet the novel is remarkable for two finely conceived characters, the grandmother and the hapless mother. In these two women, on whose lives Lissa rises to fame, the author has revealed that color lines do not operate where the intensity and the deep emotions of the inner life are concerned."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '29 360w

"The early chapters are easily the best in the book. Mamba is a genuine character, the fantastically genteel Wentworth family are so far quite interesting, and the author sketches the background of his story with sympathy and exactness. But the narrative is developed in an uncertain and rather shapeless fashion."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p182 Mr 7 '29 380w

HIBBEN, PAXTON. Peerless leader: William Jennings Bryan; introd. by Charles A. Beard. 446p $5 Farrar & Rinehart

B or 92 Bryan, William Jennings 29-24634

According to the announcement of the publishers the first twenty-one chapters of this book, not quite two-thirds of the whole, were written by Paxton Hibben before his death. The book was completed by C. Hartley Grattan. The portrait of Bryan is not a flattering one. Every statement of fact has been carefully verified and authorities cited are given in notes at the back of the book, conveniently arranged by chapters.

---

"It is written with the gusto and full attention to local color that we have come to expect of the modern biography and with the irony and pity of the detached observer. And yet for all its richness of detail and characterization, for all its dredging up of the manifold intimacies and contacts of a life that tinted the contemporary scene at a thousand points, it is painstakingly careful not to stray from the path of historical accuracy." W: M. Houghton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 O 27 '29 1000w
Christian Century 46:1513 D 4 '29 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p149 D '29

Reviewed by J. T. Gerould
Current Hist 31:829 Ja '30 40w

"His narrative is delightful reading; his picture of Bryan is drawn with insight, understanding, and much kindliness as well; but also with the unsparing sharpness and accuracy of the surgeon's knife. No lengthy picture of Bryan thus far drawn is equal to this, or as readable. Mr. Hibben has related the Commoner well to his background and carefully traced his political growth and recession, illuminating the story with flashes of wisdom and biting comment not only upon Bryan himself, but also upon his fellow-citizens." O. G. Villard

+ Nation 129:590 N 20 '29 1100w

"Paxton Hibben has written a readable and informing life of William Jennings Bryan, and he has done something more. He has given a study of American character and American conditions in the years after the Civil War. . . All this Mr. Hibben has told in a clear, rapid, pungent style." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 60:301 O 30 '29 2000w

Reviewed by A. S. Will
N Y Times p8 N 24 '29 900w

"The section devoted to Bryan's service as Secretary of State is much more impartial of the difficult position of a man who abhorred war and compromised his views to maintain a fair balance, as he saw it, between the warring powers." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p15 O 21 '29 1000w

"There is no new material in this biography of Bryan. But much research went into it, into Mr. Hibben's part much vehemence, and into Mr. Grattan's a subtlety which one doubts that Mr. Bryan, living, would have ever appreciated." W: Frauenglass

Outlook 153:387 N 6 '29 480w

Reviewed by Johan Smertenko
Outlook 153:549 D 4 '29 100w

"Hibben does not do him justice. That is not to be expected. The true biography of William Jennings Bryan cannot be written for a long time yet and the man who writes it must be not only a student of history but a psychoanalyst possessed of more than ordinary literary ability." W: R. Pattangall

— Portland Evening News p8 D 10 '29 700w

"The biography is a masterly dissection of Bryan's intellectual quality and his vaunted skill and farsightedness as a popular leader. . . . The outstanding excellence of the book, however, is its straightforward and exhaustive presentation of the facts of Bryan's life. The book will give no joy to those who still like to think of Bryan as a great man, and not much to those who affect to believe that the political movements which Bryan acclaimed or led represent some real advance in the direction of a sensible national life." W: MacDonald

+ Sat R of Lit 6:339 N 2 '29 1500w

HIBINO, YUTAKA. Nippon shindo ron; or, The national ideals of the Japanese people; tr. by A. P. McKenzie. 3d ed 176p $3 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

172 Ethics, Japanese [29-1602]

" 'Nippon Shindo Ron' is the translation of a textbook used in some of the government schools in Japan. Its purpose is education in patriotism and morals—the inculcation in the youth of the nation of the ideal conduct of Japanese subjects, and it is based upon the famous imperial rescript of 1890 on education. The author was long the head of one of the prominent secondary schools and has been a member of Parliament. The book holds up as an ideal General Nogi, who stirred the nation by committing suicide on the death of the Emperor Meiji."—Sat R of Lit

---

"No conformist Daughter of our Founding Fathers could write so intensely conservative a loyalist tract as this. . . Hibino has a cavalier disdain for mere historical facts; but the monotony of his moral exhortations is relieved and the whole illuminated by a wealth of delicate and brilliant imagery that gives the book a singular beauty."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 9 '29 120w

Reviewed by W: L. Nunn
Nation 129:176 Ag 14 '29 380w
New Statesman 32:672 Mr 2 '29 500w

Reviewed by Poultney Bigelow
N Y Times p2 My 5 '29 500w

"In this volume we have a clear picture of the ethical standards which the older generation in Japan, backed by official sanction, is attempting to pass on to the youth of the land. The major emphasis is upon loyalty to the Emperor and pride in and devotion to the Empire. Much is made of other of the Confucian virtues—of the duties of parents and children, of younger and older brothers, of husbands and wives, and of friends." K. S. Latourette

+ Sat R of Lit 5:778 Mr 16 '29 250w
Times [London] Lit Sup p971 D 6 '28 200w

HICHENS, ROBERT SMYTHE. Dr. Artz. 378p $2.50 Cosmopolitan bk. [7s 6d Hutchinson]

29-9992

"A sinister combination of scientist, quack and voluptuary, this elderly Dr. Artz claims to have discovered—he has, in fact, successfully worked the cure upon patients wealthy enough to meet his enormous fees—a means of restoring sexual vigor to aging men and women. While on a visit from his Swiss clinic to England he becomes secretly enamored of a young girl with a promising voice, who is too poor to pay the costs of vocal training for opera. Artz suggests to a lecherous old millionaire that the latter defray the girl's tuition and living expenses in Zurich, where she may study under an eminent Russian maestro of Artz's acquaintance. Guilelessly and gratefully the girl accepts the old roue's patronage, goes to Switzerland, and there pursues her musical studies through a maze of contentious incidents."—N Y World

---

"Mr. Hichens allows the story to meander from one point to another with a dwindling force. The narrative lacks the decisiveness which would have rendered it formidable as an attack."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 9 '29 150w

"What is profoundly irritating in this novel is the amazing coarseness of its writing. Some of the lines sound as if they were claims made in the advertisements of quack doctors. The average reader will find the story altogether too long, even though in its original serial form it was nearly fifty thousand words longer. To any reader who has admired the talent and restraint and beauty of Mr. Hichens's earlier fiction this account of Dr. Artz and his evil activities will come as a fearful shock." D. F. G.

— Boston Transcript p2 My 1 '29 1100w

"It is not Pauline alone who remains lifeless and unreal, but most of the other characters as well—all of them seem manipulated by their master in order to fit into a story that he chose to tell in verbose and seldom convincing manner."

— N Y Times p24 My 26 '29 220w

"Though very long and tending toward the sensational, the story never grows wearisome and is written with a distinction of style more appropriate to materials less gaudy."

+ — N Y World p11m My 5 '29 170w

"Though a genius might have made a revealing study even of types so abnormal and morbid, Mr. Hichens has not succeeded in doing it in 'Doctor Artz.' "

— Sat R of Lit 5:1080 Je 1 '29 350w

" 'Dr. Artz' is typical of Mr. Hichens' later style. It has a sensational theme, is crowded with odd and picturesque types, wears glittering paste of lively conversations, gives just

HICHENS, R. S.—Continued
a hint of the uncanny, and shows enough intuition to remind us that the author should have been a novelist of more serious distinction." R. A. Taylor
+ — Spec 142:793 My 18 '29 160w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '29 160w

HICKOK, FRANCES. Eye for an eye. 304p $2 Hale
29-9991

A scientist who has made ruthless experiments on the eyes of a man at his mercy, is found dead in his laboratory with his eyes slashed. As Judge Bradford and the police investigate an atmosphere of mounting horror enshrouds the case.

Bookm 69:xxv My '29 30w
"Very readable." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 7 '29 60w
"The solution of the mystery makes a remarkably absorbing story."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 20 '29 220w
"He must be a rapid and thoughtless reader, not to be annoyed by the gracelessness of the style and not to guess the ending before he has finished a hundred pages. It is unfortunate that in developing the story its author felt obliged to follow the accepted construction of the mystery story, a construction to which the central idea, uncannily gruesome and worthy of more original treatment, fails signally to lend itself."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:1030 My 18 '29 100w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 130w

HIGGINS, ALEXANDER PEARCE. Studies in international law and relations. 314p $5 Macmillan [15s Cambridge univ. press]
341.04 International law and relations
28-27869

"This volume contains fourteen essays upon a great variety of topics in international law. Seven deal with topics connected with war and neutrality: enemy ships in port at the outbreak of war, submarine cables, ships of war as prizes, retaliation in naval warfare, and armed merchantmen. Three deal with fundamental assumptions and premises of international law, stressing the duties rather than the rights of states. Four are miscellaneous: the Papacy and International Law, the Monroe Doctrine, Grotius as an International Lawyer, and the Locarno Treaties."—Am Hist R

"Professor Higgins is always accurate in statement, careful in analysis, and generally fair in conclusion, but not particularly subtle in thought. The specialist in international law will derive most benefit from the essay on enemy ships in port at the outbreak of war and on the arming of merchant vessels. The general reader will be repaid by a perusal of them all." J. S. Reeves
+ — Am Hist R 34:645 Ap '29 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p99 Jl '29
Reviewed by J. H. Ralston
Nation 129:124 Jl 31 '29 700w
Nation and Ath 43:832 S 29 '28 80w
New Statesman 31:738 S 22 '28 230w
"The book will be valuable for reference, but will also repay continuous reading. It teaches a great deal of general history most attractively hung upon the thread of Law, and not so allusively taught as to worry the unlearned."
+ Spec 142:203 F 9 '29 580w
Times [London] Lit Sup p670 S 20 '28 380w

HILDITCH, THOMAS PERCY. Catalytic processes in applied chemistry. (Ser. of monographs on applied chemistry) 360p $6 Van Nostrand [16s Chapman]
541.39 Catalysis. Chemistry, Technical
[29-16998]

The second volume in a series of monographs on applied chemistry. "The book is an attempt to give, within a reasonable space, a general account of how the principles of catalytic action are being applied in practice. Instances have therefore been selected for more detailed discussion, not necessarily because of the intrinsic importance of the products concerned, but mainly where it has appeared that the specific methods applied have a wider interest or are of potential application in other cases." (Preface)

"Professor Hilditch's book on catalysis is a straightforward readable statement of the facts. He covers the field in a most excellent manner and though he hasn't gone into any great detail concerning specific cases, nevertheless he has proportioned his material in a common sense manner." D. B. Keyes
+ Chem & Met Eng 36:622 O '29 370w
"The scientific matter in the book is very good. The commercial data suffer, as is usually the case, by the swift pace with which commercial developments change during the time necessary for preparation of the book." C: O. Brown
+ — Ind & Eng Chem 21:1149 N '29 400w
"Eminently readable, lucid, accurate, and authoritative, and in addition well presented by the publisher, it comes near to realising our ideal of what an advanced text-book should be, having in mind always that it is written to promote the application of science in industry." E. F. Armstrong
+ Nature 124:47 Jl 13 '29 950w
N Y New Tech Bks 14:20 Ap '29

HILER, HILAIRE. From nudity to raiment; an introd. to the study of costume. 303p il pa $7.50 Weyhe [25s Foyle]
391 Costume

"This introduction to the study of costume is largely a digest of what leading ethnologists have said about the rise of personal covering and adornment. There is a general introduction by Mr. Sisley Huddleston in which the object of the book is set forth. It is a bibliography of costume and a general discussion of the various theories concerning protective covering and the needs for costume as a reinforcement of sexual attraction. There is a chapter on prehistoric dress, based on the discoveries resulting from excavations. Bronze Age jewelry and Iron Age ornament have a chapter to themselves, and finally comes an essay on costumes in Mexico, Central America, and Peru."—Times [London] Lit Sup

" 'From Nudity to Raiment' is one of those books which print off an accumulated card catalogue. The author is an artist, and, not knowing very well what to do with his mass of detail on head-deformation, tattooing, body-painting, wearing of labrets, twelve-inch-high metal collars, tails behind, and what not he has arranged them according to the long out-moded scheme of an evolutionary series." Ruth Benedict
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 6 '29 400w
"The 141 figures, twelve plates, and twelve colour plates form the backbone of the work. They are excellently reproduced."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p827 O 17 '29 220w

HILL, MRS CAROLINE (MILES), comp. Twentieth century love poems. 218p $2.50 Willett 821.08 Love poetry
29-19722

A collection of contemporary love poetry arranged in six groups: Love aflame; Love reveries; Love victorious; Love rebellious; Ashes of love; Mystic love.

Booklist 26:110 D '29
"Contains a few really good poems and many mediocre ones inspired, or supposedly inspired, by the devastating passion." B. R. Redman
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 27 50w
Boston Transcript p4 D 14 '29 230w
"Most absurd of the anthologies."
— Nation 129:448 O 16 '29 50w

"Caroline Hill, editor of a useful anthology of religious poetry, has shown less discrimination in the compilation of 'Twentieth Century Love Poems.' The only justification of any anthology is the inherent poetic merit of its contents. Miss Hill, forgetting this, has included a distressingly large proportion of third-rate verses, chiefly because, it appears, these verses help to prove her thesis that love is always the same in any age." Granville Hicks
— N Y World p11m O 6 '29 180w

"We find ourselves 'high-sorrowful and cloyed' before we have even started." W: R. Benét
— Sat R of Lit 6:210 O 5 '29 50w

HILL, CHARLES SHATTUCK. Winter construction methods; processes and plant employed in prosecuting construction operations in cold weather. 180p il $3 McGraw

690 Contractors' operations. Building. Concrete construction 28-25514

"Summarizes principles and describes equipment and practical methods for safe construction in freezing weather."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

Booklist 25:197 F '29

"To all constructors Mr. Hill's 'Winter Construction Methods' is an invaluable aid and an admirable book to be consulted and used. . . For many years the author has been interested in the problem of winter construction in the construction industry and has made exhaustive and painstaking economic studies of this subject. As a result the book contains much valuable information from authoritative sources." A. P. Greensfelder
+ Eng N 102:109 Ja 17 '29 300w
N Y New Tech Bks 14:4 Ja '29
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:15 F '29
Pratt p20 spring '29

HILL, FOWLER. Plundered host. 270p $2.50 Dutton

29-5602

Peter grows up in the country with a fussy, sentimental aunt and an unapproachable father who show great concern for his morals. They are a hindrance rather than a help to his understanding of life, religion, and sex. His perplexities continue thru college, but are finally clarified when in New York he meets Janet.

---

" 'Plundered Host' is an unusually successful and sensitive attempt to interpret the artistic temperament." G. T. Hellman
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 17 '29 500w

"If we look upon the story as a work of beauty we find it hopelessly out of focus with life, and therefore bad art. If we regard it as a realistic representation of a human being put down in the form of clinical notes it is equally disconcerting."
— Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '29 200w

" 'Plundered Host' is a startlingly accurate exposé of the human brain." Milton Byron
+ Outlook 151:350 F 27 '29 130w

HILL, HOWARD COPELAND. Vocational civics. 365p il $1.28 Ginn

371.425 Profession, Choice of. Occupations. Citizenship 28-12533

The excellent material in this junior high school civics text is well arranged and illustrated, and presented as the title implies, with the emphasis on vocations and occupations.

---

"A very readable book, clear enough for a boy or girl of junior high school age to understand, and interesting enough so that he will want to read it."
+ Hist Outlook 20:253 My '29 250w

"The author's treatment of occupations is highly satisfactory in that (1) the division of work is intelligently conceived; (2) the occupations are interestingly presented; and (3) the material about each occupation follows the type of outline that will create in the pupil's mind the proper standards for evaluating occupations. The illustrations constitute a study of the workaday world in themselves. Child and adult cannot fail to be attracted by their vividness and fulness. Those who have attempted to teach courses in careers or vocations will find in the book a happy solution to a number of their problems." Robert Woellner
+ School R 36:711 N '28 320w

HILL, NORMAN LLEWELLYN. Public international conference; its function, organization and procedure. (Stanford bks. in world politics) 267p $3 Stanford univ. press [13s 6d Oxford]

341.1 International cooperation—Congresses. Arbitration, International. Congresses and conventions 29-10290

"Professor Hill's book, the only comprehensive work on the subject, sketches the history of the international conference, explains in detail the way in which such conferences have been called and their methods of organization and procedure, and considers briefly some of the limitations of the conference idea in dealing with international matters and the course which the device seems likely to take in the immediate future. The League of Nations, of course, comes in for special study, and particular consideration is given to the two Hague Conferences of 1899 and 1907, the Paris peace conference, the Washington conference on the limitation of naval armaments, the Genoa conference of 1922, and the Havana conference of 1928."—Nation

---

Nation 129:698 D 4 '29 170w

"No one who aspires to master internationalism can afford to ignore this method of settling international problems. Mr. Hill has prepared a most useful handbook." J: Carter
+ Outlook 153:30 S 4 '29 80w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:10 Je '29 170w

"Since all hopes for permanent peace depend upon the acquirement of the habit of conferring together by the various nations, this volume deals with an important theme. The history, composition, organization and procedure of international conferences are treated in a comprehensive manner."
World Tomorrow 12:425 O '29 50w

HILL, RODERIC MAXWELL. Baghdad air mail. 328p il $7 Longmans [18s E. Arnold]

629.13 Aeronautics—Flights 29-17080

A history of the making of the air mail route from Cairo to Baghdad, together with the personal narrative of several flights over the route. With photographs.

---

"The combination of an active imagination, sensitive nerves and a good narrative style with first-class flying ability must be very rare, but when the conjunction appears a fine book is inevitable. Wing Commander Hill's account of two years spent in command of the eastern end of the desert air service between Cairo and Bagdad is a case in point."
+ New Statesman 33:188 My 18 '29 650w

"Wing-Commander Hill has not understood the art of selection and compression and has allowed his book to become far too long-winded. Thus the well-written portions, such as where he saw sunrise over the Euphrates and sunset on the Pyramids, and the account of some of his night flights, are overlaid and lost amid chronicles of trivialities leading to no conclusion."
— + Spec 142:746 My 11 '29 200w
Times [London] Lit Sup p271 Ap 4 '29 660w

HILLER, ERNEST THEODORE. The strike; a study in collective action. (Univ. of Chicago sociological ser.) 304p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [12s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

331.89 Strikes and lockouts. Crowds. Social psychology 29-2549

"The author conceives the strike not as a series of independent episodes but as a cycle of typical events which takes place in a more or less regular and predictable way. He tells us how and why strikes occur, how they are organized, how the morale of the strikers is maintained under the various difficulties encountered; strategy of employers, strike breakers, and so on, the influence of public opinion and how it is manipulated, and how strikes are concluded. The final chapter deals with the strike as a means of social change, political and general strikes."—Survey

---

"This is the first comprehensive and objective treatment of the sociology of strikes." D: J. Saposs

+ Am Econ R 19:487 S '29 550w

"He devotes much consideration to the strategy of strikes, both on the workers' side and on the employers' side; and he is reasonably successful in explaining strategy as a natural response of human nature and group interest to given types of situations. The chapter 'The Mythical General Strike,' while not profoundly original in content, is interesting and thought provoking. . . On the whole, this is a readable and illuminating book." F. N. House

+ Am J Soc 34:1198 My '29 380w

"The volume must be hailed as a real and much-needed contribution; business executives, labor leaders, and last but not least, those harried individuals who make up the 'phantom public' should derive a good deal of profit from a careful study of a book which is concerned first of all with the mechanisms of the strike and only secondarily, if at all, with its specifically economic aspects." H. P. Becker

+ Ann Am Acad 144:155 Jl '29 420w

"Any one interested in strikes had better see one himself, or turn to Heber Blakenhorn's 'The Strike for Union,' Lewis L. Lorwin's 'The Women's Garment Workers,' or Lord Askwith's 'Industrial Problems and Disputes.' . . Those sections of this book which deal with causes, issues, outcomes of strikes, or with the place of the strike in union development and policy, are unoriginal and ineffective. . . Even as a psychological study the book is thin." J. A. Flexner

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 My 19 '29 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p86 Je '29

"His conclusions, if open to question, should stimulate further theorizing on this important subject. He has done good work in sifting through the writing on the strike, and presents much valuable quoted material from a wide range of sources." L. W. Cooper

+ New Repub 60:155 S 25 '29 1500w

" 'The Strike' is announced as a naturalistic study of one aspect of human behavior. It fulfils its promise admirably. Mr. Hiller has possessed the temerity to eschew statistics; he plunges directly into the midst of qualitative elements. Whether or not his selected cases are adequate for the conclusions reached is not important. He has performed a more useful service in showing how to conduct a study of this sort. His contribution to method is more notable than his addition to industrial facts." E: C. Lindeman

+ Sat R of Lit 5:884 Ap 13 '29 600w

"This book handles in a thorough-going, skilled manner all the various aspects of the strike phenomenon. It is neither descriptive nor superficial, but sociological. . . It must not be inferred from this that the book is heavy reading; quite the contrary. Professor Hiller has been very clever in his use of authorities. He establishes confidence in his statements by numerous but brief quotations. These serve the purpose without being tedious or interrupting the sequence of thought." E. D. Howard

+ Survey 62:143 Ap 15 '29 230w

"It is a brilliant, clear-cut, forceful study, and in its field we have seen nothing better. Not only the strike but the demonstration and allied forms of political protest are dealt with intelligently; and here is one author who sees the pertinent relation between this subject and non-violent social change."

World Tomorrow 13:41 Ja '30 60w

HILLGARTH, ALAN. What price paradise? 299p $2 Houghton

29-23245

The Palm Beach "paradise" of land boom and real estate speculation, as seen by Michael Henderson, a young Englishman who narrates the story, is the setting for this novel of get-rich-quick Americans, large-scale swindling, fashionable hotel life, bootlegging, and the sins of the idle rich. Intrigue, tragedy, romance and a climax of murder occupy the inner stage; and the most dramatic moment of Michael's career occurs when, upon entering the hotel room of his old enemy, Consett, he discovers his body, and beside it, with a dagger in her hand, the most beautiful girl he has ever seen.

---

"Mr. Hillgarth has a not unexciting tale to tell, but he clutters it fearfully with pages and pages about real estate, Americans and palm trees." Will Cuppy

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 D 8 '29 80w

N Y Times p48 D 1 '29 100w

HILLHOUSE, JAMES THEODORE. Grub-Street journal. 354p il $3 Duke univ. [15s Cambridge univ. press]

072 Grub-Street journal 28-13018

"Professor Hillhouse leads us, after some history of the Journal and its authors, through the quarrels which the Journal sustained with Pope's Dunces—James Moore-Smythe, Concanen, Ralph, and (among others) Curll—and shows us the animus of the periodical displayed against such scholars as Bentley and Theobald. Then we pass into fields not so apparently allied to the interests of Pope, where we see the Journal in action against various contemporary periodicals, and are given accounts of the most important diversions created by the Journal in the fields of literary and dramatic criticism, as well as in law, theology, and medicine."—Mod Philol

---

Reviewed by Jacob Zeitlin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 S 23 '28 230w

"This is a book for the specialist and the initiate rather than the 'general reader,' but the latter who reads it in a leisurely way will be continually caught up by oddities of the day and by interesting side-lights of the intimate sort which escape attention in most discussions of the times."

+ Hist Outlook 20:256 My '29 100w

"Professor Hillhouse's descriptive account of the Grub-street Journal is successful not only as an account of an important and very rare periodical, but also as an introduction to various picturesque phases of the life of the time. . . The volume excels in being clear and interesting, as well as in being compact in its presentation of a mass of small detail. Many of us would have lost ourselves in a welter of fact; but Mr. Hillhouse shows skill in dissociating the various strands of his story into episodes that can be understood without continual reference to other passages." G: Sherburn

+ Mod Philol 26:361 F '29 2300w

Nation 127:187 Ag 22 '28 40w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 226:adv Ag '28 60w

"Apart from any other merit which the Journal may have had, this series of extraordinary, if often minute, combats is of the greatest antiquarian interest; and they are admirably arranged by Dr. Hillhouse in the most convenient form."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p416 My 23 '29 750w

HILLYER, VIRGIL MORES. Child's geography of the world. 472p il $3.50 Century [cheaper ed 7s 6d G. Allen]

910 Geography 29-22108

Not a textbook of geography, but a sort of trip around the world for a small child, showing the unusual, the picturesque and interesting things to be found in each country.

---

"The narrative is touched with humor. Only occasionally does the humorous note flatten into facetiousness. The book reads like talks to classes jotted down freshly, with all the little asides which brought giggles at the moment. The effect of it will be to turn these young pupils, in a few years, to more serious volumes about far places. It will stir curiosity in the smaller child; he won't forget it because facts have been made glamorous, or amusing." C. L. Skinner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 17 '29 120w

"The intimacy of his presentations, his humor and his versatility, make the appearance of one of his books a decided event."

+ Nation 129:599 N 20 '29 60w

"An admirable attempt to pass on the fascination innate in learning about the world we live in, but so often lost in a forlorn attempt to teach it to a large class of children." Ruth Seinfel

+ N Y Evening Post p14m N 16 '29 80w

N Y Times p12 N 17 '29 170w

"I feared for this book; when it was announced, it did not seem possible that geography could be rescued from its customary treatment as successfully as history was in the earlier book—but it is, and a parent with plans for his child's school future will do well to give him this book before he goes far in school. It may change his attitude to geography and, in time, to the cosmos." M. L. Becker

+ Outlook 153:591 D 11 '29 130w

"It is not a text book nor does it aim to take the place of one; an afternoon's ramble over the countryside with a jolly and sympathetic teacher has real value as well as entertainment, but an intimate knowledge of trees and plants and stones can be gained only by applied study. To stimulate the desire for this detailed study which will come later in the geography grade is the essential purpose in his book and that he has achieved this end most delightfully no one can doubt." H. S. Underhill

+ Sat R of Lit 6:492 N 30 '29 280w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 24 '29 300w

HINDUS, MAURICE GERSCHON. Humanity uprooted; [foreword by John Dewey]. 369p il $3.50 (15s) J. Cape & H. Smith

914.7 Russia—Social conditions. Russia—Civilization. Bolshevism—Russia. Russia—Foreign relations 29-22409

"This is a commentary on the present situation—social rather than political—in Soviet Russia, by a Russian who has revisited Russia several times during the past five years. The book is in two parts, the first describing the aims of the Soviet policies and the second dealing with the reactions to these policies of the various elements that make up the Russian population."—Current Hist

---

Reviewed by J. B. Brebner

Am Hist R 35:369 Ja '30 350w

"His material is rich and varied. If the lardings of opinion do not always seem to me as valuable as more accumulation of fact and incident would have been, to another reader the buoyant sense of Mr. Hindus's noncommittal attitude may be just the water wings needed for splashing in the rough and salty waters that give the taste of revolutionary ways and manners." Ernestine Evans

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 O 20 '29 700w

Boston Transcript p3 D 11 '29 80w

"Up to last week, the most satisfactory book, all things considered, I had read on Russia was 'Broken Earth,' written by Maurice Hindus. Now I have a better. It is by the same Maurice Hindus, and it is called 'Humanity Uprooted.' . . It is hard to see how the job could be better done. To begin with, the book has an unshakable foundation of information. To that is added the author's ability to analyze and describe without getting mixed up in his own emotions. And on top of all that there is the joy of reading the chapters of a man who makes writing a fine art." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 46:1379 N 6 '29 500w

"Mr. Hindus has written a rapidly moving and stimulating book in which he is concerned not with particulars but with generalities regarding present conditions in Russia. The most significant chapters are those on the abolition of private property and the probable effects this will have on the people."

+ Current Hist 31:828 Ja '30 300w

Reviewed by A. O. McCormick

N Y Times p3 D 15 '29 1100w

"This is not in the least a partisan book, unless it is partisanship to help the reader to understand. From its glowing pages the Russian people again emerge, uprooted perhaps, but human." E. T. Divine

+ Outlook 153:469 N 20 '29 340w

"In none of the books written about Russia, is it possible to find, in the facts presented, a more thoroughgoing indictment of Bolshevik theory and practice, if one chooses to pick out only matter for negative criticism and to look at it for the conventional anti-Bolshevik point of view. Oddly enough, however, the book will, one fancies, not displease Moscow, for the simple reason that the author does take Russian Communism so seriously. The tyrants, as the anti-Bolshevik sees them, become here the prophets of a new religion; their ruthlessness rises from the category of crime to a certain sublimity." Arthur Ruhl

Sat R of Lit 6:555 D 14 '29 2000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1091 D 26 '29 1450w

"Hardly anything better and more fascinating has been written on the Russian Family, Love, Youth, the Peasant, the Jew, and the Intelligentsia than the several chapters of this book." H. C. Engelbrecht

+ World Tomorrow 13:37 Ja '30 900w

HINE, MURIEL. See Coxon, M.

HINES, WALKER DOWNER. War history of American railroads. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and hist. Economic and social hist. of the World War. Am. ser.) 327p $3.75 Yale univ. press [17s Oxford]

385 United States.Railroad administration. Railroads—United States. Railroads and state—United States. European war, 1914-1918—Transportation 28-28783

A broad survey of government operation and control of railroads in the United States during the World war. The author was director general of railroads during most of the period covered.

---

Booklist 25:193 F '29

Boston Transcript p3 D 22 '28 480w

"The facts of our war-time control of railroads, though known by students, have been buried from view of the general public beneath mountains of misinformation. They are here set down, in simple and orderly fashion, by the man of all men best fitted to state them. . . Without heat and with rare detachment, by the simple statement of incontrovertible facts, Mr. Hines disproves those falsehoods one by one, and leaves the truth clear to anyone who wants to see it. . . Probably nobody will agree with every particular policy of the Railroad Administration; but no thoughtful reader can lay down Mr. Hines's book without realizing that he has read an honest account of a

HINES, W. D.—Continued
thoroughly successful government undertaking." H: R. Mussey
+ Nation 128:84 Ja 16 '29 1300w

Reviewed by A. D. Noyes
N Y Times p16 F 10 '29 1400w

"Since Mr. Hines was assistant director-general or director-general of railroads throughout the entire time of government operation, he is of course a somewhat prejudiced witness. But with respect to the record of physical and financial performance he marshals an array of comparative statistics which places his statements beyond challenge." T. W. Van Metre
+ Pol Sci Q 44:453 S '29 1000w

St Louis 27:159 My '29

"While the series is intended mainly for students and research workers, this volume, like some of the others, has significance for persons concerned with practical statecraft and social policy. Above all, perhaps, it has public value for the light it throws on a phase of American war and postwar developments which is still the subject of much misunderstanding and misrepresentation."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 4 '29 530w

"One leaves this book feeling that the war history of American railroads furnishes a better argument for public than for private ownership." E: Berman
+ World Tomorrow 12:424 O '29 800w

HINGSTON, RICHARD WILLIAM GEORGE. Instinct and intelligence; introd. by Bertrand Russell. 296p il $2.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Arnold]

591.51 Instinct. Animal intelligence. Animals—Habits and behavior. Insects 29-8570

A British naturalist has written these interesting chapters on instinct and reasoning in insects. Long and patient study of insect life in the jungles of Asia and India has rewarded the author with the fascinating material on which the book is based.

Booklist 25:382 Jl '29

"One may go to the ant, some day in the future, to learn how to think just as one may go to Major Hingston's book about the ant (and others) to find food for considerable and enjoyable thought, today." Irving Astrachan
+ Bookm 69:670 Ag '29 620w

"Major Hingston contributes a large body of original data, the fruit of many years' study at home and abroad. His book will have permanent value as a record of careful scientific observation, whatever we may think of his conclusions regarding animal intelligence." H. M. Parshley
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ap 21 '29 580w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 9 '29 350w

Christian Century 46:713 My 29 '29 200w

"A point of unusual interest is that Major Hingston, by his innumerable examples and illustrations, has succeeded in showing the essential difference between instinct and intelligence so clearly that the problem now seems to be definitely settled." Maynard Shipley
+ New Repub 59:52 My 29 '29 850w

"His book is a good statement of the problem for the general reader; many of the experiments he describes are his own, others are quoted from indisputable authorities. He suggests nothing particularly new, but the account of his experiments, made during seventeen years in the tropics, is concise and interesting."
+ New Statesman 32:232 N 24 '28 250w

"One of the most exciting books we have read this year." F: F. Van de Water
+ N Y Evening Post p8m My 25 '29 360w

"As one reads, one is impressed by the profoundly scientific and philosophic spirit which has ordered and arranged these little stories, as inevitable links in a firm chain of reasoning. The book is well written. It is admirably thought out and constructed. It is exceptionally convincing." C: Johnston
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 28 '29 1750w

"Major Hingston describes these marvels tersely and vividly, in a pleasantly staccato style. His drawings seem to us admirable. He is evidently an observer of the greatest patience, accuracy, and insight. His book is a storehouse of the most extraordinary facts, and will no doubt be recognized as one of the standard works on a subject of equal fascination and importance."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p154 F 28 '29 1800w

Wis Lib Bul 25:274 Jl '29

+ World Tomorrow 12:346 Ag '29 120w

"The plan is admirably conceived and executed. The material is purposely limited to insects and spiders, with whose life and behavior the author is well acquainted at first hand and through the published works of others. The subject is clearly delimited, skilfully arranged and presented in a simple and yet interesting manner." Alexander Petrunkevitch
+ Yale R n s 19:187 autumn '29 950w

HINKLE, THOMAS CLARK. Bugle, a dog of the Rockies. 238p $1.75 Morrow

29-4466

"Bugle, a splendid big Irish wolfhound, on a cattle ranch far out at the foot of the Rocky Mountains, is the novel's hero and a huge, cattle-killing, man-killing grizzly bear is its villain. [It is stated] in a prefatory note that the story, like its predecessors, is based on facts; that Bugle and his father and mother, who also appear in the tale, were actual dogs and that the account of Bugle's great fight with the grizzly is based on the story told him by one who witnessed such a battle between the real Bugle and a bear."—N Y Times

"Whatever comparative psychologists may think of Bugle's mental processes, they make a lively tale, and the same holds true of the homespun people in the story." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 17 '29 100w

"The author of 'Tawny and Trueboy' has given us a new dog friend to keep." E. J. Agnew
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Mr 24 '29 450w

"Bugle is a lovable and interesting hero who will be welcomed by dog lovers everywhere. His sagacity and skill make him stand out among his kind, a personality to be reckoned with."
+ Boston Transcript p5 F 23 '29 180w

"The two previous dog stories by this author proved his quality as a first-class writer of tales about dogs, and now, with this third book he shows that his skill and resource and force have not lessened in the least. In some respects this one is the best of the three, for its story is more closely knit, its incident more continuous and therefore more absorbing, and the handling of its plot is more skillful."
+ N Y Times p32 Mr 24 '29 230w

"Though the adventures are at times slightly incredible, Dr. Hinkle's knowledge of dogs and the country of Bugle's adventures make this one of the best of recent dog stories."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 100w

HISTORY of Christianity in the light of modern knowledge; a collective work. 780p il $6.50 Harcourt [25s Blackie]

270 Church history [29-16505]

This symposium, to which a number of authorities in Biblical research have contributed, follows a course clearly indicated in the section headings: The world into which Christ was born; The life of Christ and the early records of it; The early church; From the fourth century to the end of the reformation; After the reformation.

Booklist 26:100 D '29

"This volume is of first-rate importance in its field. . . All round, it is the best survey of Christian history that we have in any single volume in English." W: L. Sullivan

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 S 8 '29 650w

"It is not apparent who planned this work. Somebody must have planned it, but the planning was inferior to the execution. The space devoted to the beginnings is disproportionately large—425 pages down to and including the Apostle Paul. Very important topics are passed over almost casually, such as the growth of the papacy and the development of papal sovereignty. There is an inadequate treatment of the social, cultural, economic and devotional aspects of Christian history. The intellectual and cultural awakening of the thirteenth century gets not even a mention. . . Nevertheless, taken for what it is, a series of monographs by distinguished specialists on some phases of the development of Christianity, rather than a well ordered history of it in its entirety, it is a valuable addition to the literature of the subject." W. E. Garrison

— + Christian Century 46:1187 S 25 '29 500w

Churchman 140:5 Ag 17 '29 150w

"The effect of the work as a whole is that of a conscious petering out. By the time the last two chapters are reached, covering the nineteenth century and the social and Christian ethics of Christianity today, nothing could rescue the book from a tremendous let-down but a climactic assertion of Christianity's messianic mission in the deliverance of humanity from the old social order." Devere Allen

— Current Hist 31:434 D '29 1450w

" 'The History of Christianity,' though it is uneven as all cooperative works must be, gives as clear a statement of what research has accomplished as is now available. There is only a little piety in the book, and there is much admirably objective scholarship. The chapters on the Middle Ages and the Reformation are necessarily sketchy, but the sections devoted to early Christianity are full and satisfying. Burkitt's chapter on the life of Jesus is not only one of the best chapters in the volume but also one of the clearest and least muddled treatments of the subject that can be found." Granville Hicks

+ — Nation 129:469 O 23 '29 320w

"In general, this volume of over seven hundred pages presents an admirable survey of the genesis and development of the Christian movement. Two sorts of people in particular could well be urged to read it. First, the ultra-conservatives might profit by it. . . Second, the ultra-radicals might well read the book and discover that the best scientific work upon Christianity's history is being done by Christians." H. E. Fosdick

+ New Repub 60:106 S 11 '29 620w

"The book can be recommended without reserve to those who, adopting the general ecclesiastical standpoint of its authors, desire a book of reference on the entire subject. It is really well written, very easy to read, a storehouse of facts, and always stimulating."

+ New Statesman 34:134 N 2 '29 100w

"There is not only scholarship but vivacity in the description of the Roman, Greek and Jewish world into which Jesus was born, of the Scriptures as they developed, of the Church as it spread abroad, of the Reformation, and of upheavals within the faith during the eighteenth and later centuries. The writers have succeeded frequently in expressing their erudition in terms of human life." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 18 '29 1900w

Reviewed by Evelyn Underhill

Spec 142:sup585 Ap 13 '29 820w

"Very little of the material is new, but it is presented by competent scholars—some of them specialists of recognized position—and it is arranged so as to make a narrative easily understood and appreciated by persons desirous of perpetuating Christian influence but willing to accept a progressive interpretation of the faith. Despite some telescoping of information and some inevitable omissions, the narrative that is presented here is solidly informing and does reveal the essential history by proper demarcation of periods."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 25 '29 370w

"A fairly useful compendium for the running reader, with bibliographies not quite so useful for those who would read at boundless leisure."

Times [London] Lit Sup p392 My 16 '29 1200w

HOBART, MRS ALICE TISDALE (NOURSE). Pidgin cargo. 315p $2.50 Century 29-19516

Captain Eben Hawley, American trader, struggled to conquer the Yangtse river by steamboat. This novel is the story of his forty years' struggle. It is, also, a realistic presentation of the Chinese as they appeared in the Boxer movement, the Manchurian rebellion, and the present Nationalist agitation. It was during the period of the European war that Hawley's boats were forced to carry "pidgin cargo," which was a secondary cargo, such as opium, thrust upon the boats by the Chinese.

"Despite not too distinguished writing, 'Pidgin Cargo' holds you. The swelling tides of the river and the clandestine outrages of a remote people make so rich a background that you can ignore the details of character. Mrs. Hobart has set down much of the life of China which is not known, not understood, and too frequently falsified by casual observers."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 D 15 '29 250w

"It is an amazing story of pluck and resourcefulness, of a man with the spirit of the true pioneer always reaching after the unattainable, never discouraged, always hearing the call to go further and further to find something 'behind the ranges, lost and waiting' for him. No one who is not familiar with China and her people could have written this vivid word picture of the life, the success and at last the failure of this American pioneer." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 30 '29 600w

"Though there is sufficient controversial material in Mrs. Hobart's treatment of China and the Chinese foreign trade and the Young Nationalists, to inveigle the student of Far Eastern affairs, there is not enough to overshadow for the literary reader an absorbing story set in a background of sinister beauty." W. T.

+ New Repub 61:205 Ja 8 '30 230w

"A novel rich in color and profoundly interesting in its juxtaposition of alien civilizations."

+ N Y Times p24 D 1 '29 600w

"Rare skill is shown in making international trade romantically interesting and in interweaving with the descriptions of Chinese life a gripping story of the struggle of a pioneering ship-captain with the fierce Yangtse river, which finally wrecks his ships and defeats him at last. In a most readable form, this book gives an excellent insight into recent history and leads us to question whether the introduction of Western civilization into the Orient has really been for the benefit of its people." C: Batchelder

+ Sat R of Lit 6:472 N 30 '29 450w

"It is a virile tale, this 'Pidgin Cargo'; not wholly pleasant, but vigorous and colorful without crudity."

+ Springf'd Republican p6e D 15 '29 240w

HOBART, MRS ALICE TISDALE (NOURSE). Within the walls of Nanking. 243p il $2.25 Macmillan [6s J. Cape]

951 Nanking incident, 1927 28-21817

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"The background of events and conditions leading to the climax is sketched in telling fashion. The account does not purport to be history in the strict sense of the term, but the fact that it is given in an informal and somewhat impressionistic manner in no way robs it of value to the student of history." H. F. McNair

+ Am Hist R 34:392 Ja '29 330w

HOBART, A. T.—Continued

"It is, by all odds, the best account that has come out of China of the developments which took place in that unhappy country during the years 1926-27." H. F. McNair

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:214 F '29 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p61 Ap '29

Pratt p29 winter '29

St Louis 27:63 F '29

HOCKING, JOSEPH. Sham, a story of to-day. 272p $2 Revell

29-18414

"An Oxford graduate, at the close of a five-year term in Dartmoor, served for embezzlement, drifts to South Africa and there, in a deserted mining camp, meets a dying clergyman with whom, on the latter's demise, he exchanges identities. Equipped with the other's credentials, in answer to the dead man's appointment as rector of a church in Cornwall, the impostor returns to England. Everyone, from bishop to peasant, accepts this magnetic, eloquent man as the person he pretends to be, and quickly he becomes the community's pillar of light. But while Hugh carries on his deception unsuspected in his parish duties, in the pulpit, and among the simple villagers, his better nature transcends the baser, conscience conquers, he confesses his duplicity, and departs to begin the battle of self-reclamation anew in Australia."—Sat R of Lit

"Earnestly and sincerely written though it appears to be, 'Sham' hardly succeeds in wedding its simple tale of a young ex-convict's impersonation of a vicar in Cornwall with the many ponderous moral riddles involved."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 D 1 '29 100w

"The story is unusual and interesting, holding us by its own force rather than by any of the customary literary devices." R. R. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 30 '29 120w

"In the guise of a novel, 'Sham' preaches an earnest uplift lesson on the power of true Christian faith to redeem the sinner and convert the scoffer. . . There is much liberal discussion of religion in the book, and the successive phases of Hugh's struggle for regeneration are evolved without undue resort to the implausible."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:256 O 12 '29 180w

HOCKING, WILLIAM ERNEST. Types of philosophy. 462p $2.50 (7s 6d) Scribner

140 Philosophy 29-20239

A study in which the history of philosophy and its leading problems are combined thru an analysis of the various types of philosophy. It is a text intended primarily for beginners in philosophical study.

"A welcome and in many ways original presentation of philosophical problems." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 26 '29 280w

"Prof Hocking's criticism of various systems (for instance, neo-realism) is more valuable than his exposition, but he supplies at the end of every chapter a bibliography, which leads the reader to fuller statements of the theories considered."

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 O 11 '29 200w

HODGSON, LEONARD. And was made man; an introduction to the study of the Gospels. 216p $3.50 (9s) Longmans

226 Bible. New Testament. Gospels 28-15521

"The author is professor of Christian apologetics in the General theological seminary, New York. He calls his work an introduction to the study of the Gospels, and in it discusses the more important problems of the Christian sources, particularly from the standpoint of philosophy. Among the themes considered are the relation of the Gospels to Christology, the nature of Christ's authority, his knowledge, his attitude toward the supernatural, his conception of his own redemptive purpose, his ideas regarding rewards and punishments, the outline of a life of Christ based on the testimony offered by the evangelists, and the problems raised by the fourth Gospel."—Christian Century

"A very sensible and helpful volume. . . The position taken by the author is that of neither the radical nor the conservative. Yet he faces some of the most significant questions in the realm of New Testament study, and gives them frank if not final analysis. One is compelled to do a good deal of thinking for himself as he goes along, and this is the best of qualities in a book on early Christianity." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 45:1263 O 18 '28 160w

"The method of procedure is based upon years of experience in teaching both in England and in America. He has discovered the necessity of directing attention to theological and philosophical questions as preliminary to the study of the earliest Christian literature. The result is a thoroughly up-to-date discussion, even though the reader may not assent to all conclusions reached." M. G. Evans

+ Crozer Q 6:245 Ap '29 350w

"Purporting to be an introduction to the study of the gospels, this work actually maintains a doctrinal position as prerequisite to any study of them. It happens that the doctrinal position which it is insisted must be accepted as the starting point from which such study is to be made is thoroughly conservative and orthodox from the Catholic point of view. This is not the most serious fault with it however. Rather, the basic error is the prejudgment entailed, together with the dogmatic result which is inevitable in any except an inductive study."

— J Religion 9:163 Ja '29 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p539 Jl 19 '28 450w

HODGSON, STUART. Portraits and reflections. 192p $2.50 Dutton [5s Nisbet]

920 Biography. England—Biography

Sketches of twenty-four men and one woman, all of them well-known figures and most of them English. Contents: King George V; Mr Lloyd George; Monsieur Aristide Briand; Mr Winston Churchill; Lord Birkenhead; Mr Henry Ford; Mr Robert Lynd; Señor Capablanca; Sir Austen Chamberlain; Mr Low; Mr Alfred Emanuel Smith; Mr Garvin; Canon Streeter; Signor Mussolini; Mr Leon M. Lion; Sir William Joynson Hicks; Mr J. H. Thomas; Lady Astor; Sir John Simon; Mr J. M. Keynes; Mr Arthur Henderson; Mr A. G. Gardiner; Lord Melchett; Dr T. R. Glover; Mr H. M. Tomlinson.

Boston Transcript p2 O 2 '29 170w

"While these portraits are not profound, they have wit, charm, and as a rule good sense. Most of the sitters have been sketched very often before, but one notices with gratitude the appearance, new in a book of this kind, of Mr. Low, Señor Capablanca, Mr. Leon M. Lion, and Canon Streeter."

+ — New Statesman 33:192 My 18 '29 210w

"Mr. Hodgson has his preferences and prejudices, but, though he is frequently critical, he is never spiteful; an added spice of malice might have heightened the enjoyment of the reader."

Sat R 147:686 My 18 '29 120w

"Mr. Stuart Hodgson has collected here some light journalistic character-sketches. He has a vivacious manner and a gift of seizing upon an obvious trait and making it appear like a critical discovery. He writes without malice, but his likes and his dislikes are clear."

Times [London] Lit Sup p405 My 16 '29 100w

HOFFMANN, RICHARD HORACE. Struggle for health. 341p il $3.50 Liveright

610.9 Medicine—History 29-9804

The book is in effect a history of medicine, with particular light on the scientists whose researches have added to our knowledge of the human body and its ills, and whose discoveries aid daily in the fight against disease.

"Despite a dull beginning, much of the book is entertaining, especially when the author drifts into anecdote. In the apparent attempt to include every detail, however, much of the material becomes a mere catalog of facts, an array which gets bewildering rather than fascinating, as the subject warrants." J. A. Tobey

+ — Am J Pub Health 19:1067 S '29 450w

"It is difficult to convey without long quotation how thoroughly each step is described and each hero placed in his setting. There are a vividness and a nearness that are very entertaining and satisfying." L: Johnson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 12 '29 1000w

"The volume is in one aspect of it a summary of facts gathered from works on medicine, surgery, physiology, chemistry and history; yet the author has so co-ordinated his material and put it into such attractive form as to make his survey an original treatment of the whole subject." E. N.

Boston Transcript p2 Je 19 '29 630w

Reviewed by Van Buren Thorne

N Y Times p4 My 5 '29 800w

Outlook 152:350 Je 26 '29 130w

St Louis 27:197 Je '29

"The book is well done, vivacious in style and sound in doctrine and statement." Logan Clendening, M. D.

+ — Survey 62:614 S 15 '29 760w

"A comprehensive, interesting, well-written story of why germs leave home."

+ World Tomorrow 12:378 S '29 40w

HOGARTH, DAVID GEORGE. Life of Charles M. Doughty. 216p il $5 Doubleday, Doran [18s Oxford]

B or 92 Doughty, Charles Montagu 29-5570

"No one else could have written the memoir with such complete knowledge whether of Doughty or of Arabia and the Arabs, and with such sympathetic understanding of the strange ways of poetical genius."—Spec

Booklist 25:319 My '29

Bookm 69:vi Jl '29 250w

"No more appropriate biographer of Charles Montagu Doughty could possibly have been selected than the late Dr. Hogarth. His great advantage comes from the authority with which he is able to speak concerning the great and celebrated achievement of Doughty's life: his nearly two years of wandering in the interior of Arabia Deserta. In Dr. Hogarth's 'Penetration of Arabia' he had long ago appraised admirably that wonderful adventure and no less admirably the great travel-book which was the fruit of it." S: C. Chew

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 D 9 '28 1500w

"The story of Doughty's proud and difficult career is told here with as much detail as was available to an old friend and colleague in Arabian studies. The material is by no means plentiful; but the portrait is convincing."

+ Nation 128:352 Mr 20 '29 70w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 44:211 N 10 '28 480w

"The two Hogarths, the elder who wrote this book, and the son who revised and completed it after his father's death, have not tried to do too much: their book might correctly have been called a memoir, rather than a life. They have put down in dignified and readable English all there is to know; of that inner world in which the soul of Charles Doughty dwelt they have not attempted to write, for, like the Arabia which he discovered alone, it was a private place." Neilson Abeel

+ New Repub 60:380 N 20 '29 1050w

"Dr. Hogarth's book is an admirably clear survey, and with its humour, its broad, easy, sometimes careless, style, is the adequate memorial of a man who might have echoed the well-known maxim of a certain seventeenth-century bishop, 'Heterodoxy is my doxy.'"

+ New Statesman 32:386 D 29 '28 910w

Reviewed by Vincent McHugh

N Y Evening Post p8m F 9 '29 380w

"The Hogarth biography is unlikely to be any man's idea of what a biography should be. It is carefully documented, exact so far as we know, and austere. Its subject, we know, was not what is called a vivid personality. Yet some day there will be a better, in the sense of a most interesting, biography. This work smacks too much of having been produced under the eyes of the family. Yet for lack of any other, we are grateful for this one." H: J. Forman

+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 3 '29 1360w

St Louis 27:314 N '29

"Nobody but Dr. Hogarth, our leading scholar of Arabic, could have constructed a record so comprehensive in detail, so finely alert, and so penetrating in its justice. . . . Everything about Doughty was uncommon as Dr. Hogarth's authoritative and masterly life shows. The book is a monument to its maker as well as to its subject and to it each fresh generation of readers must turn in curiosity." E: Garnett

Sat R of Lit 5:1143 Je 29 '29 2050w

Spec 141:892 D 8 '28 600w

"Dr. Hogarth had a task, when he undertook this biography, which needed measures of knowledge, sagacity and sympathy beyond those usually vouchsafed to one who attempts to explain the nature of another man and how things befell him. And we may be thankful it was to Dr. Hogarth that the task of this interpretation was given. . . . This biography, compared with some we have seen of late, is brief and simple, for its writer assumed that all we should want from him would be the relevant facts arranged in significant order; and here they are."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p801 N 1 '28 1450w

HOGGSON, NOBLE FOSTER. Epochs in American banking. 255p il $5 Day

332 Banks and banking—United States 29-17237

Not a complete history of American banking but a presentation one by one of significant stages in the development of our banking system—the use of wampum and tobacco as forms of currency, the establishment of the first American mint and the first real American bank, the chartering of a national bank, the development of the savings bank, the rise of American trust companies, and the establishment of the Federal reserve system.

"Mr. Hoggson, the head of a famous architectural design and building construction company, which has designed and built some of the most important bank buildings in the United States, has in this volume written an interesting account of the development of American banking."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 10 '29 180w

"Mr. Hoggson has an excellent faculty for humanizing financial history. . . Not the least of the book's features is that it brings out clearly the interweaving of finance and other phases of life."

+ N Y Times p18 O 13 '29 420w

St Louis 27:330 D '29

"The book is not intended for specialists, and technical details are avoided, but a good deal of interesting information is offered. The twenty-seven illustrations, a number of them reproductions of contemporary prints, are a commendable feature."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:38 Ag 10 '29 150w

HOHMAN, ELMO PAUL. American whaleman; a study of life and labor in the whaling industry. 355p il $5 (25s) Longmans

639.2 Whaling 28-29321

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928,

HOHMAN, E. P.—Continued

"As a study of the economics of whaling, within the period chosen, it represents much original research and sets forth the facts more completely and satisfactorily than any other account yet published." M. W. Jernegan

+ Am Hist R 35:174 O '29 350w

Booklist 25:197 F '29

"On every score the volume merits highest praise. It forms an admirable companion to Professor S. E. Morison's well-known and extremely valuable Maritime History of Massachusetts."

+ Hist Outlook 20:193 Ap '29 400w

"Although written by a professor of economics in Northwestern University, it is no academic thesis but a readable account enlivened by picturesque incident and detail."

+ Nation 128:771 Je 26 '29 50w

New Statesman 32:614 F 16 '29 220w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 21 '29 450w

Wis Lib Bul 25:70 F '29

HOLDEN, RAYMOND PECKHAM. Abraham Lincoln; the politician and the man. 309p il $3.50 Minton

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 29-20276

A psychoanalytical biography which presents Lincoln in a not very heroic light. He is painted as a timid, uncertain man, selfish in his interests, who won popular favor not because of his abilities as a leader and politician, but because he was a great orator. It was the desperate need of leadership during the war years, however, that brought out Lincoln's finest traits, and gave him his eminence.

"At last, we have the 'truth' about the awkward, slow-witted, scheming, timid politician, always putting party above convictions and himself above everything else, whom the world reveres as Lincoln but to whom his psychoanalytical biographer, with easy familiarity, refers as Abraham. . . Mr. Holden has missed a great opportunity. For there was a Lincoln who was a small-town politician, with ideals and practices to correspond. Somehow he was transformed into a statesman. The delineation of that change would be profoundly interesting, but it would give us no such grotesque figure as that which wobbles its way through Mr. Holden's pages." R. J. Davis

— Nation 129:691 D 4 '29 460w

"This story is interestingly told, with great animation and with a style admirable in most respects. Its chief fault is a slavery to certain pet words, which come to grate on the reader. The first part of the book, describing the cunning Sangamon politician, is vivid and effective. Mr. Holden begins to lose his effectiveness, however, when he takes Lincoln to Washington. In painting a commonplace man in a job too big for him, he splashes the colors on until he has unintentionally painted not such a man, but a moron. His best work is with Lincoln's gropings in 1862. This part of the book is excellent, and the President's hopeless bewilderment and irresolution are faithfully and powerfully described. But when Mr. Holden comes to portray the great change in Lincoln the task is too much for him." C: W. Thompson

+ — N Y Times p18 N 17 '29 700w

"His most astonishing blunder is his description of William H. Seward as Lincoln's former law partner. No less faulty is Mr. Holden's treatment of the second theme of his book, Lincoln's private life and character. In his account of the Ann Rutledge episode he brings Mary Owens to New Salem during Ann's lifetime, and shows Lincoln wavering between the two girls. As a matter of fact, Lincoln first met Mary Owens a year after Ann's death—as Mr. Holden could have learned from at least seven of the books he cites in his bibliography. In the hands of one who thoroughly knows his subject the 'new' biography, with its freedom from convention and its realistic approach, might result in a fresh interpretation of Lincoln's life. Mr. Holden lacks the fundamental qualification."

— N Y World p10m D 15 '29 550w

"Possibly undue space and emphasis are given to Lincoln's early mistakes, inconsistencies, and political chicanery, with the result that the shift from the patronizing attitude to the note of paean is somewhat abrupt. Mr. Holden's sentences are often ill-formed and inept, and he is given to the use of vulgarisms and colloquialisms." Milton Ellis

— + Portland Evening News p5 O 29 '29 500w

HOLDING, MRS ELISABETH (SANXAY). Miasma. 230p $2 Dutton

29-6176

Alexander Dennison considers himself lucky to be asked by Doctor Leatherby to become his assistant. The older man's views create some uneasiness in Dennison's mind, but hardly prepare him for the chapter of mysteries—drugs, deaths, disappearances—that opens with his new duties.

Bookm 69:xxvi My '29 40w

"Graceful writing and skilful characterization add much to the charm of this quietly baffling tale of love and medicine." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 24 '29 90w

Boston Transcript p2 My 8 '29 300w

"Written by a competent novelist it is more convincing than the usual thriller."

+ Outlook 151:554 Ap 3 '29 20w

"A rather thin and conventional affair, apparently written in a hurry. . . None of it is either very convincing or very exciting."

— Sat R of Lit 5:961 Ap 27 '29 150w

HOLDSWORTH, WILLIAM SEARLE. Charles Dickens as a legal historian. (Storrs lectures delivered before the Law school of Yale univ.) 157p $2 Yale univ. press [9s Oxford]

B or 92 Dickens, Charles 28-23327

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 Mr '29

"The volume proves, with abundant learning, that no novelist can ever have approached Dickens in knowledge of the Courts, their procedure, and their surroundings."

New Statesman 32:542 F 2 '29 200w

N Y Times p10 Ja 20 '29 300w

St Louis 27:55 F '29

Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 3 '29 1000w

HOLLAND, CLIVE. Things seen in the Channel Islands; a description of these charming islands, their delightful coves & scenery, their historic castles, their vicissitudes in war & peace, & the quaint & ancient customs of their people. (Things seen ser.) 156p il $1.50 Dutton [3s 6d Seeley]

914.234 Channel Islands—Description and travel 29-26569

An account, partly historical, partly descriptive, of the little known islands of Guernsey, Alderney, Jersey and Sark, known as the Channel Islands. These few rocky islands off the coast of France are all that remain to Great Britain of her once vast domain in France.

Booklist 25:389 Jl '29

"Even today, save by the English, the loveliness of these islands' scenery and climate is relatively little known to tourists. That Mr. Holland is the cicerone for tourists over the islands is sufficient authority for their success to those of us who have already followed him through Japan."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Je 29 '29 200w

"Charming book."

+ Christian Century 46:1017 Ag 14 '29 40w

"Half-way between guide book and travel book, without the precise tabulation of the former or the gambols of the latter."
New Statesman 32:supxii Mr 16 '29 40w
Pratt p29 autumn '29
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '29 30w

"An excellent account, in short compass, of these ancient possessions of the Crown, giving a good deal but not too much, of a history that is little known to the average reader."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p263 Mr 28 '29 80w

HOLLAND, MAURICE, and PRINGLE, HENRY FOWLES. Industrial explorers. 347p il $3 (12s 6d) Harper

926 Scientists. Research, Industrial. Inventors. United States—Biography. Industrial arts—Biography 28-29154

For the college man choosing a career and for the interest and information of the general reader here are stories of nineteen leaders in industrial research and their discoveries. The list includes the originator of the Sperry light, the discoverer of bakelite, the man who invented pyrex, and research workers in electricity, paper, copper, and aviation. Here is also the recipe for the perfect cup of coffee, scientifically discovered, at a cost of $30,000.

Booklist 25:245 Mr '29

"To dip into this book is to find on every page (or very nearly) an explanation of some puzzling and too-much-taken-for-granted novelty. So interesting are these discoveries that one reader, at least, has had regrets that the subject of the book was not 'explorations' rather than 'explorers.'" J. A. Flexner
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 24 '29 620w

"Both students of science and students of human nature will be grateful for these happy and succinct biographies of these outstanding men who have given new light and life to the world." R. R. M.
+ Boston Transcript p8 Ja 26 '29 380w
Cleveland Open Shelf p41 Mr '29

"Written in a most readable style, and interwoven with a word picture of the individual is a dramatization of his principal contributions in science. Throughout there is the personal touch, reference to idiosyncrasies, together with little incidents which add to entertainment as well as to information. The layman who reads this book will be thrilled by the stories of accomplishments he finds written in non-technical language. The scientist will draw from it material with which to illustrate many of his arguments. Chemists will want the volume because of the story it tells of men whom they have long known and admired. It is a good piece of work and deserves success."
+ Ind & Eng Chem 21:195 F '29 250w
N Y Times p26 D 2 '28 550w
Pratt p34 summer '29

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:28 Mr '29 90w
St Louis 27:100 Mr '29
Sat R of Lit 5:693 F 16 '29 160w

"One cannot read the intimate word portraits of these men without getting a new slant on the romance of industry and how man's experience in it is 'accelerated.'" G. A. Bowers
Survey 61:687 F 15 '29 400w
Wis Lib Bul 25:30 Ja '29

HOLLAND, RAYMOND PRUNTY. My gun dogs. 182p il $3.50 Houghton

636.7 Dogs—Legends and stories. Hunting 29-19605

True stories of dogs that the author has owned and hunted with, from the time he was a boy of eight and went hunting with a pug-dog.

Boston Transcript p4 O 26 '29 80w

"Never a lover of dogs, any kind of dogs, nor any hunter for whom game, a gun and a good dog afford a supreme pleasure but whose heart will warm to this book. For it is a book about dogs not as hunting machinery but as man's devoted companions, and if you love them there is no other kind of book that will win such instant and warm response."
+ N Y Times p34 O 20 '29 220w

HOLLAND, RUPERT SARGENT. Pirate of the Gulf. 270p il $2 (7s) Lippincott 29-25347

A story for boys about New Orleans and the surrounding country in the time of the War of 1812. Joseph Lyman, just out of Harvard, goes to New Orleans on business and becomes involved with piracy, Jean Lafitte and fair ladies. After many adventures, including the battle of New Orleans, the northerner goes home to Boston accompanied by a southern wife.

Nation 129:601 N 20 '29 70w
Reviewed by R. J. Davis
Sat R of Lit 6:402 N 16 '29 100w

HOLLANDER, BERNARD. Methods and uses of hypnosis and self-hypnosis; a treatise on the powers of the subconscious mind. 191p $2.50 Macmillan [6s Allen & U.]

134 Hypnotism 29-3923

Dr Hollander has been using hypnosis in the treatment of various types of patients for more than thirty years. The book is a discussion of the subject as a whole with frequent citations from other authorities, and a description of Dr. Hollander's own methods of hypnotic treatment as applied to many different diseases.

"Dr. Hollander quotes many instances of success attending his methods and his book is an interesting survey of the medical, moral, and philosophical implications of hypnosis."
+ Spec 141:219 Ag 18 '28 180w

"Dr. Hollander's short and well-written book is a useful, if sometimes rather too summary, account of hypnotism as understood to-day. The description of the methods of hypnosis is good and clear, and the explanation of what takes place cautious and reasonable."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p838 N 8 '28 280w

HOLLEY, CHARLES ELMER. Modern principles and the elementary teacher's technique. (Century educ. ser.) 431p $2 Century

371 Teaching. Education of children 28-25534

A handbook for the elementary teacher of city or county school, which discusses principles and methods of teaching and in Part II makes practical application of these principles to the various subjects of the curriculum.

"The book is up-to-date and blends in the best of the most advanced ideas with the best of the older and more conservative theories."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 12 '29 130w

"The discussions presented in the various chapters consist primarily of rather dogmatic and unsubstantiated statements with virtually no references to the literature in the field of method. Possibly the scope of the topics dealt with is partly responsible for this type of treatment. The chapters on the school subjects are especially sketchy. The selection of the supplementary references listed at the ends of the chapters is open to question." C. V. Good
— El School J 29:714 My '29 300w

HOLLINGWORTH, LETA A. (STETTER) (MRS HARRY LEVI HOLLINGWORTH). Psychology of the adolescent. 227p $2.50 Appleton

136.7 Adolescence 28-25749

A presentation of the problems of youth seeking to find itself during the years of adolescence, and of the ways in which the enlightened parent may make those problems easier.

HOLLINGWORTH, L. A.—Continued

Booklist 25:192 F '29

Reviewed by Jean Temple

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 F 17 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p5 D 1 '28 350w

"On the whole, while containing some valuable and practical material, it seems to us that Dr. Hollingworth's book cannot be regarded as an outstanding contribution to our knowledge of the psychology of the adolescent." G: K. Pratt

— N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 5 '29 530w

Pratt p7 autumn '29

"It is a pity that an able writer has succeeded only in contributing an additional volume and nothing more, which, though clear and sensible, advances the subject hardly at all."

— Sat R of Lit 5:610 Ja 19 '29 100w

Reviewed by P. J. Trentzsch, M.D.

— Survey 61:689 F 15 '29 150w

Wis Lib Bul 25:97 Mr '29

HOLLIS, CHRISTOPHER. Dr Johnson. 266p il $3 Holt [12s 6d Gollancz]

B or 92 Johnson, Samuel 29-8021

Mr Hollis offers justification for a new book on Dr Johnson in the fact that it attempts an exposition of Johnson's philosophy from a fresh point of view, and an explanation of his influence and hold on so varied a group of friends.

---

Booklist 25:357 Je '29

"This beautiful book with its remarkably fine illustrations will help greatly in the unfoldment of the 'great charm of literature' and if a brief ordered life should be read first, this volume can be well and profitably read as a prelude to the wonderful and charming work of Boswell." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 13 '29 1600w

+ Cath World 130:121 O '29 480w

"Mr. Hollis has approached his subject with a freshness of outlook and style which, owing a little, but not too much, to Mr. Chesterton, make his book a stimulating as well as a readable one. . . The book has one major fault—its neglect of Johnson's scholarship." S. C. R.

+ — Nation and Ath 44:212 N 10 '28 760w

"Mr. Christopher Hollis runs considerable risk of being somewhat less than edifying, not only in laying his principal stress on the great dogmatist's extremest illiberalities, but in sprinkling the discussion with a great many illiberalities of his own. . . The classic list of Johnson's antipathies Mr. Hollis supplements by objects of detestation that Johnson overlooked or mistakenly tolerated or died too early to know and denounce. On nearly every page Mr. Hollis disqualifies himself as a critic in the modern sense, if not in the sense of the Johnsonian diatribes. And yet the book has an energy and honesty that are often missing in performances more reasonable and more colorless." O. H. D.

— + New Repub 59:214 Jl 10 '29 360w

"The narrative has charm and wit. There is provocative criticism dealing with many phases and problems that have become associated with Johnson. The neat dovetailing of anecdotes is a source of great pleasure." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 14 '29 1150w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv Mr '29 130w

"A very readable biography of the most famous and most picturesque literary figure of Eighteenth Century England." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 151:596 Ap 10 '29 70w

Pratt p36 summer '29

St Louis 27:206 Je '29

Reviewed by E: Shanks

Sat R 146:361 S 22 '28 1300w

"It is not a new biography, and it presents no facts not already easily accessible. It does something perhaps more original; that is, it gives us solid props of reason to uphold our respect for Dr. Johnson." F: A. Pottle

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1112 Je 15 '29 400w

"Mr. Hollis has nothing new to tell us of Johnson's life, and we must look for the merits of his book in his own interpretations and in the records of his own opinions. These he has given us in plenty. . . For all the villainies of his style, Mr. Hollis's book makes lively reading."

+ Spec 141::sup449 O 6 '28 450w

"Mr. Hollis has written a book so readable and interesting that we are sorry he should have written it in a hurry. His quotations are not always strictly relevant, and are often inaccurate. There is some slipshod writing, and a good deal of mere 'cleverality.' These are perhaps defects of youth and haste. A graver fault is the neglect of an important part of the subject. Whatever Johnson was not, he was assuredly a great scholar and a great critic. Mr. Hollis has not cared to acquaint himself with either aspect of his hero's genius."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p663 S 20 '28 850w

Wis Lib Bul 25:194 Je '29

HOLMES, GORDON, pseud. See Tracy, L:

HOLMES, HARRY NICHOLLS. Laboratory manual of colloid chemistry. 2d ed enl 228p il $3 Wiley

541.345 Colloids 28-2256

"Rewriting and enlargement of a work first published in 1922. Has new material on sedimentation, electrodialysis and ultrafiltration, surface tension, gels, viscosity and plasticity, soils, adsorption, froths and films, and proteins and aerosols. Considerable theory is interspersed between the experiments. Author is Professor of Chemistry in Oberlin College."—N Y New Tech Bks

---

"This is an excellent laboratory manual, the most complete and thorough of its kind. Every teacher and student of colloid chemistry will find the volume indispensable." H. B. Weiser

+ Chem & Met Eng 35:430 Jl '28 260w

"The second edition of this book is a great improvement over the first. It has been enlarged considerably and the newer experimental methods have been thoroughly described." W. I. Kelley

+ Ind & Eng Chem 20:556 My '28 150w

"The experiments have been chosen with great judgment, many of them having been collected from quite recent literature." E. H.

+ Nature 122:269 Ag 25 '28 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:16 Ap '28

HOLMES, JOHN HAYNES. Palestine to-day and to-morrow; a gentile's survey of Zionism. 271p $2.50 Macmillan

296 Palestine—Description and travel. Palestine—Race question. Zionism 29-24352

John Haynes Holmes went to Palestine in February 1929, stayed three weeks and brings back this report of the situation there. The book begins with an account of his journeyings, included here as background for his study of the Zionist movement in which he is an ardent believer.

---

"For the Gentile and the non-Zionist Jew this book is an admirable presentation of the work in Palestine. While not hiding his devotion to Zionism, his desire for the success of the Jewish effort, Dr. Holmes analyzes the entire matter from both the Arab and English viewpoints as well. As an American Gentile he had the great advantage of frank discussion with all elements involved. The meat of the book is in Chapter III ('Problems') and Chapter IV ('Achievements'). The former, nearly 100 pages long, is perhaps the best exposition now available in English of the all but insuperable difficulties in the Zionist path." H: Hurwitz

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 24 '29 1400w

"It is a careful study of conditions as they are. In a few particulars he is too favorable to the Jewish cause, but in most cases he has presented the problems and difficulties of Zionism with such frankness as will prove a disappointment to radical Zionists. For his courage, his fairness and his painstaking thoroughness of investigation under trying conditions, he has earned the gratitude of every student of affairs in the holy land." H. L. Willett

+ Christian Century 46:1511 D 4 '29 300w

"As a full and clear statement of basic problems, it is of value to any one not already familiar with the subject. Dr. Holmes's forte is not descriptive writing, so that his chapter called 'Journeyings' lacks the vividness which is the main pursuit of Louis Golding in 'Those Ancient Lands'; he has not the intimacy with Jewish life and history which underlies some of the penetrating detail in Horace Kallen's 'Frontiers of Hope'; but as a profound humanist and keen observer Dr. Holmes in his brief but crowded visit to Palestine saw enough at first hand to clarify his preconceptions and arrive at an understanding of the many interwoven factors in the situation. And this understanding he has communicated lucidly." W: Schack

+ — N Y Evening Post p13m N 16 '29 600w

"Mr. Holmes visited Palestine last Winter and the writing of his book was well under way when the uprisings and massacres of last August took place. But he is entirely justified in the position he takes, that that appalling upheaval does not in the least detract from the value of his book, but rather gives it increased importance, sharpens its pertinence and appeal. For it is chiefly concerned with underlying forces that are constantly at work in Palestine, with the basic conditions whose influences must be understood and appreciated before the situation can be clarified and its complicated problems solved." F. F. Kelly

+ N Y Times p13 N 24 '29 1200w

R of Rs 80:28 D '29 400w

"The fact that this book is frankly biased and propagandist should not blind the prospective reader to its real value as an interpretation of the present situation in Palestine. . . Any one who wishes to understand Zionism had better read this book. Through it he will get the essential factors in the situation, and, remembering that he is reading the words of an enthusiastic Zionist, he need not be misled in their interpretation." H. E. Fosdick

+ — World Tomorrow 12:520 D '29 800w

HOLSTIUS, EDWARD. Gold dust. 311p $2 Duffield [7s 6d Bles]

[28-18578]

The story, told by George Trafford, centers about George Danecourt, an attractive but unscrupulous man whom women loved. Jean Goring left her husband, David, for Danecourt, and died bearing his child. Anne, Trafford's bride of a few months, who had fallen in love with Danecourt prior to her marriage, goes to him again, with new love and pity, when she hears that a former mistress has blinded and disfigured him with vitriol.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 S 22 '29 100w

"The trouble with this first novel is that it lets us down. Starting to be a pleasant tale of clubs in London and week-ends in the country, of gaiety and romantic adventure, it quite unforgivably goes tragic. The last two chapters completely spoil our pleasure. How in the name of all good sense did those last chapters get written? Can it have been that the author was following the pattern of life rather than the pattern of art?"

— + Sat R of Lit 5:1057 My 25 '29 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p521 Jl 12 '28 120w

HOLT, HENRY. Mayfair murder. 307p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Harrap]

29-8262

Tony Parke, London newspaperman, lets himself in to Seward's apartment and finds his friend staring at the body of a man on the floor, the handle of a dagger sticking up between his shoulders. Neither Tony nor Seward have ever seen the man before. How did he get into the locked apartment? Who followed and killed him, and why?

---

"A well constructed murder mystery that holds interest throughout."

+ Bookm 69:xxv My '29 30w

"Complete with horrific climax and a chaser of predestined love, and worth tackling." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p38 Ap 14 '29 100w

"Mr. Holt knows how to tell his story in the best newspaper manner, adding to it the vividness created by certain tricks of the stage. Not the least of Mr. Holt's charms as a story teller is that he enjoys the story himself and tells it in a rather good version of the king's English. Beside the ordinary run of mystery stories, 'The Mayfair Murder' is decidedly above par."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 8 '29 250w

"This is said to be Mr. Holt's first detective novel. If he continues as he has begun, some of the older mystery writers will have to look to their laurels."

+ N Y Times p20 My 5 '29 180w

"Mr. Holt provides a startling finish."

Times [London] Lit Sup p422 My 23 '29 170w

HOLTZCLAW, HENRY FULLER. Association management; organization and operation of civic and commercial bodies. 105p $2.50 Ronald

381 Boards of trade. Commercial associations 29-1576

" 'Prepared to meet the needs of officers and members of chambers of commerce and similar organizations, and for use as a textbook in college courses for the training of association secretaries.' Finance, membership, meetings and activities are among the topics discussed."—Am Econ R

---

Am Econ R 19:296 Je '29 40w

Booklist 25:348 Je '29

St Louis 27:282 O '29

HOLWAY, MRS HOPE (KERR). Story of water supply. (City and country ser.) 134p il $1.25 Harper

628.1 Water supply 29-14791

Mrs Holway tells for boys and girls the story of water supply from raindrop to city filtration plant.

---

Booklist 26:75 N '29

"So logical, so clear, and so well written that the technical reader is likely to get pretty well into the book before it dawns on him that here is probably the best summary of present-day knowledge of the subject that has been put together. The non-technical readers can never know how good it is. They will be pleased by the illustrations, the large type and easy style, and very few of them will realize they have been fed something that is good for them." W. D. Collins

+ Ind & Eng Chem 21:1150 N '29 230w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:57 O '29

"Anecdotes, illustrative examples, short accounts of practical achievements giving facts and figures about them serve to emphasize and give color to important points. Mr. Hader's illustrations, from pen-and-ink drawings, with a frontispiece in color, make interesting embellishments of the text."

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 11 '29 320w

HOLWAY, HOPE—Continued

"The jolly, informative style of the book is so simple and direct that one rushes along, in print that is also easy to read, to the final consideration of modern filtration plants without finding any uninteresting spot to stop."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:575 D 14 '29 330w

Wis Lib Bul 25:278 Jl '29

HOPE, EDWARD, pseud. See Coffey, E: H.

HOPE-NICHOLSON, HEDLEY, comp. Mindes delight; or, Variety of memorable matters worthy of observation; with a proem by R. B. Cunninghame Graham. 276p il $4 Hale [10s 6d Cayme press]

808.8 Literature—Collections. English literature—Collections

This fanciful anthology draws its quotations from unusual French and English sources of the fifteenth to the nineteenth century and from medieval Latin—such sources as the Oxford manuscripts, Hearne's Collections, Fox's Book of martyrs, Wood's Athenae Oxonienses and, in our own day, Shane Leslie, Max Beerbohm, Hugh Walpole and Norman Douglas.

---

"It is the table-book of a great reader with a sure eye for the vivid and curious in English, French, and mediæval Latin; it has a mannered 'Proem' by Mr. Cunninghame Graham; but simply as an amply printed small-quarto with dozens of engravings and ornaments it took our fancy instantly." E. B.

+ Nation and Ath 44:469 D 29 '28 70w

"It would be a harsh man who could be anything but delighted at the admirable and unusual fare offered to him. . . Mr. Hope-Nicholson is no prig nor precisian, and he wears his fancies with an occasional impertinence, it is true, but quite without arrogance."

+ New Statesman 32:536 F 2 '29 750w

Sat R 146:772 D 8 '28 750w

" 'A quaint conceit' probably best describes Mr. Hedley Hope-Nicholson's curious collection of oddities. They may delight some minds, but to us they seem to appeal to the eye rather than to the mind, for they have been charmingly got up and illustrated with various attractive reproductions, while their matter is sometimes a little pointless. The only thing that they all have in common would appear to be that they are appreciated by Mr. Hedley Hope-Nicholson. There is a rather precious introduction by Mr. R. B. Cunninghame Graham, written in pseudo-mediaeval style."

— Spec 142:173 F 2 '29 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p934 N 29 '28 450w

HOPKINS, GERARD. Seeing's believing. 209p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Gollancz]

29-14375

After years of patient plodding Sir Anthony is to be appointed governor of the Scilly Islands. He has just heard of it when he learns of his daughter Ann's affair with Major Tarleton. The major is a married man. If the affair is continued it may ruin Sir Anthony's prospects. Yet for the first time in his life Ann is real to him; her love more important than his career. A latent impulse of romance stirs in him, and for forty-eight hours—the period of the story—father and daughter reach a new accord.

---

"Of story there is actually very little, but there is unflagging life and interest in the spiritual sowing and burgeoning that the author describes. He does occasionally run into the devious ways of preciosity, but for the most part 'Seeing's Believing' is simple and direct and very moving." Juana Allraum

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 28 '29 350w

"His characters, artfully drawn at times, are entirely too dependent on an undercurrent of artificial stimulation which deprives them of any real life. They are marionettes, dancing on the strings of his pleasure rather than from personal volition."

— + Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '29 320w

Reviewed by Francis Birrell

Nation and Ath 44:19 O 6 '28 120w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bibesco

+ New Statesman 32:52 O 20 '28 380w

"A wise and tender book, competent, thought-provoking and a warning to those who are inclined to carry respectability too far." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 2 '29 630w

"The originality of Mr. Hopkins's style is admirably suited to his theme; it is sophisticated without being trifling."

+ N Y Times p9 My 26 '29 550w

"Readers can find this book both interesting and worth while by skipping the talk, the minutiae and much of the psychology; while readers who perhaps revel in those things, and don't mind the snobbery and the pattern, ought to find this one of the most satisfying bits of casual fiction of the current season."

+ — N Y World p11m F 17 '29 280w

"In general, the matter of the book is unequal to its manner, except in the relationship between father and daughter: that is very sensitively described." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 146:440 O 6 '28 500w

"Suave irony, deft characterization, and a masterly power of artistic omission combine to make 'Seeing's Believing' a closely-wrought and closely written example of social comedy at its best." J: Carter

+ Sat R of Lit 5:660 F 9 '29 600w

"Whether or not the reader finds the characters to his liking, the story, once it gets under way, holds the interest, and appears to draw a plausible picture of contemporary English life."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '29 130w

"Whether we do or do not accept all the sequence of Seeing's Believing, it works out an original idea and is sensitively and carefully written."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p778 O 25 '28 500w

HOPPER, JAMES MARIE. Medals of honor. 281p il $3 Day

940.48 European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives. United States—Army—Medals, badges, decorations, etc. 29-24024

Ninety men were awarded that rarest of war decorations, the Congressional medal of honor, and twenty-eight of these died in winning it. Of the fifty probably still alive, Mr Hopper selected twelve at random, set out in search of them,—a search which took him over a large part of the United States, and induced them to tell him their stories and the particular exploit for which they were cited.

---

"The accounts are part narrative, part interview and part the impressions of the writer. The results of this method are excellent. Each of the nine heroes emerges as a distinct personality—honestly presented, with no tinfoil wrappings and no glossing of uncouth attributes."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 24 '29 170w

"The author thought it would be interesting to ferret out ten or eleven of these men and obtain, if he could, the true facts of their extraordinary deeds. He has done just that and more. He has caught the real spirit of each individual hero and he introduces each character so realistically that when this volume is read, it no longer becomes a volume. It almost breathes, thinks and talks." J. R. T.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 16 '29 550w

"Mr. Hopper asked searching questions that led to honest revelation of heart and mind and he has written very interesting narratives of his interviews."

+ N Y Times p28 N 3 '29 140w

R of Rs 81:16 Ja '30 170w

HORAN, MRS KENNETH, comp. Parnassus en route; an anthology of poems about places, not people, on the European continent. 264p $2.50 Macmillan

821.08 English poetry—Collections. Poetry of places. Europe—Description and travel—Poetry 29-17481

Based upon the idea that "poets are the best travelling companions," altho the works of too many of them are a nuisance as luggage, Mr Horan has compiled this anthology of poets for travellers. The book contains representative poems about famous places and people in foreign lands, by many good poets, old and modern. Among those included are Scott, Wordsworth, Rossetti, Masefield, Walter de la Mare, and Joseph Auslander.

---

Booklist 26:62 N '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 D 8 '29 120w

Nation 129:448 O 16 '29 80w

"Mr. Horan's collection will appeal to many readers whether they be globe-trotters or brachiopods. He would indeed be captious who should find fault with the present selection." N. H. Dole

+ Portland Evening News p15 S 24 '29 110w

Springf'd Republican p12 S 12 '29 200w

HORLER, SYDNEY (MARTIN HERITAGE, pseud.). House divided (Eng title House of Wingate). 260p $2 Macaulay 29-19027

"What happened when Dr. Richard Wingate, famous and happily married neurologist, rediscovered Fay Dennison, a nurse with whom he had spent a passionate hour near Rouen in war days. Tiring, apparently, of the metaphysical gambits native to the triangular sort of plot, the author injects a murder into the final stages of the story with lively effect. Passion, sacrifice, atonement are present in sufficient dosage."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 4 '29 70w

"A penetrating problem novel as interesting as it is unusual." J. C. G.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 7 '29 300w

N Y Times p7 Jl 7 '29 500w

HORN, ALFRED ALOYSIUS, pseud. (ALFRED ALOYSIUS SMITH). Waters of Africa; being volume three of the life and works of Trader Horn; ed. by Ethelreda Lewis. 279p $3.50 Simon & Schuster [7s 6d Cape]

B or 92 29-14494

"Trader Horn returns to his recollections of his adventuring, African days to weave a tale of romance and piratical adventure. It must be confessed that the romance is nothing out of the conventional, and the adventure is not overexciting. The story, which fills more than two-thirds of the entire volume bears the title 'The Chesterfields in the Earlies.' . . The second and smaller portion of 'The Waters of Africa,' bearing the general title, 'Odd Conversations,' is comprised of the four papers, 'The Lake Chad Road,' 'The Waterspout,' 'The March of the Prisoners' and 'The Wandering Jew.' These monologues have something of unique value. They bear something to kinship to Kipling's observations of India as put into the mouth of Private Mulvaney."—N Y Times

---

Bookm 70:xviii O '29 60w

"In this, the third volume of the Horn-Lewis trilogy, the now familiar technique is again encountered. It is very near to being masterly. Nothing in the difficult science of presentation could be more effective than the alternated chapters of Horn's naïve manuscript and the monologues in which he expounds his preposterous opinions and startling views of art and life. But this long heralded volume of adventures in Madagascar and the East Coast does not quite fulfill one's expectations." W: McFee

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Jl 14 '29 1050w

"We find the 'Waters of Africa' obscured by a highly iridescent film of midnight oil. In fact, we would exchange all the three volumes of Aloysius Horn (if we possessed them) for a few pages of 'Ralph Rashleigh,' even in his 'rewritten' state."

— Nation and Ath 45:511 Jl 13 '29 180w

"This third blast of the trumpet reveals Aloysius Horn once more as an instrument of very limited range. It would appear that in the first volume his few notes were played upon with the utmost dexterity, and all that remains is repetition."

— New Statesman 33:450 Jl 13 '29 300w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory

N Y Evening Post p6m Je 29 '29 520w

"There is genuine literary skill in these amorphous productions, and in the general fidelity to what might be termed the truth of Africa, as distinguished from autobiographical truth, enough of solids to render the books credible. For the rest, the collaboration has been one of the most ingenious bits of literary tomfoolery ever foisted on the public, and to take the results in any other spirit than that of amused tolerance would be churlish indeed."

+ N Y Times p3 Je 30 '29 1450w

"If you haven't had enough of Trader Horn, you will find some of his most entertaining yarns in this new book."

+ Outlook 152:433 Jl 10 '29 120w

"As a story it is pathetically childish, and, if it is read merely as an adventure yarn, must be unhesitatingly pronounced dull. But in between and round the flatness and extravagances of the so-called narrative the old man weaves his own talk, and even in the narrative itself one can see him flashing out many a lively glimpse of his own knockabout career. . . The story is nothing, a pinchbeck gem; but its setting is inestimably fine." M. J. C. Meiklejohn

+ — Spec 143:132 Jl 27 '29 680w

Times [London] Lit Sup p798 O 10 '29 170w

HORNBY, SIR EDMUND GRIMANI. An autobiography; with an introd. by D. L. Murray. 396p $5 Houghton [18s Constable]

B or 92 [29-10651]

"The earlier chapters describe Sir Edmund Hornby's education, 'sentimentally' and otherwise, in Germany, Portugal and Spain, and his impecunious years in London at the Bar. These pages are a great deal livelier than those of the horde of reminiscence writers who cut their teeth in this way. Then succeeds a picture of the Levant and finally the Far East as they appeared to the British official of the nineteenth century."—Christian Science Monitor

---

"His record provides a racy and entertaining picture of the romantic Victorian days of the British diplomatic and consular service."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 9 '29 140w

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 16 '29 550w

"His autobiography is frank, vivid, humorous without being facetious. His knotty fibrous character stands out on every page. It is rarely that we read an autobiography which has as few tedious stretches as this one, rarely too that we find one with so little pomposity." V. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 20 '29 850w

"Minute details of diplomacy are apt to lose flavour with the years but the picturesque in both incident and personality is deathless and forever young. From this point of view Sir Edmund Hornby's autobiography is a great success. Not only is his narrative set in Turkey, China, and Japan, but he doubles its value by being unfailingly picturesque himself." Sylva Norman

+ Nation and Ath 44:662 F 9 '29 580w

"Not one in twenty of the volumes of reminiscence that pour annually from the firesides of retirement can show so honest and unstudied a piece of self-portraiture as this—cock-sure but modest, Tory and impenitent, hotheaded and kindhearted, mindful of faces and gestures and turns of phrase, but superbly careless of dates, order, sequence. It has all the quality of the spoken word, the warm room, the glass replenished."

HORNBY, E. G.—Continued

New Statesman 32:534 F 2 '29 1050w

"Rich in picturesque glimpses of a world that has passed, it has a gift for calling a spade a spade, intelligently and a propos, that many a more pretentious volume of reminiscences might envy." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p9m Je 1 '29 100w

"His autobiography is an interesting and typical record of an Englishman in the service of his country during one of the most glorious periods of English history. One can discern in it the strength and courage, the rugged honesty and loyalty of the builders of an empire. But the main attraction of the volume is that it brings one under the spell of a picturesque, many-sided, spontaneous and sincere individuality, who let no false notions of position or empty form interfere with the reactions and promptings of a richly endowed nature." L: Rich

+ N Y Times p42 O 20 '29 1300w

"If Trader Horn wrote his piquant anecdote with an eye for the needs of the times, he is at least in one sense excelled by this posthumous autobiographer who, in the unpolished, rough-hewn style of a man of affairs, tells us of events, men and political motives in a manner that imbues the period he covers with living actuality." A. Tonietti

+ N Y World p11m Ap 28 '29 360w

"The sort of singleness of purpose rather than of mind or principle, which distinguished the hero of this most readable book gave him an insight into characters far above his own. He gives delightful character sketches of the men he worked with in Turkey, and later on when promoted to be Judge of the Supreme Court at Shanghai."

+ Spec 142:91 Ja 19 '29 880w
Spec 142:1015 Je 29 '29 50w

"In spite of the often well-deserved vigour of his denunciations, Hornby was a shrewd and careful observer; and the reader of his fascinating autobiography, for which Mr. Murray provides a useful introduction containing some of the dates so cheerfully ignored by Sir Edmund will be struck by the accuracy of many of his prophecies which have been abundantly fulfilled."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p37 Ja 17 '29 1350w

HORTON, GEORGE. Home of nymphs and vampires; the isles of Greece. 319p il $3.50 Bobbs

914.99 Islands of the Ægean. Folklore, Greek
29-8712

Mr Horton, formerly consul in cities of the Near East and author of several books on his experiences, writes here interesting and vivid descriptions of certain isles of Greece, those especially rich in legend and historic association or interesting for the survival of the past in modern customs.

---

"Mr. Horton gives an interesting insight into the lives of the people who inhabit these lands, their customs and habits of thought still tinged by their inheritance."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 My 5 '29 60w
Boston Transcript p11 Ap 13 '29 750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p88 Je '29

Reviewed by W. D. Lane
Nation 128:720 Je 12 '29 100w

"Mr. Horton gives us something more than the mere color of a place or photographic ruins. His first-hand accounts of myths that still persist among the people about nymphs, vampires, dracos, and nereids make his book unusual." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p11m My 11 '29 40w

"No literary background is required to appreciate the warm sympathy and distinct individuality that stamps the volume as an exceptional travel book. . . Mr. Horton's chapters on vampires and nymphs, from which the title of the book is derived, are highly absorbing. With deft observation and dry humor he has noted some of the outstanding examples of folklore and picturesque legends." Halsey Raines

+ N Y Times p9 Jl 7 '29 600w

"This is a delightful type of travel book by a man with an eye for eccentric detail as well as for changeless beauty, and with an ear for old legends. They are retold, here, with great charm."

+ Outlook 151:515 Mr 27 '29 40w
St Louis 27:313 N '29

"Mr. Horton possesses the scholarship and love of old and modern Hellenic life that, with a happy style of writing, makes his 'Home of Nymphs and Vampires' an ideal guide through the Isles."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1102 Je 8 '29 130w

HOSE, REGINALD E. Prohibition or control? Canada's experience with the liquor problem, 1921-1927. 132p $3 (10s 6d) Longmans

178.4 Liquor problem—Canada 28-25672

This book is a concise statement of Canada's experience with the control of the liquor traffic as contrasted with the experiment of prohibition in the United States.

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p76 My '29

"Mr. Hose's book may be cordially commended to all Americans who are interested in comparing the methods of Canada and the United States in dealing with the liquor traffic."

+ Nation 129:282 S 11 '29 230w

"Mr. Hose is comprehensive and thorough in his treatment and whether you want statistics, facts, events, backgrounds, or history, with regard to the separate Provinces or the Dominion as a whole, the chances are large that you will find what you want somewhere in the book." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p18 F 24 '29 380w
St Louis 27:44 F '29
Times [London] Lit Sup p167 F 28 '29 60w

HOSKEN, CLIFFORD JAMES WHEELER (RICHARD KEVERNE, pseud.). Havering plot. 351p $2 Harper [7s 6d Constable]
29-3428

An international secret agent is hovering over the airplane works at Havering to steal the plans for a wonder plane. Guy Farrar is doing some intensive sleuthing and Joyce Gurney is helping him, when Guy disappears. There are lively doings until his return and the unmasking of the villain.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 3 '29 100w

"Disguises, papers, rogues and heroes are all present. It is too solemn to be entertaining, and not solemn enough to be burlesque. Then, too, it contains plenty of outworn war atmosphere and tiresome talk of 'Huns.'"

— Boston Transcript p2 F 27 '29 150w

"Mr. Keverne is well on his way to becoming one of our most satisfactory writers of detective fiction. It is unfortunate, perhaps, that he reveals his chief scoundrel, who is not too convincing, early in the tale, but one surprise is stored up quite successfully to the very end."

+ — New Statesman 31:704 S 15 '28 140w
N Y Times p22 F 17 '29 90w

"The story is not only a capital 'yarn,' but is strong in characterization and atmosphere. The eeriness of the lone East Anglian marshes is admirably suggested." Gilbert Thomas

+ Spec 141:252 Ag 25 '28 100w

"The story gathers momentum and toward the end compels attention to the exclusion of the rest of the world."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 200w

"He holds the attention of the reader the more effectively that he does not exhaust it with scenes of violence."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p668 S 20 '28 160w
Wis Lib Bul 25:127 Ap '29

HOSKEN, CLIFFORD JAMES WHEELER (RICHARD KEVERNE, pseud.). Sanfield scandal. 318p $2 Harper [7s 6d Constable]
29-17315

Castle Tower is the hiding-place of a mystery concerning the Sanfields. A young man, Hilary Borden, comes to the castle to investigate, and meets with an accident. An American lady "artist" has also come to investigate, till the charming sister of the local doctor interferes somewhat by becoming an ally of Hilary's. Finally the secret of the Sanfield diamond necklace is discovered, the identity of Hilary Borden is disclosed, and the avaricious are duly punished.

Bookm 70:xxxiii O '29 80w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 25 '29 130w
New Statesman 34:28 O 12 '29 30w
Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 153:313 O 23 '29 80w

HOSKINS, HALFORD LANCASTER. British routes to India. 494p $7.50 (30s) Longmans
382 Trade routes. Communication and traffic. Great Britain—Commercial policy. Europe—Commercial policy 28-28590

"Professor Hoskins strikes a fresh note in the survey of projects designed to facilitate a shorter and quicker route to India. In part the book naturally deals with diplomatic history, but there are also chapters which review the geographical literature and economic questions involved."—Am Hist R

"As is indicated by quotations in the text and by the foot-notes the author has made a careful study of source-material both in manuscript and in print. The illustrations are interesting and well chosen and the index is good. . . The concluding portion of the book deals in part with the question of the control of Egypt. Here the author seems to dismiss the history of the past forty years with entirely too brief and cursory a view. The same might also be said of the later history of the alternative route now known as the Bagdad Railway line. Yet with these two exceptions the book is a useful and readable contribution." A. L. P. D.
+ — Am Hist R 34:643 Ap '29 350w

"One of the most valuable qualities of Dr. Hoskins' book is that the more intimate account of the building up of steamship and telegraph routes is clearly presented against a broader political background."
+ Geog R 19:520 Jl '29 720w

"Professor Hoskins has fallen short of producing the really notable book that would be possible without going a great deal farther in the use of primary materials. To do as much as he has done in this pioneer work has, however, entailed years of patient research; and it will prove an indispensable aid and encouragment to others who, it is hoped, will delve further into many of the related problems." L. H. Jenks
+ — Pol Sci Q 44:456 S '29 1150w
St Louis 27:159 My '29

"Always quoting his authorities, he traces the various chains of events which led to the achievement of a single result. He skilfully disentangles the interactions of Nature, of politics, and of the wills and characters of particular men, and, in spite of some inevitable repetition, makes the whole one very readable story."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p73 Ja 31 '29 1200w

HOTCHKISS, HENRY GREENE. Treatise on aviation law, giving authorities with complete citations of federal and state decisions and including texts in full of the International convention of 1919, the Havana convention, Air commerce act of 1926, Air commerce regulations, Air commerce forms for pilots' licenses, etc., other federal statutes as relating to aviation, and state aviation statutes alphabetically arranged. 492p $7.50 Baker, Voorhis
629.148 Aeronautics—Laws and regulations. Aeronautics—United States. Aeronautics, Commercial 29-1832

"The first hundred pages consists of the treatment of such subjects as aviation and international law, tort liability of owners and operators of aircraft, aircraft standards and rules of the road, aviation and the law of insurance, the air commerce act of 1926, etc. The author's best effort is Chapter III, on proprietary rights in airspace as limitations on the right of flight. The remainder of the book is composed of an appendix of three hundred and fifty pages in which the writer has compiled most of the important international conventions and national and state laws pertaining to aviation."—Ann Am Acad

"Mr. Hotchkiss has done very good work in consideration of the limitations to which he is subjected. The book is well documented throughout. C: C. Rohlfing
+ Ann Am Acad 145:210 S '29 180w
N Y New Tech Bks 14:3 Ja '29

HOTSON, JOHN LESLIE. Commonwealth and restoration stage. 424p il $5 Harvard univ. press
792 Theater—England. London—Theaters 28-21403

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 Jl 27 '29 320w
Pratt p24 summer '29
St Louis 27:165 My '29

"Whether he is recreating the actual playhouses or the players that peopled them, his skill and sympathy are equally clear. The wealth of new materials shows the masterworkman, but it is mastery of interpretation rather than of detail that gives Leslie Hotson's work its final distinction." G: H: Nettleton
+ Sat R of Lit 5:730 Mr 2 '29 650w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '29 580w

"Leslie Hotson's masterly history of the Commonwealth and the Restoration stage meets the high standards inevitably self-imposed by his own earlier volume on the death of Marlowe. His present study abounds in new material, but even more in proofs of the interpreter's skill." G: H: Nettleton
+ Yale R n s 18:608 spring '29 200w

HOUGHTON, CLAUDE, pseud. See Oldfield, C. H.

HOULT, NORAH. Poor women! 333p $2.50 Harper
29-11260

"Each story concerns some woman's need, either financial or emotional, of a man. They are all, in effect, beggars of life who call ineffectually for alms. Miss Hoult notes their predicaments with an unsentimental but pitying eye."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The portraits of these women have considerable vividness, such as a man could not have secured and such as only a few Englishwomen have equalled or surpassed in their journals. Miss Hoult observes like a naturalist, writes plain but adequate prose, and characterizes or caricatures her people frankly and passionately."

HOULT, NORAH—Continued

+ Bookm 69:xxiii Jl '29 250w

"Miss Hoult writes closely, with considerable narrative skill, but without any special felicity. In spite of her careful recording of their speech, their dress and their emotions she sees her seven heroines as types rather than as individuals. When seven such are put together in one book they do very well for Variations on the Theme of Despondency, but they give about as true a picture of life as a whole as a city's hospital gives of its general health." A. B. Parsons

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Je 2 '29 620w

"The book is unusually well written and the characters are at once realistic and imaginative."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 19 '29 260w

"These tales, which recount the emotional or practical defeat of five women, are excellently written, with sympathy and clarity; but many readers will feel, I think, that they but feebly illustrate the author's thesis."

+ — Nation 129:177 Ag 14 '29 140w

"Norah Hoult is never sentimental. She does not make the mistake of supposing that a life which would be intolerable to her need be intolerable to those who have not experienced anything else. But she writes of the anxieties and fears of her sex with extraordinary intuition. I think 'Poor Women!' may be the sketch-book which will lead up to an extremely good novel." Raymond Mortimer

+ Nation and Ath 43:564 Jl 28 '28 480w

Reviewed by Marian Tyler

New Repub 59:269 Jl 24 '29 600w

"Poor Women is a remarkable book. So mature a work can hardly be a first novel. All these hopeless situations are mercilessly described with accuracy, restraint, and sympathy. Poor Women is an inconclusive book, but it leaves the reader haunted by the authoress's five creations, all so unattractive, all so at the mercy of our present social machinery and so unable to look after themselves." Cyril Connolly

+ New Statesman 31:592 Ag 18 '28 180w

Reviewed by Gertrude Diamant

N Y Evening Post p8m My 25 '29 850w

" 'Poor Women' is thoroughly good work—one of the most convincing studies of our time in the field of feminine psychology. . . Miss Hoult is an admirable psychologist and observer; she is not quite a true creator. There are almost no moments of great intuition in her book, there is not enough lift of the imagination to bring it into the front rank of fiction." L: Kronenberger

+ — N Y Times p9 My 19 '29 850w

" 'Poor Women' is not an ordinary book, but is in fact quite unusual and surprising in many respects. Whether or not one be personally acquainted with the type of woman Miss Hoult is describing, he feels that there must be just such people, so convincing is her style. If one expects to be amused, he will be disappointed, for the book is far too harrowing for that. The book cannot fail to be interesting to people who like to study humanity. The tales are realistic to the highest degree, and time spent in reading them will hardly be misspent." L. D. Whelden

+ Portland Evening News p8 O 22 '29 480w

"Miss Norah Hoult observes her poor women through a haze of spite and sentiment, but withal very clearly. She is an extremely capable writer, with a fine sense of humour and an excellent ear for dialogue. Men she portrays as legendary unaccountable creatures, remote from the feminine world but occasionally entering it like Jupiter, at unexpected moments and with unexpected results. For those who can stand them we thoroughly recommend Miss Hoult's adventures into feminine psychology; and only in the first story, we think, does she trample on the susceptibilities more than she need have done." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 146:56 Jl 14 '28 260w

"The author wished to fashion people who were real to her in such a way as to make them real to us. Because she felt them as well as saw them, because her observation was both telescopic and microscopic, and because she was able to present what she saw and felt with detachment, she has admirably fulfilled her wish." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1068 Je 1 '29 900w

"The monotony of the theme is no doubt intentional and it carries a persuasive force. Miss Hoult is so quietly insistent and sincere, one believes presently that this is the truth about the lives of women; but inevitably, the more one is persuaded the less acutely one is interested. The fields Miss Hoult gleans have been rather thoroughly gleaned already—Mrs. Johnson especially is trite—but her keen and careful eye discovers a surprising amount to preserve. She possesses real ability in characterization, and she remembers and uses the material world with a talent not far below that of Katherine Mansfield. But in two respects she fails in her conscious or unconscious discipleship: her style lacks incisiveness and magic brevity; and it lacks also Katherine Mansfield's relish for lovely and delightful things."

+ — Spec 141:199 Ag 11 '28 230w

"Poor Women is a remarkable book. It is remarkable not for its themes (since 'poor women' were made honest women long ago by George Moore and Katherine Mansfield) nor for its treatment of these themes—a treatment given authority, again, by Katherine Mansfield—but in being, of its kind, almost flawless."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p604 Ag 23 '28 360w

HOUSE, EDWARD MANDELL. Intimate papers of Colonel House; arranged as a narrative by Charles Seymour. 4v v 3, Into the World war; v 4, Ending of the war. 453;552p il $10 Houghton

B or 92 European war, 1914-1918—United States. Wilson, Woodrow. Peace conference, 1919 28-5823

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"Except for the papers of Wilson himself, there can not be any single archive that has so much to tell about the American participation in the World War as these that have been entrusted to the skilful hand of Professor Seymour." F: L. Paxson

+ Am Hist R 34:370 Ja '29 1000w

"Following the plan of the two earlier volumes, he has arranged most admirably in narrative form the account of the Wilson-House relationship for the years 1917-19." D. L. Hunt

+ Ann Am Acad 143:378 My '29 460w

Booklist 25:162 Ja '29

"One could scarcely overpraise the skill with which Professor Seymour has woven a narrative which moves forward with coherence, logical sequence and undiminished interest. The constant collaboration of Colonel House with Professor Seymour in the choice of material and the revision of the manuscript makes it fairly certain that we have as complete a story of the Colonel's activities as if he had written the volumes himself as memoirs. Still one has the feeling that not all has been told that might have been told. . . On a subject of major importance for judging not only the policy but also the character of President Wilson, the Intimate Papers are very disappointing." D: S. Muzzey

+ — Pol Sci Q 44:79 Mr '29 2350w

Pratt p32 winter '29

St Louis 27:9 Ja '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:30 Ja '29

World Tomorrow 12:137 Mr '29 600w

"None save a trained historian could have coped with a task so great; and no trained historian could have accomplished it successfully without a keen sense of contemporary as well as of historical values." Wickham Steed

+ Yale R n s 18:794 summer '29 1000w

HOUSE, FLOYD NELSON. Range of social theory; a survey of the development, literature, tendencies and fundamental problems of the social sciences. (Am. social science ser.) 587p $3.60 Holt

309 Sociology—History. Social sciences—History 29-1421

A text for the advanced student which purposes to give him a more comprehensive acquaintance with the literature and history of the social sciences. The plan of the book is as follows: Introduction: Social problems and social theory; Part I, Geography and social differentiation; Part II, Human nature and collective behavior; Part III, Conflict and social control; Part IV, The trend of social theory.

---

"Professor House's book surveys a large number of problems and topics from the point of view of their relation to social theory. A vast amount of work is intelligently and critically discussed." M. G. Smith

+ Am Anthropol 31:786 O '29 120w

"This is an interesting, useful, and, so far as I can tell, competent survey of the social sciences. A vast amount of material is intelligently and critically discussed, including many topics of special interest to economists." M. G. Smith

+ Am Econ R 19:260 Je '29 130w

"Professor House has done exceedingly well within the space limitations laid upon him: he has by no means covered the 'range of social theory,' to be sure, but he has introduced us to a large number of names and problems, and has achieved notable integration in a sometimes chaotic field." Howard Becker

+ Ann Am Acad 144:158 Jl '29 380w

Boston Transcript p3 My 18 '29 130w

"Those seeking acquaintance with 'the development, literature, tendencies and fundamental problems of the social sciences' will find in this book a valuable addition to three works previously available: Bogardus' History of Social Thought, 1922 and 1928; Lichtenberger's Development of Social Theory, 1923; and Sorokin's Contemporary Sociological Theories, 1928." Hornell Hart

+ Survey 62:144 Ap 15 '29 300w

HOUSMAN, LAURENCE, ed. Life of H. R. H. the Duke of Flamborough, by Benjamin Bunny; a footnote to history. 287p il $2.50 Brewer [7s 6d J. Cape]

29-5201

"Mr. Laurence Housman's book is a thinly disguised satirical life of the late Duke of Cambridge, who, if Queen Victoria had chanced to die in infancy or girlhood, would have become King of England, and who, having missed that fate, held the post of Commander-in-Chief of the British Army for about forty years. The book contains, of course, much invention, but substantially and essentially it is all as far as we can judge, both true and fair."—New Statesman

---

Reviewed by G. T. Hellman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Mr 31 '29 800w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 24 '29 150w

"Sooner or later some one was certain to try his hand at this sort of thing; but this book too frequently offers heavy-handed humor for the pointed pertness and arch flippancy that abound in really good burlesques. Perhaps Mr. Housman would have done better had he parodied only one typically modern biographer instead of a whole school."

— Nation 129:22 Jl 3 '29 60w

"It is an excellent squib, always amusing, and sometimes moving. There are some delightful fudge photographs and delicious imitations of Queen Victoria's prose style. It is somewhat unsatisfactory, as one does not know how much of the book is accurate and when Mr. Housman is relying entirely on his own imagination. But then that holds good of nearly all modern biographers and Mr. Housman writes far better than most." Francis Birrell

+ — Nation and Ath 44:19 O 6 '28 100w

"It is really an extremely amusing book, full of delightful fantasies that are more than half true. It contains none of the unbridled bitterness and unfair innuendo that Mr. Housman displayed in his similarly disguised life of Mr. Lloyd George. . . The book deserves to be read for its whimsicality, its truth, and its genuine wit."

+ New Statesman 31:762 S 29 '28 750w

Outlook 151:505 Mr 27 '29 150w

"This is a more than usually irritating and regrettable and amusing example of the new school of history-fiction or fiction-history—an unnatural union which has lately produced a whole litter of noisy and sometimes noisome children."

— + Sat R 146:363 S 22 '28 960w

"For American readers this amusing skit does not possess either the news value, the scandal value, or the solid and thought-tormenting interest which it must have had in England. . . But readers of any nation must be amused at this absurd biography which Mr. Housman has told with a sly humor that will be a delight to the reflective." Elmer Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 5:950 Ap 27 '29 400w

HOWARD, JOHN GALEN. Pheidias. 287p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

811 Phidias—Poetry 29-10049

The jacket calls this "a novel departure in poetry." It is also a poetic departure in novel writing, being a swift, vivid, first person narrative in blank verse of the life and development of Pheidias, both as man and artist.

---

"Enough description of historical events and of personal relations has been introduced to make the poem sound like a real biography and not merely an essay on sculpture; but it is the discussion of sculpture and architecture that constitutes the worth of the volume and makes its reading more worth while." G: M. Whicher

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Je 9 '29 850w

"It moves so swiftly and naturally that at no point is the story impeded by the fact that it is written in poetry rather than in prose. Nowhere can a reader feel that the poet could have spoken more simply or with more effect had he not been hindered by considerations of rhythm and meter. In fact it moves so effortlessly that one is in danger of missing something of the genuine beauty of the verse, because the story lures one to read rapidly." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 6 '29 550w

"His story might be more moving if the protagonists were not so certain of fame. But Mr. Howard could not alter facts, and he was not capable of building character convincing in its passions and its weaknesses. Pheidias is a book to be read by those who enjoy fictional biography, not by those seeking perfection of verse-form, or re-created wonder." E. L. Walton

+ Nation 129:72 Jl 17 '29 140w

"The verse is rich and fluent, and is an unpretentious and satisfactory medium for the telling of the story. You will find it, especially if you are interested in the relation of æsthetics to life, an entirely readable book which deserves wider reading than it is likely to get."

+ Outlook 152:351 Je 26 '29 120w

HOWARD-ELLIS, CHARLES. Origin, structure & working of the League of nations. 528p $7 Houghton [21s Allen & U.]

341.1 League of nations [29-2555]

"Mr. Howard-Ellis is a free-lance journalist of considerable international experience and long residence in Geneva. He is an Englishman, but writes from the international point of view. . . The book is divided into two sections, deal-

HOWARD-ELLIS, CHARLES—Continued

ing, respectively, with 'The World War and the Dawn of Peace' and ' "The Solemn League and Covenant." ' The first explains the international anarchy of the pre-war world, while the second section starts with the origins of the Covenant, describes the various organs of the League and includes chapters on the International Labour Organization and the Permanent Court of International Justice, as well as a very long chapter on international law."—N Y Evening Post

---

"His book will not command the authority of Schücking and Wehberg's 'Satzung des Völkerbundes.' Nevertheless, Mr. Howard-Ellis has written the best survey so far of the 'unwritten' constitution of the League and its relation to international politics." R. L. Buell

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ja 6 '29 1000w

"Although the book is necessarily one which will arouse controversy, it is written from an uncontroversial, and as nearly as can be from a non-partisan viewpoint. It is by far the most complete and useful exposition not only of the League, but of the pre- and post-war attitudes which gave rise to the League, which we have yet seen." R. R. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 19 '28 800w

"This is an important book, not merely because it is the only adequate record of the working of the League system, but also because it includes criticism of the moral practices and theories on which war and peace depend. Mr. Howard Ellis, who is a journalist at Geneva, has been in close and continuous contact with the Secretariat and has attended all the chief League meetings." C. D. Burns

+ Int J Ethics 39:244 Ja '29 620w

"Mr. Howard-Ellis, like Professor Toynbee, greatly enhances the value of his work by refusing to become a mere mechanical recorder of facts. He never forgets that the value of a fact resides in its historical significance and he never hesitates to point the historical moral. This is particularly noticeable in his chapter on International Law. Altogether this promises to be a notable treatise."

+ Nation and Ath 44:24 O 6 '28 170w

"This book is not a digest, a juristic analysis, or an encyclopedia, but a volume written with an almost journalistic flow of language and instinct for the interesting. Yet the writer knows his subject, not only from documents, but from direct contact, while his background in history, international law, and world politics is so complete as to warrant the guess that this will be the standard work in English on the League for a number of years." Quincy Wright

+ New Repub 58:284 Ap 24 '29 550w

"Mr. Howard-Ellis has done his bit in the shape of a comprehensive textbook which meets a definite need. His is not only 'the most thorough study of the League that has yet been attempted'; it is such a mine of useful information that the present reviewer is tempted to recommend this book to the exclusion of all others on the subject of international relations."

+ New Statesman 32:supviii N 3 '28 750w

"In spite of defects the book is a valuable addition to the literature on international organization, for it includes a mass of information not readily available elsewhere." M. S. Wertheimer

+ — N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 12 '29 700w

Pratt p10 winter '29

"This book is undoubtedly the nearest approach to a perfect text book for the more serious student that has been produced. . . The chapter on the Secretariat is undoubtedly the fullest account of the origin, composition and working of that body that has ever appeared in print."

+ Sat R 146:507 O 20 '28 250w

"The most obvious criticism of a singularly valuable work is that it is almost too fully documented and that the background is painted in with so lavish a hand as a little to overshadow the structure intended to stand out against it. . . On its avowed subject, the origin, structure, and working of the League, the book must at once take its place as a foremost authority."

+ Spec 141:888 D 8 '28 700w

"Here is the first big book about the league, beginning at the beginning and going through to the end; written by one not of the league organization or party in any way to its development, yet personally on the ground for a long continuous period and in a position to know what he is talking about. Mr. Howard-Ellis is widely traveled but resident for the past three years at Geneva, with fullest access to all the activities of the league, of which he has made ample and intelligent use, evidently checking his assertions scrupulously by reference to original sources and league officers. . . Altogether it is a notable achievement, and an invaluable addition to the existing material for the study not only of the league but of international law and relations, and the conditions environing the league's creation." J: P. Gavit

+ Survey 62:199 My 1 '29 630w

"The introduction to the present volume creates an unfavourable impression by its chill intellectual disdain of human prejudices and passions with which statesmanship must reckon. Indeed, Mr. Howard-Ellis is always at his worst in argumentative passages. But the exposition which occupies the bulk of the book is well done."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p810 N 1 '28 200w

HOWE, EDGAR WATSON. Plain people. 317p $3 Dodd

B or 92 29-7426

Thruout Ed Howe's story of his life, and of his work and his neighbors in Atchison, Kansas, runs a quickening stream of philosophical reflection, springing up in the homely aphorisms and witty comments which contributed to the national reputation of Ed Howe's paper, the Atchison Globe.

---

Booklist 25:319 My '29

"Toward the end Mr. Howe is more reflective. This part of the book, a pleasant porch on which he seems to be sitting and looking backward, is not quite so interesting as the first. But Plain People is a real document. There ought to have been more of it, and it is a pity Mr. Howe was able to remember and set down only a fraction of the engrossing details of a very remarkable American life." Robert Littell

+ Bookm 69:320 My '29 300w

" 'Plain People' is not merely the self-portrait of a small town newspaper man: it is, somewhat reduced in scale, the easy, fluent portrait of a whole people—the shrewd, practical people of the pioneer and post-pioneer Middle West, specifically of Kansas—of Atchison, Kan." Florence Haxton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Mr 17 '29 1300w

"In keeping with his honesty of mind is his stark, unpolished style. Sentences come out as he thinks and would utter them; jerky, forceful, colorful. He splits his infinitives with glorious abandon and leaves his prepositions lying wherever they happen to land. The result is a ruggedness, exasperating were it not so natural." P. L.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 13 '29 930w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren

Nation 128:sup480 Ap 17 '29 600w

"Behind this sound, wise and instructive book chock full of maxims and rules for the trench-warfare of everyday life, is the rumor of raids into no-man's-land. Ed Howe was many times in love, but he will not write about that. He was always deeply moved by music, and he dismisses it as a dissipation. . . These omissions contribute as much to the interest of Ed Howe's story as the events, from Lincoln's day to our own, which he has included." H: Chapin

+ New Repub 58:234 Ap 10 '29 500w

"Perhaps the hardest thing in the world to write is an authentic autobiography. Here is one in this volume by Ed Howe, for many years editor of the Atchison (Kansas) Globe. . . For an understanding of Middle Western America in the period that came after the days of the pioneer, Ed Howe's book is one of the most valuable sources of information." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 9 '29 630w

"His book is entertaining reading, and worth pondering over, more valuable, perhaps, than many of the pretentious volumes that contain scholarly analyses of our character and culture." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv My '29 130w

"In the world of literature where nothing may be as it seems it is like a breath of fresh air to read Ed Howe's autobiography. An ideal rather than a typical American, himself, he has lived always amidst typical Americans, and it is a useful thing to read what he has to say about them, because he is a man of perfect good sense and perfect honesty."

+ Outlook 151:428 Mr 13 '29 220w

"There is a good deal of quiet bragging in the book, but bragging which is fully justified by the unusual achievements of E. W. Howe as a newspaper man. All in all, the volume will very decidedly repay reading, especially for anyone who is interested either in the history of American journalism or in the character of the American people." H. M. Ellis

+ Portland Evening News p5 Mr 19 '29 350w

"In 'Plain People' he gives us his autobiography, and much more, for in this book he epitomizes in a way the story of the Middle West for the past seventy years, infused with the philosophy of the country printing office." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:16 Ap '29 200w

St Louis 27:206 Je '29

"His story is indeed a grand folk-tale—just that. It is what 'The Story of a Country Town' was—Ed Howe's story. It is such a book as Ben Franklin might have written. For Ed Howe is Franklin's spiritual legatee." W: A. White

+ Sat R of Lit 5:795 Mr 23 '29 700w

Wis Lib Bul 25:126 Ap '29

HOWE, MARK ANTONY DE WOLFE. James Ford Rhodes, American historian. 376p il $3.50 (15s) Appleton

B or 92 Rhodes, James Ford 29-9826

James Ford Rhodes gave up a successful business career to become an historical scholar and chose as his period for study the thirty years following the Compromise of 1850. Mr Howe's biography treats Rhodes both as business man and man of letters and as far as possible allows him to speak for himself in his own letters.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Boston Transcript p1 Ap 20 '29

---

"It is a quiet book with few memorable passages to quote, but written with an even sympathy and fairness, a rather brief discussion of an American historian, but a pleasant revelation of an American gentleman." D. R. Fox

+ Am Hist R 35:141 O '29 1200w

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:783 Ag '29 260w

Booklist 25:392 Jl '29

"The letters show the same qualities as the history, adding to shrewdness, worldly wisdom and fairness some notable elements of humor and modesty. They are not brilliant and indicate little poetic insight or imagination, but they are entertaining and agreeable. They confirm, in short, the estimate of Rhodes as a man not profound or subtle, but wise, mellow and highly capable. . . Mr. Howe is so able a biographer that one hesitates to express a wish that he had put a little more of Mr. Rhodes's own quality of thoroughness into this book." Allan Nevins

+ Bookm 69:433 Je '29 750w

"The critical student is forced to the reluctant conclusion that Rhodes saw American history neither steadily nor whole, and that he failed to comprehend fully what he did see. Mr. De Wolfe Howe's charming biography of James Ford Rhodes is innocent of this critical attitude, but so skilled a biographer could not fail to recreate for us the subject of his literary address. Mr. Rhodes is presented to us through the happy medium of his correspondence, and there emerges from these friendly pages a personality kindly and genial, scholarly and cultivated." H: S. Commager

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 My 5 '29 1700w

Reviewed by S. L. Cook

Boston Transcript p10 My 4 '29 2100w

"Mr. Howe, in letting Rhodes tell his own story, has shown great skill and his usual sensitive judgment in selecting the essentials. In place of describing a long succession of triumphs in eulogistic terms he has given the steps by which Rhodes deliberately planned to write, the exercise in style he imposed upon himself, his first advances, and his final success." W. C. Ford

+ Nation 129:94 Jl 24 '29 580w

"If the American biographical gallery can find room for full length portraits of such damaged souls as Boss Tweed, Jay Gould and 'Jubilee' Jim Fisk, it may well allot a place to this delightful, intimate portrait of a man who both did business and made history in a manner very different from the worthies above mentioned." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p11m My 11 '29 460w

"Mr. Howe succeeds admirably in his portrayal of his subject's character and career and he is judicious in his evaluation of the worth of Rhodes's History."

+ N Y Times p5 Je 2 '29 850w

"Interesting and valuable biography of one of our great historians."

+ Outlook 152:107 My 15 '29 200w

"This biography is neither dull, nor pedantic, nor conventional. While not a brilliant letter-writer, Mr. Rhodes was a correspondent who set down interesting facts in a simple, modest way." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:14 Je '29 450w

St Louis 27:271 S '29

"Beyond most biographies of American men of letters the book has charm, and its glimpses of the cultivated circle in which Rhodes moved are a welcome contribution to our intellectual annals." W: McDonald

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1160 Jl 6 '29 1200w

"The narrative of Rhodes's career is well written, but the outstanding value of the book is in the selection from his memoranda and letters. Mr. Howe is a model for biographers in the discrimination he has exercised in his use of his material. No space is wasted on anything that does not deserve permanent record."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p644 Ag 22 '29 1500w

HOWELLS, WILLIAM DEAN. Life in letters; ed. by Mildred Howells. 2v 429;426p il $10 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 28-28879

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:162 Ja '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p41 Mr '29

Nation and Ath 45:404 Je 22 '29 130w

"These two volumes of Howells' letters stand as a monument to what Stephen Crane called his 'kind, benevolent life,' unhappily with no more meaning for us than most monuments have." F. O. Matthiessen

— New Repub 58:284 Ap 24 '29 650w

New Statesman 33:378 Je 29 '29 1200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:10 F '29

St Louis 27:100 Mr '29

"Long, detailed, interested letters to his friends which carry an air of pleasure and

HOWELLS, W: D.—Continued
leisure that reveals even to the casual reader why Howells was a much loved personality."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p450 Je 6 '29 1500w

"In giving us a serial narrative of Howells's long life as a man, an artist, a thinker, these books shed a new light on his career." E. F. Wyatt
+ Yale R n s 18:809 summer '29 620w

HOWLAND, CHARLES P., ed. American foreign relations, 1928. 624p $5 Yale univ. press; Council on foreign relations, 25 W. 43d st., N.Y.

327.73 United States—Foreign relations
(28-29330)

"This book is the first of a series of volumes on the foreign relations of the United States, to be published by the Council of Foreign Relations. The present volume carries the topics roughly to January 1, 1928, and does not treat of events in 1928, as one might infer from the title. The book is a coöperative one; beside the work of Mr. Howland, certain chapters and sections were written by Arthur Bullard, H. B. Elliston, and Quincy Wright. Before publication the volume was submitted for criticism to a group of specialists, whose names appear in the preface."—Am Hist R

"The book is a valuable addition to the rapidly growing literature on our foreign relations. It provides an excellent survey of a number of the most disputed points of policy which are facing the United States. Because of its topical arrangement of the subject-matter and its coöperative treatment, there is a lack of unity in the narrative which is somewhat disconcerting to the reader." E. S. Brown
+ — Am Hist R 34:627 Ap '29 720w

"The scope of the work is so broad and its excellence so manifest that one can only hope that subsequent volumes will reach the high standard set by the first." G. H. Stuart
+ Am Pol Sci R 23:494 My '29 800w

Reviewed by J: G. Hervey
Ann Am Acad 143:380 My '29 300w
Boston Transcript p5 D 19 '28 900w

"In no other single volume is there available so much pertinent and authoritative material concerning contemporary American foreign relations. . . By far the most valuable portion of the volume—judged with reference to its possibility of affecting matters of immediate practical importance—is the long and valuable section on disarmament, written by Arthur Bullard." E: M. Earle
+ Nation 128:259 F 27 '29 1050w

"The book is well edited and arranged."
+ Nation and Ath 45:280 My 25 '29 100w

"The interpretative treatment of the various subjects is excellent. Nevertheless, the student of international affairs has, in the opinion of the reviewer, the right to expect from such a year-book a detailed statement of the facts before or along with a commentary. In other words, this volume might be more encyclopedic." R. L. Buell
+ — New Repub 57:225 Ja 9 '29 720w

"The book is marked by a well-reasoned consideration of the private economic factors in international political relations: trade-balances, loans, investments, and such." J. S. C.
+ Outlook 151:506 Mr 27 '29 150w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:22 Mr '29 180w
St Louis 27:157 My '29

Reviewed by H: K. Norton
Sat R of Lit 5:680 F 16 '29 1200w

"The volume is cautious and conservative in tone and covers a wide range of significant questions." K. P.
World Tomorrow 12:89 F '29 110w

"It would be difficult to estimate too highly the value of this volume, or the indicated value of the annual series of which it is the first. To have condensed within 600 pages so much relating to the constitutional control, the historical development, the administrative conduct, and the economic and political bases of our foreign policies and relations, and to have brought the intricate material, thus gathered, up to date as of January 1, 1928—this is an immensely useful and admirable achievement." R: Hooker
+ Yale R n s 18:583 spring '29 880w

HOWLETT, WALTER MAIN, ed. Religion, the dynamic of education. 172p $1.50 Harper

377 Religious education 29-4957

A symposium on religious education. Contents: Religious and secular education, by L. A. Weigle; The new emphasis in public education, by C. S. Adair; Religion essential to good citizenship, by J: J. Tigert; The church's responsibility in education, by J. V. Moldenhauer; The Bible in education, by W. W. White; The place of worship in religious education, by J: W. Suter, Jr.; When is education religious? by A. T. Case; Some social objectives of religious education, by B: S. Winchester; Leadership attitudes as principles of education, by J. M. Artman; Weekday religious education, by C: H. Tuttle.

"There is something here of great interest and concern to anyone interested in religion or education. This is not propaganda, but a careful, honest, thoughtful survey of the situation and its needs by men and women who are authorities on this subject. It is a contribution not simply to religious education but also to the general cause of education itself."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '29 250w

"It is a timely and significant discussion of several fundamental aspects of the problem of the place of religion in education, especially from the standpoint of motivation. Its value lies chiefly in an orientation to the problem in its American setting by a number of competent people from various points of view rather than in an attempt at its analysis or solution."
+ J Religion 9:502 Jl '29 180w

"With one or two exceptions, the contributions are earnest, sincere, humble, and intelligent; but to this reviewer it seems that most of them beg the real question at issue, namely, how it may be possible again to bring together elements in education at present divorced, and to make of human experience and thinking again a united process." B. I. Bell
— + Sat R of Lit 6:56 Ag 17 '29 720w

HOYT, ELIZABETH ELLIS. Consumption of wealth. 344p $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

339.4 Consumption (economics). Civilization, Cost and standard of living 28-30172

"In studying consumption the author does not confine herself to its economic aspect. She is more concerned with the quality than with the volume of consumption, and treats it as a human activity influenced by psychological, social, and ethical, as well as economic, factors. Starting with the psychology of interests and the influence of group life, she proceeds to the external factors influencing consumption—environment, group culture, production and distribution, the price system, taxation. An interesting comparison of consumption under different types of culture leads up to a direct study of consumption in the United States to-day."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 26 '29 450w

"Miss Hoyt has combined material from psychology, anthropology, and economics to make a very interesting volume on the consumption of wealth. . . It is refreshing to find the book questioning some of the fundamental assumptions on which economic behavior in the United States is based. On the other hand, some of the author's comments on the consumption of wealth in the United States are, it seems to me, misleading." F. M. Williams
+ — J Home Econ 21:447 Je '29 450w

"The author presents an interesting discussion of a complex and largely incalculable process."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p359 Jl 4 '29 100w

HOYT, JANET. Wings of wax. 358p $2.50 Sears 29-7397

"In this Middle Western book about a Middle Western university, the failings of the new president, the students and the system are fluently described. Victor Marston, with his long-suffering wife and children, goes from a small Eastern College to Woban, confident of making a spectacular success as a modern university executive. He is full of ideas for reform, but inconsistent or precipitate in their application. Charming, selfish and weak about women, his mistakes accumulate until his failure is tragically complete."—Outlook

---

"There have been many novels dealing with flaming youth and college life; but, under the nom-de-plume of Janet Hoyt, a former dean of women at a state university here shows us the other side of the story, the faculty's point of view."

Bookm 69:xxiv Je '29 100w

"In it an abundance of material that relates directly to our higher education is drawn into a swift narrative in a way that makes this a noteworthy if not an eminent first novel." T. P. Brockway

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 12 '29 500w

"Whatever faults the book may have, Marston is a real person, a very human being with ambitions which are extensive though vague."

Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '29 220w

" 'Wings of Wax' is a careful, conscientious study of certain aspects of modern education as they affect character. If its conclusion seems rather forced, the general course of the narrative is logical, and though one finds some difficulty in believing in his scientific attainments and brilliancy as an investigator, Marston is a real person, drawn with skill and in the round."

+ — N Y Times p18 Mr 24 '29 720w

"Every aspect of the scene is graphically presented, resulting in a readable, but not a particularly enjoyable, book."

+ Outlook 151:514 Mr 27 '29 100w

"The work has plausibility as a journalistic novel of contemporary academic problems, which are frequently being utilized just now as subjects of fiction and has a spontaneous and smoothly moving narrative."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '29 350w

HOYT, NANCY (MRS GERALD WYNN-WYNN). Bright intervals. 246p $2.50 Knopf 29-17088

"The story is simplicity itself. Lydia, daughter of mad Stephanyis and West Highland Graemes, meets and marries your perfect and typical New York business man. They play, then quarrel. Too little money, too great a need for gaiety, American style, on his part, and happiness, foreign style, on hers, nearly turn the divorce trick. But not quite. There is an interval of happenings and suspense, then the conclusion, which, if not, alas, true to life, is true to light fiction."—Outlook

---

Booklist 26:70 N '29

"Miss Hoyt's novel wears the last word in fashionable outline. . . The book is well groomed, well manicured and well mannered. It can have an entrée anywhere. It should have a pleasant reception in all the circles yearning for outward perfection, for tact, for mellifluous ease. . . It is a lustrous drawing-room companion." V. P. Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ag 18 '29 630w

"A wise and sparkling and not particularly important little story, in which personalities are emphasized more than ideas and color more than emotion. But it is smoothly constructed and unfailingly entertaining. Miss Hoyt manages to impart to her host of exotic and improbable characters, and to her cosmopolitan setting, an atmosphere of verity and a spice of wit. . . Miss Hoyt has a talent for sharp and rather pungent description. Best of all, she really knows the people of whom she writes."

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 18 '29 650w

"Clever, amusing and smartly written. . . A talent for characterization and a delicate perception of the souls of the people whom she describes underlie a casual manner. Gentle irony tempers sympathy; and the highly cultivated style reminds one that Nancy Hoyt and Elinor Wylie were sisters."

+ Outlook 152:670 Ag 21 '29 110w

HUBBACK, THEODORE R. To far western Alaska for big game; being an account of two journeys to Alaska in search of adventure. 232p il $3.50 Scribner [15s Rowland Ward]

799.2 Hunting—Alaska

Part I describes the hunting of the white sheep, black bear and giant moose in Killey Valley, Alaska. Part II is chiefly concerned with the same kind of game hunting in the Susitna-Kuskokwim country.

---

Booklist 26:108 D '29

"Mr. Hubback's book is competently and, indeed, interestingly written, but our enjoyment is marred by the inevitable collector's attitude towards wild animals. New country is only interesting because in it may be animals unaware that man is their worst enemy."

+ — Spec 143:101 Jl 20 '29 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p447 Je 6 '29 850w

HUBBARD, FRANK MCKINNEY (KIN HUBBARD, ABE MARTIN, pseud.). Abe Martin's barbed wire. 139p il $1.50 Bobbs

817 28-24851

A new collection of the homely wit and barbed aphorisms of Kin Hubbard's Abe Martin.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 4 '28 130w

"This volume contains the later maxims and aphorisms of the keenest, wisest and funniest character in American literature." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 29 '28 180w

HUBBARD, FRANK MCKINNEY (KIN HUBBARD, ABE MARTIN, pseuds.). Abe Martin's town pump. 199p il $1.50 Bobbs

817 29-19560

"Abe Martin, of Bloom Center, Brown County, Indiana, has herein collaborated with his fellow townspeople, Leghorn Tharp (man about town), Tell Binkley (real estate and insurance), Ike Lark (official bootlegger), Fawn Lippincut (socialite) and other notables, in telling the world in general in epigrammatic smart-talk just what's what in politics, prohibition, justice, feminism, divorce, farm relief, bridge, marriage, the Elks, and unrelated topics."—Boston Transcript

---

Booklist 26:110 D '29

Boston Transcript p6 N 2 '29 130w

"If you like such quips as 'He who hesitates is honked,' 'Purty Sundays make fat graveyards,' or 'Farmer Jake Bentley is beating his plow-share into a cam shaft,' you will like Town Pump, by Indiana's Sage, 'Abe Martin.' These sorts are choice bits among a bookful of similar, but less potent, witticisms. He is as much philosopher as wag, and as profound as any sage. He looks on as the world whirls away, and comments wisely and well." J: T. Gould

— + Portland Evening News p10 O 15 '29 180w

HUBBARD, KIN, pseud. See Hubbard, F. M.

HUCH, FRAU RICARDA OCTAVIA. Deruga trial; tr. from the German by Lorna Dietz. 311p $2 Macaulay

29-15482

Dr Deruga, an Italian doctor, is on trial in Munich for the murder of his divorced wife. The trial, which greatly interests Munich society, turns on the dramatic discovery of some extraordinary evidence. The novel follows the court proceedings, building up a character study of the doctor.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ag 11 '29 300w

"Characterization and dialogue are sustained and convincing. It is a lively, if not especially significant piece of work."

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 4 '29 500w

"It is something more than Ricarda Huch's technical genius that has made this book the psychological masterpiece that it unquestionably is. . . The author succeeds in keeping a tenseness about the situation that is a high compliment to her ingenuity." E. M. Benson

+ Sat R of Lit 6:88 Ag 31 '29 350w

HUCH, FRAU RICARDA OCTAVIA. Victory; tr. from the German by Catherine Alison Phillips. (Garibaldi and the new Italy, v 2) 313p $3 Knopf

Garibaldi, Giuseppe—Fiction

The second volume of Ricarda Huch's two-volume novel of the life of Garibaldi begins with Garibaldi's victory at Solferino and carries forward the story of his struggle for the liberation of Italy to the failure and disaster of the battle at Aspromonte.

"There is something very close to the essence of the popular Italian character in that of Giuseppe Garibaldi, and Ricarda Huch, with her extraordinary talent for divination and representation, has portrayed it with rare cunning. . . The narrative remains, in most of its details, so faithful to historical fact that the book can hardly be termed fiction. Yet, it is so essentially romantic in manner and treatment that it would be still more difficult to term it biography. Between these, it occupies with complete success a well proportioned and elegant mean." W: A. Drake

+ Bookm 69:199 Ap '29 460w

"The second volume of Ricarda Huch's study of Garibaldi shows a masterful grasp on fact and background, a technique in which the dramatic is given its full value, and an appreciation of the colorful incident. Its aim is to recreate an era; its effect is peculiarly negative. . . Her work is monumental—and that is all." Eugene Lohrke

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ja 13 '29 1050w

"It is history on a grand scale, for which the famous German historical writer is adequately prepared, both in style and temperament. She knows how to gain the genuine glamour of great events, to weave it into the colorful background of Italy in one of the grand moments of the country's history. Few historians or novelists realize as well how to deal with ideas and events through the mouths of common men."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 23 '29 200w

"The English translation is not beyond reproach. But even judged from its own standard, the book has its shortcomings. It would seem that Ricarda Huch's detailed knowledge of history weakened the momentum of her romantic foray. Her scholarship makes her place speeches in people's mouths which cause one to suspect that they were transplanted from actual letters. But though the author does not completely succeed in combining spirit and matter—in combining the vision of her hero with the dust of his days—her attempt is noteworthy in the history of biography." Walter Kien

+ — Nation 128:288 Mr 6 '29 480w

"The story is infused with a kind of too-feminine adoration of the fighting leader. In the light of this adoration Garibaldi is shown in more than life-size proportions, with the gigantically unreal outlines of a legend. 'Victory' is a forceful and sustained piece of prose —overmannered at times, but with a kind of enormous consistency which justifies its own existence." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 5 '29 420w

" 'Victory' makes entertaining reading and is, moreover, true to history. It re-creates one of the most dramatic episodes in history in terms of the most dramatic figure of a great popular movement."

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 20 '29 880w

"With so many faults, it is difficult to say why 'Victory' is a good book. Yet it is a good book. The distortion of history, the queer conception of Garibaldi, the assumption that the reader knows a great deal more about the struggle for Italian liberty than he is apt to know, the incoherence of a rambling discourse—all these are irritating but yield to the writer's eloquent power." D: Loth

+ — N Y World p11m Mr 31 '29 550w

"Her study of Garibaldi is neither history nor fiction; and hence it will satisfy neither the novel-reading public nor the serious historian."

— Sat R 148:398 O 5 '29 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p607 Ag 1 '29 120w

HUDDLESTON, SISLEY. Articles de Paris; a book of essays. 207p $2 Macmillan [6s Methuen]

824 28-25389

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:276 Ap '29

"Reprinted from various publications, these essays have neither the substance nor the polish to form a satisfactory book."

— Bookm 69:xx Mr '29 120w

"Mr. Huddleston lets his zest overflow in many directions; his pages are rich in observation and breathe the cosmopolitan air of the boulevards."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 20 '29 120w

"Mr. Huddleston always has something pertinent and interesting to say. He is not too accurate but the intrinsic interest of his subjects carries him along." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 11 '29 270w

"Some of them are hardly more than slight paragraphs, though commendable for style and discernment and there are longer articles both pleasing and thoughtful."

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 13 '29 340w

HUDDLESTON, SISLEY. Europe in zigzags; social, artistic, literary and political affairs on the continent. 354p il $5 Lippincott [21s Harrap]

940.5 Europe—Politics. Europe—History—20th century 29-29235

A rapid survey of post-war conditions—political, social, literary and artistic—in European countries. Mr Huddleston analyzes the trend in national and international affairs and policies, blending in his book the descriptions of a traveller in Germany, Austria, Spain, Italy, and the Balkan countries, with a series of portraits of the leading personalities in those countries and a discussion of the problems that face them.

"Mr. Huddleston's sane, candid and shrewd analyses, estimates and prophecies are of unimpeachable authority." Frances Bartlett

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 7 '29 2000w

"If every traveler to Europe this coming year who really wants to understand the problems and characteristics of the peoples he expects to visit would read this book, I believe more would be accomplished thereby than by the disarmament conference." Clara Laughlin

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p15 D 14 '29 900w

"For years Mr. Huddleston has been doing this [sort of thing] and the results have been alike entertaining and instructive. But when he gathers together a whole sheaf of his dispatches and articles and seeks to blend them into a book, the result, though it remains instructive and entertaining, is not a thing of unity."

+ — N Y Times p8 D 8 '29 580w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 154:29 Ja 1 '30 70w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:24 D '29 100w

HUDDLESTON, SISLEY. Louis XIV in love and in war. 356p il $4 Harper [18s J. Cape]

B or 92 Louis XIV, king of France 29-11618

The author's dedication is to Dr. Alfred Adler, "whose revelations of the causes and consequences of what he has called the 'inferiority complex,' have made possible this book." Sisley Huddleston shows Louis developing from a dull, oppressed boy, conscious of weakness and fearing failure, into the resplendent Sun-king who exaggerated his own importance and demanded an absurd veneration. With this key to character, all his experiences, in politics, in love and in war, are explained.

Booklist 25:392 Jl '29

"Mr. Sisley Huddleston, the Francophile newspaper correspondent, has written a life of Louis XIV in a manner that reveals him as a good journalist, but a poor historiographer." C. H. Grattan

— Bookm 70:210 O '29 420w

"This fine biography is no moral homily. It is a responsible study of one of those endlessly puzzling mysteries, a strong man. Mr. Huddleston has solved no problem, but he has given us an interesting and useful book." R. T. House

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 26 '29 1000w

"When some other theory explaining men's conduct, supersedes the overworked inferiority complex, then a new life of this monarch may appear. Let us hope that whoever does it will have as charming a style as Mr. Huddleston and will present the complex background with equal artistry." G. R. B. R.

— + Boston Transcript p3 Je 22 '29 450w

"If one accepts Mr. Huddleston's premise that Louis XIV can be wholly explained by the assumption that his character was the inevitable product of certain complexes which have been curiously overlooked by previous biographers, one will thoroughly enjoy this book. Otherwise, one will probably say that a more than capable writer has wasted his time in defending a highly dubious thesis."

— Nation 129:560 N 13 '29 80w

"The book contains no index, no bibliography, few references, some inaccurate quotations, and many sweeping assertions on matters which are still and probably always will be darkly obscure."

— Nation and Ath 45:541 Jl 20 '29 760w

"One could not ask for a more interesting and vivid introduction to the Grand Monarque than is here given. Mr. Huddleston does not live in France for nothing. Read his description of what happened when the Edict of Nantes was revoked and you will see what history can become in the hands of a man who can write."

+ New Statesman 33:414 Jl 6 '29 1200w

"Mr. Huddleston's is an altogether inferior work. The Louis he portrays, or attempts to portray, is less than a moron, not much more than half-witted. He tries to give an air of novelty to the assault by rather violently super-imposing an artificial psychoanalysis on his subject." C: W. Thompson

— N Y Times p10 My 19 '29 170w

Outlook 152:189 My 29 '29 130w

"Mr. Huddleston's application of Adlerian ideas to the interpretation of the character of Louis XIV is of genuine interest, and if it caters for the encroaching biographical vogue it is vastly superior to the merely fanciful and bright portraits with which we have become so tiresomely familiar."

+ Sat R 148:49 Jl 13 '29 720w

— Spec 143:55 Jl 13 '29 160w

"It is when Mr. Huddleston forgets his thesis that he is at his best. His book is not an essay but a fairly detailed short biography, and where facts, not theories, are in question it is sound. Those who are widely read in the period may not find anything novel but the theories; to others it should prove a useful and very readable introduction. An index should, however, have been added."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p600 Ag 1 '29 950w

Wis Lib Bul 25:322 O '29

"If an inferiority complex can create such men, then let us all cry with Mr. Dodd, 'Vive le complexe!' And why, then, must psychologists seek to destroy it? After reading Mr. Huddleston's book one might naturally ask if, after all, an inferiority complex is not what less learned mortals, like ourselves, call genius."
J: M. S. Allison

Yale R n s 19:423 winter '30 500w

HUDDLESTON, SISLEY. Normandy; its charm, its curiosities, its antiquities, its history, its topography. 311p il $3 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Harrap]

914.42 Normandy—Description and travel 29-782

"Mr. Huddleston's book projects town and building against a background of history, fills in detail with some completeness, and introduces occasional comment on persons and customs."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 25:390 Jl '29

"Mr. Huddleston is observant, well-informed and appreciative; he possesses the desirable qualifications of a guide—without the undesirable ones."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ap 21 '29 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p68 My '29

New Statesman 31:394 Je 30 '28 580w

"Sisley Huddleston's 'Normandy' is about as fine a travel book as one could hope to read, and about as practical a one as you could want to use. A really capital book of its kind."

+ N Y Evening Post p9m F 9 '29 50w

"Mr. Huddleston's book is, to all appearances, accurate, and one of the most comprehensive tourists' guides yet supplied for this romantic section of France. It is for the traveler rather than the stay-at-home."

+ N Y Times p36 Mr 24 '29 280w

Pratt p29 summer '29

St Louis 27:341 D '29

"Mr. Huddleston's 'Normandy' is remarkable in this: that although the reader is all the time conscious of the lover of Normandy, and can read unbounded enthusiasm between the lines, the writer never forgets the job in hand. The brakes are on from beginning to end. It must have been difficult for a man of Mr. Huddleston's vigorous likes and dislikes to keep himself in check. There is too little said of the food and drink, and the inns, but as we have already complimented him for curbing his enthusiasm, this may seem an inconsistent grievance."

+ — Sat R 146:273 S 1 '28 380w

Sat R of Lit 5:716 F 23 '29 100w

"Mr. Sisley Huddleston's very conscientiousness stands in his way, for he packs his pages with information regarding history, architecture, economics and even politics to such an extent that the reader is stifled. This makes hard reading, and there are other points to criticize. Mr. Huddleston's attack on Caen for its dirtiness and neglect of its churches is hardly fair. But as in all Mr. Huddleston's writings, the amount of solid information which it imparts is this book's strong point. It is an excellent companion for the tourist, whether he is seeing the country by road or by rail."

HUDDLESTON, SISLEY—Continued
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p563 Ag 2 '28 500w

HUDDLESTON, SISLEY. Paris salons, cafés, studios; being social, artistic and literary memories. 366p il $5 Lippincott

914.436 Paris—Intellectual life. Paris—Social life and customs. Salons 28-30697

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:208 F '29

"He doesn't write any too well and he doesn't see too deeply into the writings of those who do write well but he has a keen sense of the material that makes life a pageant for the sojourners in Paris, and lists it very completely."

Dial 86:165 F '29 120w

"His gossip of Bohemia is sprightly and easy, sometimes witty, and he never stays long enough with any of his multifarious friends to let them get tiresome." L. B.
+ New Repub 58:104 Mr 13 '29 200w

Reviewed by F. M. Ford
— Sat R of Lit 5:745 Mr 9 '29 3400w

"When Mr Huddleston sticks to the Paris he knows best, and especially when he tries to interpret the Paris he knows best, he is enlightening as well as entertaining. And his notes about authors may be crisp and revealing."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 2 '28 850w

HUEFFER, OLIVER MADOX. French France; foreword by Katherine Woods. 286p $3.50 Appleton [10s 6d Benn]

914.4 France—Social life and customs. National characteristics, French 29-10191

The scene of these delightful and penetrating observations is a French city of 40,000 inhabitants, within an hour of Paris. Mr Hueffer has lived in leisurely intimacy with the city and its people and describes with charm many aspects of this stronghold of French France.

Booklist 25:355 Je '29

"We can hardly remember a single book about France that is so penetrating and so fair, so free from cant, malice and sentimentality as 'French France.' Never splashingly picturesque, never eloquent in the least, humorous only in the most unobtrusive manner, it is written throughout with the subtle ease that means perfect freedom from sophistication." Leon Guerard
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Ap 28 '29 500w

Boston Transcript p8 My 18 '29 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p149 D '29

Nation 128:755 Je 26 '29 680w

"They show a sympathy and understanding with the French people and their social and political problems that prove Mr. Hueffer's long residence in France and discriminating observation."
+ Nation and Ath 44:798 Mr 9 '29 260w

"He has written a book full of urbanity and wit and keen observation, and the kind of book, moreover, which encourages us to hope for more. . . In fact, this is an airy, entertaining, unpretentious sort of book; but a remarkably wise one, because it is written by one who has seen and understood the heart of France."
+ New Statesman 32:764 Mr 23 '29 670w

"Written with considerable charm and concision." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p11m My 4 '29 70w

"It is a book of such rare quality both in its background of knowledge and in its literary charm that it will serve as a real medium of information upon a subject of which the world at large knows a very great deal less than it thinks it does." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 21 '29 1050w

"Here is a book, charmingly written, by one who has spent many years in France, which deals exclusively with the life, the customs and the people of the provinces. . . This is no dull treatise, but a very live and delightful book." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:515 Mr 27 '29 130w

"Mr. Hueffer makes it the more attractive by clothing his argument with a winning style and selecting topics interesting in themselves." W: B. Shaw
+ R of Rs 79:20 Je '29 180w

St Louis 27:289 O '29

"Mr. Hueffer's method in this instructive book is to introduce a figure representative of the provincial city or of the Village of Central France, and then turn back on an essay or a story. He can do this really well because he has lived in France among these people, and is not confined to the rather romantic point of view of the traveller or holiday-maker. The interest and value of the book lie in the admirable pictures of provincial life, in stories like that of the Communist plasterer who was a botanist, and in the well-managed digressions."
+ Sat R 147:115 Ja 26 '29 300w

"Mr. Hueffer's France is an admirable supplement to Bodley's. It is a serious study, though lightly written, of French people as he has known them. It is anecdotal and interpretive, amusing and thoughtful."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:938 Ap 20 '29 250w

"Mr. Hueffer sets himself to explain certain aspects of French life to his countrymen. He is well equipped to do so, having lived a great part of his life among the French and made many warm personal friendships in all classes. His chapters are light and jocular, but no less acute in their observation for that."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p108 F 14 '29 600w

Wis Lib Bul 25:275 Jl '29

HUGEL, FRIEDRICH, freiherr von. Letters to a niece; ed. with an introd. by Gwendolen Greene. 201p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

B or 92 Spiritual life 29-9055

Loving letters of spiritual advice and teaching from Baron von Hügel to his niece, written during the years of her conversion to the Catholic Church.

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 16 '29 920w

"The letters make an interesting, indeed a fascinating, volume and form the best revelation of the Baron's personal characteristics now in print." J. McS.
+ Cath World 129:500 Jl '29 250w

Nation and Ath 44:558 Ja 19 '29 800w

Reviewed by Evelyn Underhill
Spec 141:822 D 1 '28 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1002 D 20 '28 300w

HUGEL, FRIEDRICH, freiherr von. Readings; sel. by Algar Thorold; with an introd. essay on his philosophy of religion. 359p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

201 Religion—Philosophy. Caterina da Genova, Saint 29-8140

"Here we have a volume of selections, arranged by Algar Thorold, from 'The Mystical Element of Religion,' 'Eternal life,' and 'Essays and Addresses on the Philosophy of Religion;' and they are a revelation of the religious mystic triumphant."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 30 '28 130w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 23 '29 200w

"To Baron von Hügel's writings, Mr. Algar Thorold contributes a brilliant preface. It is brilliant precisely because it throws light on the Baron's profound mentality. Most of the book consists of commentaries on this or that doctrine of St. Catherine of Genoa. But every doctrine was founded on some vital experience, and it is a very apostle of experience who makes his verdict and extends and illuminates the aspect of truth under discussion." W. K. F.

+ New Statesman 32:330 D 15 '28 320w

"Von Hügel is insistent on warning his niece that a keen religious bent will be perverted if it leads to neglect of the just claims of worldly things; he counsels her against all petty devotionalism that unfits the spirit for dealing with the wider world. But always at the back of his advice there remains an austerity not less intense, if more restrained, than Pascal's."

Times [London] Lit Sup p1002 D 20 '28 280w

HUGHAN, JESSIE WALLACE. What is socialism? (Vanguard outlines of social philosophies) 192p 50c Vanguard press

335 Socialism 29-4786

"Dr. Hughan, who is known best for her 'American Socialism of the Present Day,' has outlined with unusual clarity the Socialists' main criticisms of the existing economic order, the basic theories of 'scientific' socialism, the general features of the proposed co-operative order and the means urged for the realization of that order."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"This popular-priced book is an eminently readable, concise and scientific exposition of American socialism of the vintage of 1928." H. W. Laidler

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 20 '29 270w

St Louis 27:158 My '29

"A public prone to connect the word 'Socialism,' with direct action, the social revolution and general 'redness' will get a good idea of what the Socialist Commonwealth would be like, what would happen to private capital and private ownership of consumption goods, wages, and such matters, as well as learning how this movement differs from Communism and anarchism, with which it is too often confused."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 13 '28 220w

HUGHES, CHARLES EVANS. Our relations to the nations of the western hemisphere. (Stafford Little lectures for 1928) 130p $1.75 Princeton univ. press [8s Oxford]

327 United States—Foreign relations—Spanish America. Spanish America—Foreign relations—United States 28-24461

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"His treatment of the subject will serve to clarify much of the confused public thinking that now exists relative to the Monroe Doctrine and to the other principles of the foreign policy of the United States." L. S. Rowe

+ Ann Am Acad 142:454 Mr '29 300w

Booklist 25:194 F '29

"The clarity in style of these lectures, their conciseness, and the judicial manner in which a great secretary of state sets forth the American point of view at its best, compel the admiration of the reader." R. A. Falconer

+ Canadian Hist R 9:335 D '28 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p99 Jl '29

Reviewed by A. C. Wilgus

Hist Outlook 20:143 Mr '29 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:13 F '29

Pratt p8 winter '29

St Louis 27:9 Ja '29

HUGHES, CHARLES EVANS. Pan American peace plans; [lectures delivered on the Sherrill foundation at the School of law, Yale univ., Mar., 1929]. 68p $1 Yale univ. press

341.1 Spanish America—Foreign relations—United States. United States—Foreign relations—Spanish America. Arbitration, International. Pan Americanism 29-20764

"Authoritative and complete statement by the chief of the delegation of the United States to the Pan American Congress, regarding the results achieved at that meeting and the significance of those results for inter-American relations."—Publisher's note

Booklist 26:102 D '29

Boston Transcript p7 N 16 '29 200w

St Louis 27:331 D '29

HUGHES, CHARLES EVANS. Supreme court of the United States; its foundation, methods and achievements; an interpretation. (Columbia univ. Lectures. George Blumenthal foundation) 269p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

353.5 United States. Supreme court 28-6631

"This little volume of lectures delivered by Mr. Hughes at Columbia University last year has the distinction of being the first systematic attempt by one who has been a member of that body to picture and explain the work of the Supreme Court of the United States."—New Repub

"Detachment is the keynote of the book. It is written with austere restraint. It is in no sense an 'inside' or confidential story. . . We have, in short, exactly the proper and decorous account of the Supreme Court which we ought to expect from Mr. Hughes." R. E. Cushman

+ New Repub 56:253 O 17 '28 950w

N Y Times p20 Ap 15 '28 320w

Pratt p12 autumn '28

HUGHES, RICHARD ARTHUR WARREN. Innocent voyage. 399p $2.50 Harper

29-6668

After the hurricane that razes the Thornton home in the West Indies, the children are sent to England. Word reaches the parents that the children have been captured by pirates and drowned. Actually they continue the voyage on the "pirate" ship, a voyage that has the quality of a nightmare wherein the most fantastic events are mixed with the natural and real. These events involve both children and crew, yet the minds of the two groups never meet in understanding, either of each other, or of the terrible things that happen.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:660 Je '29

Booklist 26:33 O '29

"The result of this amazing conjunction of perfect innocence with a series of highly melodramatic events is illuminating, disturbing, deliciously droll, and powerfully moving." Juana Allraum

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ap 28 '29 800w

"Mr. Hughes appears to have given it the same skill in craftsmanship and the same outstanding originality of thought that distinguished his other work. The story is strange, almost fantastic. There is a personality about it that grips the reader, not to mention its stark and powerful realism."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '29 160w

"Mr. Hughes skillfully carries the absurd story forward with masterly originality. . . Apart from being a rapid narrative in which the gay, the casual, and the occasionally brutal are thrown together with the clarity and strangeness of real beauty, Mr. Hughes's book is a highly original study in the child mentality." V. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 16 '29 550w

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine

Nation and Ath 45:830 S 28 '29 550w

"Poetry, a readily varied humor running the gamut from mad playfulness to the most biting satirical wit, and in addition a rich multiplicity of incident, are of themselves enough to commend any imaginative fiction; but Mr. Hughes gives us more. He gives us a world authentically apprehended—or so the reader is convinced—through the mind and senses of children." L. Galantière

+ New Repub 58:312 My 1 '29 950w

HUGHES, R: A. W.—*Continued
Reviewed by Ruth Sapin
New Repub 61:26 N 27 '29 180w

"The art of the writer is shown, not in the style so much as in the avoidance of style, in his skill in never 'writing up' incidents which are preposterous enough in themselves, in always making the right transition from one extraordinary pen-picture to the next." Cyril Connolly
+ New Statesman 33:780 O 5 '29 1150w

"It is fashioned of that gravely fantastic material of which dreams are made and permeated with an illusive beauty. Mr. Hughes handles words with delicacy and skill. He also has the faculty of penetrating deep into the thoughts and motives of children." F: F. Van de Water
+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 13 '29 210w

"It is an unusual accomplishment when an author takes an improbable plot, makes children the main characters, and writes a book deserving of the most wholehearted adult study. This author has done it. The children are utterly natural; the events, adventurous as they are, take on the element of the expected. Charm captivates the reader."
+ N Y World p11m Mr 31 '28 220w

"The work tickled and revived me. This chap Hughes, I thought, the author of this delectable fantasy, must of course have been born and brought up in Jamaica, familiar with the West Indian scene. Imagine my astonishment and consuming delight to discover that he has never yet visited the West Indies! By choosing an unknown scene Hughes forced himself to achieve the verisimilitude necessary to true fiction; he had to make the unknown picture real to himself, before he could go on. And I can testify that he achieved it." Lincoln Colcord
+ N Y World p10m My 5 '29 720w

"A remarkably fine book. . . We suppose the book invites comparison with What Maisie Knew. Both are excursions into child psychology." W. B. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:596 Ap 10 '29 110w

"It is a story that makes few concessions to probability; it sets out to overwhelm the imagination by shock tactics, to startle and to impress it into a willing or a paralysed suspension of disbelief. It is essentially a 'tall' story, from the general scheme down to the smallest detail, flouting verisimilitude." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 148:355 S 28 '29 700w

"No reader will be untouched by the novel's freshness and far-spreading vitality. No one can set it down without thinking some long, long thoughts." R. B. Macdougall
+ Sat R of Lit 5:878 Ap 13 '29 450w

"The story is not primarily an adventure story. It is a most profound study of child character, without tears or complexes. Two thirds of the way through, there is a murder which I find very hard to believe in; and with the weight of this crime upon them, the succeeding pages lose their freshness. There is a note of adult bitterness." V. S. Pritchett
+ — Spec 143:417 S 28 '29 450w

"Most certainly it can never be forgotten by anyone who reads it; and yet it induces a feeling of hopelessness before the task of conveying its quality by any brief description, since it is essentially sui generis, and the genus is so far represented by this single specimen."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p742 S 26 '29 450w

Wis Lib Bul 25:160 My '29

HUGHES, RUPERT. Mermaid and centaur. 394p $2 Harper
29-12488

To please his little deformed sister, Jason brings home from the carnival Zarna, the diving girl, and her trained seal Suzanne. The visit is a great success and to the invalid's delight Zarna marries Jason and comes with her seal to the farm to stay. But the call of the old life is stronger than the new love; so the mermaid leaves the centaur.

"The novel has an undeniable fascination, in part due to the elements which enter into it, and in part to the descriptive powers and unfailing dramatic sense of the author."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Jl 21 '29 200w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 26 '29 250w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p6m Je 15 '29 70w

"Mr. Hughes has certainly made no great addition to literature here, but he has written an entertaining yarn."
+ — N Y Times p9 Je 9 '29 400w

"Mr. Hughes keeps the interest of the extravagant narrative at a high pitch and it holds the attention, without, however, being in any way an addition to literature."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '29 160w

HULBERT, ARCHER BUTLER. Frontiers; the genius of American nationality. 266p $3 Little 917.3 National characteristics, American. United States—Civilization 29-9117

The book goes deeper than a casual survey of "national characteristics." It is an exploration of the American soul educed from the American soil; an evaluation of the pioneer spirit which has pushed back the frontiers not only of the land but of life.

Booklist 26:25 O '29

"Mr. Hulbert's thinking is well grounded in the philosophy of history. He writes with imagination and eloquence, which sometimes brings him dangerously near indulgence in 'purple patches,' but for the most part his feeling is restrained enough to be impressive, and his desire is ardent to help keep alive the ancient faith of Americans in their country and its destiny."
+ N Y Times p10 My 19 '29 520w

"Mr. Hulbert does not make the mistake of some writers on American history of employing imagination without research. The result is that his book is truly suggestive without being misleading. It will sharpen the reader's comprehension of the composite American scene."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 25 '29 700w

Wis Lib Bul 25:275 Jl '29

HULD, PALLE. Boy scout around the world; a boy scout adventure; tr. by Eleanor Hard. 197p il $2 Coward-McCann
910.4 Voyages around the world. Voyages and travels, Juvenile 29-25632

The author, a fifteen-year-old Danish boy scout, made a trip around the world in forty-four days, thus bettering the record of Jules Verne's hero. Altho he made such a speedy journey Palle managed to form very intelligent opinions on the countries he visited. This is the account of his trip from start to finish, with added chapters on the receptions given him in England and France on his return.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Outlook 153:591 D 11 '29 80w

"The book is naturally a tagging of surfaces and a rushing on. But it is a dull reader who cannot enjoy things with this boy who managed to see so much and who gives honest and amusing reactions to the whirring landscape. . . No more stimulating book could be put in a boy's hands than this well-written and exciting record." T. M. Longstreth
+ Sat R of Lit 6:538 D 7 '29 250w

HULL, ISAAC. Commodore Hull; papers of Isaac Hull; ed. by Gardner Weld Allen. 341p il $3.50 Boston athenæum
B or 92 United States—History, Naval 29-18696

"The Isaac Hull Collection, which was acquired by the Boston Athenaeum in 1924, consists of letter-books, log-books, and more than two thousand letters and documents. From this collection Dr. Allen chose for publication 183 papers covering the years 1810-1841 (Hull's dates are 1773-1842), and also some extracts taken from log-books and other materials. The papers are printed with headings and signatures in full; and the extracts, as quotations in the text supplied by the editor. There are eight papers for the period prior to the War of 1812, and two for the period of the war. Three-fourths of the volume covers the four years 1838-1841, when Hull was in command of the Mediterranean Station, with the Ohio as his flagship."—Am Hist R

---

"Dr. Allen chose from the Hull Collection those papers that throw light on the character of Hull, those that illustrate life in the old navy, and those that possess human interest. His choice is an excellent one. Most of the chapters of the book are introduced by descriptive materials containing biographical and explanatory information. Pieced together these make a connected biography of Hull, the best in existence, and the most extensive, since hitherto only brief sketches of his life had been published. The volume is exceedingly valuable for its information relating to customs in the old navy." C: O. Paullin

+ Am Hist R 35:177 O '29 450w

"Certainly Dr. Allen has shown fine discrimination in his selection and handling. The papers have been supplemented in a masterly way by the insertion from many sources of biographical material." T: C. Richards

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '29 1700w

HULLINGER, EDWIN WARE. New fascist state; a study of Italy under Mussolini. 298p $2.50 Henkle

945.09 Italy—Politics and government. Mussolini, Benito. Italy—Economic conditions

29-31022

"Mr. Hullinger writes as a newspaper man to whom fascism is one more interesting and dramatic thing in a changing world. He contrives to compress into his pages about all the information on the subject that the average American will take time to assimilate, strews his narrative with anecdotes and personal experiences, and keeps Mussolini pretty constantly at the front of the stage."—N Y Times

---

"A good popular exposition, pleasantly and popularly written, covering much of the ground that Mr. Schneider leaves out, but necessarily rather superficially. The author's observations . . . are fresh and interesting, if not startlingly novel." W. Y. Elliott

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:477 My '29 120w

Booklist 25:279 Ap '29

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 16 '29 750w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

N Y Times p3 F 3 '29 60w

Reviewed by Bernard Smith

N Y World p10m Ja 13 '29 140w

"Mr. Hullinger is very pontifical, full of unction, and compact of little except generalizations and judgments, all of them facile and none of them strikingly new. His book has the sole merit of being easy to understand by persons not steeped in Fascist literature, and of being a survey in compact form of some of the outstanding characteristics of Mussolini and of the new Italy." W. Y. Elliott

— + Sat R of Lit 5:1125 Je 22 '29 330w

HULME, EDWARD MASLIN. Middle ages. (Am. hist. ser.) 851p $5.50 Holt [20s G. Allen]

940.1 Middle ages

29-13565

A textbook for college classes written in a style which will awaken the interest of the general reader. The plan of the book thruout is to suggest questions the answers to which may be sought in the sources given at the end of each chapter.

---

"This book has a special claim on the interest of American students of the Middle Ages. It is based, the author says, on the outlines which Professor Burr had printed for the use of his students at Cornell University. Thus it presents, through the genial medium of the author's own knowledge and appreciation of the Middle Ages, a permanent record of the influence of one of the masters of medieval studies in this country. Quite apart from this consideration, the work is welcome for itslef, as an additional entry in the field of recent books on the Middle Ages, each of which has its own characteristic scope, proportions, and measure of values." E. H. McNeal

+ Am Hist R 35:322 Ja '30 600w

Booklist 26:63 N '29

"The style is simple, the narrative is not overcrowded with data, and controverted topics are judiciously presented."

+ Nation 129:330 S 25 '29 180w

"A sympathetic, readable study of the western world from the decay of Rome until 1300. It is erudite and at the same time written in a smooth unpretentious style which will please the non-specializing reader."

+ Outlook 152:433 Jl 10 '29 200w

HUME, CYRIL. Dish for the gods. 374p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-9373

As a child Aline was made unhappy by the bitterness between her parents. She resolved in her heart never to marry. Barry came, however, and made her exquisitely happy for their brief married life. His sudden death left her defenceless before emotions so recently and so poignantly wakened, and was the cause of a long and sordid aftermath to ecstasy.

---

"It is badly constructed, jumping backward and forward in an incoherent manner and introducing far too much extraneous matter. The development of the central character is unbelievable." Herbert Gorman

— Bookm 69:431 Je '29 280w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ap 14 '29 350w

"The book is a brilliant, uncannily comprehensive study of the curious urge in women to put all their emotional eggs in one basket. Mr. Hume's frank presentation of his erotic materials is bound to prove offensive to some of his readers. That, I should say, is their hard luck. For indelicacy has its virtues." Florence Haxton

+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 13 '29 620w

— N Y Times p22 Ap 28 '29 550w

"Cyril Hume in this book is very earnest and sincere. But his method has produced some unfortunate results. At times he seems very much like a little boy stealthily reading the medical book from the shelf that was supposed to be out of his reach. . . There are glowing passages in this book, as there are deep, sharp probings, things good to have said and done. Let no one approach this 'A Dish for the Gods' without a strong stomach. It is highly spiced; it is drowned in the sauce of wordiness; but there is substance in it."

— + N Y World p11m My 19 '29 450w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

— Outlook 152:78 My 8 '29 220w

"This novel by Mr. Hume is preoccupied with the sexual misadventures of a crowd of insignificant, furtively erotic dullards. This sexuality is oppressive, out of all sensible proportion, and, worst crime of all, apparently indulged in for its own sour sake. What was the reason for this laborious novel? Heaven knows—and perhaps Mr. Hume. It is an almost perfect example of an obscurely ambitious and obviously serious-minded novel gone completely on the rocks."

— Sat R of Lit 5:934 Ap 20 '29 350w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '29 180w

HUMMEL, GEORGE FREDERICK. Summer lightning. 312p $2.50 Liveright

29-7400

A newspaper correspondent pining for adventure is mixed up in a strange affair in present day Italy. It begins with an exotic

HUMMEL, G: F:—Continued
dance in a Naples tenement house whither the reporter and an Italian friend are led by a mysterious beauty. The dancer disappears. In the same house, later, the Italian's young brother and beautiful wife are found shot dead. Political intrigue is back of the affair, and in following it up the correspondent comes again upon the romantic figure of the lovely dancer.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p38 Ap 14 '29 180w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 13 '29 110w

"The plot does not move us fast enough. It is thick with complications, but the reader follows parallel lanes instead of a single twisting road, so effectively do routine pieces of description and shifts of scene distract him."
N Y Times p22 My 19 '29 140w

"Mr. Hummel, as always, writes captivatingly. There is refinement of description, intelligent handling of character and complete mastery of atmosphere. 'Summer Lightning' is a masterpiece of excitement."
+ N Y World p11m Mr 31 '29 200w

"A very romantic and colorful tale." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:596 Ap 10 '29 80w

"The accomplished Mr. Hummel here experiments with a novel of the pure adventure species and brings off a brilliant success."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:934 Ap 20 '29 150w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '29 240w

HUMPHREY, ARTHUR WILFRID. Modern case for socialism. 272p $4.50 Macmillan [12s 6d Allen & U.]
335 Socialism. Capitalism. Industry and state [29-3646]

"A presentation of the case against capitalism and for socialism by an English socialist. While the evidence presented is drawn mainly from England, this work ranks among the best books favorable to socialism in print."—Wis Lib Bul

"The book as a whole is a remarkably clear and understandable statement of the socialist philosophy and tactics for the general reader."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ja 6 '29 280w
Nation 128:324 Mr 13 '28 100w
— Times [London] Lit Sup p611 Ag 30 '28 420w
Wis Lib Bul 25:26 Ja '29
World Tomorrow 12:186 Ap '29 30w

HUMPHREY, ZEPHINE (MRS WALLACE WEIR FAHNESTOCK). Chrysalis. 171p $2.50 Dutton 818 29-2252

In a sequel to "Winterwise" Zephine Humphrey tells how she and her husband exchanged the inconvenient antiquity of their historic old Vermont house for a new and smaller home which they named Chrysalis, since they had woven it about themselves "as the grub weaves its chrysalis."

Booklist 25:241 Mr '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 7 '29 150w
Boston Transcript p6 Mr 23 '29 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p156 D '29

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 26 '29 60w
N Y Times p20 Ja 20 '29 300w

"The two books of this writer are gems of their kind, unusually well-written, and unusually wise." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 227:adv Mr '29 100w

"This is a delicate and charming nature essay, a sequel to 'Winterwise.' It is a book which is sure to please lovers of nature and those who have the leisure to enjoy wise and tranquil reflection on life in general and home in particular."
+ Outlook 151:150 Ja 23 '29 50w
Pratt p27 summer '29

"A human interest story, built of fact as well as fancy, 'Chrysalis' will indeed please you if you are looking for other than exciting narrative, sophistication, or utter abstinence from sentimentality."
Sat R of Lit 5:735 Mr 2 '29 200w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '29 480w

"Sensitive, profoundly observant, sturdily delicate, the narrative follows the subtle emotional growth that goes into the building of a new home in the mountains of Vermont. If you aren't lifted and delighted, you're no friend of ours."
+ World Tomorrow 12:284 Je '29 60w

HUNEKER, JAMES GIBBONS. Essays; sel. with an introd. by H. L. Mencken. 492p $3.50 Scribner
814 29-22833

Essays, artistic, literary, musical, selected with an introduction by H. L. Mencken. Contents: The quintessence of Shaw; August Strindberg; Villiers de l'Isle Adam; Richard Strauss and Nietzsche; The music of the future; A sentimental education; The Baudelaire legend; The real Flaubert; Anatole France; The pessimist's progress; Phases of Nietzsche; Ibsen; Max Stirner; Paul Cézanne; Monticelli; Rodin; A new study of Watteau; The real Isolde—Wagner's autobiography; A visit to Walt Whitman; The buffoon of the new eternities: Jules Laforgue; A study of De Maupassant; A musical primitive: Modeste Moussorgsky; George Sand; O. W.; Verdi's Otello; Index.

Christian Century 46:1546 D 11 '29 250w

"Huneker seems stale. We can recognize his capacity for the kind of thing he sought to do, his brilliance, his independence; but his work is seen to be—O, damning phrase!—of merely historical importance." Granville Hicks
— + Nation 129:780 D 25 '29 1000w

"His pages are crowded with information, with good gossip of all sorts, and he certainly creates a desire in his reader to go and experience the masterpiece for himself. Once that has been done, Huneker's function is at an end. His essays then appear rather like disjointed passages of conversation, still full of charm and gusto, playing gaily over the surfaces, but communicating very little of exactly what quality distinguishes one work from another, and defining almost nothing." F. O. Matthiessen
+ — New Repub 61:115 D 18 '29 430w

"For such standards of taste as prevail here today, for the increased literacy, for the unprecedented hospitality to new ideas and new craftsmen, Huneker can safely be considered more responsible than any other person. He was not only a first-rate critic but a great reporter. He brought us a constant volume of news, news that we sorely needed, news that, on the other hand, was pretty tough fodder for the general palate. And he made us like it. . . Mencken's introduction is one of the best things he has done. He has written con amore and with his enviable tempo. It gives the human, companionable side of the man as well as his artistic value." L: Sherwin
+ N Y Evening Post p12m N 2 '29 1000w

"When all is said, the breezy spray of names that informs Huneker's pages is infectious; it can send you scurrying to the library; it makes literature exciting."
+ N Y Times p2 N 17 '29 900w

"Huneker at his best is dazzling, scintillating; a prodigious reporter, he opened a way to the new heralds of the lightning. And the essays selected by Mencken still glow with imperishable fire. . . His eclecticism, his journalistic flair, made him write as interestingly about a great artist as about a minor performer. He would have thought it a crime to be dull. After all these years his essays have as much vitality as ever." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p15 N 2 '29 1000w

"If Mr Mencken were seriously trying to obtain for these agreeable critical essays the public of readers capable of enjoying them, he might better have chosen a different style. . . Mr Huneker's criticism was spirited, go-as-you-please, allusive, full of phrases that were sometimes piquant and sometimes labored. But he was essentially urbane and cultured. That is why he can be read today with pleasure—not for the reasons advanced by Mr Mencken."
+ — Springf'd Republican p8 O 26 '29 800w

HUNGERFORD, EDWARD. Story of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, 1827-1927. 2v il $10 (52s 6d) Putnam

385 Baltimore and Ohio railroad 28-25952

"Mr. Edward Hungerford's excellent story, besides giving a full account of the road itself in its century of ups and downs, tells something of what the building of that trunk line meant to communities between the Atlantic seaboard and the Mississippi Valley."—R of Rs

---

"His tale is not technical, and it is by no means hard reading. In fact, it is a highly absorbing and entertaining account of the rise of the Iron Horse, American railroading in general, and the Baltimore and Ohio in particular." G. K. H.
+ Boston Transcript p4 F 23 '29 970w
Cleveland Open Shelf p115 Jl '29
N Y Times p18 Ap 7 '29 150w
Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:20 Ap '29 210w

HUNT, FRAZIER. Custer, the last of the cavaliers. 209p il $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

B or 92 Custer, George Armstrong 28-24464

"The extraordinary career of General George Armstrong Custer, gallant dude of the plains, swashbuckling poseur and professional soldier who died at the Little Bighorn, has been told many times in many forms. Writing in a terse, staccato style, with considerable nervous tension of manner, Frazier Hunt here tells it again in an exciting and straightforward narrative."—N Y Times

---

"The book will appeal to any boy with a feeling for adventure, and will be hardly less absorbing to any man to whom chivalrous exploits can still impart a thrill."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 31 '29 200w

"Mr. Hunt has written a book about Custer which must be read with care. The reader should not accept it as unquestionable history, nor should it be considered entirely as historical romance. The author gives some authentic information regarding the incidents which preceded Custer's death, but when he attempts to describe the scene of the engagement between Custer's doomed band, the Seventh Cavalry troopers, he is writing not what is known but what is still unrevealed." J. S. B.
— + Boston Transcript p8 D 1 '28 450w

"Mr. Hunt's version is absorbing. It is easy reading. It tells a stirring tale, as dramatic a saga as the frontier ever produced, but his book is not history, nor is it quite biography. It is an eager, leaping story about a man named Custer, but it isn't Custer who rides through the pages—it is merely the shadow of a curly-haired circus performer. To do right by Custer. Mr. Hunt needed a more leisurely style, more detail and documents and more space."
— + N Y Times p13 Ja 6 '28 1000w
Reviewed by C: J. Finger
N Y World p11m N 11 '28 360w

HUNT, LESLIE L. 25 kites that fly. 110p il $1.25 Bruce pub.

796.15 Kites 29-12278

Practical suggestions on kites and kite making, including chapters on plane-surface kites, tailess kites, compound kites, and kite accessories. Illustrated with photographs and diagrams.

---

Booklist 26:20 O '29

"Here is a book that will be welcomed by all boys, and girls too, who are interested in the making of kites. It serves also as an excellent handbook for instructors in summer schools and camps."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 17 '29 150w
Wis Lib Bul 25:279 Jl '29

HUNT, ROCKWELL DENNIS, and SANCHEZ, MRS NELLIE (VAN DE GRIFT). Short history of California. 671p il $4.50 Crowell

979.4 California—History 29-18096

The entire story of the discovery and development of California, divided into the following parts: The torch of civilization; The Spanish pioneers; Under the Republic of Mexico; Acquisition by the United States; Achievement of social order; A commonwealth growing in greatness; Political and social problems.

---

"A reasonably complete synthesis in so short space is not easy, but it has been done in this case, the writers being well equipped; they have sought to interest the general reader and also provide material for classroom work. . . Unfortunately the compression gives a gazetteer quality where one could seek more interpretative swing."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N 24 '29 450w

"No haphazard judgments of an outsider will be found in this book. Its authors were evidently to the manner born. Dr. Hunt is a native Californian. . . Mrs. Sanchez, for her part, has had large contacts with descendants of the early Spanish settlers and was able to embody in her own chapters the yield of many documents left by the Spanish, Mexican and earliest American pioneers." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '29 500w

"So far as general style, particularly in the earlier chapters, is concerned the present authors have not been unsuccessful. The defects of the book are in its organization. It is hard to tell the story of any community consecutively. The authors have largely refrained from doing so, developing their matter topically. The result is a somewhat piecemeal picture of California's growth, together with a certain amount of repetition. . . Though a great deal of information is imparted the sense of continuity is often lacking."
+ — N Y Times p30 O 13 '29 900w
Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:22 O '29 80w

"The book will appeal to the general reader, as well as to the young student. As a concise history of an interesting commonwealth, it should be given a place in every library and in every class room. [It is] presented entertainingly, without bias and without partisanship, in a broad, disinterested narrative which omits nothing that is of importance." J. D. Phelan
+ Sat R of Lit 6:620 Ja 4 '30 750w

HUNTING, GARDNER. Sunrise calling. 318p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

29-4418

From his fight with Velvet Mars over the division of the spoils, Brink, prize-fighter and near crook, escapes with most of the money and a broken arm. Hostile, suspicious, he finds sanctuary with a kindly old boat-builder in the woods not far from New York. While Brink's arm knits, he learns from this good old man new values of life, and from his pretty granddaughter, new ideas of romance. Mars returns but his melodramatic scheme of revenge misses fire.

---

HUNTING, GARDNER—Continued

"The fact that Brink's change from thug to sensitive idealist is no more credible than the devilish machinations of the chief villain, Velvet Mars, does not detract from the pleasure that many will take in Mr. Hunting's writing. There is a contagious love of nature in the first part of the book which sentimentality of character-portrayal, more and more flagrant as the story continues, cannot entirely off-set."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Mr 17 '29 250w

"A thrilling human story, impossible to put down, inventive, vividly real, sweeping us into vistas seldom opened. Because it was an amazingly hard thing to do, the greater credit rests with the author for having done it well."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 13 '29 350w

"The tale is not convincing, but it is pleasing."

+ — Springf'd Republican p5e Je 2 '29 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p261 Mr 28 '29 160w

Wis Lib Bul 25:127 Ap '29

HUNTINGTON, ELIZABETH. Son of Dr. Tradusac. 365p $2.50 Duffield

29-8393

A story of the life and character of Abner Tradusac, son of a New York doctor of the 'nineties. The evasive answers and half truths on which Abner's childhood and adolescence were fed, are responsible for the two bitter deceptions of his life, first in Stella, a voluptuous servant girl, whom in his ignorant folly Abner marries, and later, when he is rid of Stella, in Charlotte, who also disappoints him cruelly.

---

"She describes the crisis of the story as 'frumpery and nonsense,' a phrase which adequately characterizes the novel—if there is such a word as frumpery."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 16 '29 150w

"Her characters are incomplete, her story rather fierce and bitter. But she has done it well. There is a striking sincerity which compels the reader's interest, sometimes even emotion."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 21 '29 400w

"Miss Huntington's indictment of the brownstone age—though written competently, and with a charming sense of how ridiculous everything was in those days—does not come off very well." Gertrude Diamant

N Y World p10m My 19 '29 650w

"Here is a novel of passionate protest against outworn forms and cruelties and inanities. There is an earnestness and straightforwardness about 'The Son of Dr. Tradusac' that will save it completely from casual accusations of an intent to be spectacular or sensational. . . One finds a spirit in the book that flames through the sordidness of the story, through even the moralizings so frankly interpolated in the text." Gladys Graham

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1051 My 25 '29 280w

HUNTSMAN, HILDEGARDE. Mad fingers (Eng title The laughing string). 324p $2.50 Houghton

29-10425

Anna Clayton grows up in the topsy-turvy life of an artist's family. She has no friends except Paul, a handsome young actor who comes and goes in the household as he pleases. Sent to school on the continent Anna makes her first close friendship with Leslie, a charming conventional English girl. When Leslie and the volatile Paul are married Anna discovers that she loves him too. Suddenly Paul wakes up to the fact that he loves her; but Anna decides on renunciation, finding in her misery a new kinship of understanding with her father.

---

"This novel will entertain and satisfy those who do not wish to look too deeply, but it remains always a story told, not real life."

Bookm 69:xx Je '29 170w

"There is savor in her pages, a feel for actuality. She has learned, with an expertness rare in a novitiate, to allow her people to be known through action, speech and gesture rather than through an explicit delineation of inner processes. There is both honest, unashamed sentiment and fine pace in Miss Huntsman's story." Geoffrey Terwilliger

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Je 2 '29 300w

"Miss Huntsman evidently has a definite conception of Anna and Anna's father, Andrew. The rest of the characters for the most part are imaginary. This shows very plainly in the telling of the story. . . Yet 'Mad Fingers' contains some excellent writing. Miss Huntsman displays a keen sense of humor and a ready hand at appraising artist folk." W. E. H.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Je 19 '29 400w

"Miss Huntsman's success lies in her creation of the character of Anna. Anna Clayton lives in the pages of the present volume, and to create even one character is accomplishing a good deal in a first book. On the whole, however, the style of writing is pretty commonplace, see-sawing between purple passages and pedestrian prose." Edwin Seaver

— + N Y Evening Post p9m Je 1 '29 580w

" 'Mad Fingers' is a novel which reveals a genuine talent, especially for the portrayal of character."

+ N Y Times p16 My 12 '29 480w

Outlook 152:78 My 8 '29 180w

" 'The Laughing String' needs somewhat severe pruning, but as a first novel it is above the average."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p404 My 16 '29 200w

HURD, CHARLES DEWITT. Pyrolysis of carbon compounds. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser.) 807p $12.50 Chemical catalog co.

547 Chemistry, Organic. Thermochemistry. Carbon compounds 29-11027

"By pyrolysis is meant the transformation of a compound into another substance, or into other substances, through the agency of heat alone. This sizable monograph by the Associate Professor of Chemistry in Northwestern University brings together the available published (and some unpublished) material on the subject as related to a large number of organic compounds—among which are noted petroleum, rubber, and the alcohols. Extensive indexes and numerous footnote references."—N Y New Tech Bks

---

"This monograph should be available to all students specializing in the study of organic chemistry, and to research workers in industrial laboratories. The author has accomplished a real service, which will lead to increased activity in the study of an important division of the science." J. F. Norris

+ Am Chem Soc J 51:2596 Ag '29 260w

"At a time when the recent rapid development of high-temperature cracking, or 'pyrolysis,' of petroleum has made available tremendous quantities of ethylene, propylene, butenes, pentenes, etc., now generally valued at their fuel value, such a comprehensive review as Dr. Hurd's 'Pyrolysis' is particularly welcome. . . The work is distinctly a contribution to the literature of organic chemistry, not merely a review." B: T. Brooks

+ Chem & Met Eng 36:431 Jl '29 500w

"This monograph fills an important need in chemical literature. . . The inclusion of theoretical discussions throughout the text, as well as the author's critical attitude, makes this monograph, which might easily have become a mere catalog of the literature, a valuable book from every point of view." L. W. Bass

+ Ind & Eng Chem 21:800 Ag '29 450w

"The book contains an enormous collection of facts and is valuable on that account. The theoretical treatment is in rather a rudimentary stage." W. D. Bancroft

+ — J Phys Chem 33:1112 Jl '29 2500w
N Y New Tech Bks 14:26 Ap '29

HURLBUTT, ISABELLE B. Little Heiskell. 59p il $2 Dutton

28-19746

Little Heiskell is a soldier weathervane on top of a high clock tower. He comes merrily down from his perch three days before Christmas to soften old Max Reum's heart and insure a happy Christmas to Frieda and Victor. Illustrated with gay pictures in color.

---

Booklist 25:127 D '28

"Deserves a place the year round for its Maryland association and its imaginative appeal." A. C. M.

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 23 '28 120w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 16 '28 100w

HURST, FANNIE (MRS JACQUES S. DANIELSON). Five and ten. 339p $2.50 Harper

29-18149

John Rarick has become the thirteenth richest man in the world thru his chain of five-and-ten-cent stores. But his money has brought him no happiness: it has made of his wife, Jennie, a woman goaded by ambition; of his daughter Jennifer an arrogant, superficial girl; and of his son Avery, broken in spirit, a suicide. To atone for the tragedy of all this, Rarick gives all his money to benefit science, that he may die a poor man.

---

Booklist 26:70 N '29

"It is a book that will be liked. Miss Hurst will probably add new friends to an already large following. It is a book, too, that everyone will find interesting for the real distinction of the central characterization and the forthrightness of the telling." Isadora Bennett

+ Bookm 70:450 D '29 500w

"The human spirit, in Miss Hurst's hands, is stronger than any of its swathings, more important than the things it desires and achieves. For all her reiterated accounts of what goes on in the lavish menage of the thirteenth richest man in the world—and 'Five and ten' is disturbingly marred by her relish for repetition—she never for one moment loses touch with the emotional life of her characters. What they feel is of profound consequence—more important by far than anything else she could possibly have to recount about them. And these emotions of theirs are simple, natural, understandable, and unconfused. And this infallible instinct for the greatest common denominator in human emotions accounts, I think, for the fact that Miss Hurst is, unmistakably, the beloved story teller of millions." Florence Haxton

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 8 '29 850w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann
Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '29 1700w

"The characters' voluble, hectic conversation, all pursued, I should judge, at the top of their lungs, bears the marks of every modern inventor of slang from Ring Lardner to Will Rogers. Here is emotion. Here is good red blood. Here is, or are, guts." A. B. Parsons

+ Nation 129:358 O 2 '29 350w

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine
Nation and Ath 46:143 O 26 '29 50w

"Much of Miss Hurst's skill consists in making the best of both worlds. She has unmistakably preached the edifying doctrine that wealth does not bring happiness, and in one mood her readers will approve this. But she has also painted in a brilliant background of all the material satisfactions wealth can bring, and, in another mood, her readers will be able to assure themselves that they would have known how to enjoy all these without forfeiting happiness. It is clever, even if it is cleverness of a less artistically ambitious kind than that which distinguished her earlier work. This book may serve as a type of much fiction which reaches us from America and which is not at all inferior in competence and readableness to the home-product written with similar intentions." E. S.

+ New Statesman 34:394 D 28 '29 800w

" 'Five and Ten' will probably never be ranked as one of the best books Fannie Hurst has written, but it will be remembered as one in which she displays to the full some of her peculiar talents. She has selected a spectacular subject which brings into play her capacity for illuminating and definitive detail. She has contrived, at the same time, a variety of human relationships of a simple and rather homely character. And here, as always in dealing with honest and somewhat sentimental emotions, Fannie Hurst is at her best." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 S 8 '29 850w

"A somewhat unusual adventure for this author, her new book will be welcomed for its more characteristically Hurstian passages." Will Cuppy

+ Outlook 153:68 S 11 '29 220w

"It is vigorous in a febrile way; but it would be more effective if the author did not identify herself with her characters. She is as restless as they: in the whole book there is no solid ground, no stationary point from which to observe the actors and the patterns they weave in their frenzied search for emotional satisfaction. Wanting a standard of comparison, everything seems meaningless and unreal, and one loses the sense of the relative importance of events." L. P. Hartley

— Sat R 148:618 N 23 '29 180w

"As entertainment, 'Five and Ten' is pretty fair. Its apparently limitless energy carries us over the many rococo passages describing the Raricks' sumptuosity and dulls the blemishes on Miss Hurst's not quite convincing representation of the younger generation. Pages of impressive narrative are sandwiched between long-winded stretches of pretentious exposition, but nevertheless the narrative as a whole somehow manages to come out on top. The deaths of Avery and Jenny are excellent, and Jennifer's lingering misery arouses our genuine sympathy. About the conclusion of the book there can hardly be two opinions: Miss Hurst, preacher, vanquishes Miss Hurst, novelist."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:608 D 28 '29 300w

"Miss Hurst's technique is a good instrument: her metaphors have the ungodly flash of machinery, its brilliance and its monotony. She has a sense of size, but little sense of proportion. A significant defect is that there is very little essential difference in quality between the talk of her characters and her own prose style." V. S. Pritchett

+ — Spec 143:553 O 19 '29 460w

"The story, as such, leads nowhere. Its principal redeeming features are brilliant bits of character delineation and descriptive purple patches which at times border upon the poetic. The style is in large measure conversational, at times a bit too rough and ready to be adequate, although for the most part in keeping with the pace of the story. 'Five and Ten' is not Fannie Hurst's best book, but it is fairly representative of her manner."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '29 300w

"Miss Hurst has not used her opportunity; she has written a tract that is exceedingly dull. Her people are left as types, and appear to be types not at all understood. It is a very awkward and naive chromo, and we have seen it before, many times, under other, perhaps less sensational titles. Her people are not even marionettes; they are paper dolls." Coley Taylor

— Survey 63:166 N 1 '29 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p920 N 14 '29 580w

HURST, FANNIE (MRS JACQUES S. DANIELSON). Procession. 287p $2 Harper 29-1806

Five short stories in each of which Fannie Hurst uses all her tricks of technique to build up a dramatic situation. Contents: The left hand of God; The third husband; The young prince; The Hossie-Frossie; Give this little girl a hand.

Booklist 25:322 My '29

Reviewed by T. S. Matthews
Bookm 68:690 F '29 240w

"The sense of drama that invests the least of Miss Hurst's writings is present in 'Procession.' It dictates a choice of human material that is immediately, though superficially interesting. Her desire for drama, or—more aptly in these pages—for melodrama leads her into the cheapest manipulation of circumstances, and her people, like artfully constructed character dolls, are propelled bodily through them." Juana Allraum
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) F 24 '29 380w

"These stories are the perfected expression of Fannie Hurst's genius as a short story writer. In the course of the years she has gained measurably in her technique. She does the thing now with an astounding perfection." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 27 '29 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p96 Je '29

"Miss Hurst, the author of Lummox and Appassionata, knows as well as I do, that she is forsaking a distant and doubtful but once desired objective for one more immediately profitable. I do not take upon myself to say that she could ever write a great novel or a great short story. I am quite certain that it would have been worth her while to try, and that she is, in consideration of magazine flesh-pots, throwing the chance away." E. S.
+ — New Statesman 33:500 Jl 27 '29 260w

"Heart-throbs beat through Miss Hurst's book with the loud monotony of a ticking alarm-clock. She speaks in the voice of the peepul." Tess Slesinger
— N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 19 '29 800w

"The five short stories are written in slapdash, often verbless fashion, and her characters seem largely adumbrations of characters. [They] seem like nothing so much as notebook outlines for novels or novelettes. . . [But] the stories are undoubtedly graphic. They read swiftly. They make good use of physical detail. For these reasons they may be recommended to those who look for such properties."
+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 27 '29 620w

N Y World p11m F 3 '29 320w

Reviewed by Gladys Graham
Sat R of Lit 5:853 Ap 6 '29 300w

"For all her vigour and vitality Miss Hurst is fundamentally a genteel and sentimental author."
— + Spec 143:227 Ag 17 '29 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p578 Jl 18 '29 250w

Wis Lib Bul 25:127 Ap '29

HURST, GEORGE LEOPOLD. Literary background of the New Testament. 163p $1.50 (6s 6d) Macmillan

229 Bible.New Testament—History. Bible. Old Testament.Apocrypha 28-23056

The writings of the New Testament stand against a background of earlier writings. This little book is devoted to a sketch of these early Christian classics—the Old Testament, the Apocrypha and Apocalypses.

"This book is a valuable contribution to the scientific study of the Bible as literature."
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 21 '28 150w

Christian Century 46:22 Ja 3 '29 120w

"The volume is of real value, not alone for the interest it should arouse in this priceless heritage of writings unfortunately all too little appreciated today, but also because it should convince beyond the peradventure of a doubt that the New Testament authors drank deeply at the wells of contemporary thought and expression." M. S. Enslin
+ Crozer Q 6:109 Ja '29 350w

St Louis 27:44 F '29

HUTCHEON, ROBERT JAMES. Frankness in religion. 307p $2.50 Macmillan

230 Religion 29-3915

"The author holds that religion is man-made in the sense that language is man-made. That is, it is a natural evolution of the human mind. No longer need religion be isolated 'from the rest of the cultural life of man by its doctrine of special revelation.' Science and criticism may have made old interpretations of religion untenable, but according to Dr. Hutcheon religion itself—natural religion—has not even been threatened."—R of Rs

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 6 '29 320w

"The reader gets something much more substantial than the title promises: not a discourse upon the methodology of religious thinking but a statement of views of religion which have commended themselves to one thoughtful and devout scholar who has undertaken to divest himself of all prejudice and preconception." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 46:232 F 14 '29 780w

"To many who need an interpretation of their religious life that shall make it seem an integral part of their total cultural experience, Professor Hutcheon's book will be helpful." M. G. Evans
Crozer Q 6:246 Ap '29 240w

"It is written with a power and a sincerity which will merit respect even from the hostile critic of religion. There is a feast here for the honest doubter." E. B. Chaffee
+ Outlook 151:432 Mr 13 '29 100w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:24 Mr '29 400w

St Louis 27:192 Je '29

"He writes in a lucidly rationalistic manner and yet not without the fervor that is needed to make religious appeal effective."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 23 '29 480w

HUTCHINS, GRACE. Labor and silk. (Labor and industry ser.) 192p il $2 Int. pub.

331.818 Labor and laboring classes—United States. Silk manufacture and trade 29-8933

A study of working conditions in the silk and rayon industry in the United States and particularly of the grievances that have led to a long series of strikes on the part of the silk workers.

"The book is inspired by a fighting zeal, and occasionally will offend liberals and conservatives by overstatements, Marxian phrases and juxtapositions which savor of crude propagandist methods. But it has the virtue of its defects; namely, the vigorous power to marshal facts to good purpose. Its challenge cannot be permanently and complacently ignored." J. A. Flexner
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 16 '29 280w

Boston Transcript p7 Je 22 '29 230w

" 'Labor and Silk' tells a story of inhuman exploitation of labor and the physical well-being of children, which should be read by every consumer of the lovely fabrics wrought under these conditions." R. A. Gibson
New Repub 59:239 Jl 17 '29 240w

HUTCHINSON, ARTHUR STUART-MENTETH. Uncertain trumpet. 420p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
29-20019

To the English country village of Ashton-Parva, Pelman Heritage brings his young wife, Dawn. Lonely, and kept from the society of merry hunting-people by her stern husband,

Dawn meets Pelman's half-brother, Banjo, who falls in love with her. Due to the sympathy on the part of the vicar, David Quest, and a sense of honor on the part of Banjo, tragedy is averted and all ends happily.

Booklist 26:119 D '29

Bookm 70:xiii Ja '30 80w

"His plot is intricate and well woven, and his material is rich to the point of embarrassment, but there is no character in 'The Uncertain Trumpet' as well done as Mark Sabre. The whimsical simile of 'If Winter Comes' here broadens to hilarious laughter. It is the humor of ridiculous exaggeration, of reductio ad absurdum, perfectly exemplified by that gargantuan family, the Flogg-Wallopers, at breakfast in their quiet hall 'carpeted principally with dogs.' " Garreta Busey

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 S 22 '29 750w

"This new novel is certainly well worth careful and strenuous attention. . . No one reading this story seriously can fail to recognize the author's talents as a novelist. But they have been led astray in this instance by his desire to make probable events that cannot in all righteousness ever really occur. Still we prophesy for this novel tremendous success. There is a disjointed magnificence about it all which one must admire. At times the Hutchinson gift for satire makes us wish that he might give up his desire to develop all the noblest impulses in mankind and deal more consistently not with their lower natures, but with their normal spontaneous sense of humor." D. F. Gilman

+ — Boston Transcript p3 S 21 '29 1300w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 O 5 '29 350w

"Those who dislike overdoses of sentimentality, prolixity, and characters who respond like puppets rather than human beings will not be enthusiastic over this book, but others will discover in the vicar a character worthy of a place beside the immortal Mark Sabre."

— + Nation 130:51 Ja 8 '30 140w

"With his satire and his humour, the former overdone and the latter an obstruction, in addition to his variety of characters and copiousness of manner, Mr. Hutchinson upholds the tradition. The sophisticated reader may derive a certain base pleasure from the observation of Mr. Hutchinson's pretentiousness; but the unsophisticated should not be disappointed in this latest effort."

— Nation and Ath 45:806 S 21 '29 220w

"His book reminds me of nothing so much as a bed of lettuces that have gone to seed. The lettuce is an agreeable vegetable at the proper time of its growth. But if it is allowed to go on growing beyond the proper time, it branches out into a large, ungainly, and perfectly useless shape. Of course, lettuces cannot correct their faults: perhaps Mr. Hutchinson can correct his."

— New Statesman 33:653 S 7 '29 650w

Reviewed by Clinton Simpson

N Y Evening Post p6s Ja 4 '30 380w

"It is quite in the well-remembered and popular Hutchinson tradition, notwithstanding the fact that it is not nearly so much a novel as a light and extremely decorative sermon."

N Y Times p6 S 29 '29 550w

"The novel abounds in moral platitudes and is distinguished chiefly by a pompous emphasis upon unoriginal ideas. The author has an annoying habit of repeating the same phrase many times. Another monotonous mannerism is that of placing a qualifying phrase at the end of a sentence in a way all his own." Mary Shirley

— Outlook 153:190 O 2 '29 200w

Spec 143:691 N 9 '29 250w

— Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '29 320w

"He has not changed his emphatic, exclamatory style nor the urgency of his appeal to elementary sentiment. On the level with the emotionally contorted mouthings is the grotesque boisterousness of his comedy. The story in itself, besides its crudity of expression, has the defects of incredibility and exaggeration."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p666 Ag 29 '29 630w

HUTCHINSON, VERE. Thy dark freight. 288p $2.50 Liveright [7s 6d Hutchinson] 29-4206

The sea beats accompaniment to this tragic story of Janetha Forde, the daughter of fisher folk in the little settlement of Mare le Marsh on the northeast coast of England. The sea gives Janetha and her people their living; the sea takes the lives of their men; the sea brings her her lover and carries him away again, leaving Janetha to bear her "dark freight," a son cursed with the sinister inheritance of the Gautbys.

Booklist 25:360 Je '29

"Were there fewer novels in the world, this would probably stand as notable. But it has no tricks of style, nor does it deal with any timely problem. It has excellence, but no startling novelty, and the taste of the times is against it." M. C. Dawson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 10 '29 300w

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 30 '29 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p76 My '29

"The picture is painted with sincerity and considerable feeling. At times a little more care could have been exercised in the business of writing, but the details for the most part are vivid and aptly chosen, and the book is well planned. Occasionally Miss Hutchinson is extravagant, but on the whole, she is to be congratulated for not having allowed mere words to cloud her story. Her use of the native dialect, laconic, clipped, rings true." C. A. C.

+ New Repub 58:261 Ap 17 '29 170w

Reviewed by Florence Haxton

N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 16 '29 650w

"Miss Hutchinson's dismal story of English fishing yokels, though written with high capability in the manner of the older novelists, is inclined to be wearisome, a fault due perhaps to the lack of anything but the clearly foreseen occurring in the tale from its beginning until near the end."

N Y World p11m Mr 10 '29 200w

"The elemental strength of 'Thy Dark Freight' rests largely on Vere Hutchinson's power to stamp every action or movement with a weird and sometimes morbid necessity." E. M. Benson

+ Outlook 151:268 F 13 '29 250w

"The life and character of Janetha stand out as the sharp focal point of 'Thy Dark Freight,' but the other people, the horrible old Gautby, the halfwitted Louie with her torture-splatched cats, the two landladies of the inn, and innumerable others, all show that Vere Hutchinson is a creator of character who may be mentioned with Sheila Kaye Smith at her best; with Thomas Hardy. Her people are not comfortable, they are not people you know, but they are people who, after the author has done with them, exist." Gladys Graham

Sat R of Lit 5:825 Mr 30 '29 420w

"Miss Hutchinson may still be a little lavish with her colour. But she has gained vastly in poise and restraint, and has produced an essentially convincing portrait. For the rest, she has a genuine touch of poetry and mysticism, which redeems sordidness and finds the beauty that is latent even in tragedy."

+ — Spec 141:557 O 20 '28 120w

" 'Thy Dark Freight' is a stark tale, stark in its human relationships and conflicts, stark in its background of squalor, poverty, and the ever-present menace of the sea. The beautiful quality of Janetha herself stands out brightly against this somber background."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '29 350w

"Miss Hutchinson is a good storyteller; her book is well constructed, but conceals the scaffolding of its structure; and in Janetha we have a character in the round who emerges from the book as an independent living being."

HUTCHINSON, VERE—Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p860 N 15 '28 180w

HUTTEN ZUM STOLZENBERG, BETTINA (RIDDLE) freifrau von. Eddy and Edouard. 305p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson] 29-10007

Eddy Effingham is his Yankee father's son. Edouard, the other half of the same personality, is the son of his French mother and heir thru her of the very blue blood of a noble French line. Eddy Edouard is brought up by his intensely French grandmother in the Yankee town of Perry, Michigan. All his life Eddy and Edouard are at odds, save in devotion to Belmary. At last, in middle age, Edouard is left in permanent ascendancy thru marriage with a cousin of the old French line.

Booklist 26:33 O '29

Reviewed by Lynn Carrick
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 12 '29 400w

"This story is to be recommended for light holiday reading."
+ Nation and Ath 43:598 Ag 4 '28 230w

"The book is written with a vivacity and facility that betoken the hand of the skilled story-teller. Those seeking light diversion will find it an agreeable companion."
+ N Y Times p14 Je 23 '29 320w

"Eddy Edouard, of French-American parentage, is raised in America by a passionately French grandmother. His problems of adjustment are very real ones, but are never permitted to become dully over-important, as might easily have happened had the writer had a less light touch. The book is a vivacious though not superficial contrast between two races. It makes merry at the expense and does homage to the merits of both. And it is decidedly entertaining."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1117 Je 15 '29 100w

"This is a rambling, leisurely novel thronged with loquacious and kindly people; and, when we leave Eddy-Edouard in a fit of mirth at his own expense, we have become quite attached to him." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 141:60 Jl 14 '28 170w
Times [London] Lit Sup p582 Ag 9 '28 240w

HUTTON, EDWARD. Glimpse of Greece. 324p il $6 Macmillan [18s Medici soc.]

913.38 Greece—Description and travel.
Greece—Antiquities 29-7860

Running thru this book of journeys in Greece are concurrent streams of history, literature, and conversation with Norman Douglas who was the author's companion on some of his journeyings.

Booklist 25:355 Je '29

"Mr. Hutton has given Greece an appreciative and profound study—and from many angles. He has tramped over it as an enthusiastic traveler, steeped himself in knowledge of its past as a devoted student, and appraised its significance as a commentator on life and art. Consequently, Mr. Hutton's 'glimpse' contains infinitely more than the word ordinarily implies. . . Altogether, a book which lovers of Greece and of Greek art will find a genuine stimulation."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 17 '29 130w

"True poet as well as scholar, feeling as well as seeing the beauty of which he writes, Mr. Hutton's travel and historical studies reveal to us not only the outward semblance, but the heart of lands and peoples. Many lovely translations from the writings of the Greek immortals of drama and poetry are given. Various of them are made by that master of reproduction of the classic lyrical form, Sir Gilbert Murray. The photographic illustrations are worthy of their subjects." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 12 '29 780w

"If it is information that you want about one of the most glamorous parts of this globe, and information mingled with charm, then read Edward Hutton's A Glimpse of Greece. It gives a pretty complete view made up of many scenes and enriched by a sufficiently full recital of the historical episodes and literary traditions of which the traveler (either actual or imaginative) needs to be reminded. I should no more think of going to Greece without this book than of going fishing without a hook. I have carried Hutton's 'Naples and Southern Italy' and his 'Cities of Sicily' around with me through the scenes which they describe and found him always accurate, informing and entertaining. He has abundant scholarship so well assimilated by a humanized mind that he both carries it gracefully and conveys it painlessly."
+ Christian Century 46:459 Ap 4 '29 140w

"This is decidedly an addition to the shelf of books that both instigate and assist the art of humane, individualistic travel."
+ New Statesman 32:supxii D 1 '28 450w

"For those to whom 'the glory that was Greece' is part of a living past this journey from Odysseus' Ithaka to the sacred grove of the Olympian Zeus will give pleasure unalloyed. It is as poet as well as scholar that the author peoples the modern landscape with the figures that thronged it in the classic age." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 19 '29 100w

Reviewed by Halsey Raines
N Y Times p9 Jl 7 '29 380w
Pratt p30 summer '29
+ Sat R of Lit 6:11 Jl 27 '29 140w

"Mr. Hutton's clear descriptions and his illustrative reminiscences, and his occasional dialogues with Mr. Douglas—arguments about the Hermes, for instance, and other debatable matters—are one and all fascinating, and they are supplemented by many good photographs. For the Greece that was and the Greece that is Mr. Hutton's book is a most admirable guide. It ought to be in every school and college library."
+ Spec 142:434 Mr 16 '29 160w
Times [London] Lit Sup p1018 D 27 '28 600w
Wis Lib Bul 25:101 Mr '29

HUTTON, SAMUEL KING. Eskimo village. 156p il $1.25 Macmillan [2s 6d S.P.C.K.]

917.19 Eskimos. Labrador

Sketches of an Eskimo village, Okak on the island of Kivalek, off the coast of Labrador, by one who has worked there as a medical missionary for many years. Dr Hutton describes the village today and then goes back to its beginnings a century and a half ago.

"It is all written, of course, from the viewpoint and out of the heart of a missionary and quite often the author insists too much upon a point of sentiment or of pathos. But for the most part it is done with the utmost simplicity and with a stark realism that makes his pictures vivid and alive. His simply realistic pen has caught the spirit as well as the appearance of the village and its Eskimos so that the reader both sees and knows them."
+ N Y Times p47 D 8 '29 450w

"These sketches of the Eskimos of Labrador are interesting both as sources of picturesque information respecting a little-known people and as pleasing evidence of the success that sometimes attends missionary enterprise."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p1007 N 28 '29 60w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Do what you will; essays. 331p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

824 29-22351

Twelve essays by the brilliant English novelist and essayist, some of which reflect his opinions on certain aspects of modern life, and others analyze, from an original viewpoint, the life or work of men like Swift, Baudelaire and Pascal.

Reviewed by M. C. Dawson
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 1 '29 1050w

Reviewed by G: E. G. Catlin
Nation 129:754 D 18 '29 550w

"Mr. Huxley's book is the most exciting he has written. Ostensibly a collection of essays most diverse in form, subject, and treatment, it is in reality a confession of faith and a first outline of a philosophy of living." Barrington Gates

+ Nation and Ath 46:174 N 2 '29 500w

"The lighter essays in the book are the best. . . He is at home with his subjects, he writes of what he knows, his paragraphs are lit with observation. People and their foibles appear, page by page, compressed in an image, pinched in a paradox, occasionally destroyed by epigram or wise-crack. By electing to describe only those parts of his subjects which he has actually seen and felt, Mr. Huxley presents a convincing satire or a vivid picture of the whole. Here he is the able novelist ably performing upon the traditional English essay." R. P. Blackmur

+ — New Repub 61:148 D 25 '29 550w
New Statesman 34:supxii N 9 '29 650w

"As a novelist he is a sparklingly good essayist; one is saddened to learn that as an essayist he shows so few qualities of the novelist. Skillfulness of construction, drama, climax, revelation—all those things which one might hope of an essayist whose training has been in fiction—are obscured in a fog of the obvious. Only when he is being frivolous do Mr. Huxley's essays glow into life." Edgar Johnson

— N Y Evening Post p10m N 9 '29 1100w

Reviewed by J: Chamberlain
N Y Times p12 N 24 '29 700w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p11 N 27 '29 1150w

"As always, the essays are marked with originality, honesty, satisfying scholarship and terrible wit; and Huxley's prose is always a comfort and delight." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 153:427 N 13 '29 100w

"He has wit as well as spleen; he is widely informed, has exquisite modes of expression, is an eager pluralist in metaphysics, and is eager for strange and various knowledge. But his melancholy becomes a little tiresome. One waits in vain for cheerfulness to break in, for some focus of loyalty to emerge. . . However, there is always method in his sadness; he is no temperamental pessimist, but a diligent logician of despair and most entertaining in his gloom."

+ — Sat R 148:515 N 2 '29 700w

"With his erudition, his supple and rapid mind, and his unflagging industry, Mr. Huxley is becoming one of our principal contemporary commentators. Perhaps the most considerable of the eleven papers which this volume contains are the final essays on Pascal, which appeared originally in The Realist. There is scarcely a page of these essays on which something intelligent and illuminating is not said."

+ Spec 143:sup677 N 9 '29 1100w

"Mr. Huxley's remarkable achievement here is the lucidity and firmness of exposition; there are pages in which the most baffling concepts of philosophy are placed before us with the unwavering outlines of statuary, paragraphs in which Mr. Huxley triumphantly competes with such masters of philosophic style as James, Bergson and Santayana."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p787 O 10 '29 1000w

HYDE, BLANCHE E. Sewing book. (Century vocational ser.) 348p il $2.50 Century

646 Sewing 28-23656

"A textbook for sewing classes following, for the most part, the traditional method of presenting stitches, seams, sewing processes, and garment construction, with some discussion of the selection and care of clothing."—J Home Econ

"Provided with clear and abundant illustrations, some of them more than usually up-to-date."

+ J Home Econ 21:212 Mr '29 40w
Pratt p20 winter '29
St Louis 27:94 Mr '29
Wis Lib Bul 24:341 D '28

HYMA, ALBERT. Short history of Europe, 1500-1815. 496p $3.50 Crofts

940.2 Europe—History 28-23292

A textbook on European history from 1500 to 1815, which places more than the usual emphasis on the importance of the Netherlands in the economic history of the period.

"It is not every book of which it can be said that it makes good its promise. The volume under review, however, may justly claim that distinction. In his preface the author sets forth his idea of what a text-book should be: clear and simple in style, concise in statement, its materials so organized as to be easily grasped, its conclusions self-evident and convincing. His own book is an admirable illustration of his ideal. Its outstanding qualities are just those he himself has enumerated, clarity, compactness, intelligibility, reasonableness. In every particular, selection and employment of material, design, construction, interpretation, it is an excellent piece of workmanship. Dr. Hyma aimed to produce a book that would teach, and he has succeeded." Theodore Collier

+ Am Hist R 34:638 Ap '29 400w

"This is a textbook that can be read. The subject matter is so expressed that one can grasp and remember most of the necessary facts without undue mental exertion."

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 3 '28 80w

"Many of the defects of Hyma probably result from the scale on which he has sought to work. His desire for simplicity results in naïveté, his brevity and general conventionality of treatment in a certain colorlessness that will hardly recommend his work to many teachers. Apart from these criticisms, we may say that Hyma is always clear, fair, generally accurate, but in nowise distinguished." T. P. Peardon

— + Hist Outlook 20:348 N '29 420w

I

ICHIHASHI, YAMATO. Washington conference and after; a historical survey. 443p $4 Stanford univ. press

341.1 Washington, D.C.Conference on the limitation of armaments. Disarmament. Eastern question (Far East) 29-667

"Mr. Ichihashi was secretary and interpreter to the late Viscount Kato, Japan's senior delegate to the Washington Disarmament Conference, and is at present Professor of Japanese History in Stanford University. His book follows the results of the Conference, with its far-reaching effects upon the diplomatic situation in the East, down through 1928."—No Am

Am Hist R 34:840 Jl '29 1100w
Am Pol Sci R 23:512 My '29 180w
Booklist 25:345 Je '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 3 '29 150w

"Scholarly and highly impartial view of the accomplishments of that and subsequent conferences. Prof. Ichihashi is explicit in pointing out the Japanese points of view, but he succeeds in doing so without giving sanction to any suspicions as to his national loyalty." W. M. T.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 26 '29 450w
Nation 129:282 S 11 '29 60w

ICHIHASHI, YAMATO—Continued
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Mr '29 90w

"Current discussions in the United States Senate and elsewhere make this volume a welcome accession to the rather limited number of useful works in its field." W: B. Shaw
+ R of Rs 79:26 F '29 220w

"Mr. Ichihashi's book is a welcome addition to the literature on the subject. To begin with, he has shaken himself quite free from national prejudices. He is pleading the cause neither of Japan nor of anyone else. He is simply telling what happened. And he tells the story in the most readable and entertaining form in which it has yet appeared."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:819 Mr 23 '29 230w
World Tomorrow 12:426 O '29 50w

IDELSOHN, ABRAHAM ZEBI. Jewish music in its historical development. 535p $6 Holt

780.9 Music—Jews. Jews—Liturgy and ritual. Folk songs, Jewish. Musicians, Jewish 29-11527

"The aim of this book is to give a description and an analysis of the elements and characteristics of Jewish music, in their historical development, from the earliest times of its appearance as a Semitic-Oriental song, throughout the ages and countries. We follow its history as a tonal expression of Judaism and of Jewish life. . . The book presents the result of the author's research-work in the field of Jewish music during a quarter of a century, of first-hand collecting of Synagogue- and folk-songs in the Oriental and European Jewish communities, and of analyzing these into their elements."—Preface

Booklist 26:108 D '29

"The book abounds in interesting and helpful musical illustrations, and incidentally it provides engrossing information with respect to the history of the Jewish people the world over. Inferior to the prevailing level of the book is the chapter on 'The Jew in General Music,' and the 'list of the most important and successful musicians of Jewish extraction who contributed enormously toward the upbuilding of European classic and popular music' is conspicuously fragmentary."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Jl 28 '29 180w

"The writer has ably managed to sort out the huge accumulation of a quarter of a century of investigation into Jewish music and give us the first comprehensive book on the subject in the English language. A complex subject, Professor Idelsohn makes it clear, and, what is more, actually interesting." S. H.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 20 '29 620w

"This is the first authoritative account of Jewish music that has so far appeared in English; and if, in certain respects at least, Professor Idelsohn has failed to make his book all that it might be, it is largely because he has not shirked the issue with the amazing mass of miscellaneous material from all over the world, which has accumulated in printed MSS. and oral sources during the last three thousand years or so." Jeffrey Mark
+ — New Repub 59:293 Jl 31 '29 1000w

"It is a contribution of signal importance to the slim literature in English on this subject, and because of its completeness and deep scholarship it takes on an unquestionable authority. The book is rich in musical illustrations drawn from every epoch and many sources." Bernard Rogers
+ N Y Evening Post p6m Je 22 '29 900w

"This scholarly and authoritative volume will be of great value to all English-language students of music and of Jewish culture, for it is the first comprehensive treatment of its theme in English."
+ N Y Times p18 S 8 '29 400w
St Louis 27:309 N '29

IF I could preach just once; by Bertrand Russell, and others. 255p $2.50 Harper

252 Sermons
29-16571

A number of distinguished men and one noted woman novelist express in these essays their deepest thoughts on life and religion. The contributors are Bertrand Russell; John Drinkwater; Sheila Kaye-Smith; Lord Hugh Cecil; Ludwig Lewisohn; J. Arthur Thomson; H. N. MacCracken; Dr Joseph Collins; G. K. Chesterton; A. Conan Doyle; Sir Philip Gibbs; Dr Henry Seidel Canby; Sir Thomas Horder.

Booklist 26:8 O '29

"The amateurs have beaten the professionals at their own game. These lay sermons are fascinating. They constitute the most interesting collection of sermons I have ever read." J: H. Holmes
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Jl 21 '29 450w

"The 'sermons' are keenly interesting because they are the real and vital expressions of those personalities." T: C. Richards
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 15 '29 1800w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 Jl 27 '29 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p151 D '29

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p9m My 25 '29 400w

"The result is a medley of discordant viewpoints, contradictory convictions, visions that have little or no relation to one another. But such a mélange is not surprising when one considers the thirteen personalities that went into its making. For among them are some of the most individualistic and distinctive minds of the English-speaking world."
N Y Times p3 Je 2 '29 520w

Reviewed by E. B. Chaffee
Outlook 152:230 Je 5 '29 120w
St Louis 27:261 S '29

"Not many of these preachers have succeeded in preaching what oldtime Methodists used to call a 'searching discourse,' and the reader is bound to be a little disappointed that they have not done better. Some have taken a distinctly second-class subject; others, like Mr. Drinkwater, have taken a good subject and treated it in a distinctly second-class way; while one or two of the essays, both in subject and style, leave us quite unable to make anything of them, whether good or bad." A. J. Nock
— Sat R of Lit 6:92 Ag 31 '29 550w
Wis Lib Bul 25:272 Jl '29

INGE, WILLIAM RALPH. Labels & libels (Eng title Assessments and anticipations). 262p $2 Harper [7s 6d Cassell]

824
29-9667

Published in England under the title "Assessments and anticipations" Dean Inge's book is a collection of newspaper and magazine articles on religious, political and social subjects, closing with two autobiographical essays.

Booklist 25:386 Jl '29

"In this day of slogans one might well advertise Dean Inge's new book with the cry: 'A quarrel on every page!' Surely no one can read it without taking exceptions to this brilliant epigrammatist at least that often. But on the other hand the occasions on which one agrees with him or chuckles with satisfaction at having one's convictions expressed so neatly, are quite as frequent." G. R. B. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '29 520w
Christian Century 46:1380 N 6 '29 110w
Cleveland Open Shelf p156 D '29

"The two autobiographical articles are admirable. They are well written, vivid, with no verbal or mental padding in them, thoroughly interesting. And the controversial and argumentative articles have often the same qualities besides some others necessary in popular journalism." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 44:619 F 2 '29 1400w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 44:689 F 16 '29 1000w

"The present volume makes an advance on his other volumes in that it contains few direct indictments against the Christian virtues; but it has several highly discreditable passages in it . . . and the underlying impulse is the same animus against peace and good will." Rebecca West

— + New Repub 59:33 My 22 '29 880w

"Dr. Inge has an extraordinary quality of being unable to see any strange phenomena except from the outside; and his natural timidity of mind, combined with this lack of sympathy, leads him to make generalisations that differ only in precision of statement from the popular clichés of the Pullman-car saloon,"

— New Statesman 32:765 Mr 23 '29 1000w

Reviewed by Clarence Britten
N Y Evening Post p10m My 4 '29 580w

N Y Times p5 Jl 14 '29 500w

Reviewed by E. B. Chaffee
Outlook 152:108 My 15 '29 60w

St Louis 27:268 S '29

Reviewed by B. I. Bell
Sat R of Lit 5:1074 Je 1 '29 630w

"He may often seem too dogmatic, too hasty in his conclusions, too lacking in the careless optimism which is a characteristic of our bustling age. But the Dean charms us none the less by his wit and by his intellectual honesty, even when we disagree with him."

+ Spec 142:127 Ja 26 '29 200w

"The primary interest of this volume is that which one inevitably feels in listening to the discourse, upon life in general and the world at large, of a courageous and intelligent man. What he may talk about matters for the time being less than what, incidentally, he reveals himself to be; and we accept the prejudices of thought and idiosyncrasies of expression for the sake of the positive personality they circumscribe. He stimulates, even when it is only to opposition."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p91 F 7 '29 1100w

INGRAM, ARTHUR FOLEY WINNINGTON. [2] Why am I a Christian? 193p $2.50 Putnam [3s 6d Cassell]

252 Sermons

Sermons delivered by the Bishop of London at twenty-two American colleges, answering such questions as What is the modern idea of hell? Is sin inherited? How are we to know the truth? Why did Jesus Christ have to die?

"The sermons are straightforward, evangelical and full of the right kind of appeal."

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 7 '29 250w

"For Dr. Ingram's book there is little to be said. He seems to have small acquaintance with either modern thought or even modern Biblical criticism, and the loose emotionalism of these sermons is likely to appeal only to those who have never known the meaning of doubt. He settles his problems too simply."

— Nation and Ath 46:148 O 26 '29 80w

INSTITUTE OF PACIFIC RELATIONS. Problems of the Pacific; proceedings of the second conference of the Institute, Honolulu, Hawaii, July 15 to 29, 1927; ed. by J. B. Condliffe. 630p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

915 Pacific ocean. East (Far East). International cooperation 28-12460

"The volume deals in an analytical manner with present conditions of all sorts in the Pacific region. . . There are texts of documents pertaining to details of the Chinese question. Several papers deal with the problems of population pressure. Mr. O. E. Baker, an authority on land and population in China, sets forth the results of long studies on this subject. Two Japanese scholars have amassed detailed information about population in Japan. The Australian immigration laws are discussed, as well as China's radio communication problems."—N Y Times

Am Econ R 19:106 Mr '29 40w

"An invaluable volume not only for persons interested in problems of the Pacific, but also for those interested in the organization of opinion on public problems." Quincy Wright

+ Am J Soc 34:928 Mr '29 450w

Booklist 25:22 O '28

"The Institute of Pacific Relations is more than an institution; it is a growing spirit. Two conferences have met in Hawaii's benign climate, and this record of the proceedings of the second is a mine of material. The friendly discussions of course lose much in summary; but the contributed papers—particularly those on the population problem in the Far East—supply a mass of invaluable data."

+ Nation 127:276 S 19 '28 220w

"If 'Problems of the Pacific' is too technical for the average reader, it is invaluable to students. It deals in an analytical manner with present conditions of all sorts in the Pacific region. Of particular interest and value are the 370 pages of 'documents' drawn up by experts concerning specific problems of the Pacific. Inasmuch as a notable absence of prejudice characterizes most of them, their value is considerably enhanced." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p8 N 18 '28 150w

"It was a most helpful gathering because of the free and untrammeled expressions of opinion by the different delegations and the informal give-and-take that characterized many of the round-table discussions, as they were called. This volume is a complete record of the proceedings."

R of Rs 77:adv29 Je '28 110w

IRVING, WILLIAM HENRY. John Gay's London. 459p il $6 Harvard univ. press [27s Milford]

821 London—Description—Poetry. Gay, John. London—Social life and customs 28-30836

"Mr. Irving's book might be described as an attempt to supply in full the literary, social, and personal backgrounds of one of the pleasantest poems about London ever written—John Gay's 'Trivia.' It includes, besides much minute material on various aspects of the life of the day, a sketch of John Gay himself, an examination of the Roman satires, and a constant comparison of these poems with the London literature of other ages."—Springf'd Republican

"The style is clear, although in places a bit forced, and a few of the statements appear unhappy. Occasionally it seems to suffer from compression of the author's introductions to his quotations and an over-loading of the footnotes. We might wish for a better map than the one for 1707 which he reproduces. It lacks sufficient detail for the reader to trace out the location of the streets and alleys and lanes mentioned in the extracts. Much of the joy of studying the history of London is in finding the location of the old streets. The book is supplemented by an excellent bibliography and an adequate index." W: T: Morgan

+ — Am Hist R 35:342 Ja '30 550w

Reviewed by Edwin Clark
N Y Times p6 My 12 '29 350w

"This surely is the greatest book that has ever been put together on the subject, and the learning, taste, industry and unerring power of selection, which Mr. Irving has brought to his relishing task, send description to the poorhouse. There is nothing pertinent that the author has not laid under contribution for his illustrative quotations (which are mainly in verse.)"

+ Spec 142:sup471 Mr 23 '29 620w

"Frequently Mr Irving is almost buried beneath a mass of stubborn material, but there is seldom a page without a gleam of humor to lighten the murky road, and the last chapter, 'Vignettes of Street and River,' is an admirable and beautiful essay on London literature. Mr. Irving works with all the meticulous care of the Flemish painters." H. K.

IRVING, W: H:—Continued
+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 25 '29 330w

"Mr. Irving has been too easily tempted, perhaps, to make use of the whole of his very extensive reading even when it throws little or no light on John Gay's London. The reader is often embarrassed rather than fortified by the wealth of allusion that overflows on every page into footnotes, and finds that the wood has vanished in a profusion of trees. And yet when the wood has vanished the trees remain, and the abundance and variety of them are astonishing."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Mr 14 '29 800w

IRWIN, WILL. Herbert Hoover; a reminiscent biography. 315p il $3 Century
B or 92 Hoover, Herbert Clark 28-9885
For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Hist Outlook 21:42 Ja '30 270w

"It is not unlikely that as a guide to the President's political character and purposes the English reader would, at the present stage, prefer a more detached American observer. The book, however, is very good, the work of a practised writer, combining a talent for vivid narrative with the ability to give something approaching concreteness to a remarkable man who, lacking all means of self-expression, is most difficult to portray."
+ — Nation and Ath 44:692 F 16 '29 380w
Sat R 147:185 F 9 '29 210w

"An interesting and sometimes vivid story, but it is lacking in those small but important characteristic and convincing details by which a Boswell builds his masterpiece. Surely we are entitled to some personalia in a biography? Here we find practically none."
+ — Spec 142:204 F 9 '29 700w

IRWIN, WILLIAM HENRY. House that shadows built. 293p $3.50 Doubleday, Doran
B or 92 Zukor, Adolph. Moving pictures 28-25472

The story of the life of Adolph Zukor, head of the Famous Lasky corporation and of the great Paramount chain, is also in large part the story of the tremendous growth of the motion picture industry.

Booklist 25:210 F '29

"Adolph Zukor seems to be a likable man, naïve, wholesome, and platitudinous. But to many readers, Mr. Irwin's rather shrewd effort to present Mr. Zukor as a great man—and Mr. Irwin does try to do just that—will seem absurd."
— Bookm 68:x Ja '29 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p72 My '29
Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:30 Mr '29 200w

"The latter part of the book is the more fascinating part, dealing as it does with the beginnings of the movie, its fight for respectability, its sudden overwhelming success, and the climax of distribution control and final amalgamations. This section of the book goes along with a swing because the material as well as the story-telling is thrilling and novel, while the account of Zukor's early life and struggles, though it is well told and stimulating, is too familiar in character to carry the same interest as the middle and final chapters." Frank Tuttle
+ Sat R of Lit 5:951 Ap 27 '29 720w

ISAACS, EDITH J. (RICH) (MRS L. M. ISAACS), ed. Plays of American life and fantasy. 448p il $3 Coward-McCann
812.08 American drama—Collections 29-5848

In their diversity these one-act plays offer many-sided views of American character and American life. The second section contains Plays of fantasy. Contents: Pt I, Moonshine, by Arthur Hopkins; The dreamy kid, by Eugene O'Neill; Bumblepuppy, by J: W: Rogers, Jr.; Blockade, by O. H. Dunbar; The end of the trail, by E. H. Culbertson; Charivari, by N. B. Stephens; Kills-with-her-man, by Hartley Alexander; Brother Bill, by Alfred Kreymborg; Rapunzel, by Alter Brody; The no 'count boy, by Paul Green; Rose windows, by Stark Young; Spring sluicing, by A. H. Ernst; Zombi, by N. V. Scott; Pt II, The portrait of Tiero by Zoë Akins; Trap doors, by Alfred Kreymborg; The queen of Sheba, by Stark Young; The autocrat of the coffee-stall, by Harold Chapin; The gooseberry mandarin, by G. D. Ruthenburg.

Booklist 25:351 Je '29
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 19 '29 100w
St Louis 27:202 Je '29

"The book is not intended to teach anybody anything, neither about playwriting nor about history, art, or morals. But it will fail of part of its purpose if it does not encourage and assist the teacher who is trying to open up new vistas in the theatre, vistas of new material and new technique."
+ Theatre Arts Mo 13:387 My '29 450w
Wis Lib Bul 25:192 Je '29

ISTRATI, PANAIT. Bandits (Les haïdoucs); tr. from the French by William A. Drake. 286p $2.50 Knopf
29-11441

"A story of Rumanian Robin Hoods of a century ago, told by Panaït Istrati. Around a camp fire in the mountains this band of Haidoucs are at ease, each telling the story of how he happened to join the group."—Outlook

"Entirely lacking in any unity of structure, the book is sustained by its theme and its characters. The latter form a variety of personalities it would be difficult to equal for bravery, determination, ruthlessness, and passion. The book is full of Rumanian lore: legends, ballads, and proverbs. Moreover Istrati's style places his work close to the folk-tale. There is the same robust directness, the same practical wisdom and sense of impending tragedy." Florence Codman
+ Nation 128:770 Je 26 '29 400w

"Istrati's implications of Turkish misrule, Russian machinations, and Rumanian venality, supplying an undercurrent to the earlier work, become part and parcel of the fantastic, brilliant, yet mordantly ironic, drama of 'The Bandits.' He has still that air of improvisation, that conversational flavor of stories told over the glowing charcoal brazier, while waiting for Turkish coffee to bubble." J: W. Crawford
+ N Y Evening Post p9m My 18 '29 700w
Outlook 152:147 My 22 '29 50w

J

JACKS, LAWRENCE PEARSALL. My neighbour the universe; a study of human labour. 109p $1.50 Putnam [1s Cassell]
177 Work. Social ethics 29-7385

To Dr Jacks the scope of right and wrong covers man's relations to the entire universe, not merely his relations to his brother man in society. The approach to this ideal lies in an ethic of work which will raise the quality of labor in all varieties of human occupation.

Booklist 25:377 Jl '29
Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 27 '29 180w

"Dr. Jacks's pellucid style invests his arguments with especial cogency, and he has rehabilitated in an attractive guise the ancient thesis that a shoemaker becomes a better shoemaker and a better man in so far as he makes his shoes sub speci aeternitatis."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p971 D 6 '28 210w

JACKSON, ALICE FANNY, and JACKSON BETTINA. Study of interior decoration. 488p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

747 House decoration 28-21792

"Study materials necessary for an understanding of the principles of interior decoration are distributed in books devoted to separate phases of the subject, magazines, pictures, museums, studios, and homes. The authors of a recent textbook have gathered this material together in the form of a survey for the benefit of students and teachers. The book is intended for use in college classes or in advanced high-school classes."—School R

Booklist 25:152 Ja '29
Pratt p17 spring '29
St Louis 27:53 F '29

"The chief purpose of the book is to aid students and teachers. The student will find the book clearly and interestingly written and attractively bound and printed. The illustrations are good, particularly the line drawings which emphasize the distinctive characteristics of design and furniture." A. M. Stevenson
+ School R 37:156 F '29 360w
Springf'd Republican p5e Je 2 '29 50w

JACKSON, DUGALD CALEB, and JONES, WALTER PAUL, eds. Profession of engineering; essays. 124p $1.50 Wiley [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

620.4 Engineering—Addresses, essays, lectures. Engineers 29-5813

"Nine essays on the various branches of engineering; civil, mechanical, mining, electrical and chemical; written by eminent engineers for the benefit of the student who may be considering engineering as a career. President Hoover contributes a chapter." (Pratt) Contents: The engineer and his education, by D. W. Mead; Success in the engineering profession, by D. W. Mead; Civil engineering, by G. F. Swain; Mechanical engineering, by G. H. Barrus; Mining engineering, by R. Peele; Electrical engineering, by H. W. Buck; The electrical engineer, by J. H. Hammond; The chemical engineer, by J. H. Hammond; The engineer's contribution to modern life, by H. C. Hoover.

Booklist 26:16 O '29

"The object of this book is to give a broad 'and yet detailed conception of the profession of engineering'. . . But if it is intended to recruit the engineering profession by its means, we are afraid it will not be successful, at least in Great Britain. It lacks in many places the human touch required to rouse the enthusiasm of youthful students."
— + Nature 124:684 N 2 '29 320w
N Y New Tech Bks 14:22 Ap '29
Pratt p15 summer '29
St Louis 27:264 S '29
Times [London] Lit Sup p421 My 23 '29 70w

JACOB, FRED. Pee Vee. 400p $2.50 Macmillan [29-13072]

"Almost plotless, it is the chronicle of a little group of young people, living in and near Toronto during the opening part of the present century, at the time of the so-called 'Canadian Renaissance.' "—N Y Times

"Mr. Jacob writes of a period and of a society that he knows perfectly. His keen insight into character and his skill in portraying it pay tribute to his long training as a critic and a dramatist. The story suffers from a diffuseness of subject matter imperfectly welded into a novel, but the whole furnishes an interesting insight into the culture of the period." Enid Baird
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 10 '29 530w
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 13 '29 230w

"A genial, engaging novel, full of light and amusing satire."
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 3 '29 520w

JACOBI, ELIZABETH P. Adventures of Andris. 124p il $2.50 Macmillan 29-18263

A description of the life on an Hungarian farm, depicted thru the adventures of Andris and his sister Kati, the children of the coachman to Squire Kelneky, who owns the farm on which they live.

"Mrs. Jacobi is a Hungarian, living in Budapest, and she has vividly pictured the life of a Hungarian child. The story is a happy one and the children are very real indeed. The colored borders on the pages enliven the book, as well as gay end sheets and jacket." O. M. Fuller
+ N Y World p11m N 17 '29 70w
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Outlook 153:589 D 11 '29 80w

"Hungarian customs are the feature of the episodes—especially the festivals that mark off the various periods of the year on the farm and in school. The lively illustrations keep the picturesque backgrounds vividly before the reader, and an artistic and very decorative whole is evolved." M. C. Dodd
+ Sat R of Lit 6:404 N 16 '29 80w

JACOBSON, EDMUND. Progressive relaxation; a physiological and clinical investigation of muscular states and their significance in psychology and medical practice. (Univ. of Chicago monographs in medicine) 428p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press

612.766 Rest 29-12668

"Even when a person is lying in what he imagines to be a state of complete relaxation, there is a certain amount of what Dr. Jacobson terms 'residual tension' remaining. He has devised a method of treatment designed to overcome these muscular contractions, and to this method he has given the name of progressive relaxation. The patient is taught to localize tensions when they occur during nervous irritability and excitement, and to relax them away. The treatment is, in effect, a matter of nervous re-education."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 S 15 '29 120w

"A thoroughly scientific monograph on the subject of relaxation and its clinical significance. What is encouraging is that these experiments and conclusions have actually been applied successfully in clinical practice, and offer the basis for still further research."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '29 170w

JACOT DE BOINOD, BERNARD LOUIS. Trust Wesley! 307p $2 Little [7s 6d Hodder & S.] 29-16826

A young Englishman, Brymer Bealby, an American billionaire, Sim Packard, and his irrepressible young son Wesley—about whom the storm of the action centers—juggle with some difficulties in introducing Wes to the English educational system. The boy runs off with a pigeon-artist from Birmingham, is retrieved and persuaded to go to prep school; while Brymer at last finds time to say something important to the fair Sylvia, Wes's sister.

"A harmlessly hilarious comedy of high and low life. 'Trust Wesley!' provides a skillful spinner of froth with an American debut of the right auspicious sort."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p39 S 29 '29 130w

JACOT DE BOINOD, B. L:—Continued

"Mr. Jacot's good humor and laughing pen cannot help but be contagious. 'Trust Wesley' will brighten any gloomy half hour."

+ N Y Times p32 D 1 '29 180w

"Although the fun in this English light novel is said to be uproarious, the book conveyed to us no impression of humor save that of puerile rough-house and heavy clowning."

— Sat R of Lit 6:140 S 14 '29 100w

"Though his story is full of incident and variety, we look in vain for the bubbling gayety that should animate such a tale. . . 'Trust Wesley' fails as a tale and even becomes a little tiresome."

— Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '29 150w

"The fun in this story is fast and furious without ever being forced, and once the reader has begun he will want to finish."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p405 My 16 '29 170w

JADE mountain; a Chinese anthology; being three hundred poems of the T'ang dynasty, 618-906; tr. by Witter Bynner from the texts of Kiang Kang-hu. 279p $4 Knopf

895 Chinese poetry—Collections 29-25006

"The anthology is one made by a Chinese scholar of the eighteenth century, who selected 300 of the more famous poems by seventy-seven of the best loved poets of the T'ang dynasty (618-906), generally acknowledged as the golden age of poetry in China. The limitation of the group to 300 was made partly in deference to the Confucian Classic of Poetry, which holds the same number, and also in consideration of the proverb: 'By reading thoroughly 300 T'ang poems, one will write verse without learning.' What one has here, then, is what the Chinese themselves believe to be the very cream of an art to which their best minds have dedicated themselves for thousands of years."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"This anthology is a genuine achievement; it opens new fields for poetic endeavor, and, as Bynner says in his introduction, since 'the future Western poets will go to school with the masters of the T'ang Dynasty, as well as with the masters of the golden age of Greece', it is practically a textbook of the best work of the Chinese muse."

+ Bookm 70:xvi N '29 50w

"The sensitive appreciation of Mr. Bynner, the scholarship of his collaborator, Dr. Kiang, have gone far to smooth the inescapable roughness of the road. But even a paging of the book discovers that the quality of Chinese poetry is strong enough to survive the disfigurements of a strange setting, a foreign tongue, and an unfamiliar form." Babette Deutsch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 N 10 '29 1500w

"This book should prove an introduction to an entirely new world for many readers. And, if we are not unique, many readers will find the new world thrilling in its beauty, absorbing in its history and especially prophylactic in its influence on the insular narrowness of mind regarding other peoples which is such a universal characteristic of Teutons. Besides being of definite value to the teacher and student of Oriental thought and the student of poetry, this book will be heartily welcomed by all lovers of poetry." B. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 30 '29 400w

JAMES, EDWIN OLIVER. Beginnings of man. 237p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

575 Man—Origin. Evolution. Religion and science

"Written as the result of the controversy that followed Sir Arthur Keith's address to the 1927 meeting of the British association on the present-day status of Darwin's theory, this book's purpose is to show that the Christian doctrine of man's origin is compatible with the evolutionary hypothesis and that the two views of the human organism are complementary."—N Y Times

---

Reviewed by Ruth Benedict

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 17 '29 450w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '29 480w

"The book is written in a simple style, almost wholly free from technical terms, while a glossary explains those it is necessary to use. The summary review of scientific data, all presented in the light of recent research, which fills the greater part of the volume, is made in a clear and able way."

+ N Y Times p20 F 17 '29 330w

St Louis 27:306 N '29

Spec 141:219 Ag 18 '28 100w

JAMES, JAMES ALTON. Life of George Rogers Clark. 534p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press [25s Cambridge univ. press]

B or 92 Clark, George Rogers 28-20443

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"James's life is written not only with scholarly detachment and impersonal judgment, but is, so far as this reviewer knows the only adequate interpretation of Clark's somewhat baffling and singular personality as well as the only full presentation of his earlier period of triumphant accomplishment and the later years of storm and bitterness." L. P. Kellogg

+ Am Hist R 34:353 Ja '29 500w

"His scholarship is unmarred by national prejudice or by excessive admiration for his hero. The book is, in fact, not a biography but a history of the times. It is a narrative of many details told without emphasis; and it fails to translate the vigorous personality of the soldier statesman. . . Although it has defects as a biography, the book contains much that is interesting." M. G. Jackson

+ — Canadian Hist R 9:349 D '28 540w

"Here is an illustration of what historical research should be, and of how historical writing should rest upon a sure foundation of minute investigation of source materials."

+ Christian Century 46:748 Je 5 '29 100w

"With no axe to grind and under no obligations to defend or to eulogize, Professor James has told a straightforward, sympathetic story. The book is a model of what a biography ought to be."

+ Hist Outlook 20:94 F '29 240w

"He has drawn upon the libraries of all the United States, of France, Canada, England, and Spain. The result is the emergence of a figure back of the historical events, unusual, picturesque, but understandable, and a presentation of the evidence as to the controversies which either settles them or leaves them in a suspense that is likely to prove permanent." C. R. Fish

+ Nation 128:677 Je 5 '29 570w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:644 D '28

"It is a masterly treatment of every aspect of Clark's life, well-planned, embodying a vast amount of original research, and meticulously accurate. Its style is usually undistinguished, and at times painfully dry and plodding, but this is to some extent a defect of Dr. James's virtue, his scrupulously honest adherence to fact." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1157 Jl 6 '29 2000w

JAMES, MARQUIS. The Raven; a biography of Sam Houston. 489p il $5 Bobbs

B or 92 Houston, Samuel 29-22644

"Marquis James restores to life one of the most dramatic personalities in the whole history of America, a magnificent, almost unbelievable figure. . . Governor of two states, Senator, commander of an army, President of one republic and a promising aspirant for the office in another, with an interlude as a drunken outcast among the Indians—few men have poured themselves out in such abundant living."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"It is a marvelous life-story, a thrilling frontier romance. . . Marquis James misses nothing of the color of this epic tale. He writes in the modern temper, with three-dimensional human beings and colorful anecdotes; but his story is liberally documented and accurately framed in the pageant of American history. It is no second-hand retelling of thrice-told tales, but the synthesis of long research. It should restore Sam Houston to his rightful place among the heroes of American folklore." L: Gannett

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 10 '29 1250w

Boston Transcript p1 D 28 '29 1050w

Cleveland Open Shelf p149 D '29

"Sam Houston himself has become a myth, but his story without embellishment equals any romance of Old World heroes and demigods, and Marquis James tells it very effectively in 'The Raven.' . . The result is a portrait of Houston equal to any of those limned by Gamaliel Bradford, and his descriptions of environment reacting on character are not surpassed by Carl Sandburg's study of Lincoln's prairie years." Joe Gould

+ N Y Evening Post p12m N 16 '29 850w

"It is one of the best biographies of recent times, thorough, scholarly, fair and alive in every page with the sense of character in action upon a great stage and animated by powerful human motives, while holding true to manly principles." J: Carter

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 5 '30 1400w

JAMES, NORAH C. Sleeveless errand. 250p $2.50 Morrow

29-12530

"The theme of 'Sleeveless Errand' is somewhat similar to Michael Arlen's 'The Green Hat,' but what sentimentality Miss James's book contains is of a less old-fashioned and more dangerous sort. The scene of the story is laid in present-day England, and the characters (with the exception of the hero) belong to the desperate, neurotic, semi-artistic set of London's young hopelesses. The hero, Bill, is a comparatively pedestrian and steady architect. He has just discovered that his wife is unfaithful, and is meditating suicide. At the same table in the coffee shop sits Laura, whose lover has just thrown her over, determined on the same thing. He follows her when she goes out; they talk; and the rest of the book is a history of their next thirty-six hours."—New Repub

---

"Sleeveless Errand is anything but a finished work, but it has a sustained vitality that would seem to guarantee a certain amount of truth behind the depressing picture it presents."

— + Bookm 70:99 S '29 350w

" 'Sleeveless Errand' raised a furor in England, but it is not a censorable book. It is not written for the people who are disconcerted by the casual use of 'bad language' and the equally casual use of bed as a background for solemn confidences. It is written seriously, attempting to explain this present current of restless desperation." V. P. Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 9 '29 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p125 S '29

"The wonderful thing about Miss James's book is that it carries conviction. This rather ordinary story, with its course set about by pitfalls full of sentimentality and slop, has been guided so straightforwardly by its author, and with such intense urgency, that it rarely wavers." T. S. Matthews

+ New Repub 59:187 Jl 3 '29 630w

"Once Miss James has emerged from the weltschmerz that darkens the twenties, she will write better novels than 'Sleeveless Errand.' Already she possesses more than promise. Her style is spare and strong; her character drawing clear, if implausible; her sense of beauty vividly tender." F: F. Van de Water

+ — N Y Evening Post p5s Je 8 '29 250w

"Put baldly, the plot of 'Sleeveless Errand' sounds trite and melodramatic. But Miss James is an artist as well as a writer of a first novel. She arouses those ancient cathartic emotions, pity and fear, in the reader. If her novel is monoptic, it is at least a good monoptic novel. It does not see life steadily and whole, but it sees a fairly representative segment of post-war life very steadily, indeed."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 9 '29 620w

"We did not find the book moving. And it will take another book to disclose the extent of the writer's talent. In this one, she has adopted her means to her end, skilfully. But they may be all the means she has."

— Outlook 152:267 Je 12 '29 230w

"Without imagination, without wit, without emotion, without decorative effect, without even desire, these figures have no tragic value, and are quite as useless for a novel as they are for reality. It is a pity that Miss James considers creatures so futile to be representative of any generation." R. A. Taylor

— Spec 142:292 F 23 '29 200w

"Miss James is obviously well informed on the neurotic society of modern London, and portrays it with skill and effectiveness. The characters, however, are of an extreme type and the tale suffers somewhat from the limitations of the environment from which they are chosen."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 130w

JAMES, WILL. Sand. 328p il $2.50 Scribner

29-9921

A half-starved tenderfoot crawls into Ox Yoke cow camp. As soon as he is fed and rested the cowboys begin his education, and when it has gone far enough, Tilden goes out to catch the wild black stallion for Miss Rita. The story is not as good as the pictures.

---

Booklist 25:360 Je '29

"Although some of the elements of the stereotyped 'Western' are present in this tale, the background of the big range country itself is portrayed with sincerity and truth. . . The value of 'Sand' lies chiefly in the picturesque authenticity of its milieu. As a story it is below the standard of Will James' best work." Glen Mullin

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ap 14 '29 580w

Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '29 300w

"A very simple story of the cow country, saved from the banality of the ordinary wild west story by the transparent sincerity and the background of actual experience of its ex-cowpuncher author and illustrator."

+ Christian Century 46:748 Je 5 '29 40w

"Mr. James's drawings are as good as usual, but his text is deplorable. A novel, after all, demands something more than draftsmanship and a perversity in spelling. Furthermore, Mr. James's smug belief that all virtue is sequestered between the Missouri and the Rockies, irritates us a trifle." F: F. Van de Water

— + N Y Evening Post p11m My 4 '29 180w

" 'Sand' isn't as good a book as the author's 'Smoky.' However, it will make good reading, as James's other books have made, not only for children, but as well for grown-ups who like authentic Western stuff."

+ N Y Times p8 My 26 '29 480w

"Now comes Will James with forty-three horse pictures all full of action, vivid and inspiring; also a story woven about the pictures, all freshness and quiet humor." C: J. Finger

+ N Y World p11m My 12 '29 180w

"The real value of 'Sand' lies in the picture it gives of the cow country. The story is well managed; the capture of the wild black stallion on which the hero has set his heart is made both impossible and credible; but what one will remember is not the despair when the horse goes through the trap the first time, nor the triumph when he is caught and tamed, but the fellowship one has had with the cowboys."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:11 Jl 27 '29 280w

Wis Lib Bul 25:161 My '29

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN). Georgian novel and Mr Robinson. 75p $1 Morrow [2s 6d Heinemann]

823.09 English fiction—History and criticism 29-20241

"Miss Jameson does not reveal the given name of her convenient Mr. Robinson. It might be either Tom, Dick or Harry without interfering with his utility as a person for whom the work of recent novel writers is interpreted. He is, as Miss Jameson sees him, a 'respectable little man of quiet manners' whose preferences in the domain of fiction are 'in favor of the orderly, the understandable, and the useful.' Georgian novels, many of them, disturb him by their peculiarities and bewilder him by their technique and their choice of themes. He is not averse to struggling with a difficult novel, as Miss Jameson says, 'but not for a moment after the suspicion has crossed his mind that he is searching in a dark, untidy room for something which is not there.' "—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Booklist 26:110 D '29

"By her clear vision of what the Georgians are trying to accomplish and by her sympathy with the perplexities of the average reader when confronted with the results she succeeds in bringing the two elements into some degree of intellectual communication."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 10 '29 170w

"Her essay bears too many signs of the lecture; it is too amiable and evasive. Still, though it does not go deep, it is easy to read."

— + New Statesman 32:678 Mr 2 '29 230w

"Although she is capable of a just appraisal of the practices of Virginia Woolf and Aldous Huxley, she is completely out of touch with the spirit of their work, which is the spirit of their age. However much she may disguise it by abstract nomenclature, what she means by greatness is the particular combination of intellect and sentiment, neuroticism and normality, faith and scepticism, prudery and frankness which characterized the writing of the latter half of the Nineteenth Century." Johan Smertenko

Outlook 154:31 Ja 1 '30 120w

"Miss Jameson might have got farther and achieved greater originality had she not hampered herself with so unnecessary a traveling companion. At least she could, surely, have stood up to a man her own size."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p433 My 30 '29 300w

JANSEN, WERNER. Light of Egypt; tr. from the German by William A. Drake. 307p $2.50 Brentano's

Moses—Fiction 28-25027

"According to Jansen, Moses is the son of the High Steward Amram and the Princess Bithja, who marries and rules with Menephtah. The infant is placed in a basket and set afloat on the Nile, from which he is drawn by the ruling pair to be their 'adopted' son. The book carries him through his childhood and his youth. It includes his flight into the desert, under radically different circumstances from those in the Bible, and his marriage to Jethro's daughter, concluding with a lamentably tame exodus."—N Y Times

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 O 28 '28 250w

"The author has had literally to make bricks out of straw in creating characters and setting for his tale and at times the inadequacy of his material is apparent. Much is included in the story that is most interesting, although the ordinary reader will be left confused as to how much of it is accurate and how much imaginative."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 10 '28 200w

Reviewed by W: Seagle

Nation 128:86 Ja 16 '29 100w

"Coming on the heels of Untermeyer's 'Moses,' Jansen's 'The Light of Egypt' seems very inferior. The author has made Moses a character neither awe-inspiring nor lovable. He is a rather half-baked individual, surrounded by too many hazy motives to be convincing as fiction and too much deviation from the generally accepted to be convincing as even semi-historical."

— N Y Times p7 D 16 '28 520w

"This story of the development of a great national leader and lawgiver, as imagined by Werner Jansen, while presenting a possible sequence of events, by no means succeeds in creating at all points a convincing impression of probability."

— + Springf'd Republican p10 S 25 '29 600w

JASTROW, JOSEPH. Keeping mentally fit; a guide to everyday psychology. 315p $3.50 Greenberg

150 Psychology, Applied 28-29629

A collection of brief articles upon various aspects of mental hygiene and the mind's behavior.

---

"His contribution to mental hygiene is not only to give positive advice in regard to these matters but also to break down a large number of popular misconceptions which have grown up about psychology and about mental processes and reactions. In the reviewer's opinion, Jastrow has succeeded admirably in presenting these matters at the low level of the average reader of the newspapers." S: W. Fernberger

+ Am J Psychol 41:491 Jl '29 150w

"Each article is short and to the point. Everyone will find some puzzle which has bothered him answered in plain language which the non-professional reader can understand." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 19:462 Ap '29 240w

Booklist 25:231 Mr '29

" 'Keeping Mentally Fit' has the virtue of being clear and comprehensible to the most simple-minded, and yet not offensively simple to the clear-minded." Percy Winner

+ N Y Evening Post p12m D 8 '28 380w

"Dr. Jastrow has approached the many human problems involved with well-balanced human judgment as well as with the knowledge of a scientist. And some of his pronouncements are mentally tonic as well as practically helpful."

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 17 '29 590w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv F '29 80w

Pratt p7 summer '29

St Louis 27:6 Ja '29

"The book provides solid mental food in small and attractively prepared helpings conducive to ready digestion."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '29 130w

"It must not be supposed that Dr. Jastrow is in any sense descending to pseudo-psychology. He may speak the language of the street, but he keeps the brains of the laboratory and study. . . The book ought to be of very real help to the many who are seeking psychologic light." H. A. Overstreet

+ Survey 61:813 Mr 15 '29 320w

"Among the many recent books on psychology particularly intended for the casual reader this stands out as exceptionally level and lucid, as well as being of practical utility."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p479 Je 13 '29 50w

JASZI, OSZKAR. Dissolution of the Habsburg monarchy; a failure in civic training. (Univ. of Chicago studies in the making of citizens) 512p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

943.6 Austria-Hungary—Politics and government. Hapsburg, House of

"Dr. Jaszi sees the Austro-Hungarian Empire as the greatest modern experiment in international government. Because of the ten distinct nationalities of which it was composed the story of its failure is not only interesting as an episode in Central European history, but also significant as an indication of whether such a thing as a super-state can ever succeed. . . A Hungarian by birth, and a member of the short-lived liberal cabinet formed at Vienna just before the final dissolution of the empire, Professor Jaszi treats his subject with the authority of one who knows the whole story from the inside. Considering his nationality, his thorough indictment of the tyrant Hapsburgs is to be expected. But the history which he has written is nevertheless valuable. Though biased, his analysis of the causes of dissolution is both concrete and brilliant." —New Repub

---

Boston Transcript p7 N 27 '29 230w

"To anyone interested in the acute political problems of Central Europe, or in the question of what it is that forms the basis for national fervor, Professor Jaszi's encyclopedic work will prove a mine of information. In every aspect of the economic, social, and political life of the pre-War Central Europe, he searches for the roots of the various national hatreds and jealousies. Though the book is long and solid, the keenness of the author's observations is rewarding." B. L. Pitney

\+ New Repub 61:49 D 4 '29 900w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel
N Y Times p11 O 6 '29 1700w

Reviewed by Kenneth Gould
N Y World p11m D 29 '29 400w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:26 N '29 160w

"The work would have gained much by condensation of its verbose and elaborate style." N. L. Sims

\+ — Survey 63:439 Ja 1 '30 550w

JAVITS, BENJAMIN A., and WOOD, CHARLES WESLEY. Make everybody rich; industry's new goal. 300p $3.50 Forbes

330.973 United States—Economic conditions. United States—Industries. Trusts, Industrial 29-11663

"The authors describe the right-about-face in the strategy of American industry and how it came about. And they head their discussion into two conclusions: first, that the anti-trust laws must be amended and, second, that coordinated planning by the nation's industrial leaders is necessary if certain weaknesses which now threaten the whole magnificent structure of our success are to be corrected."—N Y Times

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 21 '29 170w

"This particular phase of American history is set forth with a virility behind which the force of the writer's personality is felt, and by which the reader is convinced that he knows whereof he speaks."

\+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '29 180w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Christian Century 46:1377 N 6 '29 400w

Reviewed by James Rorty
Nation 129:174 Ag 14 '29 400w

"Our authors have dared the business structure to put up or shut up; to make 'prosperity' a living body rather than a spotted ghost; to render some of the 'service' that is such a favorite topic at annual conventions. It is a meet and timely challenge, and one that I shall watch with interest. I wish them all success, but I hope they will forgive me if I am still just a little shy of Goliaths who give up raw meat for salads." Stuart Chase

\+ New Repub 59:295 Jl 31 '29 750w

"The authors make an excellent team. Mr. Javits is a lawyer of wide experience with modern corporate organization and Mr. Wood a seasoned writer who knows American industry first hand and who wields a pointed pen." Evans Clark

\+ N Y Times p10 My 26 '29 1400w

"This is a deceptive book. Written in colloquial terms as easy-flowing as your everyday speech, it is going to have a hard time for a while getting recognition as the serious and penetrating study it is. People are still prone to think of economics as something that must be very solemn, dry, aloof and recondite—something professional, wearing whiskers, using language designed to awe the common man." Shaemas O'Sheel

\+ N Y World p7m Jl 7 '29 450w

Reviewed by R: J. Walsh
Sat R of Lit 6:156 S 21 '29 600w
World Tomorrow 12:423 O '29 220w

JAYNE, MRS MARY (SALKELD-ROBINSON) (MARY BREARLEY, pseud.). Good marriage. 292p $2 Century [7s 6d E. Mathews & M.] 29-3483

When Faith marries Tom Grandage her parents are especially pleased because the question of Jack Spofforth is settled. And Faith too is pleased, believing herself in love with Tom. Not till the children are growing up and Jack comes back does she realize how empty her "good marriage" is, and how much she has missed.

---

Booklist 25:286 Ap '29

"For a first novel 'A Good Marriage' shows some skill of construction, although it moves too slowly at the beginning. Plot and style lack distinction, but the more emotional scenes are described with sincerity and a restraint which makes them truly moving." Garreta Busey

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 24 '29 450w

Boston Transcript p5 F 16 '29 520w

"The unusual medium which the author of 'A Good Marriage' has chosen, the story of a life seen in retrospect, tends at first to alienate the reader, but interest soon becomes profound in the infinitely moving and tragic picture which unfolds between the first and last chapters."

\+ — N Y Times p25 F 17 '29 500w

"The author brings out considerable human values in the book."

\+ N Y World p5e F 24 '29 230w

Sat R of Lit 5:837 Mr 30 '29 300w

"There is no internal evidence that this quietly-told and deeply-felt story is a first novel. It has all the competence of experience, it proceeds without hurry or awkwardness, and for all its apparent simplicity it seizes on the imagination as few novels do. . . It is remarkable how interesting and moving Faith is as revealed by Miss Brearley, how haunting her ordinary story."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p410 My 31 '28 550w

Wis Lib Bul 25:101 Mr '29

JEANNERET, CHARLES EDOUARD (LE CORBUSIER, pseud.). City of to-morrow and its planning; tr. from the 8th French ed. of Urbanisme; with an introd. by Frederick Etchells. 301p il $7.50 Payson & Clarke [25s Rodker]

710 City planning

A survey of the ugly and congested conditions existing in most of our large cities today and of problems of transport in a modern machine age. The author presents two schemes for modern city reconstruction: one, the "Voisin" plan for the centre of Paris; the other for a "city of three million inhabitants." Streets, problems of housing, and open spaces or parks, are his chief concern. With illustrations and maps.

---

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '30 400w

"Le Corbusier ranks with Freud, Picasso, and Einstein, as a leading genius of our time. The only great architect alive, he has turned his attention from the individual house to town-planning. And the result is 'The City of To-morrow,' a book not for æsthetes but for statesmen." Raymond Mortimer

\+ Nation and Ath 45:567 Jl 27 '29 820w

JEANNERET, C: E.—Continued

"M. Le Corbusier's extremely important book is an analysis of the problem of the city and a solution. It sidesteps none of the issues; admits the inevitable growth in population, the need for speed and centralization, and provides a reasoned and thorough overcoming of the difficulties. This book is, both practically and artistically, a work of vision." Edgar Johnson

+ N Y Evening Post p10m D 28 '29 2000w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p1 O 27 '29 1350w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 153:350 O 30 '29 120w

"M. Le Corbusier's remarkable book is translated from the eighth French edition of 'Urbanisme' and like its predecessor, 'Towards a New Architecture,' has provoked much controversy. It is a tribute to the author that his literary achievement is welcomed even by his professional opponents because they realise that here is a live philosopher whose voice is loud enough to carry architectural discussion into the market place." A. T. Edwards

+ Sat R 148:104 Jl 27 '29 1000w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 2 '29 250w

"One is not quite sure whether he has thought through the problem of transporting his workers. One questions the sanctity of the gridiron. And the author himself is delightfully vague about costs. But the break with tradition, the grand manner, the brusque refusal to temporize as every great city is now temporizing, make this book a tonic contribution to the discussion of our most baffling engineering problem." Geddes Smith

Survey 63:161 N 1 '29 550w

"The trouble with Le Corbusier—a prefix would be an affectation—is that he is not scientific enough. He applies mechanical solutions to biological problems. The externals of our civilization may be exactly as he describes them, but human nature is human nature, and to design for one without reference to the other is like measuring passions and prejudices in feet and inches. Successful architecture is, and must be, a compromise between the externals which change from time to time and the human nature which remains more or less constant. But it is even doubtful if Le Corbusier is scientific enough in the physical field alone."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p785 O 10 '29 950w

JEANS, SIR JAMES HOPWOOD. Astronomy and cosmogony. 420p il $10 Macmillan [31s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

520 Astronomy. Cosmogony. Stars 28-20561

"My book attempts to describe the present position of cosmogony and of various closely associated problems of astronomy, as, for instance, the physical state of astronomical matter, the structure of the stars, the origin of their radiation, their ages and the course of their evolution. . . As the book is intended to be, first and foremost, a rigorously argued scientific treatise, the inclusion of a substantial amount of mathematical analysis was inevitable, but every effort has been made to render the results intelligible to readers with no mathematical knowledge."—Preface

---

"The book should be read not only by mathematicians, but by all who have any interest in the universe as it is, was, and will be. Even if the mathematical arguments are too difficult to follow, the results of them are quite easy to understand. The book is of the highest interest, and gives much food for thought." C. P. S.

+ Nation and Ath 43:597 Ag 4 '28 700w

"Astronomy is more than ever a promising field for theoretical research, and Sir J. H. Jeans's book, which aims at summarising the present status of the young science, will undoubtedly provide inspiration to theoretical astrophysicists; at the same time it will encourage astronomers doing observational routine work to make enhanced efforts, and will disseminate the knowledge of modern astronomy among workers in allied sciences." S. Rosseland

+ Nature 122:159 Ag 4 '28 2100w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:43 O '28

"He has a poetic aptness of expression given to few essayists and still fewer physicists. Strip his 'Astronomy and Cosmogony' of its mathematical formulae and there remains not only a text which fascinates because of its content but a text in which may be found many a finely turned sentence and figure of speech." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p3 Je 16 '29 2400w

"Sir J. H. Jeans is one of the founders of theoretical astrophysics, and has contributed many fertile ideas and theories to the new science. His new book is therefore of unusual interest to every student of astronomy. . . Certainly 'Astronomy and Cosmogony' is one of the most 'personal' books on astronomy ever written. Theories and data, no matter how important, are not even mentioned if they are for one reason or another not interesting to the author." B. P. Gerasimovic

Science n s 68:513 N 23 '28 1600w

"Dr. Jeans, one of the most daring yet cautious of modern astronomers, has given us an excellent book."

+ Spec 140:909 Je 16 '28 280w

"Sir James Jeans's work has been spread over a quarter of a century, and has throughout been that of a thoroughly skilful mathematician. He has printed the mathematics as credentials for those who can test them; but he has also put his results into language which all can read and enjoy. . . There is no need to look at the mathematics if it is unintelligible or repellent, for there is in the book plenty of letterpress which is lucid and attractive—and also many beautiful pictures of nebulæ."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p513 Jl 12 '28 1800w

JEANS, SIR JAMES HOPWOOD. Eos; or, The wider aspects of cosmogony. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 88p il $1 Dutton

523 Cosmogony. Astronomy 29-17004

This little book in the Today and tomorrow series indulges in no flights of the imagination such as mark other books in the series, but limits itself to scientific fact. "Happily," writes Dr Jeans in his preface, "astronomy is a science in which exact truth is ever stranger than fiction, in which the imagination ever labours panting and breathless behind the reality, and about which one could hardly be prosaic if one tried."

---

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 S 8 '29 230w

"The present volume is to be recommended on account of its compactness rather than its novelty, and also for the illustrations of nebulæ and star clouds, of which six are excellently reproduced. The book is less an argument than a description, leading, as all scientific work does, to more questions than it answers. Whatever may be the reader's reaction to the views expressed, however, the reading of the book will be accompanied by unalloyed pleasure. Sir James Jeans remarks that astronomy is a subject on which 'one could hardly be prosaic if one tried'. We have received many proofs that this is an under-estimate of human ingenuity, but if the remark be restricted to the present author we can give it whole-hearted assent." H. D.

+ Nature 123:937 Je 22 '29 280w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 154:29 Ja 1 '30 100w

"No book in the 'To-day and To-morrow' series surpasses Eos in brilliance and profundity, for one of the best brains engaged in research gives us here the fruits of long labour in terms that all may understand. Indeed, the author's comparisons would seem almost frivolous were it not necessary to stab us wide awake with arresting analogies in order to make us understand with our semi-mediaeval minds man's true place in Cosmos." F. Y.-B.

+ Spec 141:sup447 O 6 '28 300w

"Couched in simple language, yet authentic and scientific in statement, in some 80 small pages Jeans has set forth a digest of the present status of cosmic physics. Scientists and laymen alike will enjoy the book." C. S. L.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '29 850w

"Sir James Jeans has given us, in simple and attractive language, from which the mathematical formulæ have been eliminated, a fascinating summary of his tremendous conclusions."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p779 O 25 '28 850w

JEANS, SIR JAMES HOPWOOD. Universe around us. 341p $4.50 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

523 Astronomy. Cosmogony 29-19765

A brief account, written in simple language, of the methods and results of modern astronomical research, both observational and theoretical. Special attention has been given to problems of cosmogony and evolution, and to the general structure of the universe.

Booklist 26:106 D '29

"The author is a master of simple analogy. His style is not that of a fact-recording scientist. The approach is skilful and the resulting book is one of the best in presenting a current view of the universe around us. . . There are small errors of fact, but nothing serious is noted beyond the difficulty of keeping up with observation." Harlow Shapley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 O 20 '29 2200w

Boston Transcript p7 N 9 '29 920w

Cleveland Open Shelf p152 D '29

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 46:1609 D 25 '29 600w

" 'The Universe around Us' is even more stirring to the imagination than Eddington's 'The Nature of the Physical World,' and it is an easier book for the layman. No attempt is made to explain in detail the more recondite aspects of astronomy. The descriptions given of the Einstein Theory and Schrödinger's wave theory of the electron are models of lucidity and are nicely measured to the intelligence of the reader who has no specialized knowledge. By adhering to this method throughout, Jeans has managed to give an amazingly complete picture of the universe as it appears to the astronomer, without in any way straining his reader's attention." Denver Lindley

+ New Repub 60:216 O 9 '29 1400w

"Sir James Jeans tells us a simple story of the wonderful achievements of science in the realms of the stars, which he has in past times discussed in terms so much more exact and exacting. . . To lead the inexperienced through these vast regions demands a guide of mighty metal. No better could be found than Sir James Jeans." E. N. Da C. A.

+ New Statesman 34:160 N 9 '29 920w

Reviewed by C: Johnston

N Y Times p1 O 13 '29 2000w

"One of those unusual books in which an expert in a difficult science speaks clearly to the layman without an air of condescension." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p10m O 13 '29 1200w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:30 O '29 80w

St Louis 27:306 N '29

"An extraordinary book by an extraordinary author for the ordinary reader." J: Q. Stewart

+ Sat R of Lit 6:312 O 26 '29 900w

"Sir James Jeans has amply fulfilled his ideal in making this account of modern astronomy 'intelligible to readers with no special scientific knowledge.' If it is a trifle overwhelming to read at one sitting, that is simply because of the gigantic data and concepts which it introduces to the lay reader."

+ Spec 143:341 S 14 '29 600w

"In reasonable, simple language, yet without strained effort at popularization, he summarizes the conclusions of astronomical science as to how the universe developed. It is fortunate either for the student or the general reader to have scientific knowledge so responsibly and agreeably presented, at once with mathematical precision and with comprehension of the imaginative appeal alike in the inconceivably vast and the infinitesimally small."

+ Springf'd Republican p14 S 27 '29 500w

"This great book is capable of providing almost any number of reflections, from which, nevertheless, one stands out clearly—that the author must have thoroughly enjoyed the writing of it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p779 O 10 '29 1900w

"With a wealth of familiar illustration and an unusually attractive style, he gives the results which have been obtained from 'exploring the sky,' 'exploring the atom,' and 'exploring in time'. . . . There are few scientific men of modern times who have the gift of exposition both in lecturing and writing more highly developed than Sir James Jeans." E. W. Brown Brown

+ Yale R n s 19:391 winter '30 1000w

JEFFERS, ROBINSON. Cawdor, and other poems. 160p $2.50 Liveright

811 28-29531

The theme of Cawdor is, as usual with Robinson Jeffers, one of bitter tragedy, tho without much of the alleviating beauty of his other narrative poems. Their California farm destroyed by fire, Fera leads her blind father to their neighbor Cawdor's door. He marries her, but she falls in love with his unawakened son and in attempting to rouse his love goads father and son to destructive fury.

Booklist 25:241 Mr '29

"His new poem, Cawdor, a kind of nightmare novel in a loose prose-verse is, for all its monstrosities and absurdities and excessive use of symbolism—his wounded eagles and shot lions—a very impressive thing. If only Mr. Jeffers can hold himself down a little, be a shade less drastically and humorlessly melodramatic, one feels that he might give us something pretty astonishing. Even so, Cawdor is a fine thing, despite its bad lapses." Conrad Aiken

+ — Bookm 68:577 Ja '29 320w

"Jeffers is writing the most powerful, the most challenging poetry of this generation." Anne Singleton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 23 '28 1150w

" 'Cawdor' is more incoherent than 'The Roan Stallion' and quite as unpleasant a narrative poem. There is neither beauty nor honesty in a work of this kind. None of the characters has any sincere relation to life. The shorter poems in this volume, such as 'Ocean' and 'George Sterling's Death' have a distinct merit."

— + Boston Transcript p7 D 15 '28 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p54 Ap '29

"His way is the way of the great tragic poets, whom Mr. Jeffers has been bold enough to take as his masters. Imitators of Euripides, Sophocles, and Shakespeare are usually ridiculous, but Jeffers is not because he is of their company; he dredges, as they dredged, too deep in the mud of mortality not to come up with images and rhythms terrible in their force and beautiful in their explainable strangeness. Hence his uniqueness among American poets, and his very high rank." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 128:50 Ja 9 '29 500w

"Mr. Jeffers has great scenic qualities, and the wind blows loud among his mountain forests. It is the want of hope and humour (are they one?) that prevents him from being everybody's poet."

+ — Nation and Ath 46:292 N 23 '29 150w

JEFFERS, ROBINSON—Continued

"There is sufficient evidence that Jeffers has lost none of his immense power. He has merely failed to use it throughout the book as terribly as he can." Babette Deutsch

New Repub 57:253 Ja 16 '29 400w

"Those who have followed the work of Robinson Jeffers will still grant him his high position. He is America's most dramatic worker in a form other than prose. But 'Cawdor' is a scream on the affrighted air; and when the sound and fury die away one is inclined to think that something of artificiality was used in the production of the noise." Percy Hutchison

— + N Y Times p2 D 16 '28 1200w

"There is no man writing poetry who in any resembling way strives to say what Jeffers endeavors to say in his strange powerful narratives; his is not to be measured against any like effort. His world and his speech are his own, and if he fails in his powers to take others into that world—through art—it is not to be wondered at. The depth of his passion and its turbulence is too great for him, as yet." G: O'Neill

+ Outlook 151:114 Ja 16 '29 380w

St Louis 27:165 My '29

"Like 'Women of Point Sur,' 'Cawdor' is another indication that Jeffers works within a very limited sphere."

Springf'd Republican p7e F 3 '29 280w

JEFFERS, ROBINSON. Dear Judas, and other poems. 129p $2.50 Liveright

811 29-25959

"Dear Judas," the title poem, is a long dramatic piece which represents the betrayal of Christ by Judas as an act of love. A long narrative poem, "The loving shepherdess," follows. Clare Walker, the shepherdess, whose father has been killed, wanders over the country with the remnant of his flock. She is poor, beholden to those she meets for her food and shelter, and knows, further, that she will die in a few months giving birth to her child. A few short poems complete the volume.

Reviewed by Francis Snow

Current Hist 31:632 Ja '30 100w

"Dear Judas is far from being one of Mr. Jeffers's best poems. [Its] success depends after all upon our perception of a theory, and even upon our agreement with this theory; which at once removes the discussion of it from the field of criticism as I see that field. The setting, as might have been expected, is somber and fine, and utterances of the principal persons often reach a high level of rhetoric. But there is significance in the fact that Mr. Jeffers's long lines forget most of the time to be poetry. There is another long poem in the volume to which these remarks do not apply. The Loving Shepherdess contains some of the best work that Mr. Jeffers has ever done; it is continuously pathetic, exciting, and beautiful." Mark Van Doren

+ — Nation 130:20 Ja 1 '30 450w

" 'Dear Judas' is a retelling of the Christ legend such as only this poet could offer; its qualities of rich violence and blinding illumination are exclusively his and give the legend an entirely new outline; yet it is by these very same qualities that the ambition of the poem is defeated and turns into a graphic illustration of his defects and virtues. 'The Loving Shepherdess' represents nothing of an advance in the work of Jeffers; it seems to belong pretty much to the same period as 'The Women at Point Sur.' But it is a beautiful and moving poem, with that importance which is naturally attached to any of his long poems. 'Birth-Dues' is one that should be sedulously memorized by those who have difficulty in retaining a single impression of the philosophy and purposes of Robinson Jeffers." Emanuel Eisenberg

+ N Y Evening Post p6s Ja 4 '30 1100w

"Robinson Jeffers, in his own, and often uncouth way, moves to pity and horror as few poets have done since the Greeks. And 'The Loving Shepherdess,' in its strange and tragic beauty, is something even finer than what he has done hitherto." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p12 D 1 '29 950w

" 'Dear Judas' is flares and shadows and black blood; 'The Loving Shepherdess,' the book's other long poem, is like some low, sweet smelling bush growing everywhere among the rocks and breaking slowly into incredible white flower; but the roots of the two poems are the same: love of every living creature, terrible consuming pity." L. T. Nicholl

+ Outlook 153:509 N 27 '29 240w

JEFFERSON, CHARLES EDWARD. Cardinal ideas of Jeremiah. 220p $2 Macmillan

224.2 Bible. Old Testament. Jeremiah 28-25927

"A protest against the ordinary conceptions of Jeremiah as man and prophet, the book is a companion to Dr. Jefferson's earlier work, 'The Cardinal Ideas of Isaiah.' . . [It] is the outgrowth of a series of sermons preached by Dr. Jefferson in the Broadway Tabernacle."—Boston Transcript

"The book will be of value not only to the minister, Bible student and church school teacher, but to the student of values, human and divine, to all who are interested in the heroic deeds of their fellow men." R. R. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 29 '28 450w

"If the English that is used often reveals an intimacy with the King James translation and occasionally has the flavor of archaism, the message unquestionably meets the needs of the present day." I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 6:106 Ja '29 120w

"Dr. Jefferson has written a volume of sermons on Jeremiah, and they are interesting, effective and challenging sermons. There is plenty of exhortation and admonition, and occasional flashes of true insight." J. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 5 '29 760w

JEFFERSON, THOMAS. Literary Bible of Thomas Jefferson; his commonplace book of philosophers and poets; with an introd. by Gilbert Chinard. 210p $3 Johns Hopkins

B or 92 29-19188

"The publication of the 'Literary Commonplace Book of Thomas Jefferson' is doubly interesting because it furnishes a further evidence of the wide reading and interests of Jefferson as a young man and because it indicates something of the sources of Jefferson's ideas. On the yellowed and time-worn sheets of this little notebook of 119 pages the young Jefferson transcribed those passages from his reading which particularly appealed to him, either as literature or as philosophy. Here is a heterogeneous collection of moral maxims and miscellaneous excerpts from poetry and prose—'characteristic of the man as well as of the period. Most of the excerpts are from the Greek and Latin authors.' "—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Am Pol Sci R 23:1062 N '29 120w

Reviewed by H: S. Commager

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 S 8 '29 430w

"A very interesting volume, interesting to the reader as a model for his own commonplace book perhaps, or for its rich commentary upon certain phases of life and men's activity as well as for its illuminating outlining of the personality of Thomas Jefferson."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 27 '29 300w

JEFFREYS, HAROLD. The earth; its origin, history and physical constitution. 2d ed rev 346p $6.50 Macmillan [20s Cambridge univ. press]

551 Earth [29-26922]

Second edition of a valuable work on geophysics first published in 1924, which has been revised and extended in several directions, especially in the part dealing with seismology.

Booklist 26:83 N '29

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 10 '29 380w

"In general the author's clearness and directness of statement are to be welcomed; one may hesitate to believe that his conclusions are always so certain as his language seems to imply, but definiteness at least affords a stimulus and an opportunity to critics, and arouses discussions which often advance knowledge. Further editions of this valuable work will certainly be called for; it may be suggested that, in these, the author should extend to all the chapters his commendable practice, at present applied only to some of them, of giving a summary of the main arguments and conclusions in the chapter."

+ — Nature 124:296 Ag 24 '29 350w

JEFFREYS, HAROLD. Future of the earth. (New science ser.) 79p $1 Norton [2s 6d K. Paul]

551 Earth 29-27788

A New science series essay, giving an account of modern views of the earth and theories as to its final phase a billion years hence.

N Y Times p43 D 1 '29 100w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 154:29 Ja 1 '30 30w

Spec 143:sup545 O 19 '29 50w

"Though small in size it ranks with those successful efforts at popularization for which we are indebted to such writers as Sir James Jeans and Professor Eddington."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p851 O 24 '29 200w

JEFFRIES, GRAHAM MONTAGUE (BRUCE GRAEME, pseud.). Trouble! 317p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Harrap]

29-13365

Trouble enough had Donald, or was he Wallace? Not only had he difficulty over delivering some very costly diamonds, but he was not sure of his own identity. Intrigue and romance were almost inextricably mixed up for a time but in the end it was worth the trouble.

"There are many humorous situations in the story, some of them so broadly treated as to reduce it almost to the level of the so-called bedroom farce. Doubtless it was intended to be reproduced on the screen. It will certainly make an amusing picture, and those who like comedy, even when it is somewhat broad, will find both book and picture entertaining."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '29 80w

"The solution is most ingenious."

Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Mr 7 '29 150w

JENISON, MADGE. Invitation to the dance. 294p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-22147

Aunt Guddah's life began at the age of 44. She married, in succession, a local realtor, Uncle Orlando; Spangler, a tyrant with several children on his hands; and, at 70, a wealthy gentleman thru whom she was able to consummate a lifelong wish to see Toledo, Spain. A large measure of Aunt Guddah's belated zest for life came to her, apparently, in the years she spent in California with Eddy, her artist step-son.

Booklist 26:119 D '29

"Miss Jenison has tackled a neglected theme and produced a pleasant tale. There are some superb passages of droll humor and pathos which break the monotony of elaborate treatment of lack-color incidents."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p28 D 8 '29 480w

Boston Transcript p4 N 23 '29 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p158 D '29

"A woman neither young nor beautiful gets the best out of life because she gives her best to it. That is the theme of Miss Jenison's new novel, which is pared to a delightful conciseness. Never does she strain to display its obvious moral, but she enjoys sharing her long-known secret that it is a privilege to know Aunt Guddah. She is assured a vast number of readers to agree with her."

+ N Y Times p24 N 10 '29 480w

"A wistful, unemphasized tenderness and appeal undoubtedly pervade the story, but Aunty and her remarkable rejuvenation are just a little too extraordinary for the hard-headed reader to swallow."

— + Sat R of Lit 6:459 N 23 '29 280w

"The story as a whole strains the credulity of the reader. . . There are discrepancies in the chronology of the story. The heroine, who is 44 in 1886 is strangely enjoying post-war conveniences at the age of 66, or the year 1908. There is mention of modern apartments, with incinerators, powerful automobiles and women drivers, to say nothing of a trip by plane across the English channel made by Aunt Guddah at the age of 71, which, taking time as it comes would make the year 1914, or war-time."

— Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '29 350w

JENKINS, BURRIS ATKINS. Drift of the day. 201p $2 Willett

230 Religion 28-27873

"Many people say we are drifting, hopelessly drifting, in our religion. We have cut our cables, lost our anchors and our bearings. Burris Jenkins corrects any such pessimism. According to him religion is not a thing to be anchored. We are to set sail and go somewhere, and we are getting somewhere. He is fearless, optimistic, adventurous as he describes the trend of religion today."—Boston Transcript

"There is great force to his message, which is not negative, but constructive and progressive."

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 22 '28 230w

"It is a book of unsystematic theology—very unacademic theology. If any reader is frightened off by that word, which is not the author's but mine, he will be doing himself a bad turn. This book is written for people who do not like theology—or think they do not—but are interested in religious ideas expressed in simple and concrete terms."

Christian Century 45:1370 N 8 '28 130w

J Religion 9:332 Ap '29 40w

World Tomorrow 12:236 My '29 50w

JENKS, EDWARD. Book of English law; [with a foreword by Lord Atkin]. 460p $5 Houghton

347 Law—Great Britain 28-15400

In this one-volume study, addressed to the layman and heartily commended by the dean of the Faculty of law at the University of London, the reader is given a well-written survey of the history and development of English law.

"The writer of this book-note, who has long felt that law should be taught non-technically, and as a cultural subject, in any complete curriculum of the social sciences, finds a particular satisfaction in The Book of English Law. . . The whole is work of the sort to be expected from one whose place as a legal historian is so thoroughly assured by previous labors." G. H. R.

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:516 My '29 250w

"Dr. Jenks puts forward his material in a clear but compressed fashion, heavy diet for the lay mind. What the educated layman gets is, needless to say, a clear, concise statement of nearly every branch of English law. But to the reviewer it seems that the book has much more value for the student of law who is not English: it is just the book to put in the hands of the curious foreigner. It is a mine of correct information succinctly expressed, though for such purposes the absence of references is to be regretted." A. F. Benn-Cooke

+ — Harvard Law R 42:847 Ap '29 870w

JENKS, EDWARD—Continued

"To present, in the space of less than 500 pages, a comprehensive and balanced survey of the whole law of England, in language understandable by the layman, is no easy task; and Professor Jenks is to be congratulated on his conspicuous success. There is probably no other writer living who could have brought to the undertaking an equal combination of encyclopædic knowledge with experience and skill in lucid exposition. We may both hope and expect that the book will make an immediate appeal to a wide circle of readers, at home and abroad, that it will be translated into foreign languages, and that it is destined to successive re-births in future editions."

+ New Statesman 31:293 Je 9 '28 700w

"Not only a succinct and comprehensive statement by a recognized authority, but a contribution to the literature on the subject that a layman may read with interest and profit." Scott Wilson

+ Portland Evening News p5 Je 4 '29 480w

"An admirable book for 'laymen interested in the place of Law in modern communities and its influence on economic and social polity.' "

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p460 Je 21 '28 1150w

JENKS, LELAND HAMILTON. Our Cuban colony; a study in sugar. (Am. fund for public service studies in Am. investments abroad. Studies in Am. imperialism) 341p il $1 Vanguard press

327.729 United States—Foreign relations—Cuba. Cuba—Foreign relations—United States. Cuba—Economic conditions. Cuba—Industries. Sugar trade—Cuba 28-11578

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"This might have been a good book on a worth-while subject, but it is spoiled by the half-truths, innuendo, and partizanship of the sort one finds so often among circles of the self-approving intelligentsia, whose motto seems to be: 'Whatever is, is wrong, especially if it is American!' The best thing that can be said of this book is that it has made a wide use of materials. Unfortunately, however, it would seem that the author is not capable of an unbiassed presentation of facts." C: E. Chapman

— + Am Hist R 34:667 Ap '29 350w

"His pages abound with pertinent anecdotes and good-humored cynicism. It is to be hoped that the 'American fund for public service' will support further studies of this kind." Quincy Wright

+ Am J Soc 34:713 Ja '29 350w

Reviewed by A. C. Wilgus

Hist Outlook 20:191 Ap '29 200w

JENNINGS, WALTER WILSON. Introduction to American economic history. 546p il $3 Crowell [15s Williams & N.]

330.973 United States—Economic history 28-5041

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"As a text in American economic history this book does not seem to be quite as satisfactory as one or two others already in use; but its topical arrangement will make it useful to the student for reviewing the history of our tariff, immigration, et cetera." G. A. Koch

— + Hist Outlook 20:43 Ja '29 450w

"Professor Jennings' work offers a most valuable arsenal of reference facts on the development and present status of the sources from which our Midas-touch has drawn its gold-transforming qualities." S. K. Selekman

+ Survey 63:53 O 1 '29 150w

"This is an excellent popular handbook. Though not professing to be more than an outline, it gives quite as full details as the non-specialist reader needs, and it is written in a much more interesting style than is usual with summaries."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p100 F 7 '29 140w

JENNISON, GEORGE. Noah's cargo; some curious chapters of natural history. 260p il $3.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Black]

590 Animals [29-26333]

This interesting collection of facts and legends about birds and animals is drawn from ancient sources and from modern observation in menagerie and field, and is appropriately illustrated from old prints as well as from photographs of living subjects.

Booklist 25:310 My '29

"A book that is full of fascinating unfamiliar lore."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 F 10 '29 120w

"Jungle and zoo and circus all yield their quota of yarns; and the numerous illustrations, many taken from old pictures, prints and sculpture, add to the interest of the book."

+ New Statesman 32:338 D 15 '28 250w

"Noah's Cargo is one of the most fascinating books we have come upon for many a day. . . There is no chapter in Mr. Jennison's book that does not offer a full yield of curious and fascinating information, be the subject fighting cheetahs or pelicans, a cave man's drawing of a mammoth or tiger-shooting in sixteenth-century India. The illustrations from ancient MSS and woodcuts from engravings and photographs are splendid." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 12 '29 450w

"For the delight of those who love animals Mr. Jennison has been delving far and wide and deep into all manner of strange lore about birds and beasts, and the book he has contrived out of it is most aptly titled. He has been a lifelong student of animals and for years was curator of the famous Belle Vue Zoological Gardens, in Manchester, England, and so to the fruit of his scholarly investigations into the literature and art dealing with animals of ancient and medieval civilizations he has added the wide and varied knowledge born of personal experience and observation. The result is a wondrously wise book about animals, ancient and modern, written with sympathy and interest as well as knowledge, with zest in the theme, and with a keen sense of the picturesque, the quaint, the unusual, the appealing."

+ N Y Times p20 F 10 '29 400w

St Louis 27:161 My '29

"It is all rather jumbled, and is written in a breathless style, as though the author were answering an examination paper and had determined to set down all his knowledge in the shortest possible space and time. This one complaint having been made, we have nothing but praise for Mr. Jennison's amazing knowledge of animals, ancient and modern."

+ — Spec 141:993 D 29 '28 220w

"While the whole book is full of interest, packed with out-of-the-way information and enjoyable in small doses by both layman and zoologist, it derives more permanent value from the personal experiences of the author and his friends."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p990 D 13 '28 1200w

JENSEN, ARNE SIGURD. Rural schools of Norway. 280p $2.50 Stratford

379.173 Rural schools—Norway. Education—Norway 28-30229

This is the first comprehensive study in English of the rural schools in Norway. It goes with detail into the educational system of Norway and its beginnings and describes the rural schools of today in regard to organization and administration, curriculum, and teacher training.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 F 10 '29 80w

Reviewed by J. W. Twente
El School J 29:716 My '29 320w

"Dr. Jensen having spent his boyhood in Norway as well as seven years in its schools is able to write with a rich background of experience. . . The student will find the Bibliography of educational literature of Norway, prepared by the library staff of Norway, very valuable." M. B. Roberts
+ Survey 62:326 Je 1 '29 300w

JEPSON, EDGAR. Cuirass of diamonds. 291p $2 Vanguard press [7s 6d H. Jenkins]
29-8267

"Edgar Jepson's latest novel might be called a detective story in reverse order. That is, while a detective story starts with the crime and works backward to the criminal plot, 'The Cuirass of Diamonds' begins with the plotting of the criminals and works forward to their detection by the police. Mr. Jepson does things in a large way. He provides a diamond cuirass worth $5,000,000 and then brings gangs from four countries to compete for it. As if this were not enough to make bigger and better burglaries, the cuirass is worn by the most beautiful woman in Europe."—N Y Times

Bookm 69:xxvi My '29 40w

"Highly recommended as a high life shocker with villainy, heroism, love and worse exploding every minute." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 21 '29 130w

"The book is a shrewd concoction calculated to please many tastes."
+ N Y Times p17 S 1 '29 150w

"If you don't mind it being incredible and illogical and all that, you may find it exciting to see how it turns out." W. R. Brooks
Outlook 151:636 Ap 17 '29 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p337 My 3 '28 200w

JERNEGAN, MARCUS WILSON. American colonies, 1492-1750; a study of their political, economic and social development. (Epochs of Am. hist.) 457p $1.60 (7s 6d) Longmans
973.2 United States—History—Colonial period 29-5418

In small compass Professor Jernegan produces for students a comprehensive survey of the American colonial period. "His period extends down to the eve of the revolutionary wars, and he shows clearly how the germs of revolution were always present in the Colonial days, and traces the development of the movement." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

"The book is well written, in a clear, simple and objective way, at times embellished with apt and picturesque quotations from the sources. Also it is not an easy task to know how to arrange the material, for there are so many colonies, each with its own temper and genius and interests. There are other designs which perhaps would serve well to bring out the chronological sequence and the interplay of factors and forces, yet we feel that the pattern of this volume is well fashioned. There are five good maps in colors and lists of references are copious. Each chapter has its own bibliography and the total number of pages devoted to reference material runs high—perhaps too high. All told it is an excellent book." W. T. Root
+ Am Hist R 35:377 Ja '30 450w

Booklist 25:388 Jl '29

"The volume is an extraordinarily excellent example of twentieth century historical synthesis." H: S. Commager
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 31 '29 780w

Pratt p33 autumn '29

Times [London] Lit Sup p318 Ap 18 '29 110w

JEROME, OWEN FOX, pseud. See Friend, O. J.

JERVIS, MRS VERA MURDOCK STUART (JANE ENGLAND, pseud.). Bull whip. 310p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran
29-12910

Davida Bruce, her husband and his sister Alice, all suffer in varying degrees from the half-mad brutalities of Old Bruce, patriarch of the South African farm on which they live. Old Bruce's hatred concentrates on Alice and finally drives her from home. Davida too longs to leave, but when she learns the reason for the old man's bitter fury, she forgives him, and stays in the country she loves, to build life afresh with her husband.

Booklist 26:70 N '29

"The plot does not turn on any peculiarly South African problem, such as that of race, and although the charm of the veld is an integral part of the book, it does not usurp the principal role. The story is human, not geographical. . . The book is well written, although it is neither very subtle nor very profound. The descriptions of the veld, while they do not intrude, convey its grandeur and its fascination, while the well defined characterizations are full of humorous observation." Garreta Busey
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 30 '29 1000w

"At the denouement the author's too calm detachment, her too careful rationalism, conspire to destroy the intensity of that drama. . . Nevertheless, it is an interesting yarn. The women are specially well drawn, the collected, most British Davida, the head-long, delightful Betty and above all the impossible Alice, whose inferiority complex is one of the most deftly delineated of all the inferiority complexes now rampant in modern literature." M. L. S.
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Jl 20 '29 280w

"Whatever one may say against this novel, it is straightforward, uncolored by sentimentality and the author is not deluded about human nature. So much may be said for it on the positive side. But against it, one cannot help expressing disappointment that it is so underwritten, not in the sense of too much restraint, but in the sense that its dramatic possibilities, which are numerous, are unrealized."
— + N Y Times p7 Je 16 '29 450w

"A good enough story, but not so good a one as Miss England could tell if she could rid herself of a tenderness for characters who deserve good fortune."
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:490 N 30 '29 580w

JESSUP, ALEXANDER, ed. Representative modern short stories. 950p $5; school ed $3 Macmillan
Short stories—Collections 29-1675

Short stories from several literatures—American, French, English, and Russian—are included, with the American group predominating. They range from Rip Van Winkle and a tale by Scott, to Katherine Mansfield and Margaret Prescott Montague. Appended to the stories are lists of representative modern American, English, French, Russian, and German short stories. The work is designed for students.

Booklist 25:395 Jl '29

"An excellent anthology." B. R. Redman
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 24 '29 250w

"With a few exceptions 'Representative Modern Short Stories' is about as fine a collection of modern short stories as one could wish to see gathered between the covers of a single volume; as a text for students in preparatory and college courses, for which purpose the book is primarily intended, it is quite exceptional." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p11m F 16 '29 150w

"The volume is intended for use in colleges and in senior high schools. It is edited without study questions, but it contains one of the most helpful of bibliographies of modern short stories available for school use. The book is a worthy

JESSUP, ALEXANDER, ed.—Continued
example of good editing and good bookmaking. It should be in all school libraries whether or not it is used as a textbook." Russell Thomas
+ School R 38:74 Ja '30 360w

JOHN, WILLIAM MESTREZAT. Seven women. 307p il $2.50 Sears
29-21924

"The action of the book, aside from the thoughts of the characters, covers only one afternoon, but birth and death and fear and envy and hate have their terrible way in these few hours. The Baptist Ladies Aid Society of Hopeville is meeting on the afternoon of the story at the house of Mrs. Gibbs. The author strikes the key of the novel in his first, unadorned sentence, 'Mrs. Gibbs' hired girl was having a baby.' And while the baby is being born in the shed the seven Baptist ladies arrive and gossip and sew and each, through some old nerve set tingling again by events occurring in the shed, is led to recall her life at its crucial moments. And of these seven lives as they unroll themselves in the narrow, prejudiced minds of the seven women who have lived them, Mr. John makes his story."—Sat R of Lit

---

"Mr. John is a skillful storyteller. His tales move rapidly. He handles suspense and climax and denouement excellently. Such a narrative talent may go far." A. B. Parsons
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 O 27 '29 450w
Boston Transcript p5 N 13 '29 250w

"The variety he gives to a single theme, the scope he causes that variety to embrace, the balance he strikes between his story and his design, remake an old idea into a novel of fresh interest, originality, and promise."
+ Nation 130:51 Ja 8 '90 120w
New Repub 61:51 D 4 '29 180w

"There is no wasting of energy or scattering of forces. Mr. John has wrought as surely and smoothly as a sculptor, and the result is a finely polished novel. Like many another technically flawless thing, however, 'Seven Women' may be said to have sacrificed a certain emotional drive. It fails somehow to excite and capture us. It lacks the last ounce of warmth and conviction necessary to make it a truly remarkable book."
+ — N Y Times p6 O 20 '29 750w

"As a study of woman's inhumanity to woman Mr. John's female portrait gallery is complete in every way; jealousy masking as love, stinginess masking as thrift, cruelty masking as kindness are all depicted. Not a few feminine readers of this book will wriggle uncomfortably as they turn the pages. Moving and piercing as the novel is, it somehow lacks detachment, it seems written according to the cult of the American Mercury." Marie Luhrs
+ — N Y World p11m N 10 '29 400w

"The book is a perfectly competent and perfect unoriginal work in the manner of current realism, and it carries a popular moral."
Outlook 153:230 O 9 '29 180w

"Mr. John has done his work so surely and so well that it is only from the announcement on the jacket one discovers 'Seven Women' to be a first novel. But in presenting the women separately from their own thoughts Mr. John has been much less successful. The women are all too much alike and they are all too consistently as bad as they can be. In his effort to show how narrow and selfish and unseeing they are, the author fails to make them real." Gladys Graham
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:234 O 12 '29 1100w

JOHNS, JANE, pseud. Girls men marry. 144p $2 Dutton
137 Young women 29-6768

"Miss Johns studies the qualities which men seek in a girl they desire as a friend or the woman they want to marry. She even analyzes what the qualities are which are summed up under the phrase 'sex appeal.' Taking these as a basis, she develops her theories concerning the way in which a girl can make herself popular with men."—Boston Transcript

---

"What sets it apart from most books of its kind is that the author has treated the matter with understanding and good sense, so that the girl who reads the book is sure of having a better understanding of herself than she has had in the past."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '29 200w
St Louis 27:191 Je '29
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '29 450w

JOHNSEN, JULIA E., comp. Selected articles on national defense. (Handbook ser.) 469p $2.40 Wilson, H.W.
355 United States—Defenses 29-26178

The present handbook is compiled from entirely new sources. The material and, with an occasional exception, the bibliography, are entirely post-war and largely post-Washington Conference, thus embodying the essentially current thought and discussion on the subject. Among the subjects touched upon are the army, navy, military training, military and naval aviation, the economic side of defense, a department of peace, chemical preparedness, the submarine, and disarmament.

---

Booklist 25:241 Mr '29
Wis Lib Bul 25:97 Mr '29

"Not much is left out, for the quotations cut across the whole spectrum of opinion, from the Coast Artillery Journal to The World Tomorrow. Not only a mine of information, but a bonanza, on the army, military training, the universal drafts, chemical warfare, the navy, disarmament."
+ World Tomorrow 12:316 Jl '29 80w

JOHNSON, AVA L. Bacteriology of the home; a textbook of practical bacteriology. 167p il $2.25 Manual arts press
648 Bacteriology. Sanitation, Household 29-5913

"This book for home and school use describes the culture of bacteria in the laboratory and shows their insidious menace to health, with instructions for achieving personal and household cleanliness. Advice is also given on disease prevention, vaccination, and quarantine. There are sixty photomicrographs showing bacterial growth under various circumstances."—N Y New Tech Bks

---

J Home Econ 21:370 My '29 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 14:20 Ap '29

JOHNSON, BURGES, comp. Little book of necessary nonsense. (Round table ser.) 81p il $1 Harper
827 Nonsense verses 29-10494

Nonsense verse collected from many authors and sources. Partial contents: Asleep, my love? by William Shakespeare; If a man who turnips cries, by Dr Samuel Johnson; An elegy on the death of a mad dog, by Oliver Goldsmith; There was a little girl, by H: W. Longfellow; The owl and the pussy-cat, by Edward Lear; The pobble who has no toes, by Edward Lear; Jabberwocky, by Lewis Carroll; The walrus and the carpenter, by Lewis Carroll; The little peach, by Eugene Field; The hen, by Oliver Herford; The purple cow, by Gelett Burgess; A tutor who tooted the flute, by Carolyn Wells.

---

Booklist 25:400 Jl '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p134 N '29

"This tiny anthology of amusing limericks and parodies should be popular with both children and adults." E. L. Walton
+ Nation 129:596 N 20 '29 180w

"This is an admirable collection of the nonsense verse which children should know and enjoy along with serious poetry. Elizabeth MacKinstry's illustrations are particularly suited to the text. The whole volume is an application of the text that a first-rate book need not be solemn, nor an entertaining one second-rate." K. W. Seitz

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1180 Jl 13 '29 150w

"80 small pages of well-selected nonsense. There are drawings—not very distinguished—by Elizabeth MacKinstry."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 130w

JOHNSON, GERALD WHITE. Randolph of Roanoke; a political fantastic. 278p il $3.50 Minton

B or 92 Randolph, John 29-10233

Mr Johnson's biography gives new life to the strange character and career of that Virginia aristocrat, John Randolph of Roanoke. A powerful hater and master of invective, his biographer yet finds him "the perfect and incorrigible idealist."

---

Booklist 25:392 Jl '29

"Mr. Johnson, of course, adds no new facts to those already known. His interpretation of some of the familiar facts is not always happy. He treats the Chase impeachment as if it were justified, which it certainly was not, and glosses over Randolph's total failure in the prosecution of that case. . . But the book as a whole is well conceived and executed." Allan Nevins

+ — Bookm 70:104 S '29 760w

"Only one who has worked long and patiently with biographical material, who fully understands how manifold, how complicated, how difficult of interpretation and manipulation it is, can appreciate the delicate artistic skill required to get such results as Mr. Johnson attains. To some of us, at any rate, the result appears to be just as high imaginative creation as the work of the French school and to bear far more the stamp of native veracity." Gamaliel Bradford

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ap 21 '29 1100w

"Here is a great and futile figure, interesting, vivid, compelling, exactly the subject for Mr. Johnson's skill. He has done as able if not as delightful a biography as his happy, sincere, sympathetic and perfectly limned 'Andrew Jackson, an Epic in Homespun.' If it does not satisfy as profoundly as the earlier volume, the reason is to be found not in lack of truth or art in the writer, but in the difference in the men." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 20 '28 1650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p123 S '29

"Mr. Johnson's book, a popular treatment, is written with infinite grace and care, and, if it offers nothing new in the way of material, it presents something that all the others have missed—a living picture of the man himself. If it seems at times too brief, there is always the Bruce volume left to consult." Milton MacKaye

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 27 '29 750w

"Mr. Johnson's contribution, as in the case of the life of Jackson, is a matured, carefully articulated and soundly completed product of his own studies and thoughts in the wide range which is likely to find wide acceptance." A. of American history during the first sixty years of independence. He has, after a fashion, done the thinking for the reader of the more extensive research biographies and has done it in a way S. Will

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 21 '29 1100w

"Excellent as was Johnson's brief biography of Andrew Jackson, this study of an equally striking if less important figure is even better."

+ Outlook 152:107 My 15 '29 260w

"Mr. Johnson has drawn a lively sketch of a strange and lively character. . . His book is extremely good reading." W: MacDonald

+ Sat R of Lit 5:903 Ap 20 '29 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '29 100w

JOHNSON, GUY BENTON. John Henry; tracking down a negro legend. (Univ. of N.C. Social study ser.) 155p $2 Univ. of N.C. press [9s Milford]

John Henry. Negroes—Folklore. Folklore—United States. Negro songs 29-23914

"The ballad and the stories surrounding it are described as a sort of negro version of Paul Bunyan, the formidable and phenomenal hero of the lumber camps. John Henry is a railroad man and Mr. Johnson accounts for the wide diffusion of the song by the migratory nature of the work during the period, forty to sixty years ago, when the railroads were being built. John Henry is presumed to have worked on the Big Bend Tunnel in West Virginia, opened for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad in 1872. A steam drill, menacing the jobs of the hand driller, was brought to the diggings, and John Henry volunteered to beat it drilling. He did so and died 'with his hammer in his hand.' "—N Y Evening Post

---

"Mr. Johnson has not only made a permanent and valuable contribution to the folk lore of our country, but he has also written an entertaining volume. One of the strongest of its charms is the fact that it gives many versions of John Henry songs and ballads, with the music, or enough of it to set things going." Herschel Brickell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 S 22 '29 680w

"Mr. Johnson prints many versions of what may be supposed the original ballad, and passes expert commentary on the variations. But the most impressive thing about his book is the enthusiastic and sympathetic spirit with which it is written. It is that spirit which marks him as inspired among sociologists, and leads one to expect anything one likes from North Carolina." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 129:495 O 30 '29 300w

"Another workmanlike and distinguished volume from the University of North Carolina Press. . . Mr. Johnson's researches and decisions on the evidence form a fascinating document, and the ballad itself is given in many variations, in several cases with the music. It is an important and authoritative addition to our native folklore." J: Crawford

+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 7 '29 300w

"Mr. Johnson has done a workmanlike, thorough job in his attempt to discover the truth about the legend, to collect, sift and compare all its variants and to reveal its meaning for the negroes. His book includes an imposing collection of slightly varying songs, both ballads and work songs, which, as he gives both words and music, will be valuable for students of negro folksong."

+ N Y Times p22 O 27 '29 400w

"In spite of the tedious painstaking care and patience required in getting together and classifying this most complete of all John Henry collections, Dr. Johnson has worked in much of human interest and demonstrated clearly that he is 'not one of those who believe that folklore studies must be dull in order to be scientific.' " N. N. Puckett

Sat R of Lit 6:339 N 2 '29 700w

"To the impatient reader this conscientious piece of research might appear in its earlier chapters like a parody upon the modern craze for the elucidation of historical and literary mysteries. . . But upon this legendary figure Dr. Johnson has concentrated an energy, a solemnity, and a genuine historical sense which are positively infectious."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p865 O 31 '29 380w

JOHNSON, HARRIET MERRILL. Children in the Nursery school. 325p il $3 Day

372 Child study. Growth. Education—Experimental methods. Bureau of educational experiments, New York. Nursery school 28-17393

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:148 Ja '29

JOHNSON, H. M.—Continued

"Miss Johnson's book is at once a thoroughly scientific and a thoroughly human document. . . It is rather unusual that a practical worker in the field should so detach herself from her material as to do such clear and original thinking about it." Elisabeth Irwin

+ Bookm 68:705 F '29 400w

"The book will serve at least three purposes—it will preserve a fine bit of sound experimentation in education; it will serve as an invaluable hand-book for those professionally engaged in Nursery School work; and to those parents who may be fortunate enough to read it, it will visualize and emphasize the world in which tiny children are living." R. G. Reynolds, M.D.

+ N Y Evening Post p8m F 2 '29 380w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:10 F '29

Pratt p12 summer '29

"This is probably the most important book yet written upon organization in the nursery school. It is distinguished from other books on nursery schools read in England because it is free from sentiment, written by one with an extraordinarily clear grasp of modern psychological and intelligence experiments, with a mind of her own, and with several years' experience as a director of nursery schools." R. G. R.

+ Sat R 147:580 Ap 27 '29 900w

"This book offers both a method and an exposition by which the guardians of childhood may equip themselves anew for their responsible task." Hughes Mearns

+ Survey 61:512 Ja 15 '29 200w

JOHNSON, MRS MARIETTA LOUISE (PIERCE). Youth in a world of men; the child, the parent and the teacher. 305p $2.50 Day

370.1 Education of children. Children—Management. Child study. Education—Experimental methods 29-12751

A clearly written outline with practical illustrations, of the basic principles underlying modern methods in child study. The nature and needs of the child, creative work for children, problems of discipline and morals, and other matters pertaining to the child's education, are discussed.

---

Booklist 26:12 O '29

Reviewed by J. B. Temple

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ag 25 '29 500w

"While certain of her theories are open to question, even to downright criticism, yet the most conservative reader of this book cannot but recognize the soundness of many of her suggestions."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Jl 17 '29 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p116 S '29

"The reader does not get at any point the impression that Mrs. Johnson has any doubts as to the complete wisdom of her scheme, but there are certainly many statements which the scientific student would not be willing to accept without corroborating evidence. However, it should be said that the book is obviously not addressed to the scientific reader but is intended primarily to present a new attitude with regard to education. This purpose the author has accomplished with great success. The book should be read especially by those who are least in sympathy with the aims of 'progressive' education." G. T. Buswell

+ — El School J 30:232 N '29 630w

J Home Econ 21:858 N '29 70w

"Mrs. Johnson has been for years a pioneer in the New Education movement, and those who are interested in evolving better methods of training children, in both America and Europe, have long paid close attention to what she has been doing in her School of Organic Education in Fairhope, Ala. This book presents for the first time in print her ideas, principles, methods and general program, set forth in a readable way with plenty of illustrative incident, anecdote and example."

+ N Y Times p2 Je 2 '29 530w

"It is easy reading, quite naive and entirely innocent of expert or studied thinking. It all sounds, of course, a bit too easy, too quick. Fairhope graduates, however, acquit themselves creditably in colleges and higher institutions, and are splendid unspoiled human material besides. I wish Mrs. Johnson had chosen to write about these young people. They far more than her loosely slung together notes would argue powerfully for the validity of many of her theories." Agnes de Lima

+ — Survey 62:615 S 15 '29 360w

Wis Lib Bul 25:191 Je '29

"The fresh stimulation of this well-known educational pioneer's telling strokes against home and school training procedures which are destructive of sincerity, joy, and balanced growth in children makes the book well worth reading. Its premise, however, that a freer, friendlier world will be brought about merely by dropping the bars to wholesome personal development, is a bit naive. To promote understanding, there is need for a specific, comprehensive program, which this author seems to have overlooked. Thus with reservations we commend this fruit of a humanely working intuition which has broken into flashes of sure insight."

+ — World Tomorrow 13:41 Ja '30 100w

JOHNSON, MARTIN ELMER. Lion; African adventure with the king of beasts. 281p il $5 Putnam

799.2 Hunting—Africa. Lions. Photography of animals 29-7175

In an earlier book Martin Johnson gave hint of the experiences which are the subject of this latest African volume: his amazing adventures with lions in Tanganyika territory to the rarity and unusualness of which the accompanying illustrations are ample testimony. Writing in his usual easy style, Mr Johnson recounts thrilling moments shared with Mrs Johnson in their common task of photographing lions at close quarters, and describes in one chapter the adventures of the Boy Scouts who joined them for a brief stay.

---

Booklist 25:312 My '29

Bookm 69:xiv Je '29 50w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 28 '29 180w

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett

Boston Transcript p8 Mr 30 '29 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p94 Je '29

"Mr. Johnson is a better artist with photographic plates than with a pen. His volume is straight narrative, nothing more, and yet for its content and its pictures it goes on the list of required reading for the term as one of the two best adventure books we have found this year." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 13 '29 640w

"To say that the pictures are far better than the text of 'Lion' is to cast no reflection upon the text: the pictures make one marvel while the style of the book is good journeyman writing, pleasant if not distinctive."

+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 7 '29 600w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:520 Mr 27 '29 110w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:10 My '29 150w

St Louis 27:204 Je '29

St Louis 27:269 S '29

Spec 143:102 Jl 20 '29 200w

" 'Lion' is a book for all who enjoy adventure by proxy, when they cannot have the reality. While Mr Johnson's style is journalistic rather than literary, it is adequate to visualize the lion country and its fascinating inhabitants."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '29 760w

Times [London] Lit Sup p414 My 23 '29 540w

JOHNSON, OWEN MCMAHON. Sacrifice. 345p $2 Longmans
29-18261

The novel offers a solution of the problem of marriage and divorce when there are children involved. Sabina and Max had fallen in love and married too young. As a result they had fallen out of love, while still in their twenties. Then came the other woman and Sabina was content to let Max go, even tho there were their two children to whom they were both devoted. But an accident to their son changed the whole trend of the matter.

Booklist 26:70 N '29

"In 'Sacrifice' Owen Johnson is at his best, again working out to its last detail the implications of a theme which obviously delights him."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 25 '29 530w

"If you discount the cheap dialogue and a few silly episodes which are put into this story to give it charm for those who love to read about 'high life,' you will find the substance of a sane and thoughtful analysis of a modern situation. This is a novel to read slowly and with reflection." D. F. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 31 '29 400w

" 'Sacrifice' is a very moral book. It preaches, by inference, the sanctity of marriage. There is a great deal of loose living in it, but the author does not in any wise approve of that in the book and those who live by their passions die by them. It is not a great book, but it undoubtedly will be a popular one, for no group in America will agree that all of the characters are truly drawn." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p9 Ag 17 '29 680w

— N Y Times p14 N 3 '29 480w

"Mr. Johnson has written a sane, sympathetic and interesting study of two fine human beings who reach some measure of peace and philosophy only as they approach middle-age." Mary Shirley

+ Outlook 152:629 Ag 14 '29 220w

"There is little to commend in this novel. . . Vigor is lacking; and we should likewise have been grateful for a little imagination and subtlety."

— Sat R of Lit 6:258 O 12 '29 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p929 N 14 '29 220w

Wis Lib Bul 25:323 O '29

JOHNSON, SAMUEL. Samuel Johnson, president of King's college; his career and writings; ed. by Herbert and Carol Schneider; with a foreword by Nicholas Murray Butler. 4v set $30 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Johnson, Samuel, 1696-1772. Columbia university 29-29591

These four volumes are devoted to the life and writings of the man who was the first president of King's college, now Columbia university. The first volume contains Johnson's autobiography, now for the first time printed, together with some supplementary biographical notes and such of Johnson's letters as are of general historical interest. Volume two is devoted to Johnson's philosophical writings and correspondence; volume three to papers relating to Johnson's career as a priest and influential member of the Church of England; and the final volume to letters and other documents concerned with the establishment of Kings college.

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 D 8 '29 1250w

"For the student of educational history, especially for a first-hand knowledge of the conditions surrounding higher education in the eighteenth century, the entire publication is a rich mine, while the fourth volume provides an invaluable documentary history of the stormy founding of King's College. And, finally, it may be noted that in the letters, the philosophy, and the controversies of that staunch old Tory, Samuel Johnson, may be found rich material for reconstructing the psychology of loyalism." E: H. Reisner

+ Sat R of Lit 6:344 N 2 '29 800w

JOHNSON, THOMAS M. Our secret war; true American spy stories, 1917-1919. 340p $2.50 Bobbs

940.485 European war, 1914-1918—Secret service 29-20596

True stories of the American Secret service in the war. Some of the accounts tell how American secret agents captured German spies, and the final chapter discusses the adventures of some famous women spies.

Boston Transcript p10 N 23 '29 170w

Christian Century 46:1380 N 6 '29 130w

Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water

N Y Evening Post p11m D 28 '29 120w

"The most interesting are those that seem authentic, and the greater part of them are all that spy stories ought to be—compact of danger and mystery, reckless daring and high importance. Especially good as stories and of consequence for the light they throw on the events in Germany after the armistice are the tales told in a chapter dealing with the work of our agents in Germany and the little known rôle which America played there."

+ N Y Times p26 N 3 '29 480w

"Book contains much interesting material, and proves that our Intelligence was remarkably efficient." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:468 N 20 '29 100w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:16 N '29 100w

JOHNSON, WILLIS FLETCHER. George Harvey, 'a passionate patriot'; with an introd. by Calvin Coolidge. 436p $5 Houghton

B or 92 Harvey, George Brinton McClellan
29-24044

George Harvey's public career as a personal journalist and a political prophet. His connection with journalism is traced from a six-dollar-a-week position on the Springfield Republican to the managing editorship of the New York World, and finally as head of Harper and Bros. Harvey early discovered and wrote of the political possibilities of Woodrow Wilson. He aided in the campaign that elected Wilson governor of New Jersey, and was largely responsible for Mr Wilson's nomination and election to the Presidency. Reasons for and circumstances surrounding Harvey's break with Wilson during the War, his subsequent opposition to the League of nations, and his ultimate support of Harding, occupy the latter part of the book. Included in the volume is the correspondence of George Harvey with Wilson, Harding and other politicians, Joseph Pulitzer, Mark Twain, William Dean Howells and Henry James.

"The biographer was associated with Harvey for many years and has made a very competent selection and arrangement of his material. He writes with great affection and this feeling on the part of a life-long friend is an impressive example of the loyalty Harvey could inspire." H: C. Lodge

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 3 '29 1350w

"The author skims along in the ways of altruism and patriotic endeavor, and forgets the evidences of a strong human personality. He refuses to paint Harvey with the mole on which Cromwell insisted. . . He carries Harvey through his whole career. His chapters on his experience in London as ambassador are of constant interest. Whether he was one of our diplomats of historical importance, time alone will tell, but he is an interesting figure in that capacity, as he is throughout the book. Mr. Johnson would perhaps have done a little better to have waited a year longer before writing this book. Evidently there has been a year's work put into it and he must have begun it soon after Harvey died. A few months more of contemplation might have ripened it and, we say this timidly, it might have a little mitigated its hero worship." S. L. Cook

JOHNSON, W. F.—Continued
+ — Boston Transcript p3 O 26 '29 1500w

"A very voluminous and detailed life, written interestingly, and reasonably documented, but stamped on every page with the unqualified admiration of one who was Harvey's colleague, protégé and indeed employee during his life." W. J. Abbot
Christian Science Monitor p10 N 9 '29 1250w

"Mr. Johnson, apparently, has allowed himself to fall so deeply in love with his subject as to make his book very much the kind of biography that Harvey himself would have desired. The book is lively, informing, immensely entertaining, and combative, but it is not inerrant, and the thoughtful reader is pretty certain to wonder occasionally if Mr. Johnson is interested in the whole story." W: MacDonald
+ — Current Hist 31:634 Ja '30 1200w

Reviewed by Shaemas O'Sheel
N Y Evening Post p14m N 23 '29 1050w

Reviewed by Horace Green
N Y Times p9 D 22 '29 1150w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p16 O 18 '29 1100w

R of Rs 81:20 Ja '30 280w

"This biography is a notable achievement, first, because of its documentation and the zeal with which Mr. Johnson has set down many facts hitherto unknown to the public, and in the second place, because Mr. Johnson, seeing through his hero's eyes the tides which his hero rode, pays no heed to their economic and historical sources, but keeps the spotlight on Harvey, the man, the manipulator, the political puller of high potency wires." W: A. White
+ Sat R of Lit 6:233 O 12 '29 1500w

JOHNSTON, GEORGE ALEXANDER. Citizenship in the industrial world. 297p $5 (12s 6d) Longmans

331 Citizenship. Industry. Labor and laboring classes. Economic conditions 28-16493

"This book is based on the view that the rights and duties of the citizen in the State have been so vitally affected by the industrialisation of the modern world that they can be rightly understood only if due emphasis is laid on the functions of the citizen as a producer and a consumer in the industrial order." —Preface

---

Reviewed by M. G. Smith
Am Econ R 19:517 S '29 270w

Reviewed by Harry Roberts
Sat R 147:288 Mr 2 '29 1550w

"Most of the book falls into the category of descriptive economics. The treatment is interesting, if a little uncritical of current economic nostrums. There are some acute observations, corrective of common fallacies."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p86 F 7 '29 730w

JOHNSTON, WIJNANT. Eyelids of the morn. 249p il $2 Appleton
29-1809

The friendship between Geoffrey Taplowe, English, and Falconer Hale, American, began in their schooldays in France, and was never to be broken. The one was a novelist, the other an artist, and they shared every experience—from love of the same girl, a fairy god-father episode in London and studio life in Paris, to the war, when death divided them.

---

Booklist 25:360 Je '29

"The structure of the book is non-existent; the parts have no relation to each other. The writing is effective, but unrestrained; Miss Johnston will make any sacrifice to get color and romance. Sentimental orgy as it is, this book shows real feeling."
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 24 '29 180w

"This story is written with a delicacy of touch, a beauty of description and a fine sense of chivalry that mark it as a choice bit of work. There is a poetic quality and an artistic sense about it that makes it a work of art."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 16 '29 230w

"Is an over-sweet story of friendship between two sensitive males, written in a spotless, well-mannered prose." Edwin Seaver
— N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 26 '29 50w

"The book has touches of a poetic quality at times; there are some charming descriptions and well-done bits of pathos. But it is very uneven."
— + N Y Times p6 Ja 27 '29 400w

"A first novel of considerable charm. . . The various episodes are filled, but for one exception, with tender and wistful beauty."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:737 Mr 2 '29 280w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '29 180w

"This tale is wrapped in a rather sentimental atmosphere out of which its incidents never emerge very clearly."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p317 Ap 18 '29 200w

Wis Lib Bul 25:160 My '29

JONES, CAROLINE M. DUNCAN. Lord's minstrel (a simple history of Saint Francis of Assisi). 234p il $2.50 Appleton [7s 6d Heffer]

B or 92 Francis of Assisi, Saint 28-9959

The story of St Francis of Assisi for children, told with effective simplicity and illustrated with scenes in color of Assisi and the surrounding country, and with drawings in black and white.

---

Boston Transcript p7 Je 2 '28 380w

"Its chief charm lies in the simplicity and utter unpretentiousness of its narration—a book which children as well as grown-ups may enjoy. Indeed it runs like a beautiful fairy tale throughout, written in the style of the old Franciscan documents and charmingly enhanced by Estella Canziana's drawings in pen and color."
+ Cath World 128:252 N '28 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p113 N '28

"The story of St. Francis is told with great simplicity and adequate completeness, and the book can be recommended as a charming introduction to the life and legend of the Saint of Assisi."
+ Sat R 145:139 F 4 '28 70w

"Her book shows real comprehension of the Franciscan spirit, a sense of human character, a sufficient but not excessive instinct for the picturesque." Evelyn Underhill
+ Spec 139:1094 D 17 '27 320w

Wis Lib Bul 24:257 O '28

JONES, CHARLES REED. King murder; a Leighton Swift detective story. 265p $2 Dutton
29-8545

Miriam King, who numbers many prominent men among her friends, dies of poison in her New York apartment. Clues and motives are abundant but the murder is only solved by the confession of the Death King.

---

Bookm 69:xxx My '29 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p38 Ap 14 '29 70w

N Y Times p20 My 5 '29 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 170w

JONES, EDWARD ALFRED. Old silver of Europe & America from early times to the nineteenth century. 376p il $8.50 Lippincott [£1 15s Batsford]

739 Silversmithing 29-1922

Taking up the countries of Europe in alphabetical order the author traces in this large and handsomely illustrated volume the history of the silversmith and his art from early times to the nineteenth century.

---

Booklist 25:274 Ap '29

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 25 '28 120w

"Mr. Jones, who has described many famous collections, is a most learned and competent authority, and his chapters, though often too concise, abound in useful information for the collector. The numerous photographs are instructive, and the closing chapter on forgeries should be carefully noted."

+ Spec 141:sup875 D 8 '28 150w

JONES, ELIZABETH INGLIS. Starved fields. 299p $2.50 Minton [7s 6d Constable]

Owen Morgan, last of a long line of hard-living, hard-drinking Welsh farmers, married Lady Anne, a beautiful English aristocrat. Anne loved her husband and her house but hated his relatives and his farm. For years her hold over her husband kept him from his friends and relatives, while his farm fell to ruin and he became as weak as he had once been strong. Then his old love for his cousin Gay reasserted itself, and with his love for Gay came a revival of his old interests, broken only by his death in a hunting field accident.

---

"Like others of these 'regional' novels, it is rather pretentious and wordy. It is possible to discern through the fog of words that the people are alive, and that their passions and sufferings are real. It is no exaggeration to say that if Miss Inglis Jones had combed out her prose, her novel would have been twice as valuable and readable."

+ — Nation and Ath 45:86 Ap 20 '29 100w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p13m D 14 '29 50w

"The story is told with a vividness, penetration and richness that reminds one of George Eliot—with the moralizing left out. . . There is never a dull moment in the powerful, cruel novel of the Welsh '90s."

+ N Y Times p28 N 10 '29 660w

"The melodramatic ending detracts from a story that contains much real drama and a good deal of the Welsh temperament and countryside." Gilbert Thomas

+ — Spec 142:755 My 11 '29 110w

"'Starved Fields' is spoiled by a certain coarseness, but it has strength and vitality, and as a picture of a district, a time (thirty years ago) and a people it is admirable."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p334 Ap 25 '29 520w

JONES, IDWAL. Steel chips. 324p $2.50 Knopf 29-14378

Bram Dartnell is the local saloon-keeper's son. His father is a man of force, and it is at his wish rather than Bram's inclination that Bram goes to work in the steel mill. The story is of Bram's apprenticeship in the steel works, his relations with the workmen, and his gradual rise to a position of responsibility.

---

"Idwal Jones gives one a very real sense of the life of the human atoms in relation to the enormous mill; the meaning of the mill remains untouched." L: Gannett

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Jl 14 '29 800w

"Mr. Jones writes over three hundred pages of amazing description. The reader hurries on and on, held by the magic of the author's visual power. Writing not the best of English at all times, though a rhythmic, measured style that passes for better grade than it is, he sets down on the printed page breath taking expanses of the great Shop 40." W. E. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '29 520w

Reviewed by Marian Tyler

New Repub 60:54 Ag 28 '29 300w

"Mr. Jones has painted the life of the machine shop in clear colors. While revealing the hold it had upon the workers, the pride they took in their shop and their machines, the poorly concealed devotion they had, involuntarily, for their work, he never romanticizes it. . . 'Steel Chips' is essentially a document. There are undertones to the book, but its truth is largely the truth of fact. . . As a novel it has its deficiencies."

+ — N Y Times p7 Jl 14 '29 700w

"His novel is cool, dispassionate, unswerving. It is almost a miracle of detachment. Perhaps a trifle less detachment would have been just as useful, for at times during the reading we are not easily able to surmise just where the novel is heading. But at any rate we are given the gratifying privilege of drawing our own conclusion."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:459 N 23 '29 400w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '29 200w

JONES, LESTER MARTIN. Quakers in action; recent humanitarian and reform activities of the American Quakers; with an introd. by Rufus M. Jones. 226p il $2 Macmillan

289.6 Friends, Society of. Reconstruction (European—war). European war, 1914-1918 —War work 29-8629

This little book tells the story of the humanitarian activities of the American Quakers in war relief undertaken in the countries of Europe.

---

"The story is told without adornment, but it is none the less impressive on that account."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Je 2 '29 60w

Boston Transcript p2 My 15 '29 280w

"A comprehensive and enthusiastic summary of the Quaker work for human brotherhood."

+ Nation 128:573 Ap 24 '29 50w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:12 My '29 150w

"A scholarly, short and remarkably full account of Quaker War Relief throughout Europe from the American entry until 1928." D. O. Stephens

+ Survey 62:504 Ag 1 '29 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p522 Jl 4 '29 680w

JONES, PAUL. Alphabet of aviation; drawings by Edward Shenton. 64p $2 Macrae Smith co.

629.13 Aeronautics 28-23028

The book is an illustrated dictionary of about fifty aviation terms which, together with the full page color drawings and the diagrams in the text, give the uninitiated at least a rudimentary idea of the parts of an airplane and how they work.

---

"Do not let the title prejudice you against this volume; it is well illustrated, very nice technically, and, if you want to straighten out twenty-six of your present ideas about aeronautics, here is a simple way of doing so."

+ Bookm 68:587 Ja '29 40w

"It is really a very useful and ornamental small book."

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 5 '28 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p139 D '28

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p6 D 2 '28 120w

"A practical little volume and will be useful in explaining the details of flying. It is the simplest book of the kind, although the pictures are only fair."

+ — R of Rs 78:559 N '28 40w

JONES, PAUL—Continued

"Mr. Jones has done his job well: his selection of terms and accurate, simple definitions of them are so clear that they hardly need his collaborator's excellent and unusual illustrations."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:496 D 8 '28 120w

JONES, RUFUS MATTHEW. New quest. 202p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan

248 Spiritual life 28-22934

Dr Jones describes the "seekers" as "those who have outgrown ancient formulations and become dissatisfied with crystallized institutions and inelastic systems, and who are eager for fresh and vital ways of life and thought. In a word, they are seekers for reality." His message to seekers such as these concerns the realities of the spiritual life."

---

Booklist 25:306 My '29

Reviewed by S. G. Cole

Crozer Q 6:131 Ja '29 220w

"A collection of what the author calls 'essays,' but which are really effective sermons, using imagery and biblical incidents and literary allusions and impressions gained from travel to illustrate various aspects of a rich spiritual ideal of life."

+ J Religion 9:332 Ap '29 30w

Pratt p8 spring '29

St Louis 27;192 Je '29

Springf'd Republican p10 F 27 '29 180w

"This new book by the distinguished Professor of Philosophy at Haverford College is written with the clearness of outline and fine idealistic vision which he has maintained throughout a number of volumes. His philosophy is not a discussion of abstract ideas but of living issues, and his idealism is constantly humanized by illustrations from everyday experience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p15 Ja 3 '29 270w

JONES, RUFUS MATTHEW. Trail of life in college. 201p $1.75 Macmillan

B or 92 Haverford college 29-8857

The author, professor of philosophy in Haverford College for more than thirty years, reviews a part of his life, from the great event of choosing a college, to a visit to Switzerland many years later.

---

"When Professor Rufus Jones undertakes to tell the intimate story of his own college years, he not only paints a charming and informing picture of life in a Quaker college in the eighties of the last century but he reveals much of what goes on in the breast of an earnest youth in any generation, the forces that play upon him, and the influences by which he is moved."

+ Christian Century 46:748 Je 5 '29 150w

"There are great scenes in the book that will carry the reader far along his own Trail of Life. . . The reading of this book is a sacramental experience that enables one to read his own mysterious soul, to open his sealed orders and to feel the invincible surmise that carries him forward in the right direction." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 6:392 Jl '29 430w

J Religion 9:662 O '29 100w

Nation 129:471 O 23 '29 220w

"His account of students' activities in those days seems almost incredible. There is even a chapter about 'The Influence of the Library!' " W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:20 My '29 30w

St Louis 27:290 O '29

JONES, THOMAS JESSE. Essentials of civilization; a study in social values. (Am. soc. science ser.) 267p $2.50; students' ed $2 Holt

301 Civilization 29-8323

An extensive knowledge of different types of culture, born of personal contacts with people of many countries—African, Asian, European—is the background for this study of the essentials of civilization.

---

"His discussion profits by his wide practical experience and extended travels. It is interesting and much better written than the majority of textbooks with which it is associated." M. G. Smith

+ Am Econ R 19:731 D '29 230w

Bookm 70:xiv D '29 120w

"Dr. Jones has had almost world-wide opportunity for research and observation, has had excellent training and shows real insight in his studies. It is one of those fundamental studies which affects many other problems and most human institutions. The treatment is human, colorful and sympathetic." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 4 '29 400w

"The book is well written. Its author has combined the comprehensiveness of vision, simplicity and penetration of a W. G. Sumner with the suggestiveness, inductiveness and fearlessness of an F. H. Giddings. Few of the newer publications should have a wider appeal or could be a better manual for the college freshman, the seasoned social worker, the minister and his assistants, the business man and banker, the philanthropist, the public spirited woman, or the artist, than this terse, direct and cogent volume." C: W. Coulter

+ Christian Century 46:584 My 1 '29 730w

Reviewed by C. M. Perry

Int J Ethics 39:508 Jl '29 170w

Reviewed by J: H. Holmes

Nation 128:718 Je 12 '29 480w

"Mr. Jones has an admirable faculty for clear exposition and, since his thinking on his theme has been forthright, sincere, and deeply earnest, his book is one that can be warmly commended to all sociological students."

+ N Y Times p20 Je 9 '29 480w

"Mr. Jones, who is educational director of the Phelps-Stokes Fund, with a long record of service with educational foundations behind him, writes with the tolerant, liberal, philanthropic air of one who has had much practical experience and much disillusionment with theorists." J: H. Randall, Jr.

+ Pol Sci Q 44:435 S '29 450w

"Do not go to Dr. Jones's book as to a text in economics and race-relations. But go to it as a challenge, the more persuasive because humbly voiced. . . The book speaks equally to human workers everywhere—not less to us here in the United States than to those in Africa or Islam." J: Collier

+ Survey 62:257 My 15 '29 630w

JONES, THOMAS WILLIAM. Hermes; or, The future of chemistry. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 88p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

660 Chemistry, Technical W28-6

The application of chemical science to matter is the theme of this little book, the chemical exploitation of material resources as necessitated by the growing complexity of life. Among these applications are synthetic substitutes for fuels, changes in constructional materials, artificial fibers for fabrics, the development of food supplies and a completer knowledge of the chemical control of the body.

---

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Jl 14 '29 170w

"This latest little volume in the series makes a serious, straightforward study of its theme. It indulges neither in that 'spoofing' which has entertained both the authors and the readers of some of the previous issues nor in that fantastic prophecy of future developments in which other authors have taken it for granted that their own imaginings will come true. . . The reader gets from this volume dependable information of the present status of chemical knowledge."

+ N Y Times p2 Je 23 '29 380w

Springf'd Republican p12 O 10 '29 650w

JORDAN, DAVID STARR. Trend of the American university. ltd ed 126p $7.50 Stanford univ. press

378.73 Colleges and universities—United States 29-12159

"Consists of three addresses by the well known scientist and educator. They furnish an excellent panoramic view of our higher educational development during the last half-century."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Reviewed by J. E. Kirkpatrick
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 25 '29 350w
N Y Times p14 Jl 14 '29 350w

JORDAN, ELIZABETH GARVER. Devil and the deep sea. 338p $2 Century

29-6348

Miss Chandler's will stipulates that her heirs shall live together for six months in her home where her influence may reach them. During this time individual and family problems are ironed out, and a hint of horrid mystery dispelled.

Bookm 69:xxvi My '29 70w

"Thoroughly wound up to start with by means of a trick will, the mechanism ticks off the moments as smoothly as you please. Ingenious without being wild." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 24 '29 130w
Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '29 200w

"One of the best mystery stories of the current year. A very unusual and entertaining situation gradually unravels itself, and the dénouement is both unexpected and satisfying."
+ Cath World 129:765 S '29 180w
N Y Times p22 Ap 21 '29 180w

"First of all, the book is well written as to style, which is a matter given little attention by the hack writers of such tales, and second, the book is without any one of the innumerable progeny of Sherlock Holmes. Miss Jordan leaves it to the people who are mixed up in the mystery to work out their own solution, and the results are satisfactory all around." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 227:adv Ap '29 130w

"A well written, detectiveless mystery." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:520 Mr 27 '29 80w

"Those who like to see the young people of today at play, and who delight in the flippant way in which they treat their elders, will find plenty to amuse them in the story, and the element of mystery is carefully preserved to the end."
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 430w
Times [London] Lit Sup p670 Ag 29 '29 260w

JORDAN, MRS HELEN ROSALINE (HELEN ASHTON, pseud.). Background for Caroline. 312p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Benn]

29-23244

Following a lonely and bookish childhood in Bloomsbury in the 'eighties, a painful schoolperiod because of her lack of social adjustment, and a few shy, inhibited contacts with young men, Caroline Field became, at twenty-eight, a quiet travelling companion to her father, an archaeological scholar. Ten years later, at the outbreak of the war, she was one of the many unmarried Englishwomen who gained a new outlook on life as trained workers and nurses. Meeting Anderson Cortland, an American soldier who wanted a good time, Caroline decided to have a last fling in the face of convention before it was too late. Following the war she lived for some years in an Italian pension. There she married Colonel Hepburn, a widower with one son, and they were very happy together up to his death some years later. The marriage of Caroline's step-son to a young nurse, and the birth of their child, concludes the novel.

"It is a story splendidly written, with a subtle grasp of human values. It is never commonplace, never obvious. It is free from the modern zeal for constant movement, obvious excitement, success, and accomplishment, setting in their stead delicately tinted human relationships."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 4 '30 230w

"The fortunes of a rather strange and unnatural character are delineated with insight and artistry."
+ Christian Century 46:1513 D 4 '29 100w

"It needs genius to make a Caroline interesting; Miss Ashton has only an infinite capacity for taking pains. If the author had Miss Austen's passionate interest in human beings she might have brought the book off. But she has fallen back on Still Life. All the clothes, all the furniture, in Caroline's life are described minutely. It is life-like, but dead. The book must have taken the patience of Griselda to write, and it takes the patience of Job to read. Yet Miss Ashton is unusually gifted. The point is that she does not seem to be a novelist." Raymond Mortimer
— + Nation and Ath 45:340 Je 8 '29 450w

"This novel differs notably from others of its sort by a zest and accuracy of observation which saves it from what might otherwise have been the dullness of a minutely detailed narrative."
+ N Y Times p35 N 17 '29 700w

"Caroline is a well-drawn and sympathetic figure and reading about her one can enjoy vicariously the charms of self-sacrifice without having to endure its pains. But being what she is, receptive, resigned, unequal to life, she needs bolstering with a background, and that background Miss Ashton most copiously provides. Whether animate or inanimate, it is full, rich and detailed. Miss Ashton has a noticing eye and a retentive memory. Victorian London can have been rarely better described." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 147:870 Je 29 '29 700w

"Miss Ashton's sobriety of treatment and admirable honesty of insight achieve a quiet triumph with the timid, yet desirous, soul of Caroline, brought through many disillusionments to the odd comforts of age. . . The patient chronicle, with its well-maintained air of high veracity and slightly bitter distinction, is very satisfying in its own way." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 142:870 Je 1 '29 150w

"Miss Ashton is sincere and painstaking, although inclined to verbosity. She has mirrored reality so faithfully that the story may have been written about anyone's maiden aunt, and the narrative is just about as glamorous."
Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '29 320w

"Caroline is dull, but there is nothing dull about the way she is presented; indeed, it is impossible not to enjoy her, to feel sorry for her, to quiver when she suffers from social incapacity, to blush with her in her ridiculous, inefficient flirtations. Somehow Caroline is charming, inhibited, dowdy and ill-instructed though she is in all the particulars of life as it is now understood in all reasonable nurseries. . . Caroline points a moral and adorns a tale—a very good tale."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p400 My 16 '29 550w

JORDAN, RIVERDA HARDING. Extra-classroom activities in elementary and secondary schools. 302p $2.50 Crowell

371.8 Extra-curricular activities 28-21342

In this volume on extra-curricular activities in public schools the author, professor of education at Cornell University, places his emphasis on the essential unity of the entire movement from the elementary school thru the senior high period and on the necessity of planning a continuing program for the extra-classroom as well as for the regular curriculum.

"The volume presents a brief but judicious treatment of the major activities outside the classroom by a man who has had long and

JORDAN, R. H.—Continued
varied practical experience with them." Franklin Bobbitt
+ Am J Soc 35:158 Jl '29 30w

"Teachers and parents of children below college age will find this book very interesting and suggestive." F. B. Igler
+ Ann Am Acad 144:159 Jl '29 130w

Booklist 25:105 D '28

"The style of the book is simple and direct. The reader is not fatigued with burdensome tables while attempting to secure practical suggestions. As a source book in the field of extra-classroom activities, the book is limited. The distinctive feature of the book is the emphasis on a continuing program of extra-classroom activities for all the units of a public-school system. Busy superintendents will find the book helpful." W. W. Haggard
+ School R 37:149 F '29 350w

Wis Lib Bul 24:300 N '28

JØRGENSEN, JOHANNES. Autobiography; tr. from the Danish by Ingeborg Lund. v 2 407p $3.50 Longmans [10s 6d Sheed & W.]

B or 92 29-7430

The Danish poet-philosopher, continuing the story of his spiritual pilgrimage through life, begins his second volume with the year 1894 and ends with 1918.

Booklist 25:392 Jl '29

"The story of the life, and especially of the mental and spiritual experience of a Danish literateur who passed through the stages of intellectual awakening, sophistication, disillusion, and despair, to a haven in the Catholic church. Sincerely and at times poignantly written. But the critical reader may feel that he collapsed too easily and was too readily satisfied with a faith without adequate foundation. It is the story of a tired intellectual."
+ — Christian Century 46:920 Jl 17 '29 60w

"His pages reflect a sensitive, emotionally susceptible, and highly introspective nature. Catholic readers will doubtless regard his conversion as an authentic triumph of truth, while non-Catholics may feel that it represents, rather, a surrender. Happily, the book is not exclusively concerned with religious controversy. The writer travelled widely over the Continent during his search for salvation, and many of his scenes have objective interest or beauty."
+ Nation and Ath 45:404 Je 22 '29 150w

"The Autobiography is full of common scenes, described with reflective pleasure rather than emotion, which lead the author to meditation. . . This second volume is perhaps less interesting than the first. It is more personal and egotistic; almost everything takes place in the mind of the author. But it is rare to find a book written with such passionate integrity which is at the same time clear and vivid."
+ — New Statesman 33:312 Je 15 '29 780w

"Readers of M. Jörgensen's previous works do not need to be told that he has a genius for description, and a profound sympathy for the aesthetic and emotional side of Catholicism. We have to thank these characteristics for the vivid and beautiful passages which are scattered through this book. . . In spite of the author's sustained fervour and transparent honesty, which inevitably command respect, we cannot help feeling that there is something profoundly unsatisfactory in the conception of the spiritual life which this book puts before us." Evelyn Underhill
+ — Spec 143:23 Jl 6 '29 480w

"After more than seven hundred pages of Rousseau-like self-spilling (and we could have dispensed with half of them for any purpose), Mr. Jörgensen leaves us with only a very lucid idea of the strong objections he had to the whole Roman Catholic system. . . But he has not lost his gift by contact with what he calls the "unpoetic reality' of his Church. The lovely prose-poem on the Umbrian dust in his first volume proves that much, and many charming vignettes of Italian and Northern scenery give further testimony. He has been exceptionally fortunate in a translator with an admirable English style."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p568 Jl 18 '29 1400w

JOSEPH, BERNARD. Nationality; its nature and problems; with a foreword by G. P. Gooch. 380p $3 Yale univ. press [10s 6d Allen & U.]

323.1 Nationalism and nationality

After analyzing the principal elements that enter into the sentiment of nationality—race, language, religion, the homeland, tradition, literature and the will to live together, Dr Joseph studies the historical origins of nationality, its development among the peoples of the world, and, finally, its relation to the state, patriotism, internationalism and war.

Boston Transcript p2 S 25 '29 620w

"He tells very concisely, but with an excellent choice of material, the story of national development in Europe, in the East, in Palestine, and in India. His comments on Arab nationalism are particularly interesting, and in the light of present developments, open to some discussion. . . In the closing chapter, which will be to many the most interesting, Dr. Joseph defends nationalism as being today more than ever essential to the peace and welfare of the world. As a whole the book is scholarly and interesting. The only criticism, of the author's method at least, is that he relies too much on the interpretations and statements of other writers—Señor Madariaga, Mr. Zimmern, Carlton Hayes, and other historians—and too little on his own observations. Very few of his conclusions seem to come from independent thinking."
+ — Current Hist 31:229 N '29 350w
Nation and Ath 45:574 Jl 27 '29 80w

Reviewed by J: Carter
Outlook 154:72 Ja 8 '30 220w
St Louis 27:330 D '29

"Mr. Joseph's work was first compiled as a thesis for a London Institute and still bears the marks of its academic origin. It is comprehensive in its statement of facts, cautious in its assertions, and deferential in its quotations."
Times [London] Lit Sup p542 Jl 4 '29 130w

JOSEPH, DONALD. October's child. 344p $2.50 Stokes

29-18269

"October's child is full of woe." Young Lucius Deering's boyhood, adolescence, and early college experience are sympathetically chronicled in this novel. A sensitive, superstitious boy, sheltered by his home environment, his first contact with life is associated with a mother whom he adored and a young uncle whose dark misdeeds and tragic death, strangely fascinated him. At college his ideals conflict with reality as represented by his roomate, Julien, and Kay, a girl whom he meets. The death of his mother marks the boy's entrance into an adjusted maturity.

"Without a single reference to the cliches of psychoanalysis, Mr. Joseph shows us a mother-fixation in the process of formation and disintegration, while the subject remains completely unconscious of what is going on. It is good to come upon so fine an example of artistry making use of a scientific technique without allowing the laboratory methods to intrude."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 S 22 '29 300w

"Well written. Never for an instant do we lose our clear-cut picture of the people and the places discussed. It is the sort of book one finishes, despite a welter of life's affairs. But it is no use denying that it falls down upon us at the end."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 O 23 '29 400w

"Artistry has gone into 'October's Child' to make it so revealing a page of sensitive, imaginative, introspective youth, one that sets down the humor on the surface with understanding pity for the hurts beneath—a most creditable achievement."

+ N Y Times p7 O 13 '29 450w

JOSEPHY, HELEN, and MCBRIDE, MARY MARGARET. Paris is a woman's town. 299p il $3 Coward-McCann

914.436 Paris—Social life and customs 29-13415

A clever, informative, brightly written guide for the woman in Paris who is there to shop, or to study, to have a good time, or to stay indefinitely.

---

Booklist 26:65 N '29

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Jl 21 '29 100w

"Never once do the authors write of anything so uninteresting as historical memorials: but of dressmakers and gowns, of bargains and gifts for 'the folks at home,' and various other equally alluring subjects. And so fascinatingly that prospective readers, whether they go to Paris or not, will feel deliciously frivolous and sophisticated, for a little halcyon time."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 6 '29 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p151 D '29

"Vivacious and useful book."
+ N Y Times p20 Je 9 '29 400w

St Louis 27:289 O '29

JOUVENEL, MME GABRIELLE CLAUDINE (COLETTE) DE. See Colette, pseud.

JOUVENEL, HENRY DE. Stormy life of Mirabeau; tr. from the French. 309p il $3.50 Houghton

B or 92 Mirabeau, Honoré Gabriel Riquetti, comte de 29-15665

For the reader unfamiliar with the stormy life of Mirabeau and his no less stormy nature, the volume offers a colorful account of the events of the life, and, indirectly, an analysis of the character and an indication of the historical significance of Mirabeau.

---

"A rare story, put together with strength, sophistication, and charm." Stewart Mitchell
+ Bookm 69:666 Ag '29 250w

"There certainly was no crying need of an addition to the tidy library of books on Mirabeau. But we are nevertheless grateful to Henry de Jouvenel for retelling the story. In the first place, he has done it with great eloquence, charm and competence, and there is probably no other life of the Titan which reads so pleasantly, as there certainly are few others which put the facts so effectively." R. T. House
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Jl 21 '29 800w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '29 700w

"The most expert novelist could not invent incidents more romantic, pathetic, adventurous, ludicrous and macabre. Quite wisely M. de Jouvenel lets his story tell itself. . . Although Henry de Jouvenel is very modern in his methods, he does not succumb to the lure of the psychoanalyst. There is no oversimplification. He realizes that life has too much complexity to be dissolved into one or two complexes. . . This life of Mirabeau is a magnificent achievement." Joe Gould
+ N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 10 '29 780w

"It is a dramatic tale, brilliantly written and brilliantly sustained, a worthy addition to the legion of books about the 'Hercules of the French Revolution'. . . M. de Jouvenel's eloquent pages are marred, unfortunately, by a faulty translation into English." T. R. Ybarra
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 11 '29 1500w

'De Jouvenel's book is, to our way of thinking, a meretricious performance. The majority of American readers will have to go as we did to the encyclopedia before being able to follow the chronology of the story. And having read about Mirabeau there, they will wonder why de Jouvenel didn't write about the really interesting things he might have found." W: B.
— Outlook 152:467 Jl 17 '29 500w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:20 Ag '29 100w

St Louis 27:342 D '29

JUERGENS, SYLVESTER P. Newman on the psychology of faith in the individual. 288p $2.75 Macmillan

234.2 Faith. Religion—Psychology 28-21075

"Father Juergens indicates clearly the purpose of his book: to answer the question, 'What does Newman teach about the motives which induce an ordinary Christian to assent to Divine Revelation?' or how does Newman justify the faith of the multitudes?"—Cath World

---

Reviewed by W: L. Sullivan
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 D 23 '28 600w

"While the book does not profess to render the reading of Newman's works useless, it does serve to give those who have not the opportunity to conduct a personal search among his voluminous writings a fair understanding of his position. For this the work is extremely valuable, and every lover of Newman should accord it a genuine welcome." A. V.
+ Cath World 128:630 F '29 650w

Christian Century 46:1124 S 11 '29 40w

"The book serves many purposes for the discriminating reader. One, it introduces the student to a critical appreciation of the finest psychology of the church a century ago. Another, it helps to accentuate the significance of the new premises that provide the basis for contemporary psychology in religion." S. G. Cole
+ Crozer Q 6:381 Jl '29 480w

"Scholarly and highly illuminating study." Vergilius Ferm
+ Int J Ethics 39:362 Ap '29 800w

Reviewed by W. M. Horton
J Religion 9:482 Jl '29 750w

St Louis 27:7 Ja '29

JUNG, CARL GUSTAV. Contributions to analytical psychology; tr. by H. G. and Cary F. Baynes. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 410p $5.50 Harcourt [18s K. Paul]

131 Psychoanalysis 28-27971

These collected essays contain an exposition of the author's theories of analytical psychology applied to many aspects of human life and relationships.

---

Booklist 25:267 Ap '29

"The material herein presented is not a coherent presentation, but a series of essays which have from time to time appeared elsewhere, and now in their translated form are bound between the covers of a single volume. This necessarily means a certain amount of repetition and a certain lack of continuity. The repetition at least is by no means undesirable, because Jung is never easy reading, and it is helpful to have him make his points over and over again." W: A. White
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ja 13 '29 600w

Boston Transcript p3 D 29 '28 360w

"The volume is full of interest from cover to cover."
+ Nature 123:792 My 25 '29 140w

"In the 'Contributions' are collected essays on a wide variety of subjects, all illumined by a depth of insight and kindly wisdom drawn from an immense analytical experience." Eleanor Bertine
+ New Repub 57:329 F 6 '29 250w

"A book collected from diverse media does not make a very homogeneous whole; but each essay contains so much that is creatively new and valuable that one is glad the editors sacrificed homogeneity rather than curtail the subject matter."

JUNG, C. G.—Continued
+ N Y Times p23 My 12 '29 900w

"In these articles and addresses Dr. Jung breaks a good deal of new ground. 'Woman in Europe' is one of his latest monographs. Both that and 'The Love Problem of the Student' contain valuable and important material."
+ Spec 141:999 D 29 '28 60w

"I cannot regard it as a whole as a clear or strictly scientific contribution to its subject." K. Koffka
— Yale R n s 19:211 autumn '29 280w

JUNG, CARL GUSTAV. Two essays on analytical psychology; auth. tr. by H. G. and C. F. Baynes. 280p $4 Dodd [10s 6d Bailliere]
131 Psychoanalysis. Subconsciousness
28-31210

"The significance of this book is by no means indicated by its modest title and size. For it contains a brief account of the results which Dr. Jung has obtained from many years of research in the field of human psychology."—Nation

---

"These two essays in analytical psychology should be very welcome to those American readers who are interested in Dr. Jung's point of view, for they are really the first consecutive statement of that point of view to appear in English. . . These essays will be welcomed by Jung's admirers and followers in this country, but will serve only to confirm the suspicions of the more orthodox Freudians of his non-scientific and mystical tendencies." W: A. White
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 D 30 '28 700w
Boston Transcript p3 N 24 '28 350w

"The book is written with deep understanding of man's problems and struggles, and through it all the author's very human sympathy and kindliness shine out. The translation is an unusually good one, for the translators have been associated with Dr. Jung over a period of years and are thoroughly familiar with his work." M. E. Harding
+ Nation 127:664 D 12 '28 420w
Reviewed by Eleanor Bertine
New Repub 57:329 F 6 '29 480w

"The translation is one of unusual merit, and the book may be unhesitatingly recommended to all who would gain a deeper insight into the problems of human life." M. E. Harding
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 6 '29 1050w
St Louis 27:5 Ja '29

"As good a general introduction to the position of Dr. Jung as we could find."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p79 Ja 31 '29 880w

JUNGER, ERNEST. Storm of steel; from the diary of a German storm-troop officer on the western front; tr. by Basil Creighton; with an introd. by R. H. Mottram. 284p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Chatto & W.]
940.48 European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives
29-20897

The diary of a German officer who believes in war. He describes war manoeuvers, the horrors of war, etc. not as deplorable, but as a necessary means to an end—an impersonal objective. He writes: "War means the destruction of the enemy without scruple and by any means. War is the harshest of all trades, and the masters of it can only entertain humane feelings as long as they do no harm." The book concludes with the third year of the war and the statement: "Germany lives and Germany shall never go under!"

---

"In this fighter's book there is much excitement: the pageantry of troops massing, the drive of many charges, the encounters of foemen face to face and hand to hand, dodging in the dark and death in the open. It will pull readers as other war books have pulled them: in fact, it has more combat in it than any war book I know. It is interesting despite its psychological attitude, and even this attitude, reflecting a lack of sensitivity and vision, is not unworthy of study." Frank Hill
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 O 20 '29 720w
Boston Transcript p3 O 26 '29 210w

"For the whole affair of trench and shell-hole life, Lieutenant Jünger is a spokesman of the highest order, fresh and distinct in detail, balanced in judgment and reflection, eloquent and richly allusive." Edmund Blunden
+ Nation and Ath 45:369 Je 15 '29 250w

"Herr Jünger has a remarkable gift for describing certain emotions, complex and hard of analysis, which beset, and still have power to bewilder, the man of even average sensibility who was brought by war into abrupt contact with the most primitive of human experiences. The book in general is memorable for achieving such a high degree of vividness with so little high colouring in description or anecdote. And the translation is good."
+ New Statesman 33:584 Ag 17 '29 180w

"Though he writes eloquently, his statement remains exactly what it is—a juvenile justification of the glittering honors he received and of the reckless courage he frequently displayed while fighting, as he says in his first chapter, 'to carry forward the German ideals of 1870.' " T: Boyd
N Y Evening Post p7m S 28 '29 550w

" 'Storm of Steel' seems to us a book that pacifism should consider at length and thoroughly. It presents a view of battle not generally recognized, yet too logical to be overlooked." F: F. Van de Water
N Y Evening Post p7m S 28 '29 450w

"The combination of militarism, sentimentality, simplicity, and absolute devotion here exhibited is something quite amazing. The book is a revelation of the simplicity of the military mind. It is a really valuable record of the war as seen by a German officer."
+ Sat R 148:105 Jl 27 '29 300w
Reviewed by E. M. Benson
Sat R of Lit 6:556 D 14 '29 450w

"The stark and simple narrative of Lieutenant Jünger, who enjoyed killing men, and is not yet glutted with carnage, although he has been wounded fourteen times. . . Every pacifist, especially, should read this fine book. It is even better anti-war propaganda than All Quiet on the Western Front, for there is a certain horrible lure in the completeness of that work of genius, whereas this is a ragged, ghastly, gripping story whose truth and whose horror stand out all the plainer for the author's psychic blindness. After being hit by so much metal in so many places, one feels it would not be natural if he were quite sane."
+ Spec 142:974 Je 22 '29 630w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '29 1100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p485 Je 20 '29 230w

K

KAHLE, KATHARINE MORRISON. Outline of period furniture. 222p il $3.50 (15s) Putnam
749 Furniture
29-17769

Supplies in outline information on Egyptian, Greek, Roman, Gothic, Italian Renaissance, Spanish Renaissance, English and American furniture. There is a glossary and a bibliography. The author is university extension lecturer in interior decoration at the University of California.

---

"The best that can be said is that the book might inspire the curious to go farther and learn more."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 20 '29 100w

"As an introduction to the appreciation of period furniture this beautifully printed and illustrated book has unusual merit."
+ New Statesman 33:480 Jl 20 '29 150w

"It is practical and sensible, and generally accurate, though one incautious sentence suggests that Chippendale invented the claw and ball foot which, as the author herself states elsewhere, was common in the Queen Anne period."
+ — Spec 143:308 S 7 '29 220w

"The book only talks round the subject in the most general terms—for instance, the periods of Louis XVI. and Empire are rolled into one and dealt with in four pages of print, one half-tone plate so blurred that only the coarsest details are observable and another plate of puerile line drawings of details."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p577 Jl 18 '29 100w

KALLEN, HORACE MEYER. Frontiers of hope. 452p $3 Liveright

296 Jews—Restoration. Jews in Poland. Jews in Russia 29-10696

Mr Kallen travels thru Palestine, Poland and Russia studying the life and prospects of the Jews in these lands which important developments are making "frontiers of hope" for the Jewish people. In particular he commends the great achievement of the colonization work of the Americans in Russia.

---

Booklist 26:9 O '29

"This is not solely a sociological and economic treatise. It is a 'travel book' of special distinction, touched at moments with sarcasm and wit, at times with lyric beauty." Silas Bent
+ Bookm 69:556 Jl '29 530w

"When he is not a sesqui-pedalian philosopher, he writes a rich, warm-textured prose—vivid color pictures of Jewish settlements in the Arabian desert, of ragged, hungry, glorious-spirited Chalutzim spending their lives for a dream. . . I know no cooler, more detached picture of Jewry in East Europe and in Palestine than 'Frontiers of Hope'; though it tempts to argument and disagreement on every page. That is a great deal to say for a book." L: Gannett
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Je 2 '29 1000w

"There is a challenge in his pages to thinking people of all nations. There is an old problem set forth anew, but with a deep insight and incisiveness too often lacking in earlier discussions. The book should be very widely read by all kinds and classes of people." A. S. R.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 6 '29 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p121 S '29

Reviewed by J. T. Gerould
Current Hist 31:830 Ja '30 30w

"Throughout the book it is the significance of the things he sees that interests him rather than concrete facts and conditions. Being a philosopher and a psychologist, his thought quickly carries him back from superficial matters to the driving forces of mind and heart and soul of which they are the result."
+ N Y Times p15 Je 16 '29 480w

St Louis 27:280 O '29

"We get the full benefit of Dr. Kallen's gifts as historian, philosopher, psychologist, sociologist—not to mention travel guide. It is a tribute to his powers as a writer that we also get an integrated and not too erudite whole. We do suffer somewhat from his powers as a linguist, and wish that he or his publishers had supplied a glossary—and an index. But the whole is a fascinating, provocative bit of work that has the quality of an intricate Oriental embroidery, so intricate and closely woven that often it is hard to remember there is plain cloth underneath." Norah Meade
+ Sat R of Lit 6:35 Ag 10 '29 1100w

World Tomorrow 12:348 Ag '29 20w

KANDEL, ABEN. Black sun. 259p $2.50 Harper

29-17390

A story of love and disillusionment beginning in Greenwich Village and ending somewhere in Suburbia. Michael loved Louise casually, but Louise demanded marriage. Then there was a baby and Michael definitely gave up his dream of a newspaper job to take a place on a trade journal. The next step was the loss of that job with its consequent misery. He traveled thru all the phases of discouragement until we leave him finally turning back with relief to his home and Louise and the baby.

---

"Hard, shining clarity and strength are in this book."
+ Bookm 70:xxxii O '29 70w

" 'Black Sun' has the maturity which 'Vaudeville,' Mr. Kandel's first novel, lacked. In spite of annoying jerky sentences and a self-conscious striving after artificial effect, 'Black Sun' leaves one with a haunting sense of beauty—the beauty of a naked tree standing alone against a wintry sky."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 S 15 '29 400w

"We will admit at once a decided virile strength to this piece of writing, as well as a capable hand in dealing with the situation. Mr. Kandel's strong sympathy for Michael could not but transmit itself to the reader in spite of an inherent dislike for Michael's bitter attitude toward the trap life has set for him. The decided sex antagonism of the author is something of a handicap in writing of types." M. M.
— + Boston Transcript p2 S 18 '29 570w

"The story runs smoothly and is well written, yet 'Black Sun' is vaguely disappointing, perhaps because we can have little patience with a character so weak that his only virtue is a certain romantic goodness of heart. Mr. Kandel has obviously attempted to portray the universal, and yet he sketches for us a figure that we can only pity."
— + N Y Times p7 S 1 '29 320w

"Though marred by an occasional want of restraint, the book has flashes of beauty, a profound honesty and conviction not often to be met with in the minor novels of the day."
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:324 O 26 '29 240w

KARSNER, DAVID. Andrew Jackson, the gentle savage. 399p il $3.50 Brentano's

B or 92 Jackson, Andrew 29-2113

"To David Karsner, Andrew Jackson has always been a hero, and a hero he remains throughout this book, despite a frank retelling of most of the black episodes in his hero's career. Karsner's story is impressionistic; he makes no effort at discovery of new source material, or even at any strikingly new interpretation of 'Old Hickory.' His book follows much the same trail as Gerald Johnson's 'Andrew Jackson' of two years ago. Karsner, however, makes Jackson a little softer than some of the frontiersman's biographers."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Booklist 25:319 My '29

"Andrew Jackson never was 'soft,' and his figure does not lend itself to sentimentalizing. The effort to write always in the present and future tenses, too, results in a flatness out of keeping with Jackson's character." L: Gannett
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ja 20 '29 850w

"This biography is agreeably informative about an epoch of our history and about an epochal figure. An index would make the volume doubly valuable as an instructive commentary upon a picturesque era of our national growth." T. S. L.
+ — Boston Transcript p5 Mr 23 '29 680w

"The book is a complete, straightforward, captivating story of one of the world's most compelling personalities." C. M.
+ Cath World 130:245 N '29 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p93 Je '29

KARSNER, DAVID—Continued

"Mr. Karsner has caught the fascinating features of Jackson's unique character and painted a vivid and illuminating portrait. Unlike some of the interpreters among the intellectuals there is nothing patronizing in his treatment; no attempt to 'show Jackson up.' Here is an author in love with his subject. . . But the finest achievement of the book is the fact that the author, without sacrificing any of the appeal based on Jackson's fighting fury, has brought out the innate tenderness of the man, his personal cleanness, his instinctive honesty, his almost novel moral courage." C. G. Bowers

+ Nation 128:316 Mr 13 '29 580w

"Though one had never heard of Andrew Jackson, from this book one can get a complete, compact story of his deeds and a full understanding of the man. The volume is a live refutation of that school which insists that sentimentality and biography cannot be mixed with success." C. F. Thompson

+ N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 19 '29 530w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson

N Y Times p6 F 3 '29 660w

N Y World p10m Mr 17 '29 180w

"This is a spirited biography, well ordered and penetrating. It is unfortunately given a journalistic turn by the persistent use of the present tense."

+ — Outlook 151:231 F 6 '29 40w

KARSNER, DAVID. Sixteen authors to one; intimate sketches of leading American story tellers. 290p il $2.50 Copeland co., inc., 119 W. 57th st., N.Y.

928 Authors, American. American literature

28-29526

"In this series the writer gives sketches of present day American authors on their native heath. He ranges from Theodore Dreiser to James Branch Cabell, from Booth Tarkington to Sherwood Anderson and Will Rogers. After a brief outline of their lives, he turns to their motives for writing, their ideas on life and letters and discloses a number of 'literary secrets' with regard to their work and their manner of going about it. The book is the result of personal interviews and, in many cases, friendships of long standing with the writers in question."—Bookm

———

Bookm 69:xx Mr '29 80w

"In his studies of these writing men—some of which appeared originally in the New York Herald Tribune—the author has earnestly sought to mirror the salient characteristics of his subjects. The total effect is somewhat heterogeneous, but then—so are the subjects." Lisle Bell

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 F 17 '29 580w

Boston Transcript p3 D 5 '28 630w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:32 Mr '29 150w

KATAEV, VALENTIN PETROVICH. The embezzlers; tr. by L. Zarine; with an introd. by Stephen Graham. 300p $2.50 Dial press [7s 6d Benn]

29-21421

Within the sphere of this riotous comedy move two pathetic figures—an accountant who loves to seem important and a young cashier who is both shy and impotent. Both get drunk while carrying official money from the bank to the office. Isabella, a strong-willed street-woman, finds them in this drunken state and persuades them to follow her. They set off for Leningrad. There, thanks to Isabella and other swindlers, the embezzlers manage to spend most of the money. Meanwhile the Soviet law is after them. When they finally return to Moscow, they are sentenced to five years' imprisonment. "The Embezzlers" is one of the first comedies to come out of Soviet Russia since the Revolution.

———

"The Embezzlers is something of a pleasant shock. It is the first humorous novel to come out of Soviet Russia, the first real indication that Communists, who are otherwise quite worthy people, are able to laugh at themselves. And, by the same token, this satire, at once rueful and hilarious, on Communist Russia is the most effective piece of propaganda the Communists have yet devised. Any American who reads The Embezzlers is going to finish it with a fellow-feeling for the Russians; it will make him feel perfectly at home."

+ Bookm 70:311 N '29 850w

Reviewed by Dorothy Brewster

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 10 '29 900w

"Although it is uneven, and rendered more so by a mediocre translation, 'The Embezzlers' comes nearer to being literature, in so far as that may be defined as a rendering of life, than anything hitherto since the revolution." P. L.

+ — Boston Transcript p5 D 14 '29 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p157 D '29

"An amusing and unpretentious farce." Raymond Mortimer

Nation and Ath 45:340 Je 8 '29 160w

"It is, of course, a matter for self-congratulation to any author to have moved Mr. Stephen Graham to 'whole-hearted laughter.' I do not know how many readers of The Embezzlers will share Mr. Graham's pleasurable emotions; I should have thought that all those who could ever laugh at the commonplaces of the Russian novel had done so already, and were unlikely to be stirred by a threadbare repetition of them. One point of interest the book undoubtedly possesses: it proves that more than a revolution will be needed to alter the Russian idea of a joke." E. S.

— New Statesman 33:243 Je 1 '29 330w

"This book has its shortcomings; the immoderate praise that has been showered on it by some of the European critics is exaggerated; but that it is an original and at times fascinating book there can be no doubt. In the dull and drab field of contemporary Soviet fiction, it stands out as a striking and happy exception." Alexander Nazaroff

+ — N Y Times p5 N 24 '29 700w

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith

N Y World p11m N 24 '29 310w

"Kataev writes forcefully, with sharp irony and an undercurrent of pity. And he puts some grand speeches into the mouths of his characters. The speech of the pseudo-Czar, in trouble about his beard, is a perfect summing-up of the Russian character." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 153:386 N 6 '29 350w

"The characters are drunk much of the time—perhaps that accounts for their good humour. Take alcohol away from the book, and little remains. The humour with which it abounds is of so primitive a kind as to be scarcely funny: it turns on the absurd misconceptions entertained by half-developed minds about the world they live in." L. P. Hartley

— Sat R 147:806 Je 15 '29 360w

"A delightfully amusing farce, which some have compared to Gogol's 'Dead Souls,' and which, for those unfamiliar with Gogol's classic, might almost as well be compared with some of the more riotous comedy of Dickens. In it, that is to say, we get away completely from life, not only as it 'is,' but as it may be 'interpreted' by the professing journalist or those journalists once-removed, who produce most of our successful fiction. A work of imagination, in short, or inspiration, if you prefer; of one of those winds which bloweth when it listeth, but everybody knows when it's there." Arthur Ruhl

+ Sat R of Lit 6:363 N 9 '29 1300w

"I cannot understand why The Embezzlers should invigorate anybody with wholehearted laughter. The book is clever, it is fantastic, and it shifts its scenes in the dream-like Russian way. . . One does not share the surprise expressed because the Soviet Government has not censored the book, for it hardly seems of sufficient importance for such attentions." R. A. Taylor

Spec 142:896 Je 1 '29 500w

"The story is undeniably amusing in parts, although a fair amount of the humour has been lost in translation. But the general facetiousness grows a little oppressive at times. This is not Gogol's world, but a pale replica of it."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p452 Je 6 '29 350w

KATIBAH, HABEEB IBRAHIM. Arabian romances and folk-tales. 262p il $2 (7s 6d) Scribner
398 Folklore—Arabia 29-25175

Twenty-one tales of Arabian nights' flavor, illustrated in color by W. M. Berger. They include legends, stories of adventure, fables, and fairy-tales. Among the stories are the tale of the Jinni of Yabrud, of little Jamilah who was stolen by the Bedwins, an Egyptian tale of the wiles of the women of Cairo, the tale of clever Hasan and the talking horse, and the fable of the lion and the bull.

"The young reader, specially the boy, who has passed through 'The Arabian Nights,' will find repeated delight in these tales of modern Oriental flavor, tales romantic, historical, legendary, with multi-colored backgrounds of the Syrian countryside, Egyptian cities, and the Arabian desert. They are distinctive and convincing, these stories, and evidently were not written for young people only." F. J. Olcott
+ Sat R of Lit 6:401 N 16 '29 200w

"Will please many readers of his previously published book, 'Other Arabian Nights' who may have wished for more of these delightful stories."
+ Springf'd Republican p6e D 15 '29 180w

"The Arabian stories are sometimes entertaining and sometimes too long-winded."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p967 N 21 '29 50w

KATIBAH, HABEEB IBRAHIM. Other Arabian nights. 266p il $2 (7s 6d) Scribner
398 Tales, Arabic. Folklore—Arabia 28-22607

From a variety of sources, written and oral, the author has chosen for retelling a group of stories which in color, setting and kind belong with the tales of the Arabian nights. These new tales are translated and adapted directly from the Arabic, the source being indicated in the table of contents. The collection is appropriately illustrated by W. M. Berger.

Booklist 25:250 Mr '29

"The folk lore of the east is interesting, ingenious and entertaining, but these tales hardly reach to the literary standard of the stories of the Thousand and One Nights."
Boston Transcript p7 S 15 '28 260w

Christian Century 45:1107 S 13 '28 40w

"The reader becomes absorbed in the stories and lives in them." M. G. Bonner
+ N Y Times p28 D 16 '28 130w

St Louis 27:139 Ap '29

"Contains many excellent, and hitherto untranslated, Chinese, Arabian and Syrian folk-tales. The format and illustrations of the book are not worthy of the text." B. E. Todd
+ — Spec 141:sup861 D 8 '28 30w

KATZIN, OLGA. Peeps at Parnassus. 163p il $2 Coward-McCann
821

In some three thousand lines of rhymed couplets, consisting of nineteen so-called "peeps" the author reviews and parodies English poetry from the days of the druids to the present.

"Miss Katzin is very clever, but very careless. And of all forms satire depends most upon extreme precision."
— + Bookm 69:xx Mr '29 60w

"Miss Katzin, who is an English actress, must be credited with technical dexterity in the witty manipulation of her couplets." C: Divine
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 17 '29 80w

"The Age Augustan, the Classicists, the Romanticists, the Victorians, the Edwardians, the Georgians, all are characterized some with wit and clever satire, some with forced caricatures. It is a clever work but cannot rank with Lowell, (either James Russell or Amy) for abiding merit."
+ — Boston Transcript p6 My 4 '29 200w

"Miss Katzin's book is really delightful, she has sharpened her barbs with great effect, and nearly all the figures of English literature, from Beowulf to the Sitwells, have been punctured by them." Theodore Spencer
+ New Repub 58:103 Mr 13 '29 380w

"A very readable, concise and clever outline of English poetry from Chaucer's time to our own in loose, satiric couplets. Miss Katzin is sometimes illuminating, usually malicious and always amusing." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 26 '29 280w

"It is a most irreverent pilgrimage that Miss Katzin has made, and on the whole a very pleasant one. She knows what she is talking about and at times she gets into her sing-song measure an uncanny resemblance to the styles of the writers she is mentioning. I should not go so far as to suggest that the book is uniformly witty, but there are many passages that rank with the best in this type of satire." Granville Hicks
+ N Y World p11m Mr 10 '29 280w

KAUFFMAN, REGINALD WRIGHT. Love de luxe. 310p $2 Macaulay
29-11644

"This is an amusing tale of adventure and romance aboard the Ile de France. In the momentous six days of passage the fates of three couples and a Basque castle are determined satisfactorily. There are plots and counterplots involving at least a score of persons. Card sharps and cinema persons, aviators, Spanish nobility, priests and best-seller writers, and a generous allotment of plain, honest and engaging Americans are frantically involved in bringing order out of chaos before the Statue of Liberty is sighted."—N Y Times

"With the best will in the world, you can't keep your attention fixed on the indolent routine of chat, shuffleboard and flirtation. Even a rough sea fails to quicken the pulse or to bring the narrative to life."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 4 '29 150w

"The tale is as exciting as it is diverting and the happy ending is perhaps the greatest surprise of all. In conclusion, it may be added that the book is so excellent an advertisement for the Ile-de-France that one might find it difficult to secure reservations thereon for some time to come."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 26 '29 350w

"That the book is lacking in plausibility, literary style or subtlety of characterization is only too obvious; but these faults are amply compensated for by a great deal of fast and carefully plotted action."
+ — N Y Times p12 Jl 14 '29 150w

KAUFMAN, NATHAN. Shakespeare; what he means to you. 139p il $2 Raymond bk. co., 20 Broad st., N.Y.
822.33 Shakespeare, William 28-17658

This appreciative little book on the personality and influence of Shakespeare is entirely free from academic discussion. It places its emphasis on Shakespeare's personal appeal and reminds the reader how the thought of Shakespeare permeates all literature. An interesting chapter on book titles from Shakespeare is included.

"Mr. Kaufman's little volume makes no pretense to be more than a business man's tribute to the ever-quickening quality of the supreme poet's mind to one whose occupations are otherwise removed from scholarship." H: J. Forman
N Y Times p7 Je 2 '29 40w

KAUFMAN, NATHAN—Continued

"To a Shakespearean already sealed of the tribe it is doubtful if Mr. Kaufman has much if anything of interest to say. His impressions are quite conventional, and his commentary neither critical nor penetrative."

— + Sat R of Lit 6:83 Ag 24 '29 270w

KAVANAGH-PRIEST, MRS ANNE. Memoirs of a Gothic American. 500p $2.50 Macmillan 29-12061

A spinster school-teacher, duenna in a fashionable boarding school for girls, records in this pseudo-autobiography her early life on a New Hampshire farm. She draws portraits of the members of the family, shows her own relation to each, and particularly the influences that shaped her precocious mental development.

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p36 Ap 14 '29 780w

"It is written as a novel. But they who want a mere novel may not read it. This is history, social and psychological, beautifully and engagingly told with sympathetic insight into the facts of human existence. It is a book to be read, not reviewed." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 6:367 Jl '29 500w

"One wonders that the publishers risked this book. It contains only a little less matter than a volume of the Congressional Record; its form is provisional as a creek's; and the phrasing is alternately sedentary and pedantic. But as pure reminiscence it has the feeling of a literal transcription. A personal emotion infuses certain scenes." Vincent McHugh

N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 20 '29 380w

"The picture of a vanished way of life and of a stock generally regarded as being on the decline is done carefully and with great sympathy. The author very much admires her New England, and admires, too, her high-strung, somewhat weepy but occasionally appealing heroine. . . It would have been better for a liberal blue-penciling. In the multiplicity of words the outlines become blurred, and even the most sympathetic are likely to find themselves yawning."

+ — N Y Times p19 Ap 7 '29 640w

"However excellent her characterizations, however strong and unaffected her descriptive passages, however well directed her emotion, still her book has not the narrative quality. It should be read in and at, not straight through like a novel. And it will be so read by the fortunate readers into whose hands it falls."

+ Outlook 151:547 Ap 3 '29 300w

Reviewed by F. L. Robbins

Outlook 153:669 D 25 '29 80w

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (MRS THEODORE PENROSE FRY). Three against the world. 273p $2.50 Dutton

A melodramatic story in which two brothers, Nigel and Len Furlonger, and their sister Janet, are the focus of the action. Nigel returns to the family farm from the disgrace of prison life; he hopes to find freedom at last, but his only happiness lies in playing dance tunes on his violin for neighborhood children. Janet and Quentin Lowe, a struggling writer, fall in love. He seduces her, rejects her thereafter as unworthy, and marries Tony Stife, an innocent young girl whom Nigel loves. Len, the elder brother, dies, and Janet and Nigel are left alone to solace each other in their loss.

"Shaky in characterization, outmoded in many of its situations and maudlin in mood, it is really only in the intimacy with 'bramble tree and briar thorn' and in the descriptions, both lush and delicate, that this book offers any hint of blood relationship to Miss Kaye-Smith's later work. And I doubt if these will be enough to recommend it to her many enthusiastic readers." M. C. Dawson

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 D 29 '29 800w

"It is a good example of the author's work, rich in emotion and poetic writing, humorless, melodramatic in plot. Less convincing in its surging emotion than some of her other novels, Three Against the World is readable for story and style, and delightful in its lovely pictures of fraternal tenderness, and of Sussex village and farmstead."

+ — Outlook 154:29 Ja 1 '30 420w

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (MRS THEODORE PENROSE FRY). Village doctor. 266p $2.50 Dutton 29-3965

More than fifty years ago when Sussex farmers brewed their ale at home and kept the hay-making and sheep-shearing as solemn feasts, a young London doctor left his work in a great hospital to take up his practice in the little farming village of Speldham. Induced by his loneliness Philip Green married a daughter of one of the more prosperous farmers, who, to satisfy her ambition, deserted her village sweetheart for Philip. Here in this quiet novel is told the story of this devoted doctor, whose simple goodness won the hearts of his patients and finally softened the hard heart of his wife.

Booklist 25:286 Ap '29

"Miss Sheila Kaye-Smith has gone to live in London. In The Village Doctor she looks at her old home, Sussex, through a city haze which has emasculated her people and made their country both blurred and unbeautiful. There are no memorable scenes or characters in this book." Norah Meade

— Bookm 69:94 Mr '29 350w

"From the 'modern' point of view Dr. Green is perhaps a suspiciously good young man, yet I imagine that most of us hope—and at the bottom of our hearts believe—that there are simple men as good as he is. This story of his conversion to Speldham and love is as unpretentious and substantial and spicily sweet as a good New England apple." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 F 3 '29 580w

"It has not the dramatic force of some of Miss Kaye-Smith's novels, but on the other hand it has a compact local significance that holds the reader in its grasp." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 23 '29 1450w

"A fine piece of craftsmanship, as always from this author. Not a forced note in the whole story. The dramatic quality is not injected into the scene, as the manner of some is, but discovered existing natively in it."

+ Christian Century 46:748 Je 5 '29 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p95 Je '29

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine

Nation and Ath 44:844 Mr 16 '29 140w

"Admirers of Sheila Kaye-Smith's polished prose will encounter the surprising inadequacy of character-drawing and moral incongruity of situation with much the same sensations as attend the discovery of half a worm after an eager bite into a handsome apple." D. B. W.

— + New Repub 58:105 Mr 13 '29 200w

"This languid and frigid novel is so bad that it demands careful scrutiny. Why was it written? Certainly not because the author was interested in its theme or characters. A weary intelligence, bent on self-imitation, leaves its mark on every page." H. C. Harwood

— New Statesman 32:supx Mr 16 '29 420w

"The novel is well written, of course, and many of its pictures of Sussex life are interesting, but it is markedly inferior to Miss Kaye-Smith's other books."

— + N Y Times p6 F 17 '29 680w

"The whole book seems a little worn and thin. But if Miss Kaye-Smith's hand seems to have slowed up somewhat, the style is still calm and idyllic and the characterization of the doctor stands out as a mellow bit of portraiture."

— + N Y World p5e F 24 '29 250w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv Ap '29 50w

"Sheila Kaye-Smith's feeling for the land, her literary charm, and her wide and ready sympathies are all that there is, in this novel, of the fine writer who created Joanna Godden. Strength, powerful characterization, dramatic intensity are lacking. Beauty of prose, poetic sensitivity, simplicity remain. . . 'The Village Doctor' fairly tastes and smells of the country."

+ — Outlook 151:229 F 6 '29 200w

Pratt p40 summer '29

" 'The Village Doctor' indeed, for all its competence and honesty and facility, seems slight in substance when compared with the author's best work. It lacks not only the ambitious design of 'Iron and Smoke' and the penetrating characterization of 'Joanna Godden,' but also the bigness of intention of their earlier predecessors. It remains a small thing, well done." Grace Frank

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:727 Mr 2 '29 480w

Reviewed by R. A. Taylor
Spec 142:345 Mr 2 '29 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 200w

"Miss Sheila Kaye-Smith has not given us of her best in The Village Doctor. The story itself is thin and not quite convincing; and, despite the fact that the whole action takes place in one of those small Sussex villages she knows well, she evinces none of her usual zest and absorption in the recital. The plot is of the simplest."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p160 F 28 '29 300w

Wis Lib Bul 25:160 My '29

KEABLE, ROBERT. Great Galilean. 212p $2.50 Little

232.9 Jesus Christ 29-3918

The author's aim is to distinguish between the historical Jesus and the Jesus of tradition. In the historical Jesus he finds the foundation of gospel religion, in the latter the inspiration of worship.

---

Booklist 25:267 Ap '29

Reviewed by S. L. Cook
Boston Transcript p4 F 23 '29 2000w

"The value of the book is rather in its passionate challenging of traditional views than in the cogency of its arguments for those which it advances."

Christian Century 46:811 Je 19 '29 50w

"It is after all almost pathetically amusing to see Mr. Keable so completely enmeshed—but without being aware of it—in the snare he would free others from. . . It may be said with confidence that few people will find it dry. It is decidedly worth the reading. And after finishing reading it you will find it intruding itself into your thoughts." M. S. Enslin

+ — Crozer Q 6:496 O '29 1100w

"There is much in the book that is dubious and a little that is fantastic, but there is also a great deal that is perfectly true. The part that is true is commonplace to New Testament scholars, but the facts are of the kind that scholars either discuss learnedly or pass over hurriedly. Mr. Keable has stated them flatly, even sensationally, and yet with considerable reverence and a disarming loftiness of purpose."

+ — Nation 128:678 Je 5 '29 200w

Reviewed by H. F. Ward
N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 23 '29 550w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p1 D 22 '29 630w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Mr '29 70w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:26 Mr '29 70w

"The book presents no narrative, but an interpretation of Christ, both as he was and in the light of tradition, and except for a few provocative assertions cannot be regarded as sensational. When the author, in his preface, tells us that 'hardly a line of it is new,' he says what is essentially true. Yet his emphasis is fresh and suggestive, and, along with some inconclusive writing, he supplies many passages marked by insight and eloquence."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 27 '29 760w

"Keable's style is pungent, his ideas unconventional, his sympathy and insight deep. . . This is a gripping book; easy reading, because so well written and so interesting, in spite of the depth of its thought and feeling." C: S. Brown

+ Survey 62:145 Ap 15 '29 130w

"Though the book is an extreme example of Romanticism of the bad sort applied to Christianity, it is not trivial. If we can forget the bad taste left in our mouths by the author's self-righteousness . . . it is an instructive book, as showing to what an extremity of self-sophistication a well-meaning man may come."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p170 Mr 7 '29 480w

KEATING, LAURENCE J. Great Mary Celeste hoax. 240p il $4 Houghton [10s 6d Heath Cranton]

"One December morning, some half century ago, the Nova Scotian barquentine, Dei Gratia, came into the harbor of Gibraltar bringing an American brig found derelict in open sea with all sails set, breakfast on the table, both boats in place, and not a living soul on board. Thus far the mystery has never been solved, although many solutions have been offered. What must have happened on board from the time the boat left port until the time it was picked up by the Dei Gratia makes a very engrossing story, at least the way Mr. Keating tells it."— N Y Evening Post

---

Reviewed by Walter Millis
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ag 11 '29 1300w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 31 '29 660w

"Apart from its fascination as a mystery story, the book is both interesting and valuable for its incidental sea-lore, and particularly for the intimate light which it throws upon maritime conditions, as affecting smaller trading vessels, half a century ago. Mr. Keating's style carries much wind, and his grammar is not watertight. But his store of nautical slang and his natural facetiousness have a charm well suited to his theme."

+ — Nation and Ath 45:282 My 25 '29 660w

Reviewed by Clennell Wilkinson
New Statesman 33:302 Je 15 '29 980w

N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 17 '29 220w

N Y Times p6 Ag 18 '29 1350w

St Louis 27:312 N '29

"He does not show the calm, judicial spirit in presentation and examination of his evidence that one would look for in a book of this kind. In the earlier pages of this book, Mr. Keating goes far out of his way to belittle the efforts of the Queen's Proctor in Admiralty at Gibraltar, Mr. Solly-Flood, to elucidate the mystery of the abandoned vessel. I admit the temptation to poke fun at such a Dickensian surname, but it seems strange to me that this author should appear—by the tone of his writing—to pour contempt upon the official's efforts, and then proceed—in one hundred and ninety-five printed pages—to prove that some such strange and violent drama as Mr. Solly-Flood surmised was what actually took place aboard the Mary Celeste." D: W. Bone

Sat R of Lit 6:151 S 21 '29 720w

"Mr. Keating has a very ingenious notion, and builds a complicated story with a mass of good detail. His realism is at times of a brutal kind. Occasional carelessness of language does not rob Mr. Keating of his title as an effective writer; he is the most vigorous writer who has handled this mystery."

Times [London] Lit Sup p393 My 16 '29 1050w

KECK, MAUD, and ORBISON, OLIVE (KECK ORBISON, pseud.). Key to the Casa. 300p $2 Washburn

29-9098

"Ten Yen of Tung-scha, a Mandarin of the Coral Button, is just about the murthering old

KECK, M., and ORBISON, O.—Continued
devil he sounds like. He's after the golden key in the possession of Neil Winton, a Californian, whom he chases through China and the Philippines with a fascinating variety of weapons and Chinese curses. Enter the lovely Elena Delgarda, of Manila, with a secret in her family, and Mr. Orbison's story is all set for a thrilling finish in a typhoon."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Working his theme up to an intense climax, the author has succeeded in achieving a drama of human forces."
+ Bookm 69:xxiv Je '29 40w

"Atmospheric and eventful." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 21 '29 90w

"The breathless way in which the story is told, the clever drawing of the characters, English and American, Spanish, Filipino and Chinese, the quick marching tempo, all combine to make an exciting story of old Manila." G. B.
+ Boston Transcript p7 My 8 '29 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p112 Jl '29

"Tropic nights and diabolical mysteries form an agreeable partnership—in a novel; and Keck Orbison has done nothing much beyond the usual in combining them in this tale of the old walled city of Manila."
+ N Y Times p18 Jl 21 '29 120w

"This author seems to have the right formula for adventure stories." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 152:120 My 15 '29 120w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. Spectacles of Mr Cagliostro. 384p $2 Dutton
29-1190

A plot of diabolical cunning lands Jerry Middleton in an insane asylum within a few weeks of his arrival in America to claim his father's fortune. A pair of blue spectacles are his chief legacy. Yet after his escape from the asylum is accomplished by a friendly girl, the despised blue spectacles lead to the discovery of a later will, and the complete overthrow of Jerry's enemies.

"An improbable, but a corking good story."
+ Bookm 69:xxx Ap '29 50w

"As part of a crusade against the methods employed in the treatment of the insane in the Middle West, the story is certainly worthy of praise and should help to bring about an amelioration of such conditions, but it falls short of being a thrilling novel with a baffling mystery, holding one's attention breathlessly till the outcome is disclosed."
+ — Boston Transcript p6 Mr 23 '29 200w

"Jerry's experiences in an insane asylum, as records of a clinic, might be interesting to alienists, but do not make for entertainment." C. P. S.
— N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 12 '29 150w

"His pictures of the daily routine of the insane asylum, while entertaining enough in themselves, hold up the action of his story and make the book much longer than it need have been."
N Y Times p25 Ja 13 '29 250w

"The book seems to us a likely contender for mystery-novel-of-the-month honors."
+ N Y World p11m F 3 '29 130w
Sat R of Lit 5:759 Mr 9 '29 250w

"Something more than the routine mystery story. . . The author keeps the reader puzzled, entertained and interested until everything is made clear."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 10 '29 170w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. Thieves' nights; the chronicles of DeLancey, king of thieves. 331p $2 Dutton
29-22146

In a peculiarly involved plot concerning the fortunes of three brothers who are monozygotic triplets, and therefore exactly identical in appearance, the amazing adventures of Bayard DeLancey, gentleman thief, are given an unusual setting. The various episodes of DeLancey's escapades: that of the Castor and Pollux diamonds, the Cordova necklace, and After San Quentin, represent complete stories within the main story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 S 15 '29 150w
Boston Transcript p6 N 16 '29 300w

"Mr. Keeler is remarkably inventive, and he has a sense of literary effectiveness that enables him to tie us completely in the desired knots as we read. . . The novel ends less excellently than it begins, becoming slightly bogged in an overcomplicated game of 'Who is it?' Nevertheless, 'Thieves' Nights' is notably entertaining and out of the ordinary."
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:258 O 12 '29 250w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '29 80w

KEENE, CHARLES HERBERT. Physical welfare of the school child; a textbook in school hygiene and health work in the schools for normal schools and colleges. (Riverside textbooks in educ.) 505p $2.40 Houghton

371.7 School hygiene. Physical education and training. Schools—Medical inspection. Hygiene—Study and teaching 29-8620

The author, who has had a wide experience in the field of hygiene and physical education, outlines in this textbook for normal schools and colleges a complete health and physical development program including sanitation of the school plant, physical education, health supervision, hygienic arrangement of the school program, health of teachers, training of teachers, health training and instruction.

"What has been said above concerning certain controversial aspects of the book merely indicates that it is stimulating, and heaven is always to be praised for a stimulating book. The reviewer heartily recommends it to school physicians, nurses, public health workers in general, as well as to discriminating students in college or normal school." M. E. Champion
+ — Am J Pub Health 19:1067 S '29 400w
Booklist 26:12 O '29

"While the book is especially designed as a textbook for normal schools and colleges, it will appeal to a far wider field than that. It is a textbook, concise, direct, submitting proofs for its statements, arranged topically, with problems and selected bibliography at the end of each chapter." R. R. M.
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 25 '29 440w

"The book is well arranged for use as a textbook in teacher-training institutions and is a valuable reference book for school administrators." M. E. Stone
+ El School J 30:153 O '29 480w

KEENE, FARADAY. Peccadilloes. 233p $2 Day

Nineteen short stories with sophisticated themes and modern subject-matter, dramas with a love interest involving the usual triangle plot, and tales which derive distinction by reason of a definitely ironic twist.

"These stories are all short and vivid, with a surprising twist in the last line. But though they seem to derive from an old source, they are the dernier cri in sophistication. At times the situation is actual; at others it is mental; but always it is brilliant and convincing."
+ Bookm 70:xxvi D '29 110w

"Mr. Keene's very brief tales are among the suavest, cleverest and most palatable that have been collected in some moons."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 O 27 '29 200w

"Dramatic, piquant, vibrant with a certain sophisticated sense for color and imagery, the stories nevertheless give the impression that their author is overreaching himself. Mr. Keene wriggles along on the minimum amount of characterization; nearly all his characters are broadly etched types. Moreover, more than once the reader finds Mr. Keene's heavily ornamented style confusing."

— Boston Transcript p2 S 25 '29 200w

"Commanding a deftly suave style, he probes into a series of tangled human relations and frames them in plot patterns by a variety of melodramatic devices, ranging from deeds of violence to mere gestures. Viewed as a whole these stories by an author known only recently in periodicals, evidence a marked lack of versatility. It is as though Mr. Keene were interested in exhausting the possibilities of a situation and a manner."
+ — N Y Times p7 S 22 '29 430w

"The stories are gay, witty, penetrating, and reveal an amazing knack of intimacy in their ability to convey character and situation. . . Mr. Keene can write much better than he allows himself to do for his market. He has a real insight into character, a fine sense of situation, an underlying philosophy."
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:192 S 28 '29 300w

KEENLEYSIDE, HUGH LL. Canada and the United States; some aspects of the history of the republic and the dominion; with an introd. by W. P. M. Kennedy. 393p $3.25 (18s) Knopf

327.71 Canada—Foreign relations—United States. United States—Foreign relations—Canada 29-11467

"Works dealing with some phase or other of the relations between Canada and the United States are fairly numerous, but none of them resembles this one. It covers all the relationships that have governed policy and development in both countries and the antecedent forces as well. Consequently we have gathered together, in this form for the first time, the history,—political, military, commercial, and social,—of the republic and the British provinces down to 1929."—Canadian Hist R

---

"Dr. Keenleyside's methods of original research are scholarly. In his task he has faced difficulties of selection and elimination resulting from a plenitude of materials. In weighing materials relating to incidents which have been subjects of debate or controversy he has shown a spirit of well balanced fairness. . . The book should promote an intelligent comprehension of the problems which have resulted from growth and westward expansion of the two nations with the longest commercial boundary line in the world and will doubtless perform an international service of much importance by contributing to the future of mutual understanding and peaceful self-respect." J. M. Callahan
+ Am Hist R 35:186 O '29 680w

"Mr. Keenleyside's book is impartial, the style is good, and the research so thorough that his notes form an adequate list of authorities." G: M. Wrong
+ Am Pol Sci R 23:751 Ag '29 560w
Booklist 26:55 N '29
Boston Transcript p3 Ag 3 '29 1000w

"The general characterization of Mr. Keenleyside's labours in Professor Kennedy's brief and thoughtful introduction, few will challenge. It is impartial, but fearless, and if, as Professor Kennedy hints, all readers may not agree with the author in detail, there is evidence throughout of exhaustive research and a strong desire to be fair." A. H. U. Colquhoun
+ Canadian Hist R 10:158 Je '29 450w

"Dr. Keenleyside's timely work discloses the author as a historian with a fine perspective of political values. His analysis of past divergences of Canadian-American statesmanship, revealing the fragile basis on which the affairs of the two countries have at times rested and showing how diverse have been the national viewpoints in various crises, is both candid and clarifying."
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 9 '29 280w

"This book is a competent piece of work." G: M. Wrong
+ Nation 129:779 D 25 '29 750w

"Underneath the author's easy-running style, and interesting, unpretentious statement of both sides of the question, there is much sound scholarship. Many spicy quotations from the Canadian and American press add vividness to his explanation of the various issues." B. L. Pitney
+ New Repub 60:304 O 30 '29 750w

"His book is a very complete summary of our relations with our northern neighbor, although it does not touch upon the burning question of prohibition." Joe Gould
+ N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 17 '29 750w

Reviewed by A. S. Will
N Y Times p1 Jl 21 '29 1200w
St Louis 27:330 D '29

"Mr. Keenleyside has done his work well, and if some of his views are controversial—to put it mildly—they will at any rate stimulate the reader's interest in the problems he raises, and that in itself justifies the writing of the book. The author's scholarship, too, is sound, and the section devoted to the past history of the two countries is by no means the least interesting or important."
+ Sat R 148:21 Jl 6 '28 720w

"This volume is exceedingly well arranged, excellently written, meticulously documented, and beautifully printed. It inspires respect. But it is not exciting." H: K. Norton
+ Sat R of Lit 6:516 D 7 '29 630w

KEEZER, DEXTER MERRIAM; CUTLER, ADDISON THAYER; and GARFIELD, FRANK RICHARDSON. Problem economics. 719p $4 Harper

330 Economics. United States—Economic conditions 28-22673

"The book is divided into the following four parts: (A) The Setting of Economic Problems in the United States, (B) The Price System, (C) Division of Income and Group Efforts to Obtain Larger Shares, and (D) Comprehensive Schemes for Easing the Income Struggle. Each chapter consists of several selected readings, bound together by an outline and an introductory paragraph."—Ann Am Acad

---

"The readings are of unusual interest, and should prove valuable in courses in elements of economics. There is a stimulating list of questions at the end of each chapter, and a fair bibliography."
+ Am Econ R 19:96 Mr '29 60w

"This material is always interesting and sometimes instructive. The book represents an attempt to popularize economics for beginners, rather than to teach economic theory or economic development in an orthodox and systematic fashion." S. H. Patterson
+ Ann Am Acad 142:456 Mr '29 130w

"The volume is largely composed of reprints, both argumentative and factual; but unlike most books of 'readings,' it can be read. The selection is extremely clever and enterprising, and the original material is much more than a mere linkage of the extracts: it brings out their significance and place in the scheme very clearly. A good many of the contributions are from unpublished material, and some of them (e.g. Mr. Woolsey's article on the national banking system and Mr. Friday's analysis of profits) have high value in themselves." W: Orton
+ Survey 62:535 Ag 15 '29 660w

KEIR, ROBERT MALCOLM. Manufacturing. (Industries of America ser.) 611p il $5 Ronald

670 United States—Manufactures. United States—Industries 28-22931

"Those who know Professor Keir's Manufacturing Industries of America published in 1920 will recognize in this volume the same material revised in detail and enlarged to approximately double its former size. The revision is the first volume of a series to be known as Industries of America and to include volumes by various authors on agriculture, lumber, mining, finance,

KEIR, R. M.—Continued
transportation, communication, geography, and economics."—Am Econ R

Reviewed by C. D. Edwards
Am Econ R 19:449 S '29 1150w
Booklist 26:16 O '29
Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 18 '29 630w

KEITH, ELIZABETH. Eastern windows; an artist's notes of travel in Japan, Hokkaido, Korea, China and the Philippines. 125p il $7.50 Macmillan [21s Hutchinson]

915 East (Far East)—Description and travel
[29-10470]

"Miss Keith warns us that she is not a writer, but she claims 'I also have had my share of traveller's joy.' And the genuineness of her traveller's joy amply makes up for what is, after all, a refreshing lack of professional authorship in these notes of her journeying in Korea, China, Japan and the Philippines."—New Statesman

"Altogether a glowing book, rich in color."
+ Bookm 69:xv Ag '29 80w

"The life and color and movement of the Orient have been eloquently caught by the brush of this artist. The dozen reproductions which illustrate this beautiful volume seem to reflect the very essence of their subjects and the informal travel notes which accompany them have the freshness of letters from a friend."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 3 '29 120w
Boston Transcript p6 D 20 '28 450w

"Her paintings are often very charming, influenced as they are by native models, and her desultory notes reveal many interesting experiences. This is an attractive volume." J. B. S. B.
+ Nation and Ath 44:sup384 D 8 '28 80w

"On the well-trodden tourist routes of China and Japan she always manages to catch the incident which we feel at once to be characteristic, yet which the myriad narratives of travel in the same regions have somehow missed. And in Korea and the Philippines she has broken ground which will be new to a large number of English readers. An unaffected directness is the keynote of the book, and the writing is more than a frame to the pictures."
+ New Statesman 32:98 O 27 '28 180w

"The trained artist's eye of the writer is evident whether it is turned on the gentle coolie, or on the mountain summits: and for those who wish illuminating description we suggest Miss Keith's unusual volume of notes."
+ N Y Times p6 F 3 '29 300w

" 'Eastern Windows' is unique in giving the reader examples of the work of a distinguished artist who is at the same time a trained observer of human nature and who is able to present her experiences in clear and delightful style. The purity of line and the blending of deep and original color make the prints remarkable."
+ Springf'd Republican p6e D 16 '28 500w

"Although Miss Elizabeth Keith, as she herself insists, is an artist and not a professional writer, this does not mean that these notes on her experiences while painting in the Far East lack literary grace; they are the work of a shrewd observer and reveal the artist's instinct for presenting the significant."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p764 O 18 '28 180w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Dynasty. 341p $2 Harper
29-5957

Amassa Worthington had built up a respectable business. In a day of trouble with the workmen Hyram Bond wards off a strike, and from that time on becomes more and more of a power in the business and in the town, tho never usurping the place of Amassa whom he really loves. The story follows the rise of Hyram and the growth of the manufacturing plant thru three generations of the Worthington dynasty.

Booklist 25:360 Je '29

"At times the book reads much like a tract on economics, but the emergence of Bond from retirement at an old age to save from ruin the concern whose prime force he has been during three generations, is almost thrilling."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p34 Ap 14 '29 200w

"As always, Mr. Kelland tells an entertaining and absorbing story, which is likewise illuminating as a chronology of American industrial development during the last fifty years." C. B. V.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '29 350w

"A well conceived and well written novel of an American business man."
+ Christian Century 46:839 Je 26 '29 40w

Reviewed by G. T. Hellman
New Repub 58:288 Ap 24 '29 300w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 30 '29 650w

"The book is interesting, both because of its principal character and because of the sketch it gives of the changes and developments in the business world during the past half century. 'Dynasty' is a good novel of its kind."
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 17 '29 570w

"The story is strong in dramatic incident, and though Hyram leans sometimes toward the incredible, for the most part he rings true. The author has unexpectedly and agreeably surprised us."
+ N Y World p10m Mr 31 '29 140w

" 'Dynasty' has scope, vigor, directness. It is impressive as a chronicle of commerce come of age."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:936 Ap 20 '29 350w
Springf'd Republican p5e Je 2 '29 120w
Wis Lib Bul 25:161 My '29

KELLER, GOTTFRIED. People of Seldwyla and Seven legends; tr. by M. D. Hottinger. 300p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

A collection of short stories, composed of imaginative tales and legends, by Switzerland's foremost storyteller. The first of these stories, here called Spiegel, appeared as the title story in The Fat of the Cat, a selection from Keller's short stories adapted by Louis Untermeyer. Contents: The people of Seldwyla; Spiegel the Cat; A village Romeo and Juliet; The three righteous combmakers; Clothes make the man; Seven legends; Eugenia; The virgin and the devil; The virgin as knight; The virgin as nun; Vitalis, the holy rogue; Dorothea's rose-basket; A little legend of the dance.

"It is difficult to judge a foreign author in a translation, but there is no doubt that Keller is a writer of genius. These stories must be rather fine in the original, for even in the translation, which is remarkably good, the prose is easy and flowing."
+ Nation and Ath 45:284 My 25 '29 200w

"Picturesque folk-stories, with leisurely ways and real charm of narrative. The 'Seven Legends' are attractive contes; their subject-matter can hardly be spoiled." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 142:834 My 25 '29 90w

"The Seldwyla stories are his best, and have lost none of their interest for a second reading. There is a vein of humor in these pages, and a human quality that transcends their local habitat and appeals to a cosmopolitan constituency."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '29 130w

"The lovely tragedy of 'A village Romeo and Juliet'—on which Delius based his opera—which is altogether less fantastic than the other three tales, is perhaps the most beautiful. In 'Spiegel the Cat,' as in the others, there is richness and fertility of imagination and plenty of fun. The 'Legends' exhibit his literary and humane qualities modulated to a greater delicacy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p357 My 2 '29 880w

KELLER, HELEN ADAMS. Midstream; my [2] later life. 362p il $3 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 29-23705

Taking up her autobiography at the point where she left it in "The story of my life," her sophomore year at Radcliffe, Helen Keller tells of a full twenty-five years of work and friendships. She describes her experiences in working for the blind, in writing and lecturing, and at Hollywood, her friendships with Mark Twain, Alexander Graham Bell and the Carnegies, and closes with a tribute to her devoted teacher, Anne Sullivan Macy.

---

Booklist 26:116 D '29

"When the score or so great achieving personalities of our century are weeded out of the too garrulous pages of a hundred annual Who's Whos I suspect that Helen Keller will be among them. Under that name one includes both the woman who bears the name and Anne Sullivan Macy, who helped her grow from an imprisoned dumb being into a woman." A. B. Parsons

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 D 15 '29 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p147 D '29

"The account has something less of the emotional appeal and the psychologic interest and value inherent in her first book, which told the story of her early struggles to get into communication with the world of knowledge and of her development therein. But there is compensation for this in the portrayal of her reactions to and activities in the busy world of men and women and of her contacts with famous people."

+ N Y Times p9 O 27 '29 950w

KELLETT, ERNEST EDWARD. Short history of the Jews. 280p $3.50 Dial press [7s 6d Routledge]

296 Jews—History 29-19631

This history of the Jews from the earliest times to the Roman period accepts the chief results of modern Old Testament criticism on the basis of recent archeological, anthropological and textual research. The Introduction deals briefly with the origin and nature of the sources from which the narrative is drawn.

---

"There has long been need of a good, modern history of the Hebrew people; hence one approaches the present volume with high expectation. The Introduction and Conclusion are excellent, as are the several maps; none better could be asked for. Together they constitute a third of the whole work and are worthy of a better volume. The history itself is a disappointment. For one thing, it begins with Moses and leaves out of account the hundreds of years preceding Moses, concerning which we now have a good deal of accurate information. More serious still is the fact that the history after Moses is treated in much too sketchy a fashion to be of real interest to any but the ordinary reader, and to him much of it will be unintelligible." T. J. Meek

— + Am Hist R 35:387 Ja '30 350w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 5 '30 170w

"Mr. Kellett has, in effect, boiled down the results of all the long labour and scholarship which have been devoted to this subject during the past two or three generations, and presents them to us here in a form which is at once brief, concise, and eminently readable. . . It is a small volume and on the face of it not a very ambitious one, but it is in all respects scholarly, and admirably designed to satisfy the needs of those who wish to know what bearing modern historical research has upon a book which to so many millions of people still remains the greatest book in the world."

+ New Statesman 32:328 D 15 '28 750w

Pratt p10 summer '29

"He manages to give us a consecutive and dramatic story, and to throw into bold relief those facts which are beyond dispute. And he does it in remarkably small space. His book will probably be read with avidity by many whose sense of justice and desire for the truth has been outraged by the loose chronology and purely theological standpoint of the Biblical authors."

Sat R 146:737 D 1 '28 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '29 50w

"Apart from the use of a few technical terms not always adequately explained, the book is easy to read and likely to send readers back to the Old Testament to study for themselves. The style is sometimes rather below the dignity of the subject, and the modern illustrations, though usually interesting, are not always appropriate."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p809 N 1 '28 120w

KELLETT, ERNEST EDWARD. Whirligig of taste. (Hogarth lectures on literature ser.) 160p $1.25 Harcourt

801 Literature—History and criticism. Literary criticism 29-4201

Mr Kellett studies the variations in taste in different periods of the history of letters and comes to the conclusion that there is no permanent rule or standard by which literature may be judged, and that on the contrary, taste is the product of the age, "circumscribed by its limitations, stirred by its passions, warped by its defects."

---

Booklist 25:314 My '29

"With disarming simplicity, many apt examples by the way, and a very insinuating kind of sweet reasonableness, Mr. Kellett proceeds to trot us through the history of literary taste, from prehistoric times to the end of the Nineteenth Century. And his conclusion, his 'solid foundation amid the shifting sands of criticism', is enough to strike dismay into the hearts of critics." T. S. Matthews

+ Bookm 70:106 S '29 450w

"Mr. Kellett illustrates his generalizations with urbanity and the wit that is born of great good sense. His bird's-eye panorama of the outstanding bickerings and heavy absolutes of the past are varied and amusing, sketched in with a light and untechnical hand and presented with a not unhumorous modesty." Edgar Johnson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 19 '29 500w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 6 '29 980w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks

Nation 128:376 Mr 27 '29 620w

"Clore-packed, pithy, allusive, it is not the least of the merits of this book that it makes the reader long from time to time to buttonhole the writer with a challenging, 'Look here!' or a half-diffident, 'But don't you think . . . ?'" D. M. Stuart

+ Nation and Ath 45:120 Ap 27 '29 500w

"A series of short, but tightly packed, essays. Written with a surprising, even fascinating, wealth of literary allusion, and it is only perhaps their compression or abbreviation that prevents them from being quite on the same high level as their author's longer studies."

+ — New Statesman 33:188 My 18 '29 850w

"With no great emphasis on the purely technical aspects of criticism, and with a humorous warning for us not to take his generalizations of past opinion too literally, Mr. Kellett conducts his bird's-eye view of literature through the ages with urbanity and wit." Edgar Johnson

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 23 '29 760w

Reviewed by J. Chamberlain

N Y Times p2 Jl 7 '29 880w

KELLETT, E. E:—Continued

"Mr. Kellett has a good subject, wide reading, ideas, lucidity: how is it that his book leaves us so dissatisfied? . . . Mr. Kellett's failure, surprising in a writer who brings imagination enough to bear on particular works of art, is in imaginative apprehension of the literary past as a whole."

— + Sat R 147:713 My 25 '29 780w

Reviewed by F. V. Morley

Sat R of Lit 5:826 Mr 30 '29 1000w

"Mr. Kellett is rapidly consolidating his reputation as one of the most scholarly and independent of literary critics. He brings to the study of literature a gift of penetrating insight, and a faculty for disentangling truth from a mass of plausible theory. He not only has wide knowledge and a retentive memory, but an eye that allows nothing to escape it." Gilbert Thomas

+ Spec 142:sup587 Ap 13 '29 720w

"It is a survey lightly but intelligently undertaken, and not offered as embodying an attempt at finality or exhaustiveness; the limitations of the work are quite apparent, but it is more pertinent to commend the superficial freshness and underlying sobriety which make it at once readable and informing. Some of the judgments and obiter dicta doubtless need revising, but this the author admits."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 9 '29 930w

Times [London] Lit Sup p332 Ap 25 '29 1800w

KELLOCK, HAROLD. Down in the grass. 247p il $2.50 Coward-McCann

29-8022

Bobbie ate a lady-finger and began to shrink, as Uncle John had said he would. He shrank so small that a beetle was the proper size for a playmate, and a beetle it was that took Bobbie by the hand and showed him all the marvels of the jolly insect life down in the grass.

---

"A charming fantasy in which children may learn a great deal about the little creatures they see and hear in the grass of a summer's day."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 25 '29 230w

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

N Y Times p5 Jl 28 '29 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Outlook 152:392 Jl 3 '29 20w

"A book which, though amusing and amazingly instructive, will never prove boring to his readers. The home life of the insect is much stranger than fiction, but Mr. Kellock treats it in a most matter-of-fact way in relating the adventures of Bobbie. The combination of scientific fact and humorous and exciting adventure is cleverly written in a conversational style." Anne Haight

+ Sat R of Lit 5:987 My 4 '29 350w

KELLOGG, WALTER GUEST. Parish's fancy. 293p $2.50 Day

29-8836

The beautiful Ameriga Vespucci, descendant of Amerigo, is the heroine of the book. When this lovely lady came to America she counted among her conquests "Prince John," the son of Martin Van Buren, and George Parish. For the latter Ameriga went into voluntary exile at Parish's mansion in Ogdensburg, dying heart-broken when her lover married a title.

---

"Characters that have become musty in old biographies and forgotten histories live through the skillful touch of one whose sympathy is proportionate with his art. It is a revelation to meet Daniel Webster, the Van Burens and a score of others on such informal ground."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 7 '29 300w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 1 '29 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p96 Je '29

"The book lacks the brilliancy of some novels of its kind, but it is interesting and worth while, though the picture it presents of life in the United States of those days is not of a kind to enhance one's admiration for the period."

+ — N Y Times p6 My 5 '29 500w

"Mr. Kellogg does not attempt too much; his book is but a graceful sketch. But he gives a neat, if fleeting and partial impression, of Washington in the thirties, upper New York when it was still half a frontier, Boston when the Prince de Joinville visited it, and various important personages of the time."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:41 Ag 10 '29 380w

KELLY, ELEANOR (MERCEIN) (MRS ROBERT MORROW KELLY, Jr.). Book of Bette; recording further experiences of the family Urruty among the Spains and elsewhere. 373p il $2.50 Harper

29-10300

Little Bette is to be married. That is to say she is first to be betrothed and in the modo correcto of the proud Basque family of the Urruty's to which she belongs. But it takes three false tries and a runaway gipsy betrothal before the proper husband is found for little Bette. As background to these adventures is the picturesque life and country of the Basques.

---

Booklist 25:395 Jl '29

"If one cares for a high degree of artistry—the deft creation of character against an authentic background—'The Book of Bette' deserves a plus mark."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ag 25 '29 120w

"Just as romantic as the earlier book, just as full of descriptions of Basque life, not quite woven into the fabric of the story, just as much the fiction of escape, this book makes ideal reading for uncritical moments." P. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '29 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p111 Jl '29

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p9m Je 1 '29 50w

"In these simple little adventures is a wealth of color and human feeling that make the book a thing of real beauty. The reader must go a long way before he will find stories to equal these charming bits of Basque life." Myra Waterman

+ N Y Times p9 My 12 '29 750w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 152:280 Je 12 '29 150w

"Mrs. Mercein-Kelly weaves her plot with sophistication, which implies, among other things, a dry humor. The action, invariably proceeding with hysteric tension, she uses economically to delineate the unique contours of her characters, Spanish grandee to Romany rye. Her style, although so deeply immersed in the patois of her scene as to require a glossary, captures, perhaps because of this, the sparkle and romance which result from the marriage of her saga to the folkways of the setting."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:95 Ag 31 '29 220w

Wis Lib Bul 25:196 Je '29

KELLY, ERIC P. Trumpeter of Krakow. 218p il $2.50 Macmillan

28-21739

A tale of fifteenth century Poland. For reasons unknown to young Joseph, enemies destroy his father's house in the Ukraine and drive the family from their home. Reaching the city of Krakow they are befriended by the good Jan Kanty to whom Joseph's father tells the secret of the great Tarnov crystal now in his possession. It falls out that Joseph, trumpeting from the church tower, saves the famous crystal from the Cossacks.

---

Booklist 25:128 D '28

"Visualizing in full detail the whole period he has so dramatized it as to make it live for the reader as an absorbing story in which all the elements of the city's life take on the richest local color." A. C. Moore

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 30 '28 700w

Reviewed by F. L. Robbins

Outlook 152:390 Jl 3 '29 110w

St Louis 27:102 Mr '29

"If the testimony may be accepted of one young lady of fourteen summers, who could not sleep until the book was finished, 'The Trumpeter of Krakow' will take its place among tales of permanent appeal.' Couched in a sober and informative style, which without elaboration presents the medieval background that every child loves, a story full of action centering around a magic crystal of Tarnov unrolls rapidly and without effort." H: N. MacCracken

+ Sat R of Lit 5:307 O 27 '28 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '29 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 160w

KELSO, ROBERT WILSON. Poverty. (Longmans' social science ser.) 374p $2 Longmans

339.1 Poverty. Social problems 29-10066

A research study of poverty. The book is divided into three sections: part one defines poverty and estimates its extent in modern society; part two attempts an analysis of the causes of poverty; and part three deals with the remedies which have been attempted.

"In spite of [some] shortcomings this is a useful book. It is simply and interestingly written. As far as it goes, its data are dependable and its reasoning sound. It is a good starting point for beginners in 'social economics,' and a wholesome antidote for excessive preoccupation with the psychiatric emphasis sometimes found among social workers." S. A. Queen

+ — Am J Soc 35:511 N '29 260w

Booklist 26:12 O '29

St Louis 27:193 Je '29

"A study of the extent and causes of poverty and the remedies therefor. Comprehensive, yet written in clear and simple style. Not a great book, but interesting, accurate and thought-provoking."

+ Wis Lib Bul 25:273 Jl '29

KENDALL, JAMES. At home among the atoms; a first volume of candid chemistry. 318p il $3 Century

540 Chemistry 29-4889

The author has a disarmingly informal approach to his subject. He manages this introduction to chemistry with a maximum of ease for the reader, striving to make him feel as much as possible at home among the atoms and the men who live with them. The book is good supplementary reading for high school and college courses in chemistry.

Booklist 25:348 Je '29

"Written in an easy, popular style, with amusing chapter headings, Professor Kendall's book seeks to entertain as well as to orient the reader in his colorful environment of everyday chemical phenomena."

+ Bookm 70:x S '29 170w

"It is not merely a book about chemistry in popular language; it is a serious test containing the important material of the first-year college course. It must be studied to justify its purchase. Yet it is easy to read in the sense that Mr. Ziegfeld's girls are easy to look at. Dr. Kendall has put some of his flashing personality, disguised in American slang, on every page." Gerald Wendt

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ag 18 '29 550w

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 23 '29 270w

Ind & Eng Chem 22:103 Ja '30 380w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:36 Jl '29

"Dr. Kendall is so thoroughly versed in his subject that he can write about it with ease and clarity and simplicity. In addition, he has a sense of humor that is forever popping out in unexpected places. His whimseys and fancies and analogies and drolleries not only help greatly in making the subject understandable, but they keep the reader entertained and in happy humor."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '29 420w

"A readable popular exposition. . . If you read this book you'll have a fairly clear idea of what modern chemistry is trying to do." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 151:351 F 27 '29 120w

"The reviewer feels that Dr. Kendall has done excellent work on a very difficult subject. The analogy between chemical activity and 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes' is a good one. That between the Mendeleef periodic classification and the modern apartment house, with an effort to meet better housing needs by a move to 'Bohrville', has a truly popular appeal." C: A. Brautlecht

+ Portland Evening News p5 Jl 9 '29 530w

St Louis 27:196 Je '29

"His book is written with the light-hearted zeal of those who are 'at ease in Zion,' and the author's very colloquial style and humorous gift of analogy will carry the layman easily on from the inspired guesses of Proust and Dalton to the latest hypotheses of Bohr and Schrödinger."

+ Spec 143:sup545 O 19 '29 730w

"This is one of the most successful examples we have yet seen of the popular exposition of the results of modern scientific research. The author adds to his expert scientific knowledge the gifts of a lively imagination and high spirits —a combination which has resulted in a book at once authoritative, witty and amusing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p879 O 31 '29 280w

Wis Lib Bul 25:274 Jl '29

KENLY, JULIE CLOSSON (MRS WILLIAM L. KENLY). Strictly personal. 301p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

29-14912

The story is told in the form of a diary kept by the heroine, who becomes the young wife of a wealthy lawyer twice her age—a man who, many years before, had loved her actress mother. Most of the humor of the book derives from the fact that the girl is beautiful but dumb, or at least remarkably naive and innocent, in contrast to the world of modernly sophisticated people who are her acquaintances.

" 'Strictly Personal' is a thoroughly delightful story possessed of a quaint charm that is in keeping with its heroine's individual and joyous outlook on life."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 28 '29 180w

"This is a very sharp, two-edged novel. It is written all on the side of the angels, but it records both minutely and spectacularly the goings on of the imps. It has its audience waiting for it. Readers who enjoy the risqué but can accept it only when it is presented from a disapproving standpoint will find 'Strictly Personal' admirably moulded to their hearts' desires."

Sat R of Lit 6:592 D 21 '29 270w

"Many will find the absurdity of the heroine and of her diary quite diverting."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p796 O 10 '29 250w

KENNEDY, HOWARD ANGUS. Unsought adventure. 321p $2 Carrier

"With patience, the reader may learn here the history of a unique copy of the Gutenberg Bible (autographed by the Father of Printing), stolen from a bookshop safe and finally restored to the rightful owner after a wordy coil of miscellaneous goings on in the New York, and the Canadian Hills and England. Sentiment, subplots, family mysteries and grandmother's jewels figure, as well as Dr. Rosenbach, who appears briefly at an auction with a bid of

KENNEDY, H. A.—Continued
$106,000. He got the book."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 21 '29 80w

"There is a vigor, a sureness of touch, an essentially fine skill of characterization shown from time to time, that makes one wish that either by taking more time or by learning the technique of his craft before he undertook this task, the author might have kept the whole up to the very high standards of certain of its parts."
— + Boston Transcript p2 Ag 7 '29 400w

"The best part of a mystery story is its power to hold the reader's attention. If it is a good story one dares not skip a page, or even a line, for fear of missing some vital clue. The reader of 'Unsought Adventure' may skip whole chapters without missing a thing."
— N Y Times p17 S 1 '29 90w

KENNEDY, ROBERT EMMET. Red Bean Row. 297p $2.50 Dodd
29-22145

Red Bean Row is the Negro quarter in a small southern town. Negro life is the theme of the story. Among the chief characters are old Gramma Veenia, "high-yaller" Lucy, Nebo, her husband, to whom tragedy came, the philandering Elder Dennis, and the loquacious Cora.

"Mr. Kennedy writes simply and vividly despite his somewhat maudlin plot. Fundamentally he sees the relations between white people and Negroes clearly enough; it is a pity his sentimentality obscures them in the telling, and mars the charming anecdotal quality of his amusing book." Sara Haardt
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 N 17 '29 700w

"Mr. Kennedy is an accurate observer, his local color amply satisfies all who know darkies first hand; his accounts of their various gatherings, baptisms, buryins', and the like; of the gusto with which they eat bread and lasses or fry doughnuts, are excellent. Likewise his rendition of their dialect is unusually accurate. But he fails to tell a convincing story."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 D 7 '29 380w

"A smooth and entertaining tale, into whose veracity it is unprofitable to inquire. . . The conclusion has a separate and inharmonious air, as if it had been introduced without other excuse than the solution of the mechanical difficulties of the plot. Nevertheless, this final makeshift is not grave enough to destroy the colorful and amusingly anecdotal quality of the book."
+ — N Y Times p7 N 3 '29 600w

KENNEDY, ROBERT MILWARD, pseud. Blesston mystery. 301p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Gollancz]
29-5962

Captain Kennedy's legacy from his cousin includes a diary which a number of people seem desperately anxious to lay hands on. The legacy also includes a large sum of money which no one can find. Captain Kennedy and his fair colegatee join forces in the lively search.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 24 '29 80w

Boston Transcript p4 My 18 '29 130w

" 'The Bleston Mystery' is quite an entertaining story." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 146:478 O 13 '28 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p784 O 25 '28 220w

KENNEDY, ROBERT MILWARD, pseud. Man who rang the bell. 312p $2 Doubleday, Doran 29-16991

A dead man was found at the door of a London apartment, while the apartment bell rang furiously. Obviously the corpse did not ring that bell, but who did? Andrews, who occupied the apartment, was telephoning while the bell rang. His alibi was perfect. Dixon, the porter, established one after a stay in prison. It might have been Merriam, the owner of the building. But strangely enough altho all clews seemed to lead to Merriam it was he who solved the mystery.

Bookm 70:xxxii O '29 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 O 6 '29 100w

KENTON, EDNA. Book of earths. 290p il $6 Morrow
525 Earth. Cosmology 28-24581

"A friendly and fascinating canvass of theories concerning the shape of the earth—that body which we stand on yet cannot see. The story begins very far back, and many fantastic notions are passed in review. But Miss Kenton treats all the theories, including ours that the earth is an oblate spheroid, as guesses; and so is as much interested in certain nineteenth-century notions that we inhabit a tetrahedron and a hollow sphere as she is in any dogma taught in our schools."—Nation

"A profoundly moving document of man's continuous effort to comprehend the nature of his world, the nature of himself, the nature and the design of his creation."
+ Bookm 69:xxiv Mr '29 100w

"The clear exposition of involved reasoning and the attention called to exquisite detail in the complex earth pictures show the competence and enthusiasm of the author for her subject. In her occasional attempts to indicate hypothetical contact from analogy, she is less acceptable, but the modesty of her claims obviates serious criticism." R. O. Sawtell
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ja 13 '29 720w

"Anyone who turns aside from Miss Kenton's book for fear of maps and formulas does something which he may well regret. For one will meet few books that will offer such interesting data in so appealing a fashion. When the attribute of authority is added to the whole, one can wish for little more in the line of historical science."
+ Boston Transcript p8 N 10 '28 350w

"Her discussion is lively and sensible, and 148 illustrations add greatly to the value of the volume."
+ Nation 128:210 F 13 '29 100w

"The text of 'The Book of Earths' is disappointing. As a series of notes for the illustrations, it is too discursive to be easily referred to; and as an interpretation of them, it merely provokes a tantalized feeling that all the most interesting things have been left unsaid. But the pictures themselves are undeniably fascinating." L. S. Morris
— + New Repub 58:22 F 20 '29 300w

"Disclaiming 'scientific' purpose, Miss Kenton has collected a vast store of information, a large number of ancient prints and pictures, which present man's beliefs from earliest ages about the globe on which he lives; and from this collection she has chosen the material for an odd and interesting book."
+ N Y Times p16 N 11 '28 450w

St Louis 27:48 F '29

KENWORTHY, JOSEPH MONTAGUE, and YOUNG, GEORGE. Freedom of the seas. 283p il $4 Liveright [18s Hutchinson]
359 Freedom of the seas. Sea power. Maritime law [28-17522]

An authoritative discussion of the vexed question of the freedom of the seas in the historical perspective of the controversy, and from the points of view of both England and America before, during, and since the war.

Booklist 25:269 Ap '29

"The authors of this book have shown a thorough knowledge of their subject and in certain passages their diagnosis is acute. Nevertheless, the book suffers in spots from disorganization and ill-digested argument." R. L. Buell

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 F 17 '29 1900w

"The authors have left little to be desired in their scholarly treatment of a difficult subject. Reason and an honest desire for peace have been at the bottom of their judgments." M. G.

+ Boston Transcript p8 Mr 23 '29 1100w

"It is really a potpourri of material relating to warfare at sea from the American Civil War down to the present day, of great value to anyone who wishes to be informed as to the status of every phase of the question of naval war and peace, together with [the authors'] own views as to how war between England and the United States may be avoided. . . Rarely does one find a book so replete with information. But the volume is gravely handicapped by a lack of proper and logical arrangement of the material and the absence of an adequate index." O. G. Villard

+ — Nation 128:375 Mr 27 '29 900w

"The argument challenges and deserves the most careful consideration. Unhappily, its treatment in this book is slip-shod and superficial. The historical retrospect, directed to showing that international law has no real effect or existence, is grossly misleading. . . The non-technical reader should be warned, in fairness, that many dogmatic statements presented as axioms are, to put it mildly, matters of controversy. The authors' final conclusions are complicated, and at times rather hazy." C. E. Fayle

— Nation and Ath 43:179 My 12 '28 630w

— New Statesman 31:264 Je 2 '28 550w

"The whole problem of sea strategy is reconsidered in the light of the lessons of the World War. The technical knowledge of sea warfare, which one of the authors contributes, is skillfully welded into a criticism of existing sea law by his distinguished colleague, and the result is a volume that is neither too technical for the layman nor too general for the technician. It is a rich repository of data which must be kept in mind in all future discussions of this subject." J. T. Shotwell

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 16 '29 1400w

Reviewed by N: Roosevelt
N Y Times p1 F 10 '29 1800w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Ap '29 180w

"Both of these authors have years of British naval, diplomatic and political experience behind them and they have worked up a careful background to the subject—interlarded with instructive comments and illustrative incidents—which deserves greater attention than it has yet been given in American official circles."

+ Outlook 151:352 F 27 '29 350w

Pratt p11 summer '29

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:22 Ap '29 100w

Sat R 145:633 My 19 '28 750w

Reviewed by Stewart Beach
Sat R of Lit 5:1019 My 18 '29 1200w

"Mr. J. M. Kenworthy and Mr. George Young have collaborated in a valuable book. However much we may disagree with incidental arguments, it is sound and most helpful on the main point that an understanding with the United States about the law of the sea is indispensable. This main argument does not always come out so clearly as it might because it is overlaid with a good deal of historical information that is scarcely relevant."

+ Spec 140:685 My 5 '28 300w

Reviewed by J. P. Chamberlain
Survey 62:194 My 1 '29 720w

"A word should be added about the authors' manner of presentation. They have succeeded in expressing indignation and contempt for naval and military officers and diplomatists, upon almost every page, which necessarily makes the book rather tedious; international law is interesting; if sarcasms are well prepared and well aimed they are most entertaining; but persistent railing is neither interesting nor entertaining."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p519 Jl 12 '28 1300w

"A distinctly readable volume that should appeal both to the expert and the layman. It attacks the problem from a broader base than that of either international law or naval strategy, and combines both of these factors in a non-technical manner, seasoning them with a liberal portion of sound commonsense." J. G. McDonald

+ World Tomorrow 12:88 F '29 720w

KENYON, THEDA. Witches still live; a study of the black art today. 379p il $3.50 Washburn

133.4 Witchcraft 29-22548

"Traces the history of witchcraft from its origins in the cult of Diana, through the Druid rites and the practices of the medieval Coven down to the contemporary cases in the United States. Miss Kenyon points out that the extent of the famous Salem witchcraft has been considerably exaggerated and that belief in witches is as common in certain parts of America today as in the Colonial period."—Outlook

"Though it is most exciting and readable, the author's scholarliness is demonstrated by five pages of bibliography, ranging from The Golden Bough to editorials in the New York World."

+ Bookm 70:xxii D '29 100w

Boston Transcript p2 D 11 '29 700w

"The volume is absolutely packed with quaint and curious superstitions, some weird, some horrible, some quite charming. Yet the strangest thing about them all is their resemblance; one finds beliefs very much alike in places far apart both spiritually and geographically." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p13 N 17 '29 900w

Reviewed by Mary Shirley
Outlook 153:188 O 2 '29 200w

KER, WILLIAM PATON. Form and style in poetry; lectures and notes; ed. by W. W. Chambers. 384p $4 Macmillan

821 Poetry. English poetry. Chaucer, Geoffrey 29-26347

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:314 My '29

"At first sight it seems dull. The style is neither flowing nor pungent. But reading it, one becomes impressed by the immense erudition of the author, by his sound sense and fine integrity." Raymond Mortimer

+ Bookm 69:102 Mr '29 380w

"Mr. Ker was incapable of thinking or saying a dull thing about poetry. Here we find him saying many sharp and true things, and saying them out of an acquaintance with his subject which was almost as wide as the Western world and as deep as poetical time goes back."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 F 17 '29 100w

"He never wrote these lectures; this is Ker in rich undress; and to read them is a delight precisely because they were spoken before they were written down." Barrington Gates

+ Nation and Ath 44:557 Ja 19 '29 450w

St Louis 27:165 My '29

"Though what we have before us is not the best of Ker, being lectures in part reconstructed from the notes of students, it will definitely do the [new critics] good to read this last volume of his making."

+ Sat R 146:611 N 10 '28 300w

KERR, MRS SOPHIE (UNDERWOOD). Mareea-Maria. 352p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-26269

Wesley Dean, owner of the comfortable Dean farmstead where his mother and sister live with him, marries a little Italian girl from the canning factory. Embittered by this blow to her pride his mother tries to turn Wesley against Mareea but succeeds only in drawing them closer together. In the duel between the two women, sunny Latin and harsh puritan, Mareea's character proves to be of the finer steel.

KERR, SOPHIE—Continued

---

Booklist 25:286 Ap '29

"Few novels of the present year can express more faithfully the spirit of America than does this story of a back-water country of Maryland. . . Sophie Kerr is above all things else a novelist with an acute appreciation and ability in rendering the sectional scene, in describing indelibly one more bit of the mosaic which will some day portray America as it really is." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 26 '29 1750w

"Miss Kerr's ability is not slight and if she is primarily concerned with situations and too hasty resolutions of her situations rather than with their inner content, she nevertheless poses her problem well and avoids a stupid and happy solution to her story." Edwin Seaver

+ — N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 26 '29 150w

"The compactness of the plot and the plausibility of the characterization make 'Mareea-Maria,' under the handicap of a very clumsy title, a real achievement."

+ N Y Times p14 F 10 '29 600w

"The reader's interest is implored throughout this naive bit of story-telling by the glib facility with which the author maintains a series of small incidents all calculated to draw our sympathy toward Mareea and to arouse our contempt for Allie Dean. This uncertain power over our emotions seems to be Miss Kerr's only concern. Mareea, it is true, demands some attention because she has an animal vitality, but she is the only living figure in the book, and an ingenuously exaggerated portrait at that. The audience for such entertainment as this needs must be especially uncritical."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:839 Mr 30 '29 200w

KESSEL, JOSEPH. Princes of the night; tr. by Jack Kahane. 288p $2 Macaulay [7s 6d Richards press]

28-28964

Hélène Borissovna is one of a group of Russian aristocrats exiled in Paris after the war. The bitter experiences of the group as a whole are the background for the story of Hélène who is swept into the night life of the city and on to her own degeneration.

---

" 'Princes of the Night' is as furious a debauch as the wildest Cossack dance. . . If Mr. Kessel lays his color on a bit too thickly it must be admitted, at the same time, that he injects a vivid verisimilitude that would seem to prove the general theme of his story. . Superficially the theme is a succession of obscene debauches and drunkenness, but underneath this hectic surface the author has clearly indicated the heart-breaking divagations of a dozen strange souls." Herbert Gorman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 F 24 '29 720w

"I cannot recommend it as I did the same author's 'Pure in Heart.' It may be true that Russians nowadays behave like characters in Dostoevsky. But they were more interesting, I think, when they were content to model themselves on those of Goncharov and Turgeniev." Raymond Mortimer

— Nation and Ath 43:735 S 8 '28 60w

"The story of Helene is very moving and tragic; against any background it would have been a story to move the heart and the imagination; but against the extravagant background of this scene of Russia in exile it takes on a quality almost epic." Esther Hyman

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 2 '29 500w

"The author spares us nothing of the squalor and sordidness of the particular type of life which he depicts."

Sat R 146:624 N 10 '28 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p592 Ag 16 '28 570w

KESTER, PAUL. Diana Dauntless. 344p $2 Lippincott

29-20103

About charming Diana Dauntless, who came out of Ireland into eighteenth century England, looking for the protection of George II whose life her grandfather had once saved. How she won over both king and queen and a charming young duke in the bargain is the story.

---

Booklist 26:119 D '29

Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 28 '29 350w

" 'Diana Dauntless' atones for its somewhat pedestrian style by vivacity of dialogue and a superb dramatic construction."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '29 280w

"It is wholly a fanciful story, with its principal appeal in the color and costumes of the period, and with nothing especially original in it. But it is an excellent example of the type of old-fashioned story that never outlives its welcome." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ag 10 '29 150w

" 'Diana Dauntless' is a good, stirring, old-fashioned romance, one of which Sir Walter Scott would have approved." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 17 '29 60w

"The novel is very long in getting under way, it is burdened with a plot of needless complexity, and its dramatic potentialities are not fully utilized, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Kester is a playwright. Happily, there is always Diana."

+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 7 '29 350w

"It has been so long since the public has had any considerable number of these past day romances from which to select that the appearance of a lively story of the type will be welcome to numerous readers."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '29 120w

KETTELWELL, JOHN. Story of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp; with a preface by Hugh Walpole. 110p il $4 (12s 6d) Knopf

The story of Aladdin and his wonderful lamp retold in much detail and embellished with highly fantastic designs and drawings by the author.

---

"The telling has something of the involved and Orientally flowery quality that distinguishes Ernest Bramah's tales of the itinerant story teller, Kai Lung. The drawings are in the Beardsley tradition, with their use of fine line in combination with heavy massed blacks, but have a fantastic quality which is all their own." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 150:1378 D 19 '28 130w

"The story of Aladdin and his lamp has been retold many times, so that a fresh reaction must have something to offer of fresh interest. And the present book is admirable because while holding close to the original it does have something of freshness about it—does in fact carry on to the reader much of the robustiousness of the tale."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:612 Ja 19 '29 480w

KEVERNE, RICHARD, pseud. See Hosken, C. J. W.

KEYES, MARY WILLARD. Juniper Green. 294p [2] il $2.50 Longmans

[29-16245]

A group of New England village boys are taken in hand by an elderly wanderer of military bearing who comes to Bassetlaw from nobody knows where. The boys adore Captain Horatio on sight; their parents are not so sure.

But the boys, like dogs, were good judges of character, and in time even the parents were anxious to keep Captain Horatio.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 S 21 '29 110w

"There are few extremely good books for boys written by women and this is not one of them. . . The book is self-conscious in spots, carelessly written, and leaves a somewhat confused impression; it lacks the emphasis which would make it well-rounded and clear-cut."
— Sat R of Lit 6:544 D 7 '29 190w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '29 180w

KEYSER, CASSIUS JACKSON. Pastures of wonder; the realm of mathematics and the realm of science. 208p $2.75 Columbia univ. press [14s Milford]

501 Science—Philosophy. Mathematics—Philosophy 29-10623

"This essay, written primarily for educated laymen, deals with the two weightiest terms in the vocabulary of rational thought: Mathematics and Science. Its aim is to help the reader to acquire a sound philosophic understanding of what the former term, according to the best usage of our time, essentially and distinctively means: and a similar understanding of how the latter term, which has never been given a standard or authoritative definition, ought to be defined."—Preface

"The detailed presentation of the definitions involves language surprisingly clear for such abstract and abstruse topics."
+ Bookm 70:xii N '29 140w

"That the treatment of such a theme should be more or less technical was inevitable, yet the author writes with a lucidity which brings his argument well within the comprehension of the educated layman." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 8 '29 430w

"A discussion marked both by clarity of style and by acuteness of thought." C. M. Perry
+ Int J Ethics 40:141 O '29 130w

"The volume is rich in novel and intellectually stimulating suggestions and challenges, shocking, doubtless, to some readers. . . Readers whose mental fontanels are not yet hermetically sealed will find enormous stimulation in a writer so vivid and awakening. When Dr. Keyser became Adrian Professor Emeritus of Mathematics at Columbia he did not retire into 'innocuous desuetude'—his greatest service to American thought was just beginning." Maynard Shipley
+ New Repub 59:347 Ag 14 '29 850w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:42 Jl '29

"Professor Keyser works out the implications of these two definitions clearly and logically, and his book should prove of considerable value to those interested in the logical bases of scientific ideas."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p639 Ag 15 '29 150w

KEYSERLING, EDUARD HEINRICH NIKOLAUS, graf von. Tides; tr. from the German by Arthur J. Ashton. (Transatlantic lib.) 261p $2.50 Macaulay 29-11572

"Countess Doralice could not find happiness with her elderly husband, Count Köhne-Jasky; so forsaking her lovely chateau, she ran away with Hans Grill, a young painter. In a little North Sea fishing village tragedy stalks her. Keyserling has interpreted the reactions of this young girl with subtle art."—Bookm

Bookm 69:xxv Jl '29 40w

"The vivid characterizations, down to the least important personages of the story, are built up by deft touches. The author's economy in detail is more effective than the most painstaking inventorial industry of the realists." R. C. B. Brown
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Je 23 '29 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p125 S '29

" 'Tides' is distinguished by a quiet elegance of execution that is far too graceful to be affected. It has the simplicity that comes from infinite care and restraint. Written originally in German by a baron from the Baltic provinces, it escapes, surprisingly enough, both Teutonic ponderousness and Slavic impetuosity."
+ Nation 129:97 Jl 24 '29 320w

"This novel of moods and nuances, with its exquisite descriptions always suggesting the reactions of natural surroundings on character, has the charm of restraint and distinction. To readers weary of gangsters, success stories, primitive violence and crime, there is here the same relief as that felt under a cool northern sky after brutal, tropical sunlight." M. C. Darnton
+ N Y Evening Post p7m Je 22 '29 750w

"There is a great deal of human feeling and some beautiful characterization. 'Tides' is a true work of art."
+ N Y Times p9 My 26 '29 500w

"The theme is not new and the treatment, though thoughtful, is not distinguished. So many books today depict this emotional restlessness that in order to be worth a reader's time and sympathy a new book on the theme must be dressed in entirely new apparel."
— Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '29 300w

KEYSERLING, HERMANN ALEXANDER, graf von. America set free. 609p $5 Harper

917.3 United States—Civilization. National characteristics, American. United States—Social conditions 29-24015

An interpretation of American life and culture by a European philosopher. The first part of the book concerns itself with the American scene, and contains Mr Keyserling's general impressions of various parts of the country. In the second part, entitled American problems, he discusses the characteristic American traits of youthfulness, animal spirits, possessiveness, and other ear-marks of the Babbitt-type. The overrated child, the predominant woman, ideas of democracy and morality, and the relation of culture and spirituality to the American scene and its people, are major points in Mr Keyserling's discussion.

Reviewed by Stringfellow Barr
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 N 17 '29 1200w

Boston Transcript p5 D 7 '29 1000w

Reviewed by Francis Snow
Current Hist 31:632 Ja '30 120w

"The impression grows as one advances through the interminable pages of this volume that Count Keyserling is exceedingly expert at shooting clay pigeons which he himself has thrown into the air but that he has not come close to what, though with the utmost diffidence, one may venture to call the soul of America. He hates many things that every intelligent, every sensitive, every generous-minded American must hate. He is obviously in deadly earnest. Perhaps he would be more readable if he did not take himself and his messianic mission quite so seriously. Certainly he does not rise sufficiently above his own environment and presuppositions to become a determining influence upon American thought and action." R. L. Duffus
— + N Y Times p2 D 1 '29 1350w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p16 N 13 '29 900w

Outlook 153:511 N 27 '29 270w

"There is absolutely nothing in the American psychology that is not crystal-clear to the Count and no shortcoming for which he cannot produce a remedy." W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:16 D '29 260w

"His description is often correct, but both his premises and his conclusions are of doubtful validity. This book is not really a book on America, it is a study of the mind of Keyserling excited by the American scene. The psychoanalysis is not of America, but of a Baltic aristocrat after his first dose of Americanism, and in so far as this aristocrat had a brain which, if not precisely logical, was certainly retentive, observant, and acute, the process yields matter worth careful reflection. But as a philosophy of America it is nonsense, and as an intuition of America it is unreliable. The man has skill amounting to genius, skill in criticism, skill in phrasing, skill in definition. This, and not his prophecy, is what makes his book worth reading." H: S. Canby

KEYSERLING, H. A.—Continued

— + Sat R of Lit 6:437 N 23 '29 2500w

"When allowance is made for exaggeration and paradox, and patience is granted for prolixity, Count Keyserling's generalizations will often be found to have a residue of understanding and philosophical criticism. Perhaps, at best, he is only elaborating the obvious; but there may be benefit in listening to lectures of this type. Count Keyserling develops no particular thesis, and about all that can be said of his meditations is that sometimes he hits upon basic truth and sometimes he doesn't."

— + Springf'd Republican p14 N 8 '29 750w

KEYSERLING, HERMANN ALEXANDER, graf von. Creative understanding. 500p $5 Harper

193 Philosophy. Knowledge, Theory of 29-11301

In this book Count Keyserling outlines the theory of inner adjustment and rhythm which he teaches at his School of wisdom at Darmstadt. He believes that the spirit of man is creative and that the improvement of the world can be brought about only thru a change of inner attitude, that "being" and "understanding" rather than efficiency and exterior knowledge lead to real progress. The aim of his teaching is the transformation of the inner man.

---

Booklist 26:9 O '29 1000w

Bookm 70:iv S '29 230w

"The style is forbidding, possibly on account of the translator, but partly because of those mouth-filling and soul relaxing, hyphenated abstract nouns, never completely defined but serving as cosmic symbols. Possibly most of the count's American readers will find an even graver obstacle in his majestic and ponderous pomposity. . . But in 'Creative Understanding,' Keyserling has done as exciting piece of work and a timely piece of work which should be widely read, its deficiencies patiently borne and its virtues extracted." Stringfellow Barr

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 26 '29 850w

Boston Transcript p6 Je 1 '29 650w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

— + Christian Century 46:810 Je 19 '29 240w

"Despite the Count's amazing effrontery and bad manners, it must be confessed that he occasionally enunciates truths which, if not new, are yet never old. . . Our only complaint is that the same philosophy can be readily obtained, stated in simpler terms, on any bookstall for the price of one nickel." G: E. G. Catlin

— + Nation 128:712 Je 12 '29 450w

"After reading 263 pages of 'Creative Understanding' with the greatest difficulty of understanding Count Keyserling's meaning, I was taken aback by his remark 'Clarity is our goal.' Whatever other goal Count Keyserling may have reached, he certainly has not reached that of clarity, at any rate in his English or American translation; it would be difficult to think of any books more obscure or written more obscurely. . . His theories or doctrines are by no means without interest, and in the course of his enormously voluble exposition he says some illuminating things, and many which provoke that rare activity, thought. His good faith and sincerity are, of course, unimpeachable. Yet he must be reckoned as belonging to the typically modern school of historical philosophers or philosophical historians, the school of Spengler and Steiner and the host of lesser prophets who, in perfect good faith, purvey their quack medicines to a muddled and puzzled world." Leonard Woolf

— + Nation and Ath 45:626 Ag 10 '29 700w

"The Count hasn't any system. His originality consists in a new technique of thinking, or, better, a new attitude toward thought. 'New' is a dangerous word, and this attitude is by no means unexampled under the sun, but Keyserling has developed it far more completely than anyone else." Denver Lindley

+ New Repub 59:291 Jl 31 '29 1000w

Reviewed by J. Franklin

+ — New Statesman 33:627 Ag 31 '29 900w

"In style with Keyserling's apt description of 'The Decline of the West' as 'Spengler's intellectual novel,' it is appropriate to describe his own apostrophes to 'Truth and Understanding' as the vague and meaningless poetry of an intellectual priest. In a hundred ways they embody an element of wish-fulfillment that is not difficult to discern upon close scrutiny." V. F. Calverton

— N Y Evening Post p9m My 25 '29 750w

"At times, it must be confessed, the lectures of which 'Creative Understanding' consists succeed in wearying the reader. As lectures delivered by the vital energy of the man before a sympathetic audience at Darmstadt, they doubtless produce an effect quite other than from the printed page. . . In general the volume entitled 'The Recovery of Truth' is less dynamic than 'Creative Understanding.' Nevertheless that, too, is often markedly stimulating to meditation." H: J. Forman

+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 21 '29 700w

Reviewed by G: E. G. Catlin

N Y World p7m Je 9 '29 500w

St Louis 27:279 O '29

"This self-appointed sage writes badly. He takes no trouble to spare his reader. He is wordy and tedious, wholly without humor, repetitious, and slovenly. . . There is, it is true, occasional sageness in this sage; there are nuggets of shrewd comment on history and on contemporary life. But the ore is not rich and the cost of smelting out the precious metal makes the profit doubtful." R. B. Perry

— + Sat R of Lit 6:309 O 26 '29 600w

"If it were not for the Count's manner, his matter might not be so bad; but his manner I find intolerable. Writing in a style of deliberate arrogance, he asserts claims that one would not have ventured to make for Plato." C. E. M. Joad

— + Spec 143:101 Jl 20 '29 300w

"It is manifestly impossible to do justice in small compass to the wealth of learning and the fertility of analogical interpretation which must be admitted by the sternest of Count Keyserling's critics to permeate and inspire the 1,100 discursive pages in which he has embodied, or, to use his own phraseology, 'ensouled' his doctrine; and it is also unprofitable to lay stress upon the appearance of what, to the British mind at least, looks like the manifestation of a somewhat hypertrophied egotism."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p696 S 12 '29 1800w

KEYSERLING, HERMANN ALEXANDER, graf von. Recovery of truth: tr. from the German in collaboration with the author by Paul Fohr. 647p $5 Harper

193 Philosophy. Knowledge, Theory of
29-11300

A companion volume to his "Creative understanding" (Book Review Digest, August, 1929) which is made up from lectures delivered at the School of Wisdom at Darmstadt during 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1927. "I have not, in this book, treated all the problems that require a restatement. But I do think I have dealt with the most important issues. I have dealt with the religious, the ethical problems; with the future of Christianity; with the problems of life and death, of freedom, of love, of happiness. I have endeavoured to show to what extent man belongs to the earth and to what extent he does not. This book can be read independently of my other works. Still, I should advise every reader of The Recovery of Truth to study also Creative Understanding." (Preface)

Booklist 26:9 O '29
Bookm 70:iv S '29 80w

Reviewed by Stringfellow Barr
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 26 '29 850w
Boston Transcript p6 Je 1 '29 400w

"Count Keyserling has lectured to American audiences in centers of culture to their apparent edification and certainly to his own great profit. The presumption therefore, is that the lectures conveyed important truth. Or is it? The lecture I heard seemed extremely thin, but not so thin as the substance of these two volumes. If one could take the author at his word, that he aims only at the stimulation of minds and not at the promulgation of a system, all would be well. He does stimulate, though not so successfully as in the 'Travel Diary.'" W. E. Garrison
— + Christian Century 46:810 Je 18 '29 240w

Reviewed by G: E. Gatlin
Nation 128:712 Je 12 '29 450w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 45:626 Ag 10 '29 700w

"The reader is surprised to recognize beneath the formal and somewhat pompous phraseology of the Count the familiar voice of simple common sense. But rarely does the Count examine a question without throwing it into new and enlightening perspective, and his digressions (often to the reader's discomfiture) inevitably justify themselves." Denver Lindley
+ New Repub 59:291 Jl 31 '29 250w

"It is as if he exhibits the crystal of his experience, turning it about, now one facet, now another; see what a fierce, steady, central glow! At times we fancy we do see; then, while admiring the dexterity and the ambition of the manipulator, we suspect the crystal to be paste, the experience to be not wholly authentic." J: Franklin
+ — New Statesman 33:627 Ag 31 '29 900w

Reviewed by V. F. Calverton
N Y Evening Post p9m My 25 '29 680w

"At times, it must be confessed, the lectures of which 'The Recovery of Truth' consist succeed in wearying the reader. As lectures delivered by the vital energy of the man before a sympathetic audience at Darmstadt, they doubtless produce an effect quite other than from the printed page. . . In general this volume is less dynamic than 'Creative Understanding.' Nevertheless that, too, is often markedly stimulating to meditation." H: J. Forman
+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 21 '29 700w

Reviewed by G: E. G. Catlin
N Y World p7m Je 9 '29 500w

"Count Keyserling's speculations in the realm of human understanding run so far afield of the current trends of thinking, that only by the strangest chance will this optimistic metaphysician leave any lasting furrow on the brain of the modern man. Though less manifestly in the spirit of the age than any philosopher of his generation, we are, nevertheless, obliged to accept his work for the excellent antidote to instinctivism, mechanism and all of the current intellectual isms, that it is." E. M. Benson
Outlook 152:233 Je 5 '29 450w

Reviewed by R. B. Perry
Sat R of Lit 6:309 O 26 '29 600w

"If it were not for the Count's manner, his matter might not be so bad; but his manner I find intolerable. Writing in a style of deliberate arrogance, he asserts claims that one would not have ventured to make for Plato." C. E. M. Joad
— + Spec 143:101 Jl 20 '29 300w

KILBOURNE, FANNIE (MRS CHARLES GATCHELL). Dot & Will. 280p $2 Dodd
29-8647

The romance of Dot and Will began in the American magazine some time ago. Here are new stories of the amusing domestic adventures of this attractive small-town couple.

Booklist 25:360 Je '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 2 '29 100w
Boston Transcript p8 My 18 '29 150w
Cleveland Open Shelf p112 Jl '29

KILLOUGH, HUGH BAXTER, and KILLOUGH, MRS LUCY (WINSOR). Raw materials of industrialism. 407p $3.75 Crowell
338 Commercial products 29-15949

A survey of the world's raw materials—the native resources of each country, and their determination of that country's wealth and general economic status. The book is divided into five parts: textile fibers, crude products of the forest, population and the food supply, minerals, and fuel and power.

"Like English publications of the same character, the book abounds in advertisements that are made a useful part of the volume through being well classified and indexed." C. R. W.
+ Ann Am Acad 146:281 N '29 270w

"An impressive presentation is given in this book of the political as well as of the economic significance of raw materials." E. N.
Boston Transcript p4 S 7 '29 750w

"It would require much searching in public documents and statistical abstracts to obtain the information condensed in these 400 pages." W: B. Shaw
+ R of Rs 80:22 S '29 180w
Survey 63:111 O '29 40w

KILMER, ALINE (MURRAY) (MRS JOYCE KILMER). Buttonwood summer. 185p il $2 Doubleday, Doran 29-9995

"This is the story of a summer at Buttonwood, and the autumn and winter following it at home again. The characters are human beings and animals. Ben, and the author, who is also the mother of a few of the characters. . . All this makes good reading for children from eight to eleven years old and, indeed, for grown-ups. For the great virtue of the book is its unaffected realism. The fortunate children who move through this tale are never dressed up either in the literal or literary sense."—Sat R of Lit

"There are not many books which surprise the reader into laughing out loud, but 'A Buttonwood Summer' is one of them. It is funny and is also very real. The children are alive and individual—there is no danger of confusing one with another, or of forgetting any of them. Unfortunately the illustrations are flat and lifeless and do not fit the children. The reader must ignore them and make his own mental image of how the family looked." H. H. Owen
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ap 21 '29 400w

"Delightfully humorous, marked by the funny irresponsibilities and unexpected gravities of little boys and girls, and the charming forbearance and sympathy of a frequently puzzled mother, these simple adventures in prose of a very real-sounding family are quite likely to outlast many readings and be in continuous demand among the juniors."
+ Cath World 130:377 D '29 100w

"Here are children as we know them in life, not always radiantly healthy and beautiful, not uniformly amiable, but vigorous and interesting by virtue of their human defects. Here, too, are events which are as unemphatic and casual as we know most of life to be. The book rambles on to its inconclusive end, a little collection of spirited, photographic likenesses with something of art in its freshness and charm." K. W. Seitz
Sat R of Lit 5:1118 Je 15 '29 300w

KILMER, ALINE (MURRAY) (MRS JOYCE KILMER). Selected poems. 66p $1.50 Doubleday, Doran

811 29-7114

The publishers have made this selection from Aline Kilmer's three books of verse, Vigils, The poor king's daughter, and Candles that burn, adding two poems that have never before appeared in print.

---

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '29 70w

"This is one of the books with definitely delightful reasons for existence." K. B.

\+ Cath World 129:375 Je '29 250w

"The springs of her inspiration proceed from an underlying rock that supports instead of merely tolerating the fine soil of her cultivation, and their clear waters have a wild tang the more piquant for the restraints her taste and artistry impose upon their flow. The lyric ideas are sometimes slight, but they are always her own; the emotions may not be very profound, but the angles of her sly espionage upon them are unique." Clarence Britten

\+ New Repub 60:108 S 11 '29 240w

"Her taste is excellent, and if she derives her work from traditional sources, she retains the integrity of her own small world."

\+ — N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 30 '29 100w

"Mrs. Kilmer does not possess the gifts which a major poet must have, but to competency she adds an appealing courageousness. In much of her poetry there is the sincerity of personal grief and personal joy, and this alone would justly win her many readers." Granville Hicks

\+ N Y World p11m Ap 21 '29 50w

KIMBALL, ALICE MARY (MRS HARRY S. GODFREY). The devil is a woman. 128p $2.50 Knopf

811 29-8847

Biting sketches of New England backwoods life and characters in narrative verse, and shorter poems which portray in one guise or another, the conflict of the Puritan conscience with sin.

---

"Miss Kimball has a gift for story telling, such as is found sometimes in old country gossips who keep their cronies chortling far into the night. But her particular distinction is her language. Here is the very accent of that part of New England that rashly produced her, used imaginatively, a drama in itself, potent in revealing character." A. B. Parsons

\+ Bookm 69:215 Ap '29 420w

"Mrs. Kimball has left out the neighborly barn burnings and the classic ax murders of New England, but these are about all, and they are implicit in the background. She has told these horrifying stories with a curiously detached broadly comic attitude, thus rightly robbing them of the spirit of tragedy; and her method is precisely adapted to get the effect she wanted." K. A. Porter

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 12 '29 450w

"A Freudian, a historian, a naturalist, a Romanticist and a humorist would all relish the poems collected under the intriguing title 'The Devil is a Woman.' The teller is in each case no less interesting than the story she tells. She possesses a lively sense of humor with which she colors the superstitions, thwarted desires and almost pitiful narrow mindedness of her characters."

\+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 10 '29 180w

"This group of poems is better narrative than it is poetry. These tales are told in crisp New England vernacular; only once in a while is colloquial realism sacrificed to the exigencies of meter or the poetic use of words. . . I hope Miss Kimball will write more stories as good as these and I wish that she would write some of them in honest prose. Occasionally as I read her tales, the verse form, free and unstilted though it is, bothered me." Freda Kirchwey

\+ — Nation 128:374 Mr 27 '29 930w

Reviewed by A. B. Quirk

New Repub 58:261 Ap 17 '29 200w

"Miss Kimball is a vigorous and entertaining satirist whose book can be recommended to all students of the literature of trans-Atlantic self-denigration."

\+ New Statesman 33:684 S 14 '29 30w

"These poems are rather stories in verse; for their poetic form is naive, unsensitive and strange to the material. But they are still distinguished. They possess that peculiar stylistic effectiveness that sometimes accompanies plain language and are moved by a kind of just passion, capable of overcoming a trite and literary tale and an innocence in human relationship." M. B. Levy

\+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 23 '29 520w

"Miss Kimball conveys the tang of the locale which engages her momentary interest; and she sharply etches her persons. The book is enjoyable."

\+ N Y Times p2 Ap 28 '29 220w

"Miss Kimball's poems are by no means lacking in individuality. They have a blending of mad phantasy and scientific realism, an insight that is appropriately reminiscent of Yankee shrewdness, a good humor that can laugh heartily, even at vicious stupidity. . . Narrative skill is in itself a quality not to be scoffed at and it is a quality which Miss Kimball possesses and which makes her poems extraordinarily pleasant reading." Granville Hicks

\+ N Y World p11m Ap 21 '29 240w

"The language of these monologues is homely and harsh and picturesque, although occasionally it jumps the tracks and goes Middle Western for a few lines. But it has viscera." W. R. Brooks

\+ Outlook 151:516 Mr 27 '29 70w

St Louis 27:311 N '29

"A strong book because its language and the ideas behind it go down into the soil like a young tree, underacinate and vigorous. . . Her occasional periphrastics and involute thought are a sign that she has not mastered her form. This will come." D: McCord

\+ — Sat R of Lit 5:902 Ap 20 '29 500w

"The principal adverse criticism of the volume is on the score of technic. Had the writer varied her meter it would have relieved a certain excessive directness and sameness that prevail throughout."

\+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '29 130w

"Miss Kimball must be read in her own idiom which is too delicious to decant or paraphrase. She has a quick ear for the back country drawl and broad humor of village gossip and a deft gift for weaving both into her verse. She handles both her free and blank verse forms with skill." Clara Shanafelt

\+ Survey 62:196 My 1 '29 350w

"Certainly her tales of New England life have a rich vernacular tang. The realist in her, however, is overruled by the vivacious humourist; and although her humour is, at its best, the weapon with which sanity attacks human stupidity, it dictates sometimes a verbal extravagance too violent to be expressive, and in which the subtler threads of the human drama are sacrificed to the conditions of melodrama. . . Too often she reveals more force than insight. Her characters talk loud, but the distinctive essence of their being is lost in a clamour of words."

— \+ Times [London] Lit Sup p627 Ag 8 '29 250w

KIMBALL, REGINALD STEVENS, and others. Current-events instruction; a textbook of principles and plans. (Riverside textbooks in educ.) 310p $2 Houghton

375.9 Current events—Study and teaching

29-1435

"The present volume is a summation of the findings during several years in the classroom and of three years devoted wholly to research on problems connected with the teaching of current events. Some of the materials in these chapters have appeared in the columns of the magazines which the author has been editing, Current Methods and Current Events Guide for Teachers."—Author's preface

Boston Transcript p10 Ap 6 '29 120w

"The book is a pioneer in the current-events phase of education. It is largely a compilation of materials that have appeared previously in various periodicals, but the author has rendered a genuine service in assembling them in compact form in a single book with comments that tend to unify them." E. O. May

+ School R 37:630 O '29 550w

KIMBALL, SIDNEY FISKE. American architecture. 262p il $4 Bobbs

720.973 Architecture—United States. United States—Historic houses, etc. 28-9510

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"It is a remarkably terse example of knowledge based on thorough scholarship, presented in the most direct and simple manner, emphasizing the main patterns, and thus clarifying the whole chaos of modern taste." T. F. Hamlin

+ Sat R of Lit 5:584 Ja 12 '29 400w

"By their very selection and concentration, these collected papers illuminate an aspect of our cultural history that still is little heeded by the average educated person." E. N. Jenckes, Jr.

+ Yale R n s 18:610 spring '29 900w

KINCK, HANS ERNST. A young people; tr. from the Norwegian by Barent Ten Eyck. 282p $2.50 Dutton

29-8722

A study in character development, the scene of which is a Norwegian village in the 1880's. Sjurd Björntveit's father had committed suicide and the boy was made the butt of his comrades on account of it. Embittered, cruel, mean, he struggled up thru the welter of circumstance, and got nowhere.

"'A Young People' is the first work of a proficient and fairly well known Norwegian writer to appear in English translation; an evenly balanced and slow-moving novel wrought from the solid, earthy materials that have supplied the foundations for the better part of Scandinavian fiction in the last two generations. Its virtues are a simplicity of style and of setting, a sincere and consistent realization of character. Its defects, for other than Scandinavian audiences, are inherent in the subject matter." Eugene Lohrke

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 28 '29 450w

"Hans Kinck has a thorough, skilful style—the brief descriptions of the wind in the fjord are as fine as some of Conrad's passages about wind—but the book lacks animation." Florence Codman

+ — Nation 128:770 Je 26 '29 220w

"There is a harsh poetry, of a strange gray loveliness, running through the book, chiefly in those pages dealing with the sea. These people have the feel for it; Kinck has the feel for it. . . An unpleasant book, this, even brutal; yet with a tide of strength running in it and a gusty genuineness which make it good." Leonard Ehrlich

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Je 22 '29 550w

"The book shows something of local politics, there are many well-done descriptions of the countryside and the picture it presents, if unflattering, is very carefully drawn."

+ N Y Times p9 Je 2 '29 430w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 228:adv Ag '29 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '29 70w

KINDON, THOMAS. Murder in the moor. 248p $2 Dutton [3s 6d Methuen]

29-25601

Several persons, including Mr Pithecanthropus Smith, detective, his Scotch friend MacFee, two young ladies, and an escaped convict happened to have been in the vicinity of Okemere Pool on the moor at the time a murder was committed, on a very foggy day. It develops that the victim had not been a popular gentleman among certain former business acquaintances; but it takes the astute Smith to discover that said victim was murdered by mistake—and that the intended victim was still at large.

Bookm 70:xxx D '29 100w

"Thomas Kindon is a real author. He can spin you a literate, entertaining tale, complete with human beings, motives that click and a joke now and then—and plenty of bloodshed to boot." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 N 10 '29 180w

N Y Times p48 D 1 '29 180w

"Mr. Kindon has written a careful and convincing story and has enriched it with two clever character studies which will delight the reader."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p561 Jl 11 '29 200w

KING, BASIL. Satan as lightning. 280p $2 Harper

29-14145

From four years in prison to expiate a crime his partner in business had committed, Owen Hesketh comes back to New York with the idea of redeeming his honor in the world and getting revenge for the wrong done him. He achieves the former, returns to his father's house and wins his former sweetheart, and finds that his desire for revenge has disappeared.

Booklist 26:71 N '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 21 '29 250w

Boston Transcript p3 S 4 '29 600w

"The story is rather flashy in its contrasting characters and settings, but well constructed and well told."

+ — Christian Century 46:1513 D 4 '29 100w

"The story, in spite of its epigraphs from the gospels and from Robert Browning, is not especially commanding. This story of an ex-convict who wins his way back to the society of nice people is not even especially convincing." Edwin Seaver

— N Y Evening Post p7m S 7 '29 180w

"The novel is in the main an exposition of the author's theories concerning conduct and religion, and it is upon the appeal or lack of appeal these may have for the individual reader that his feeling toward the book will largely depend."

N Y Times p7 O 13 '29 470w

"The novel is sincere, serious, and earnest, but as entertainment it does not approach first rank. As a thesis novel it is tolerably convincing, maintaining its poise, indulging in neither screaming nor false emphasis. Probably the excellent pictures of New York will go a long way towards making the book worth while for many readers; others will find cheer in the message of possible freedom from the domination of evil."

— + Sat R of Lit 6:95 Ag 31 '29 320w

KING, BASIL. Seven torches of character. 260p $2 Doubleday, Doran

170 Character 29-5510

Mr King discusses the fundamental qualities necessary to the individual who would control his own life and influence others.

Booklist 25:306 My '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Mr 10 '29 130w

"All his books are virile, forward-looking, and eloquent of faith in man and God. They are religious in the purest sense, entirely free from dogmatic prating and full of faith in final conquest. In 'The Seven Torches of Character' he has left a legacy of high ideal and serene faith." F. M.

KING, BASIL—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '29 1150w
N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '29 450w
St Louis 27:191 Je '29

KING, DAVID WOOSTER. Living East. 265p $3 Duffield

915.4 India—Description and travel. Afghanistan—Description and travel 29-13690

The author, who has been a wanderer since the end of the World war, gives in this book a personal record of his adventures in India and Afghanistan.

---

"There are many people who go to the ends of the earth, but do not seem to get so very far at that. These eternal innocents abroad never seem to depart from the narrow circle of themselves. Of such we must consider David Wooster King. . . It is remarkable how little this traveling gentleman seems to have absorbed of the native lands and peoples he visited. The impression remains with the reader that to Mr. King they were all some sort of outlandish crew, which he viewed from the comfortable bay window of a colonial bank." Edwin Seaver

— N Y Evening Post p7m Je 22 '29 170w

"An account of a motor trip of five hundred miles through Afghanistan to Kabul, with the noted lecturer Lowell Thomas, to interview Amanullah recently Amir of Afghanistan, is the unusual feature of this attractively written book."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:335 O 26 '29 70w

KING, GRACE ELIZABETH. Mount Vernon on the Potomac; history of the Mount Vernon ladies association of the Union. 491p il $4 Macmillan

975.529 Mount Vernon, Virginia. Mount Vernon ladies' association of the Union 29-3158

The history of the organization responsible for the preservation of the home of Washington as a national monument. This organization is the Mount Vernon ladies' association of the Union. Mrs King's interesting account is illustrated from portraits of regents of the Association, and from photographs of Mount Vernon.

---

"The story of the preservation and restoration of Mount Vernon has been told many times, and will be told again from generation to generation. The tale has not been told more gracefully or with more fervor than Grace King has done it." C: Moore

+ Am Hist R 34:888 Jl '29 320w
Booklist 25:315 My '29

"The compiler of this history has done her work with undoubted fidelity and zeal, although her prose entanglements are at times rather formidable. Miss King writes a book as though she were delivering an oration."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 10 '29 180w
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 20 '29 300w

"Grace King has told the full story with skill and interest, and has made of it a book that deserves an honored place, not only among the archives of Mount Vernon, but also in the history of the achievements of American women and in the story of the nation's veneration of its first President."

N Y Times p16 F 17 '29 280w
St Louis 27:207 Je '29

"The book has little interest for the general public, but should have some appeal for the patriotic women who are making themselves responsible for keeping in condition one of the shrines of the nation."

Sat R of Lit 5:786 Mr 16 '29 130w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '29 160w

KING, LOUISA (YEOMANS) (MRS FRANCIS KING), and FOTHERGILL, JOHN. Gardener's colour book. unp $3 Knopf

716 Gardens 29-6551

An adaptation for American gardeners of an English gardening color chart. The range of colors is from yellow, orange and red, to blue and pink. The arrangement is by column according to month, from May to September. In the columns by month and color are tabulated the appropriate flowers.

---

Boston Transcript p3 F 23 '29 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p89 Je '29
N Y Times p7 Mr 3 '29 130w

"Mrs. King has adapted for American gardens an English list of popular annual and perennial plants, classified according to color and time of blooming. Though no actual garden will, in all probability, conform to this outline, the 'Gardener's Colour Book' will be found full of suggestive material for the keeping of accurate garden records."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:743 Mr 2 '29 170w

KING, ROBERT WYLIE, ed. England from Wordsworth to Dickens. (English life in English literature) 240p $2 Harcourt [6s Methuen]

914.2 English literature—Collections. England—Social life and customs [29-6265]

English life from 1784 to 1837 is seen from many angles in these selections from the literature of the times. National characteristics, politics, travel, sport, art, letters, and family life—these and other phases of life are mirrored in the selections.

---

"This is an ideal volume for casual reading, but the brevity of the selections makes them suggestive rather than informative; they are impressionistic notes on an age." B. R. Redman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 10 '29 200w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 26 '29 120w

+ Outlook 151:231 F 6 '29 130w
Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 22 '29 300w

"With slight reservations Mr. King's anthology must be pronounced excellent for variety, vigour, and scope. His enterprising scholarship sets before us, besides the most noted authors, several of lesser rank who have perceived and presented the manners of their day with particular aptitude. Mr. King's notes combine valuable hints of general history with particular information and criticism."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p811 N 1 '28 280w

KING, RUFUS. Murder by the clock. 288p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Chapman & H.] 29-9876

Lieutenant Valcour is summoned from the police station to investigate the disappearance of Mrs Endicott's husband. The missing man is discovered dead in his own closet. From the maze of conflicting circumstances that involves the curious household, Valcour quietly unravels the truth.

---

"Unusual mystery story."

+ Bookm 69:xxvi Je '29 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 5 '29 170w

" 'Murder by the Clock' is much the best of an inordinate amount of detective fiction we have read this year. In plot, in timing of climaxes, in sheer writing skill it is a fine, intense book." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p10m My 11 '29 50w

" 'Murder by the Clock' belongs very near the top of the list of this season's detective stories."

+ N Y Times p20 My 5 '29 200w

"Less than twelve hours, vibrant with suspense, are required for the story to complete its course, and there is not a minute of that time in which something vital, gripping, bewildering is not going on."

+ N Y World p7m Je 2 '29 280w

"An extremely well written thriller. This is one of the three best detective stories we have read during the past year." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 152:158 My 22 '29 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p421 My 23 '29 200w

KING, STODDARD. Listen to the mocking-bird. 111p $1.50 Doubleday, Doran

811 28-23324

Witty poems many of which have seen previous publication.

---

"The verses are for enjoyment purposes only; the author's elevation of the brow and nose is normal, and when he writes:

I often wish that I could be
A really first-class Pharisee;
Rejoicing, every now and then,
That I am not as other men

one knows very well that he is spoofing."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 N 25 '28 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Ja '29

"He does it well, he does it neatly,
He carols fluently and sweetly,
In simple strains without pretense
Uniting laughter, love and sense.
Come, springalds gay and doffers doddered,
And listen to the song of Stoddard!" Arthur Guiterman
+ Sat R of Lit 5:540 D 22 '28 120w

KING-HALL, STEPHEN. Child's story of civilization. 348p il $3 Morrow

909 Civilization—History 28-23290

Narrates the history of human development and progress in a manner suitable for children of ten or over.

---

Booklist 25:171 Ja '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p48 Mr '29

"One would wager a large sum that almost any child would prefer Mr. H. G. Wells, and certainly Hendrik van Loon."
— Nation 127:554 N 21 '28 70w

Nation and Ath 43:304 Je 2 '28 450w

"Mr. King-Hall was inadequately equipped to write this book. His style, too, is often wanting. In an effort to make matters simple, he is awkward, he over-emphasizes, he repeats injudiciously. The illustrations are too small to be helpful, and there is an insufficiency of maps." Babette Deutsch
— N Y World p11e Ja 6 '29 620w

"It is an extremely creditable effort, and achieves a distinct measure of success. Mr. King-Hall starts off cheerfully with 'Hullo!' instead of 'Dear Hilary,' but the child who notices that he is being treated as a child may resent it. On the other hand the book is sincere, intelligent, and calculated to provoke further interest."
+ — Sat R 145:775 Je 16 '28 220w

"Charmingly written, evidently for a very real small person, this story reveals a kinship of the whole world that no historian can achieve who merely pieces together interesting bits of national histories and calls it world history. . . It is, however, world destiny seen from the point of view of an Englishman, a travelled, tolerant, exceedingly well-informed Englishman, but none the less British—and the effort to adapt the book to American children very nearly spoils it completely!" E. R. Lucke
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:635 Ja 26 '29 620w

"Undeniably these historical sketches in simple language are clever. The most valuable part of the book is not the letters themselves but the very delightful notes at the end, which brim over with new ideas and jolly plans for enthralling and captivating the childish imagination along useful lines."
+ — Spec 140:684 My 5 '28 210w

KINGSFORD-SMITH, CHARLES E., and ULM, CHARLES T. P. Flight of the Southern Cross; with a foreword by Lord Stonehaven (Eng title Great trans-Pacific flight). 295p il $2.50 McBride [12s 6d Hutchinson]

629.13 Aeronautics—Flights 29-2900

The spirited story of the transpacific flight of the "Southern Cross" from Oakland, Cal. to Brisbane, Australia, via Honolulu and Suva.

---

Booklist 25:348 Je '29

"Though the book is most readably written, there is much in it that could be used by any would-be ocean pilot as a book of reference. But for the benefit of the general public the co-authors have given us delightful popular explanations of the various technicalities." Lady Heath
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Mr 10 '29 900w

"It is well written in a third person style, permeated with the realism of first hand experience." D. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 13 '29 600w

"It is a worthy as well as a thrilling account of a remarkable flight."
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 24 '29 690w

"They have not only recorded the facts, they have also made a sincere attempt to describe their mental and emotional reactions throughout the flight, and the result is an extremely interesting book."
+ Nation and Ath 45:82 Ap 20 '29 200w

"Any sort of book about such a flight would be readable; this book, beside being exciting, is well proportioned, really informative, and full of that combination of imaginative energy and hard sense which drove the authors first to extract their financial backing from a comically dubious business world, and then to plan the flight with such sensible thoroughness that they snatched a victory in the face of very formidable odds."
+ New Statesman 32:768 Mr 23 '29 560w

N Y Times p16 F 17 '29

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Ap '29 70w

"The account of the actual flight is written at high speed, as befits flying men; it is vivacious and readable."
+ Sat R 147:438 Mr 30 '29 260w

KINGSMILL, HUGH. Return of William Shakespeare. 332p $2.50 Bobbs [7s 6d Duckworth]

Shakespeare in fiction, drama, poetry, etc. 29-20647

"The idea [of the book] is the 'reintegration' of human beings; that is, the restoration to life of a dead person, in a duplicate body (not the old one resurrected), at any desired moment of the deceased's life. This is actually achieved by a scientific adventurer named Butt; and the first person to be duplicated is Shakespeare. Next, an elaborate programme of exploitation is prepared by Butt's associates, Gustavus Melmoth and Guy Porter, including a broadcast by the poet of 'To Be or Not To Be' from the battlements of Elsinore, and 'two hundred handshakes at £250 each.' This programme falls prematurely into the hands of a daily paper, with disastrous results."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Unfortunately, the author has taken all of his idea that makes sense and sewed it up in sailcloth and weighted it with lead and thrown it overboard. . . Never was a clearer case of insulting the small natural audience of a book by a vapid attempt to reach a vast audience with material hopelessly unadapted to it. First the form kills the ready-made interest of a thousand good readers; then the substance clamors for the yawns of ten thousand bad ones." Wilson Follett
— Bookm 70:446 D '29 280w

KINGSMILL, HUGH—Continued

"To a Shakespeare student this discussion may be interesting, to the ordinary reader both the discussion and the man are likely to seem dull."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 D 8 '29 100w

"If his re-integration of Shakespeare's body is far less plausibe than his reconstruction of the mind, that is only to say that the trival part of the book remains trivial. The pith is sound."

+ — Sat R 148:421 O 12 '29 470w

"A good idea is nearly spoiled by the determination to be 'smart' at all costs—at the cost, at any rate, of wearying the reader. . . Mr. Kingsmill's cleverness cannot be denied; but if it were flaunted a little less triumphantly his books would benefit by the sacrifice."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p820 O 17 '29 290w

KINGSTON, CHARLES. Guilty house. 310p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Lane]

29-5963

In the guilty house, which was situated in an English suburban district, lived Rendle Gray, his wife Sybil, and their daughter Avalon. A murdered tramp was found in their garden and Inspector Cooper determined to locate the murderer in the community. Who was the tramp, and what was his connection with the proud, haughty Rendle Gray? The first question Inspector Cooper answered after a few days; the second, never.

---

"Thrilling in a quiet way."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 10 '29 100w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:520 Mr 27 '29 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p809 N 1 '28 180w

KIRCHER, RUDOLF. Englander (Eng title Powers and pillars); the public men of England through a German's eyes; tr. from the German by Constance Vesey (with revisions and additions). 310p il $5 Collins

923.2 Great Britain—Biography. Statesmen, British

"Mr. Kircher has been for many years the London correspondent of a great German newspaper. His volume contains not only the stock political figures,—Lord Balfour and the late Lord Oxford, Mr. Baldwin and Mr. MacDonald, Mr. Churchill and Mr. Lloyd George, Sir Austen Chamberlain and Mr. J. H. Thomas; but there are also sketches of other figures who are perhaps less prominent in the public eye—of Dean Inge and Bertrand Russell, of Lord Reading and Lord Bearsted, of Mr. McKenna and Mr. Montagu Norman, of Lady Astor and Jack Hobbs."—Living Age

---

"If Mr. Kircher, who is the London correspondent of the 'Frankfurter Zeitung,' has any German prejudices or resentments about English politics or English leaders, there is no evidence of it in this book of entertaining and acute character sketches. His easy and epigrammatic style, too, fits very well with his apparent purpose to distinguish between what is superficial and what is ingrained in the characters of the thirty-odd personages whom he passes in review." W: MacDonald

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 28 '29 430w

Boston Transcript p5 N 3 '28 400w

"In recent years there has been almost an epidemic of character sketches. . . But Powers and Pillars seems to me in many ways the most interesting I have lately read. Mr. Kircher knows England so well that he writes of it with charming wit and sympathy."

+ Living Age 334:1107 Jl '28 700w

"Perhaps English journalists, after reading 'Powers and Pillars,' will talk a bit less officiously about other countries. Mr. Kircher, for all his knowledge, hard work, and intelligence, never quite hits the bull's-eye. He is always a few inches to the right or the left. The superb photographs, however, alone make the book worth while." Francis Birrell

+ — Nation and Ath 43:212 My 19 '28 680w

"Herr Kircher is well informed about English public affairs and keenly interested in the English character; and, since this is the only book of the kind that has come from a German writer of the present generation it is of unusual interest. . . Lord Balfour, Mr. MacDonald, Lord Grey, Mr. J. H. Thomas, Lady Astor and many others are in Herr Kircher's gallery, and all alike are sketched with knowledge and acumen."

+ New Statesman 31:supxvi My 19 '28 250w

"Herr Kircher's is pure journalism but has the great interest of telling English people how our outstanding men strike this clever correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung. He deals with all sorts of persons, financiers, pressmen, and Mr. Jack Hobbs; but it is chiefly a study of the rulers. He says many shrewd things and sums up our attitude towards the Jewish question in an excellent and highly sympathetic sketch of Lord Reading. The photographs are excellent."

+ Spec 140:733 My 12 '28 80w

KIRKLAND, WINIFRED MARGARETTA (JAMES PRICEMAN, pseud.). Great conjecture; who is this Jesus? 132p $1.25 Holt

232 Jesus Christ 29-13313

A study in practical Christianity. The book is not only a personal confession of faith, but an analysis of the meaning of the life of Jesus applied to modern life. The Jesus of history, of experience, of adventure, and of the resurrection is the theme of her book.

---

"Some years ago Winifred Kirkland revealed the profundity of her mind in meditating upon the problems of religion in her book 'Chaos and a Creed,' published under a pseudonym. Her latest effort in the field of religious thought, an appreciation of the personality of Jesus in vital religion, is no less satisfying. It is the credo of a modern mystic with such a scorn for the creeds of the past that she is tempted into an almost insupportable depreciation of the Middle Ages, but with such a hold upon the essentials of religion, which the creeds sometimes obscured and sometimes imperfectly declared, that her confessions become the finest kind of a refutation of the timid and frantic orthodoxy which holds to insupportable dogmas lest religious vitality be destroyed." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 S 22 '29 550w

"The book is not a persuasion; it is simply an explanation of the faith held by one whose place in the intellectual world is assured, and whose philosophy of life is too sane not to win the respect and approval of all who are out on the quest for the fundamental verities of human experience." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 13 '29 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p151 D '29

KIRKPATRICK, EDWIN ASBURY. Fundamentals of child study; a discussion of instinct trends and other factors in human development with practical applications. 4th ed rev 410p $2 Macmillan

136.7 Child study 29-9851

"Kirkpatrick's Fundamentals of Child Study has been used as a standard textbook in normal schools ever since its first publication in 1903. The book was revised in 1907 and again in 1916. The author has recently prepared a fourth edition, which includes some new material and brings certain chapters up to date. . . The author discusses the growth of the child in five major stages, which begin with birth and with the ages of two, four, six, and twelve. A new discussion of personality development and mental hygiene has been introduced."—El School J

---

Booklist 26:83 N '29

"On the whole, the book has been considerably improved by the revision. However, the general changes in the field of child study have been so great that one questions the advisability of attempting to meet present needs by a revision of a book first published twenty-six years ago. The book as it now stands lacks the earmarks of a scientific treatment of the problem and does not present the student with a body of objective facts, such as might have been obtained from the present literature. The book will doubtless have its chief value for those who have been using the previous edition and who prefer a revision of the book to an entirely new treatment of the subject."

— + El School J 30:236 N '29 260w

KIRKPATRICK, ELLIS LORE. Farmer's standard of living. (Century rural life bks.) 299p $2 Century

630.1 Farm life. Cost and standard of living. Country life. Agriculture—Economic aspects 29-3417

A study of the standard and cost of living of farmers in various parts of the country, written by an economist of the United States department of agriculture, and based on six years' scientific study of the subject.

Reviewed by C. C. Zimmerman
Am J Soc 35:498 N '29 600w
Booklist 25:308 My '29
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 27 '29 420w

"Out of a background rich with study and first-hand experience in farm life, Mr. Kirkpatrick has recorded and commented upon facts, valuable, as he suggests, 'for research workers, teachers, and students, and for general readers, farm people especially, who are concerned about the present or future status of American agriculture.' . . The book fills a long-felt need for something concrete in this field where opinions are legion and facts are few." Lita Bane
+ J Home Econ 21:368 My '29 320w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:20 Mr '29 120w

Reviewed by Hazel Kyrk
Survey 62:455 Jl 15 '29 260w
Wis Lib Bul 25:98 Mr '29

KIRSH, BENJAMIN SOLLOW. Trade associations; the legal aspects. 271p $5 Central bk. co.

338.7 Trade and professional associations 28-23783

"In large part the text consists of previously published magazine articles which have been brought up to date by the author's own remarks. The book covers statistics, uniform cost accounting methods, credit bureau functions, foreign trade functions, collective purchasing and the restriction of distribution."—Eng N

"The volume under review contains nothing new about the nature or status of trade associations. . . No logical order appears in the arrangement of the chapters. . . The book is replete with footnotes and citations, reference being made in some way or other to practically everything that has been written or said about trade associations. On this account, the volume should prove a convenient reference work for business executives and lawyers who have real problems to solve in making trade coöperation an effective and fruitful arm of business administration. If the digestive function had only kept pace with the foraging instinct, however, this might have been a better book." M. W. Watkins
— + Am Econ R 19:130 Mr '29 900w

"It is one of the few books of recent years that emphasise the need for treating each anti-trust case upon its merits because of the great variation in the facts from case to case." R. O.
Am Pol Sci R 23:516 My '29 150w

"The statements of the law are exceedingly clear and explicit and are well condensed. Throughout the work the author gives not only the decisions of courts but also the views of economists." J. T. Young
+ Ann Am Acad 141:273 Ja '29 320w

"Although the legal problems arising from the federation of independent business units is the primary concern of this book, enough of the basic economics and business settings in which all legal problems are enveloped is given to make the book readable and more easily practicable to use."
Eng N 101:930 D 20 '28 120w

"The author's training as Special Assistant to the United States Attorney in New York gives this book a direct value for lawyers representing trade associations. Cost-accounting methods, interchange of patents, foreign trade and collective purchasing functions are discussed in a practical manner in the light of the confused state of the law."
+ Nation 127:579 N 28 '29 100w

KITAZAWA, NAOKICHI. Government of Japan; ed. with an introd. by William Starr Myers. 130p $1.75 Princeton univ. press [9s Milford]

354.52 Japan—Politics and government 29-10678

" 'The Government of Japan' has its inception in papers prepared for an advanced course at Princeton. In its present form it is a clear, simple description of the machinery of national and local government in Japan. It is written objectively with practically no attempt either to defend or to blame."—Sat R of Lit

"The author exhibits real knowledge of his country's government, though the value of his explanatory remarks is diminished by their brevity. Throughout, comparisons with features of other governments are suggested, but without the analysis of contrasts that would render them enlightening." H. S. Quigley
— + Am Pol Sci R 23:773 Ag '29 650w
Booklist 25:345 Je '29

"One might complain that Mr. Kitazawa's viewpoint is somewhat static, that he expounds the legal situation rather than analyzes the processes of change, but the fact remains that nowhere else is there available in English so convenient a summarization of the role of local government in Japan, the relations of the two houses of Parliament to each other, to the Cabinet, to the Emperor, and to the political parties, and of the roles of the judiciary."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 F 17 '29 120w

"The author's exposition of the structure of the Japanese political system is so simple and lucid that it makes easy reading, and so instinct with the spirit of the people who have evolved it that it is also vital and colorful, while his thorough acquaintance with the subject is so evident that one does not need Dr. Myers's assurance that the work is scholarly and sound."
+ N Y Times p10 F 24 '29 350w

"As an introduction to the subject for Americans no better book has appeared in English." K. S. Latourette
+ Sat R of Lit 5:778 Mr 16 '29 50w

"Mr. Kitazawa's book should supply a long-felt demand. It is, on the whole, well done, and the work may safely be recommended to the student and even to the general reader."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p246 Mr 21 '29 130w

KITE, ELIZABETH S., comp. L'Enfant and Washington, 1791-1792; published and unpublished documents now brought together for the first time; introd. by J. J. Jusserand; foreword by Charles Moore. (Historical documents. Institut français de Washington) 182p $3 Johns Hopkins

975.3 Washington, D.C.—History. L'Enfant, Pierre Charles 29-11524

"Miss Kite has assembled in this handsomely-printed quarto volume a mass of documentary material, much of it hitherto unpublished, relating to L'Enfant and his plan for a national capital, and has included, by way of introduction, the excellent biographical sketch of L'Enfant which former Ambassador Jusserand published in 1916. It is generally known that L'Enfant was chosen by Washington to plan the new Federal city, that he was dismissed from office before the execution of his plan had much more than begun, and that his plan was revived and made the basis of the work of the national commission to which, in 1901, the replanning of the capital was entrusted."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

KITE, E. S., comp.—Continued

Reviewed by W: MacDonald
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 S 15 '29 500w

"L'Enfant's monument is our national capital, and this historical study should remove any reproach that has been attached to his name because of his persistence to an idea—a vision, now, we hope, about to see its fulfillment." G. H. S.
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '29 750w

The value of these documents—including some letters of L'Enfant's [which have] not been printed before—is not lessened because the reader cannot always agree with the editor's interpretation of them. However, the full story would require a monograph, and it is to be hoped that one will some day appear."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 My 11 '29 1200w

KITSON, HARRY DEXTER, ed. Commercial education in secondary schools. 374p $2.20 Ginn

650.7 Business education 29-2462

Each chapter in the book takes up one subject in the commercial course of the secondary school, and written by an expert, discusses that subject on a scientific basis from the standpoint of modern business needs and how to fit the student to meet them. The book is for teachers and administrators.

Booklist 25:308 My '29

"The book is a valuable addition to the present literature in commercial education. It should be of value not only to students, teachers, and supervisors of commercial education but also to administrators of secondary schools. It is an excellent presentation of commercial education in secondary schools." W. W. Meyer
+ School R 37:473 Je '29 420w

KITTEL, RUDOLF. Great men and movements in Israel; auth. tr. by Charlotte A. Knoch and C. D. Wright. 465p $5 Macmillan

221.9 Bible. Old Testament—Biography. Jews—History 29-8814

Dr Kittel of the University of Leipzig writes of Old Testament heroes, the causes they espoused and the mark they made upon the history of mankind.

Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '29 500w

Reviewed by L. W. Batten
Churchman 140:5 Ag 17 '29 80w

"Behind this volume lie long years of critical work and though popular, it presents the mature results of the author's work in his chosen field. . . Here is an epitome of Israel's history in which the writer turns our attention to the sunlit pinnacles of Old Testament revelation. It would make good summer reading and should furnish the pastor with many worth-while suggestions for his pulpit ministry." I. G. Matthews
+ Crozer Q 6:359 Jl '29 330w

"The book as a whole is a valuable contribution to English literature upon the Old Testament. Professor Kittel represents a cautious and conservative branch of the critical school and it is well that we have the views of such a master in such accessible form. The translation is very well done, but it is marred by a large number of odd spellings and errors, due to the translators' apparent lack of familiarity with Old Testament names." J. M. P. Smith
+ J Religion 9:465 Jl '29 880w

"Professor Kittel's studies are, of course, scholarly and complete and make up in authority what they lack in that faked-up aroma of newsiness seemingly so much in demand in contemporary biography." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p9m My 18 '29 110w
St Louis 27:304 N '29

"Prof. Kittel takes a large view of Israel's national life, and by his vigorous delineation of character, as well as by the light of his intimate knowledge of the social, political and religions conditions among the Jews, he is able to give new force to many Old Testament records."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p878 O 31 '29 280w

KITTENBERGER, KALMAN. Big game hunting and collecting in East Africa, 1903-1926. 348p il $7.50 Longmans [25s E. Arnold]

799.2 Hunting—Africa. Zoology—Africa. Africa, East

The story of a big game hunting expedition made in 1925 with Mr Eugene Horthy, in East Africa. The purpose of this, as of a previous expedition, was to obtain specimens for the Hungarian natural history museum. The book is full of observations on wild life, and of anecdotes and incidents in connection with the hunting and shooting or capturing of lions, elephants, buffaloes, leopards, giraffes, zebras, and monkeys.

"The author of this book is a born hunter and naturalist, able to tell a tale worthy of a place beside the works of Gordon Cumming, Samuel Baker, and Selous."
+ Sat R 148:552 N 9 '29 200w

"The author was many years in the country, and yet nearly all the native names for animals are misspelt, and in general all native words are travesties of their real selves. . . There is nothing new in the author's pseudo-scientific observations, and his statements are often fallacious. . .The photographs are the one redeeming feature."
— Spec 143:695 N 9 '29 160w

KITTREDGE, GEORGE LYMAN. Witchcraft in old and New England. 641p $6 Harvard univ. press

133.4 Witchcraft 29-6482

"Such a book as this, so fully annotated and authoritatively conceived, cannot but be extremely important in the study of the progress of the human race. There are questions handled here that run deeper than the superficial aspects of witchcraft, fundamental truths concerning the superstitions of man and his blind and frightened reactions to the earth and the Time-Spirit. . . A tolerant and understanding analysis of witchcraft in old and New England, a treasure-trove stuffed with hundreds of facts and citations and bulwarked by 223 pages of notes giving authorities for every statement he puts forward. All of this material is woven into a steadily moving narrative."—N Y Times

"After so many hasty and misleading books on witchcraft and its history, it is a joy to turn the scholarly pages of Professor Kittredge. Equipped by years of study and giving for his every statement his authorities, he has here garnered the whole wealth of literary allusion to the presence, in lands of English speech, of the beliefs and practices loosely known under the name of witchcraft." G: L. Burr
+ Am Hist R 34:814 Jl '29 1700w

Booklist 25:306 My '29

"Eminent American scholars like Mr. Kittredge believe the amassing of facts to be the chief end of scholarship rather than the interpretation of these facts in other than historical relationships. This book is, therefore, not for the general reader, though anyone interested in witchcraft would find much to delight and to inform him." Ralph and Louise Boas

Bookm 69:331 My '29 560w

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 14 '29 1250w

Reviewed by Edmund Noble
Boston Transcript p8 Mr 9 '29 2400w

Reviewed by Clarence Britten
N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 13 '29 900w

"Here is a definitive study and examination that reveals distinguished scholarship, pragmatic common sense, and the most cogent reasoning. It is, as its title implies, confined geographically to Great Britain and Puritan New England; but, within those limits, it yet manages to present the most complete and convincing picture of a horrid superstition that has ever appeared." Herbert Gorman
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 17 '29 2000w

Reviewed by Raphael McCord
N Y World p11m Ap 14 '29 350w

"Professor Kittredge's stout volume is a monument of scholarship and by all odds the most important book on witchcraft that has appeared for a long time." S. F. Damon
+ Sat R of Lit 5:904 Ap 20 '29 1250w

"A most authoritative book on English witchcraft. Prof George Lyman Kittredge's recent magnificent study of the subject throws light on the mental history of the whole human race, as well as on that of our English and American forefathers. . . The notes to the successive chapters—223 pages of fine print placed at the end of the book—give precise references to authorities supplying the citation and additional information. The superb organization of such a mass of collected information is characteristic of Mr Kittredge's handling of any subject. Within the chapters there is untrammeled forward movement toward a goal clearly seen. The reader is ever aware of being in the most competent of hands." D. Foster
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '29 2000w

Wis Lib Bul 25:157 My '29

"It is a story told with the grace and skill that the author has acquired in years of patient study. Connections are traced from place to place, from family to family, with meticulous care; argument follows argument in imposing order. The book must impress every reader by its weight and learning, but cannot satisfy any who look beyond the brilliance of the author's technique to the cogency of his argument." F. G. Marcham
+ — Yale R n s 19:190 autumn '29 630w

KIVI, ALEXIS, pseud. See Stenvall, A.

KLAIN, ZORA. Educational activities of New England Quakers; a source book. 288p $3.50 Westbrook

377.8 Friends, Society of. Education—New England 28-21874

"Dr. Klain has searched the old Quaker record-books with care and patience and he has presented from original sources the slow but steady growth of Quaker education in the New England colonies, and the great expansion of educational facilities and equipment in the nineteenth century."—Am Hist R

---

"The author has done his work well and those who are seeking for facts about the beginnings of educational methods in the New England colonies will prize this book." R. M. Jones
+ Am Hist R 34:402 Ja '29 280w

"A distinct service has been rendered to those students who desire primary source material in their study of the Quaker schools in New England from the earliest colonial times to the present by the compilation into one book of the sources available. The information contained in the study was obtained for the most part from the minutes of Quaker meetings, and it has been carefully set forth without personal bias." T. E. Strevey
+ School R 37:235 Mr '29 520w

KLAPPER, PAUL. Contemporary education; its principles and practices. 660p $2.40 Appleton

370.1 Education. Sociology. Physical education and training. Vocational education. Psychology, Educational. Teaching 29-13162

"The purpose of this book is to coördinate the accepted principles of social and psychological studies and to indicate their significance for education to-day. The study of contemporary education is set forth in five parts. After an introductory analysis of aims and objectives, the practices of physical education are presented. The succeeding parts deal with sociological, economic, and mental aspects in the process of adjustment. The lessons of physiology, mental hygiene, psychology, biology, sociology, and economics are integrated and unified in an attempt to formulate the principles of educational practice." (Preface)

---

Booklist 26:55 N '29

"The book is apparently offered as a new one. No mention is made of the author's earlier work, Principles of Educational Practice, which was published in 1912 when the author was an instructor in the college where he is now dean. The more recent book is obviously an outgrowth of the former. The two books follow the same general outline, and sections of the context are identical. The reproduced material has been carefully edited, and the present book represents a revised and enlarged edition of the old, with an attractive new title. . . The author would undoubtedly have written a better book if he had been somewhat less influenced by his earlier work. The difficulty of adapting one's early ideas to more mature concepts is the same difficulty which one experiences in attempting to adapt tradition-laden school practices to modern conditions." D. E. Scates

El School J 30:309 D '29 1300w

"To the reader who is looking for new developments and original contributions in the field of education, this book has little to offer except an analytical and somewhat unique point of view. It contains no new theories, no new methods, and no new data. As a comparative study of educational theory and practice, however, the book is a valuable contribution." I. A. Booker

School R 37:792 D '29 950w

KLARWILL, VICTOR, ed. Queen Elizabeth and some foreigners; being a series of hitherto unpublished letters from the archives of the Hapsburg family; auth. tr. by T. H. Nash. 439p il $5 Brentano's [18s Lane]

B or 92 Elizabeth, queen of England. Europe —Politics. Hapsburg, House of [28-30274]

"The Vienna State archives, relieved now of the strict censorship exercised by the Hapsburg family, have yielded a store of sixteenth-century documents of the greatest interest. The main bulk of this volume consists of correspondence directly relating to the courtship of Queen Elizabeth on behalf of the Archduke Charles of Austria."—Nation and Ath

---

"The interest and value to historians of this collection of documents are very great."
+ Bookm 68:xvi F '29 120w

"The story is as entertaining as it is informing." W: MacDonald
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ja 27 '29 580w

Boston Transcript p2 F 2 '29 480w

Reviewed by Sylva Norman
Nation and Ath 43:624 Ag 11 '28 720w

"This volume is interestingly and very plentifully illustrated, but the translation and editing are not wholly above reproach."
+ — Sat R 146:19 Jl 7 '28 630w

KLARWILL, VICTOR, ed—Continued

"The letters afford an interesting picture of the times: they show us the impression which Elizabethan England made on these distinguished foreign visitors from the great Courts of Europe; and they give us a considerable insight into the extraordinary intrigues which ramified through the Europe of that date, and which turned, half on high theological doctrines, and half on match-making intrigues of the Sovereigns."

+ Spec 141:21 J1 7 '28 1000w

"The material is genuine, the evidence is good, and it adds considerably to our knowledge of some of the minor episodes in diplomatic history. The translation is clearly the work of a hand more expert in modern than in classical languages, nor is the editor very conversant with the history, conditions or personnel of Elizabeth's government. . . There is not a reference throughout the book, and the attempts to identify personages are often grotesque."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p561 Ag 2 '28 1450w

KLAUDER, CHARLES ZELLER, and WISE, HERBERT CLIFTON. College architecture in America and its part in the development of the campus. 301p il $5 Scribner

727.3 College architecture. Architecture—United States 29-12161

A survey of the development of college architecture in the United States. There are chapters, fully illustrated, on administration and academic buildings, libraries, chapels and auditoriums, men's dormitories, women's dormitories, dining-halls and cafeterias, buildings for the natural sciences, heating plants, art buildings and museums and structures for athletics. The authors in collecting their material visited some seventy institutions.

Booklist 26:20 O '29

Boston Transcript p2 S 11 '29 380w

St Louis 27:336 D '29

"An exceedingly thoughtful, compact and well-organized treatise on the more practical phases of a subject both practical and esthetic. Mr Klauder is a specialist in academic architecture, and some years ago received the gold medal of the Architectural League of New York for his buildings at Princeton."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 My 30 '29 850w

KLEIN, JOSEPH JEROME. Federal income taxation. $10 Wiley

336.24 Income tax—United States. Taxation—United States—Law 29-6032

A treatise covering the entire field of federal income tax procedure, based on lectures given by the author at the Collge of the City of New York. Designed for both tax practitioner and the tax novice.

"The somewhat forbidding aspect of this ponderous 2,400 page volume is not borne out by its perusal. It is in fact a distinctly readable book. As compared with other federal income-tax manuals, the attitude is less critical than some, while less formally legalistic than others. . . As a manual, the book is comprehensive, exhaustive, logically arranged, and clearly expressed. It should make a place for itself on its merits." F. R. Fairchild

+ Am Econ R 19:508 S '29 400w

Booklist 26:12 O '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:191 Je '29

"A masterly summary of the entire field in compact form. . . Dr. Klein bases his statements in a scholarly manner upon the statutes and decided cases. Beyond this he confines his comment in larger part to an indication of undecided or new points. This makes the work useful in that the reader does not need to struggle between the mere opinion of the author and what may be taken to be the present state of the law on any particular point. It is rather a triumph for Dr. Klein that he has accomplished this without making the style of his text unattractive." G: E. Frazer

+ Yale Law J 39:142 N '29 480w

KLEIN, JULIUS. Frontiers of trade; with a foreword by Herbert Hoover. 328p $2.50 Century

382 Commerce. United States—Commerce 29-9473

International commerce, the relation of American trade problems to world conditions, and the business methods and foreign trade of individual countries are the subjects studied by the author in the three sections of the book. In the foreword President Hoover says of Dr Klein: "There is no one so able to present this record or whose judgment of plans for the future is so well grounded."

Booklist 25:379 Jl '29

"The whole question of our foreign trade is adequately discussed, along with its outlook for the future. The author is in an admirable position to analyze methods, to prophesy results. He makes the most of his opportunities."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 22 '29 150w

"Dr. Klein's success in this difficult field is not due merely to his exceptional acquaintance with the subjects about which he writes, although he has few rivals in this respect, but rather to a sure sense of the relative importance of things, a preference for the broad view wherever an intensive exposition is not required, and an exceptionally readable style. . . As a summary view of the world trade situation his book deserves a cordial welcome." W: MacDonald

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 21 '29 2050w

"An admirable exposition of America's foreign trade problems and policies." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:10 Je '29 110w

St Louis 27:195 Je '29

"It is a handbook, a fact book, untroubled with deep philosophical import, seldom touching the ugly underlying currents of imperialism, and the competitive scrambles for foreign markets which may some day boil up in warfare. The theme is essentially sweetness and light, and what a great, splendid nation we have, and great splendid president, and great, splendid Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce." Stuart Chase

Sat R of Lit 5:1111 Je 15 '29 1000w

World Tomorrow 12:348 Ag '29 50w

KNIBBS, STANLEY GEORGE CURTHOYS. Savage Solomons as they were & are; a record of a head-hunting people gradually emerging from a life of savage cruelty & bloody customs, with a description of their manners & ways & of the beauties & potentialities of the islands. 282p il $5 Lippincott [21s Seeley, S.]

919.35 Solomon Islands 29-26485

A pleasant, informal narrative of native ways of life, past and present, in the Solomon Islands where the author is Commissioner of lands in the British protectorate. With many illustrations from photographs.

Booklist 25:355 Je '29

Bookm 70:xviii S '29 360w

"While not remarkable for their insight, these chapters are informative and entertaining."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Ap 21 '29 170w

"Mr. Knibbs has an easy conversational style that is not often associated with books of travel. Nothing is too trivial for him to record if it possesses interest or humorous appeal, and the naive, childlike nature of the natives is interpreted thoroughly and sympathetically." J. C. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 6 '29 500w

"Mr. Knibbs's book on the Solomon Islands is in the direct tradition of the Kipling school. We find all the accustomed banalities. There are the child-like natives who must be treated fairly but firmly, there are the dominant whites who are bringing peace and prosperity, and finally there is the British Government brooding over its creation like a benevolent deity. The atmosphere of this book is that of the Boy Scout movement—energetic, genial, sporting, and immature."

— Nation and Ath 44:762 Mr 2 '29 180w

"The book is a conscientious record of the author's journeys about the islands, with his observations on native sights and customs, but it has no particular literary merit."

New Statesman 32:676 Mr 2 '29 200w

"Plenty of information amusingly conveyed." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p19m Mr 16 '29 120w

"This is a tale marred in the telling. There is a great deal of interesting material in the Solomon Islands. But the book is an undigested mass of anecdotes, descriptions of trips to various islands, and accounts of native customs; none of it is very weighty—except to read."

— Sat R of Lit 5:938 Ap 20 '29 150w

"Mr. Knibbs does not penetrate far below the surface, but, modest though his account is, it is written with an infectious good humour which at once puts us at our ease with the islanders. There are many good stories both of natives and Europeans."

Spec 142:623 Ap 20 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p153 F 28 '29 380w

KNIPE, EMILIE (BENSON) (MRS ALDEN ARTHUR KNIPE), and KNIPE, ALDEN ARTHUR. Story of Old Ironsides; the cradle of the United States navy; with an introd. by William Sims. 321p il $3 Dodd

973 Constitution (frigate). United States—History, Naval 28-29393

Joe's grandfather is building a model of the Constitution. He enlists Joe's help, and as they work together on the replica of the famous frigate, the old man tells his grandson the story of Old Ironsides.

Booklist 25:289 Ap '29

Boston Transcript p6 D 8 '28 150w

"The story is pleasantly told, and a boy of twelve to fifteen should find it very readable. It might have made a still more vivid historical picture if something had been said of what life on a frigate was like a century ago, especially for the mid-shipmen—their sleeping quarters, food, duties, and recreation. Also, perhaps, more about the armament of the period, what the guns were like, and how they were served in battle might have been included." W. O. Stevens

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:812 Mr 23 '29 250w

Wis Lib Bul 25:77 F '29

KNISTER, RAYMOND. White narcissus. 250p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Cape]

29-15565

A Canadian story of a sinister family named Lethen in which the daughter, Ada, stood as a buffer between her almost insane father and mother. Mrs Lethen had a craze for white narcissus which she grew by the dozen, in the house. When Ada's lover appealed to his would-be mother-in-law to plead his cause with Ada, the father in a frenzy broke the countless narcissus bowls. This instead of precipitating a riot, broke the tension, and so they lived happily ever afterwards.

"Whether symbolic or realistic, an atmosphere of gloom such as Mr. Knister has attempted to create through two hundred odd pages is very difficult to achieve. Especially difficult to manipulate, granted that such an atmosphere has been successfully sustained, is the convincing ray of sunshine which shall clear away the clouds. The author's intentions are clear, but he requires more technical skill to realize them."

— + Bookm 70:xxx O '29 170w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 O 20 '29 220w

Boston Transcript p6 N 2 '29 400w

Reviewed by Cyril Connolly

New Statesman 32:137 F 23 '29 90w

"A first novel of very considerable charm. It is a supremely atmospheric story, in which dark and introspective moods are developed and elaborated somewhat at the expense of the plot. Mr. Knister's prose is an excellent medium for the expression of his emotional attitudes; it never flags and never becomes clogged or difficult. The result is a novel of memorable color, and of regrettably thin substance. . . If the symbolism upon which it is based seems, at times, a little awkward and obvious, it has at least the merit of consistency."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 25 '29 450w

"There is something ambitious and earnest about this book, although it does not quite 'come off,' that makes one believe Mr. Knister may write an excellent novel one day."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p164 F 28 '29 320w

KNITTEL, JOHN. Nile gold; a legend of modern Egypt. 322p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Heinemann]

29-18943

Walter Beam, a young archeologist, discovers the ancient Egyptian tomb of Queen Nitocris, whose history he had loved since boyhood. Knocked senseless by an accident in the tomb, Walter in his ensuing delirium finds himself living as an Egyptian king, with Nitocris his bride. When he wakes from his illness, Walter prevents science from acquiring possession of the mummy of Nitocris, because of his love for her.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 29 '29 120w

"Mr. Knittel has the story-telling instinct. He gets the reader into the thrill of this particular legend with facility. . . Its chief defect is that in spite of Mr. Knittel's abilities to spin glamorous fables, it proceeds in a jerky manner. The reader often finds the thread of the narrative too complicated to follow easily."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 N 13 '29 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p341 Ap 25 '29 200w

KNOX, ANN. Vallejo Kitty. 321p $2.50 Century

From prostitute to peeress is the theme of this story. Kitty is beautiful, sensitive, and far above the indelicacies of her trade. She saves money, however—enough to escape and travel to England. Here she is introduced to the society of lords and ladies, and marries the adventuresome son of Lord Stamford.

Bookm 70:xxxi O '29 40w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 S 1 '29 280w

"It is a good story, vividly told, and Kitty is a very taking 'Bad Girl,' even though one may feel she is a bit too startlingly intelligent and adaptable in England." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p7m S 7 '29 230w

"The characters of the period are too crude and blatant, and the colloquialisms are too obvious adaptations of English idioms, to denote intimate knowledge of America in any era. When the story moves to England her touch is surer. Considered merely as a narrative the book is readable."

— + Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '29 200w

KNOX, EDMUND GEORGE VALPY (EVOE of PUNCH, pseud.), ed. Mr. Punch on the links. 147p il $2 Henkle [6s Methuen]

827 Golf. Humor 29-16462

"'Evoe' collects the various articles and drawings on the subject of golf that have appeared in Punch during the last few years. Our light-hearted contemporary has ever found in the golfer a figure of infinite fun. Scarcely a number of Punch is published that does not contain at least one golf joke. The subject is

KNOX, E. G: V.—*Continued
scientifically considered by Mr. J. R. Stagg in the opening sketch in this anthology. 'For this sport,' he explains, 'there are three essentials—a boy, a golf-course and two enthusiastic lunatics.' The contributors to a very diverting volume include the names of Sir Owen Seaman, Mr. W. A. Darlington, Mr. Ralph Wotherspoon, Mr. Cyril Bretherton and Mr. Knox himself."—Sat R

"One would have to hate both golf and English humor on the subject of golf in order to get no chuckles out of these pickings from 'Punch' in prose, verse and picture. E. V. Knox ('Evoe') has neatly skimmed the cream, and it speaks much for the editor's discretion that he and Sir Owen Seaman break even in the matter of contribution, each providing four sketches."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p40 D 1 '29 80w

"The book is one that you want to keep at hand and read once, twice or an indefinite number of times, and that means it is really humor."
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '29 100w
Sat R 147:484 Ap 6 '29 110w

"There is plenty of good fun, of the understressed English type, in these pages."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 8 '29 430w

"It cannot be so easy to be funny about golf as it used to be. Time was when the mere word nibblick unadorned was calculated to split the sides, and then there were those jolly little puns about the tee and the caddie. England when golf was still new, was a country fit for jesters to live in. Today they have to work harder; and it is noteworthy that all the authors in this book presume on their readers' part an acquaintance not merely with the broad outlines of golf but with its milder subtleties."
Times [London] Lit Sup p205 Mr 14 '29 560w

KNOX, HOWARD V. Will to be free; a critique of deterministic theory and a vindication of real alternatives in human purpose; with preface by L. P. Jacks, and J. A. Stewart. 237p $4 Dutton [10s 6d Constable]

159 Free will and determinism

The theme of the author is the conception of philosophy as "will-initiated and will sustained." He applies this definition as an attack upon the determinist theory—the will to destroy the will. The doctrines of freedom and necessity are discussed at length in relation to determinism.

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 31 '29 350w
Reviewed by J. C. Meredith
Int J Ethics 39:499 Jl '29 600w
Sat R 147:291 Mr 2 '29 420w

"It is greatly in favour of Captain Knox that his work is prefaced by an admirable and sympathetic appreciation from Dr. L. P. Jacks and Professor J. A. Stewart, who pay a glowing tribute to the moral earnestness of his outlook and suggest that his own faith in free-will may be in the nature of a Pyrrhic victory over 'doubts in the very bases of the soul,' as well, perhaps, as over the by no means obscure opposers whom he claims to have outweighed."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p978 D 13 '28 1450w

KNOX, RONALD ARBUTHNOTT, and HARRINGTON, HENRY, eds. Best English detective stories of 1928. 420p $2.50 Liveright [7s 6d Faber & G.]

Detective stories 29-20892

A number of short detective stories by modern English writers, such as Fletcher, Oppenheim, J. D. Beresford, Agatha Christie, and Maurice Leblanc, selected because of their conformity to the best rules and devices of good detective stories.

"Worthy of the most sophisticated detective-story audience."
+ Bookm 70:xxxiv N '29 20w

"Twenty prime examples of this department's favorite mystery genre—the short or shortish detective narrative. What's more, all of them are well worth perusing." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Hearld Tribune) p14 N 3 '29 170w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p18 O 17 '29 500w

KOBALD, KARL. Franz Schubert and his times; tr. from the German by Beatrice Marshall. 277p il $5 (21s) Knopf

B or 92 Schubert, Franz Peter 29-8929

If this biography is a somewhat gushing account of Schubert as man and artist, it yet paints an excellent picture of his background—the musical Vienna of his day and the circle of friends that gathered around his genius and sang his songs.

"Herr Kobald's approach to his subject is sensitive and sympathetic. One is grateful to him for having approached Schubert and his intimates, first as men, and then, as artists."
+ Bookm 69:xii Mr '29 100w

Reviewed by P: Bowdoin
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Ap 7 '29 280w

"Mr. Kobald tells the story of the composer's life interestingly and with a wealth of detail, but there are many repetitions and some confusing of statements as he unfolds it. He has so much information to give that it is apparently difficult for him to impart it in direct chronicle style. He does, however, succeed, in spite of more or less prolixity, in making a wonderfully vivid figure of Schubert, and he has omitted no important fact regarding his life and work."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 13 '29 200w
New Statesman 32:293 D 8 '28 70w

"Herr Kobald has no new facts to exploit. He attempts by portraying the background of Viennese life, by portraying the friends of Schubert, to set off the figure of Franz Schubert in a more illuminating light. By allowing the letters of Schubert to speak for himself and for his friends, the intimate life of a happy circle of artists is revealed."
+ N Y Times p5 N 3 '29 600w

"Herr Kobald's book sets out to paint a picture of Vienna in the days of Schubert setting the composer in a living environment. But it is unfortunately written in so frothy a style, and the translation is in some respects so untrustworthy, that I confess to having failed to read it right through. When a writer begins his chapter upon Schubert's work with the words: 'If the genius of Schubert as an artist was of a grandeur and prodigality unexampled in the history of music. . . ' we know at once that he has not the beginnings of a knowledge of the meanings of words, nor any sense of proportion." Dyneley Hussey
— Sat R 146:654 N 17 '28 680w

Reviewed by D: S. Smith
Yale R n s 18:585 spring '29 600w

KOBER, AUGUST HEINRICH. Star turns; tr. from the German by G. J. Renier. 223p il $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Douglas]

791.3 Circus

A book about the circus, giving some attention to the history of the circus, and much more to its performers.

Boston Transcript p3 O 16 '29 700w

"This entertaining account of circus ways and means deserves more serious attention than its title and dust-cover together are likely to win for it. Nor should readers be put off by the inappropriate though comic illustrations, but turn at once to the translator's preface, a model of its kind, deft, humorous, and complete. . . Dr. Kober reveals some professional secrets, but not many; the chapters are uneven, but the best are excellent."
+ New Statesman 32:450 Ja 12 '29 150w

"Mr. Renier's translation of a learned German's life in circus-land makes good entertainment. Herr Kober, though a 'fan' of the sawdust, has seen enough of the sordid toils of circus life to spare us the familiar flapdoodle about the romance of the ring. We are let into some of the secrets of music-hall magic and there are intimate portraits of many of the chief circus personalities of the world, including Rastelli."

+ Sat R 147:21 Ja 5 '29 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p936 N 29 '28 350w

KOECHLIN, RAYMOND, and MIGEON, GASTON. Oriental art; ceramics, fabrics, carpets; with introd. and descriptions; tr. by Florence Heywood. 20p 100pl $12.50 Macmillan [30s Benn]

745 Pottery, Oriental. Rugs, Oriental. Textile fabrics 29-6764

Following brief introductory monographs on ceramics by Raymond Koechlin and on fabrics and carpets by Gaston Migeon, the bulk of this fine volume is made up of 100 full page plates in color showing examples of these three branches of oriental art, accompanied by very short descriptive notes in French, English, and German.

---

"The brief essays on the separate subjects will give the reader a certain understanding of the technical aspects of Oriental design, and the beauty of the plates will give endless delight to all lovers of color and line."

+ Outlook 150:1372 D 19 '28 100w

"Almost equally divided between pottery and textiles, the plates are at their best in the former category. The reproductions of rugs are also good, but stuffs remain refractory to the camera and process engraver. The selection of examples is up-to-date and fine. Apart from the informational value of this book, it sets a high standard of quality to which the intelligent collector will do his best to conform."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:669 F 9 '29 250w

"Let us commend unreservedly to collectors and students and even more to designers the magnificent series of coloured plates."

+ Spec 141:sup877 D 8 '28 120w

KOHLER, CARL. History of costume; ed. and aug. by Emma von Sichart; tr. by Alexander K. Dallas. 463p il $7.50 Watt, G. Howard [18s Harrap]

391 Costume—History 29-26370

"This book covers the history of the development of dress throughout the ages from the days of the Egyptians, Hebrews, and Babylonians, etc., to the year 1870. Particular interest lies in the fact that the descriptions have been taken from genuine original costumes, and the idea of posing living individuals in these garments has resulted in many entertaining illustrations. An accurate knowledge of dress and its accessories, in all its phases, is essential to the theatrical producer, and Mr. Kohler's book, in which every type of garment is not merely described but a practical pattern given and measurements supplied, should be a useful addition to his library."—Sat R

---

Booklist 25:308 My '29

"Its particular interest is that it deals with the technical side of the subject—how all these clothes were actually cut, and what materials were used. But the book loses value, to some extent, from the fact that, for the Mediaeval and Renaissance periods, the fullest and most correct information refers to Germany alone."

+ — New Statesman 32:420 Ja 5 '29 220w

N Y Times p20 F 17 '29

"The work is incomplete in that it deals for the most part with German, French, Italian and Spanish costumes, with no mention of English or American periods. But within the limits established by the author it is a thoroughgoing and painstaking piece of work." Rollin Kirby

+ — N Y World p11m My 12 '29 350w

Sat R 146:883 D 29 '28 130w

"The detailed descriptions should interest collectors. For the ordinary reader the style is heavy, as is also the loaded paper on which it is printed."

+ — Spec 142:136 Ja 26 '29 120w

"Costume is an attractive subject, but it is treated here with a painstaking thoroughness that is almost terrifying. Not only have the dresses been photographed on living models, which is all to the good, but they have been, many of them, described in detail, and their exact measurements given. This is an invaluable manual for all who wish to reproduce exactly, for theatrical or fancy-dress purposes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p964 D 6 '28 500w

KOHLER, KAUFMANN. Origins of the synagogue and the church; ed. with a biographical essay by H. G. Enelow. (Kaufmann Kohler memorial volume) 297p $3 Macmillan

296 Jews—Religion. Christianity and other religions—Judaism. Jews—Rites and ceremonies. Church history—Primitive and early church 29-5511

The book opens with a biographical essay on the late Dr Kohler's life and work. Then follows Dr Kohler's study of the worship and practices of Judaism and the establishment of the synagogue, and in part two a study of Christianity and the relation of church to synagogue.

---

"All in all it is the work of an able and well-read scholar which will be read with interest by Jews and Christians." E. G. H. Kraeling

+ — Am Hist R 34:865 Jl '29 420w

"It is extremely interesting to get this Jewish interpretation of Jesus. In some ways it does not differ from the Unitarian ideas, in others it is strongly colored by the Jewish standpoint, but the chief value of the book is the history of Judaism and its development from the time of the Babylonian captivity to the time of Christ."

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 13 '29 220w

"This book is hardly to be recommended for the beginner in Judaism. It assumes certain knowledge that few Christians possess of the real historic background of Jesus' life. It deals principally with the debatable and the obscure. It leaves something to be desired in the way of systematic presentation. It is to be feared therefore that the book will fail to pass on as widely as it deserves the benediction of the author's own genuine religiousness, and the stimulus of his unobtrusive erudition." H: I. Cadbury

— + Christian Century 46:455 Ap 4 '29 520w

"To read this volume through carefully is to walk in company with an independent scholar and a great soul. Matured through long years of most arduous study he attained an important place in the leadership of modern Judaism. Thoroughness and sincerity coupled with fine spiritual instincts characterized his work from the very beginning." I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 6:362 Jl '29 400w

J Religion 9:497 Jl '29 80w

"It should and will be read with great profit and delight by all interested in the springing forth and budding out of Christianity on the rich and fertile soil of contemporary and earlier rabbinical doctrines and practices. . . . The above volume is a well-qualified companion to his earlier brothers of the same deep-delving pen." H. L. Gordon

+ N Y Times p32 S 8 '29 1500w

"This volume will be doubly welcome, for scholars are here given a valuable work which they had despaired of seeing and, in addition, a biography of the lamented author. For years it had been known that Dr. Kohler was investigating the origins of Synagogue and Church, but his passion for accuracy demanded revision after revision, and when he died it was feared that the work would never go to press. Thanks to Dr. Enelow that fear has been vain, and Dr. Enelow has earned further gratitude for the biographical essay with which the volume is introduced."

KOHLER, KAUFMANN—Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p548 Jl 11 '29 850w

KOHLER, WOLFGANG. Gestalt psychology. 403p $4 Liveright

152 Gestalt (psychology) 29-10486

The theory of the new school of Gestalt psychology is presented by Dr Köhler, professor of psychology in the University of Berlin, upon whose researches, with those of Koffka and Wertheimer, the theory is founded. The new psychology deals with the relation of sensations and their distortion due to the presence of sensations from other fields.

---

Booklist 25:377 Jl '29

"To say that this book is provocative and stimulating is to express its values in very inadequate terms." W: A. White, M.D.
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 9 '29 1100w

"Köhler's book should stop the familiar controversy as to whether the experiments of the gestalt psychologists prove anything new. They prove nothing, and least of all the theory, unless to prove means to illustrate, to demonstrate, or show by a spectacle what has already been said by analysis." M. J. Adler
— + Nation 129:328 S 25 '29 1200w

"Dr. Köhler presents the theoretical and practical aspects of Gestalt psychology with admirable lucidity and charm." Augusta Alpert
+ New Repub 59:43 My 22 '29 850w

Reviewed by Fritz Wittels, M.D.
N Y Evening Post p8m Je 1 '29 1000w

"The book is not an easy one, as the subject matter is very technical, but it is freely illustrated by examples and experiments which have the great advantage that in the large majority of instances they are either concerned with facts observable by every one in daily life, or are so simple that the experiments can be carried out readily with materials that every one has at hand." M. E. Harding
N Y Times p4 My 19 '29 1800w

"This is the first volume to appear in a new field of psychological research. It establishes a theory of psychological relativity and is considered a revolutionary contribution to modern science."
Outlook 151:626 Ap 17 '29 100w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:16 Je '29 130w

"The value of Professor Köhler's contribution, though limited, is in its field comprehensive, and his conclusions are reinforced by a well balanced and logical treatment that maintains interest in what might otherwise be a dull subject. It is important to have this statement made available to English readers." Joseph Jastrow
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:24 Ag 3 '29 900w

"Kohler's critical attitude towards behaviorism, is merely a reiteration of what the psychoanalysts have been doing for years. Although psychoanalysis is not mentioned in the volume, yet the Gestalt psychology contains more psychoanalytical principles than its originators may be willing to admit." I. H. Coriat, M. D.
+ — Survey 62:533 Ag 15 '29 750w

"It is a systematic introduction into the main principles of the Gestalt theory and their application in the most important fields of psychology. The book is both destructive and constructive. It tries to kill, once and for all, tacit assumptions and avowed principles which in the author's, and the reviewer's opinion have blocked the progress of psychology and have made it a lifeless and shallow doctrine that is being condemned or ignored by all those who are interested in the study of human behavior as it is outside the laboratory. In attacking the axioms and methods responsible for this sterility Köhler paves the way for the erection of new principles." K. Koffka
+ Yale R n s 19:209 autumn '29 1300w

KOHN, HANS. History of nationalism in the East; [tr. by Margaret M. Green]. 476p il $7 Harcourt [25s Routledge]

323.1 Nationalism and nationality. East—Politics

Describes the forms assumed by the nationalist movement in the territories stretching from Egypt to India. The religious renaissance in India, the relations between Great Britain and the new Orient, and the effect of the Russian revolution on Eastern affairs are the main points of discussion.

---

"He knows most of his subject at first hand; he has consulted all available documents, and he has set forth the results of experience and research most admirably, covering a hitherto uncharted field." G. R. B. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 D 24 '29 600w

"Dr. Kohn is an authority on the history of imperialism. His present work is of great interest and value. He has collected an enormous number of facts about the emergence of nationalism in the East and in Africa during the last hundred years. He sets them out with clearness, and the student of contemporary history who has struggled out of the narrow parochialism of being merely a good European will find his book useful." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 46:351 D 7 '29 1300w

Reviewed by Gardner Harding
N Y Times p1 D 8 '29 1450w

"Shows an astonishing grasp of detail and ability to marshal facts. A constant effort is made at impartiality, but English readers of Imperialist views will not find the effort very successful."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p799 O 10 '29 120w

KOHUT, MRS REBEKAH (BETTELHEIM). As I know them; some Jews and a few Gentiles. 305p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

296 Jews in the United States 29-23369

Mrs Kohut writes about the Jew in America from a sympathetic point of view. New York's East side, where her childhood was spent, Jewish immigrants, the problem of racial honor, Jewish persecution, and the anti-Semitic arguments of men like Hilaire Belloc and G. K. Chesterton are among the subjects on which she writes.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N 24 '29 120w

"Mrs. Kohut is most interesting when most personal. She gives us many a lovable glimpse of the household of a famous rabbi, of her famous family the Bettelheims which served G. B. Stern for model in 'The Matriarch,' and delightful sketches of characters both great and eccentric whom she has known: the devoted librarian Friedus, the vagabonding poet Naphtali Herz Imber and a score of others."
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 27 '29 300w

"Some brilliant essays and some interesting memories compose this book by Rebekah Kohut, widow of Alexander Kohut, rabbi and scholar. Especially fine and impressive is the opening chapter on the lower east side of forty years ago, which she knew as a teacher of English in the Educational Alliance classes."
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 5 '30 160w

KOLBE, PARKE REXFORD. Urban influences on higher education in England and the United States. (Studies in adult educ.) 254p $2 Macmillan

378 Colleges and universities—United States. Colleges and universities—Great Britain. Colleges and universities, Municipal 29-676

The title is self-explanatory. Dr Kolbe, president of the Polytechnic institute of Brooklyn, has in the case of both English and American universities gathered at first hand most of the material for this book on the limitations imposed upon colleges and universities by urban influences.

Booklist 25:345 Je '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 5 '29 320w

"The present volume gives full accounts of university extension work and urban education in England. The history of the various movements is interesting and instructive, showing clearly the difference between these and methods in vogue in our own country." C. K. H.

Boston Transcript p7 F 9 '29 400w

Reviewed by Nels Anderson

+ Survey 62:258 My 15 '29 230w

KOLTHOFF, IZAAK MAURITS, and MENZEL, HEINRICH. Volumetric analysis; v 2, Practical volumetric analysis; tr. by N. Howell Furman. 522p $5 Wiley

545.5 Volumetric analysis

"Deals with the present theories of quantitative precipitations, neutralizations, complex formations, oxidation and reduction; indicators; the titration error; speed of reaction; catalysis and induced reactions; adsorption phenomena in quantitative precipitations; the volumetric methods of organic chemistry; the stability of solutions; survey of the methods of volumetric analysis; the determination of the equivalence point."—N Y New Tech Bks

"There is probably no one living today who has contributed so much to the scientific study of volumetric analysis; Kolthoff publishes about twenty-five papers a year, all of them having merit. A considerable part of this book has, therefore, been published already in his scientific papers. It is well to have the subject matter collected and published again." W: T. Hall

+ Am Chem Soc J 51:1615 My '29 650w

"This book represents, beyond all question, a scholarly, interesting and valuable contribution to the literature of analytical chemistry and one which deserved translation." W. T. Hall

+ Am Chem Soc J 51:2591 Ag '29 600w

"This work was very much needed as the older books on volumetric analysis had become inadequate. The scope of the present book is full and complete, scientific yet explicitly practical. There is an adequate index." S: S. Sadtler

+ Ind & Eng Chem 22:104 Ja '30 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:44 O '28

St Louis 27:49 F '29

KORTE, ALFRED. Hellenistic poetry; tr. by Jacob Hammer and Moses Hadas; with a preface by Edward Delavan Perry. 446p $4 Columbia univ. press

881.09 Greek poetry—History and criticism

29-18875

A critical estimate of the works of leading Greek poets from the death of Alexander to the reign of Augustus, or the beginning of the Christian era. Chief among these are Menander, Theocritus, Apollonius and Callimachus. The author illustrates his survey with extracts in verse translation.

"By means of profuse illustrations in translation, we are given a comprehensive conception of the Hellenistic period, presented in a consistently clear and interesting manner." E. B. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 26 '29 300w

"As there is no adequate history of Hellenistic literature in English, this translation will be welcomed as affording a convenient résumé of our knowledge of this period. . . Professor Körte is thorough and sound in his work, but is hardly a penetrating critic. There are no brilliant flashes of inspiration such as illumine the pages of Mackail's 'Latin Literature.' As a result the book, though useful to the student of literature, is rather dull."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:514 D 7 '29 250w

KOZISEK, JOSEF. Forest story; tr. from the Czechoslovak by Raf. D. Szalatnay; ed. by Helen Murphy. unp il $3.50 Macmillan

29-23122

Stories for little children about the smaller folk of the forests: the mole, the hedgehog, the badger, the hare, the frog and the squirrel.

Cleveland Open Shelf p133 N '29

"A good tale." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Times p37 O 27 '29 50w

"Here is a riot of color—strong, crude greens, blues, reds, and yellows—that rivets attention, and amply serves the naïveté and straightforwardness of the stories it is used to illustrate. . . The slight tales have the poetic quality so inherent in folklore." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 6:162 S 21 '29 200w

KOZISEK, JOSEF. Magic flutes; tr. by Clara V. Winlow. unp il $3.50 Longmans

A picture story book for small children, about the eight sons of the mouse family. The book, which was discovered by the publisher at a Czechoslovakian fair, is colorfully illustrated.

"As you would expect, Czecho-Slovakia's gay colors are in the pictures by Rudolf Mates—one of Europe's most beloved illustrators for children, whose name happily appears on the title page of a number of this season's books for boys and girls." Helen Ferris

+ Bookm 70:307 N '29 100w

"In appearance and first flavor this seems quite characteristically a picture book. When one has read it, however, the impression remains that here the text, the work of Josef Kozisek, is of greater significance. Mr. Mates has put a great deal of color and an occasional glint of humor into his end of it, dressing his animals in man's clothing and carrying personification about as far as it will comfortably go. But in the final analysis his pictures are only a workmanlike job." Lynd Ward

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 N 17 '29 180w

"There is a fine activity to this book and it possesses a pictorial richness and vigor that make it the year's outstanding picture book for children." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p26 D 15 '29 40w

KRASNOV, PETR NIKOLAEVICH. Amazon of the desert; tr. by Olga Vitali and Vera Brooke. 272p $2 Duffield

29-2244

Ivan Pavlovitch is commanding officer of a Russian outpost in the mountains of Central Asia. A spirited young girl who is a distant relative of Ivan arrives unannounced at the encampment, in search of romance and adventure. In the wild mountain setting of his army life, Ivan rather unwillingly supplies both.

"Krassnoff has painted the mountain scenery of Central Asia with such vivid reality that his descriptions are far more interesting than the romance between Pavlovitch and Fedossia."

+ — Bookm 69:xxvi Mr '29 100w

"The author races along with quantities of vigorous incident, relieving the pressure at times with descriptions of nature in mountain and desert. The story is admirably adapted to the uses of adventure fans."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 F 24 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 26 '29 450w

"Aside from its interest as an inducement to a hurrying pulse, 'The Amazon of the Desert' has a certain value for its descriptions. The vast reaches of the Siberian-Chinese border, with its sandy stretches, its rivers, its gorges, and its majestic mountains, serve General Krassnoff with plenty of reason for adjectives. It is to his credit that he doesn't employ too many."

KRASNOV, P. N.—Continued
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 20 '29 430w

"Readers in their early 'teens will like it—as will other readers of the same mental age."
Sat R of Lit 5:759 Mr 9 '29 180w

"The book has small pretensions to literary style, but it is an exciting and swift-moving story. The translation is on the whole good."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p836 N 8 '28 260w

KRASNOV, PETR NIKOLAEVICH. White Coat; tr. from the Russian by Olga Vitali; ed. with an introd. by Henry Irving Brock. 440p $3.50 Duffield

29-21546

The third novel in a series on modern Russia. It is a story of counter-revolution against the soviet régime—a vision of a return to happier days under the leadership of the White Coat. Satan's black masses and the corruption of youth are pictured as features of the Communist system; hence it is the task of the Russian deliverers to free the country from immorality, restore Christianity, reinstate the original Russian language, etc.

"General Krassnoff is looking at Russia through a magic casement. As purely romantic fiction his novel has its pleasant thrills; and as a demonstration of the wish-fulfillment theory of art, it is perfect." Dorothy Brewster
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N 24 '29 600w

"The novel is neither dramatic nor well written. . . . The most important material in his novel is the array of facts presumably authentic proving that the Third Internationale is a failure. Had General Krassnoff written a small volume of facts without dealing in futures he would probably be accorded far more serious attention both in Europe and in America." D. F. G.
— Boston Transcript p6 O 26 '29 500w

"While 'From Double Eagle to Red Flag' was, in many ways, an undeniably valuable work, the novels following it are obviously lower in quality. They are more purely sensational adventure stories. Yet it cannot be denied that General Krassnoff is a skillful storyteller and a talented narrator. And one who does not expect from his works more than amusement and thrill of adventure will certainly enjoy the first two-thirds of 'The White Coat.'"
— + N Y Times p7 N 24 '29 450w

KRAUS, MICHAEL. Intercolonial aspects of American culture on the eve of the revolution, with special reference to the northern towns. (Studies in history, economics, and public law) 251p $4 Columbia univ. press

917.3 United States—Social life and customs—Colonial period. United States—Civilization. United States—History—Colonial period. United States—Intellectual life 28-23641

"In his introduction Dr. Kraus ventures the opinion that scholars have done little to relate colonial culture to the general stream of European civilization and that the attention ordinarily given to differences among the colonies has tended to obscure the fact of the growth of a common provincial civilization. This slender volume attempts to redress the balance in the latter instance. There are reasonably full treatments, for example, of such matters as the improvement of roads and postal facilities and of coastwise communication, the circulation of books and newspapers, the interprovincial economic ties, the numerous religious and scientific contacts, and the prevalence of common artistic tastes. Of particular interest and freshness is the discussion of the migration of individuals from province to province for business, professional, and educational reasons and the social and political bonds resulting from the frequent intermarriage across provincial boundaries."—Am Hist R

"By the painstaking process of accumulating myriad data the author makes out a convincing case for the existence of a wide diversity of common interests. . . This well-documented volume supplies a greater abundance of exact information on the point than has hitherto been readily available, and incidentally sheds light on the general aspects of colonial civilization in the mid-eighteenth century. The main imperfections of the book grow chiefly out of the inherent difficulties of the author's task. He is constantly engaged in the provoking business of describing the interrelations of things without saying too much or too little about the things themselves." A. M. Schlesinger
+ — Am Hist R 34:396 Ja '29 450w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 2 '29 270w

"Dr. Kraus has presented his material in such a concrete way that it makes interesting reading. The life of colonial times is portrayed in a living picture. The book is a real contribution to Americana and will have to be reckoned with by writers on colonial history."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 12 '29 350w

"Without desiring to use superlatives, Doctor Kraus has made an admirable start in the right direction, and should be encouraged to go on."
+ Hist Outlook 20:194 Ap '29 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p809 N 1 '28 380w

KREYMBORG, ALFRED. Lost sail; a Cape Cod diary. 89p $2 Coward-McCann

811 28-25883

A group of sonnets written during a summer on Cape Cod.

Booklist 25:202 F '29

"Nothing of Mr. Kreymborg's earlier grace or spontaneity is sacrificed by his sudden switch of allegiance to the sonnet form. . . But many of the sonnets dedicated to his friends and neighbors at Cape Cod can scarcely possess more than the interest of association. The lost sail of the title is a symbol of no more resounding application than the loss of youth; here Mr. Kreymborg is treading rather close to a current national sentimentalism for an ironist of such long standing." W: Troy
+ — Bookm 68:692 F '29 300w

"What emerges from this diary in verse is what emerges from the prosiest of journals: a portrait of the author. A person abounding in tenderness and humor; a lover of those two sovereign cures for sick souls, music and chess,—one attuned to nature but prone to the nostalgia of the city-bred; a hater of injustice; a devotee of simple living and lyrical thinking. . . Taken as a whole, the collection has a rare warmth and brightness, emanating from the personality of the poet." Babette Deutsch
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 D 23 '28 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p55 Ap '29

Dial 86:346 Ap '29 80w

"The book is casual, intimate, personal. Remembering Kreymborg's considerable resources of irony and wit, one is inclined to urge that he stop being 'mellow' and practice again the mental and verbal acrobatics which best exhibit his talent."
— + Nation 127:sup638 D 5 '28 100w

"Much of Mr. Kreymborg's warmth, his enthusiasm, his very personal charm emanates from this rhymed day-book with its mellow reminiscences of friends, pastimes, places." L: Untermeyer
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1020 My 18 '29 380w

KREYMBORG, ALFRED. Manhattan men (poems and epitaphs). 111p $2 Coward-McCann

811 29-6715

"This is Mr. Kreymborg's first book of poems on his native city, and it roams the whole gamut of the little island, from the Bowery to Harlem, Trinity spire to the latest skyscraper, old Fifth to modern Park Avenue, accompanied by a host of pen portraits of the everlasting poor and the tragic-comic rich."—Publisher's note

Bookm 70:xvi O '29 70w

Reviewed by T: H. Ferril
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ap 28 '29 600w

"Satiric, humorous, sharp, in these verses Mr. Kreymborg is often as vituperative concerning Manhattan as the indigenous Bostonian who finds New York city so crassly commercial and overwhelmingly gigantic. Yet he loves his Manhattan equally as much as he deplores many of its vicissitudes."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '29 180w

"Speech-rhythms, piquantly manipulated, are the substance of this book. Ideas and emotions have been incorporated just enough to get the rhythms into print: the result is puppet-talk." A. B. Quirk

— New Repub 58:206 Ap 3 '29 250w

"Mr. Kreymborg is a poet with a crisp intelligence, a sense of humor, and a true feeling for his kind, but in spite of these three valuable qualities 'Manhattan Men' is disappointing. It lacks the genuine whimsy of his earlier poems that justified the deliberate naiveté of his chosen and characteristic poetic forms." Josephine Pinckney

— + Sat R of Lit 5:1159 Jl 6 '29 460w

KREYMBORG, ALFRED. Our singing strength; an outline of American poetry (1620-1930). 643p $5 Coward-McCann

811.09 American poetry—History and criticism

A complete outline of American poetry from the early colonial period to the present time. The poets are classed, where possible, under specific schools or periods, and the work and influence of each outstanding poet receive analysis. Of special interest are the chapters on the poetic renascence just prior to the War; and the appraisal of the work of contemporary poets.

"Mr. Kreymborg has an astounding weakness for proper names. In the volume as a whole he mentions no less than 450 American poets, most of whom might very well have been disregarded. In the last ten chapters, those which deal with our poetry since 1912, he mentions more than 280. It seems to me that by dealing with so many unimportant individuals he has transformed the book as a whole from an outline of poetry into a census of poets, and that he has transformed the latter part of the book into a social function, a reception to which all living poets, good and indifferent, are invited together. On a glorified scale, it is a sort of publishers' tea." Malcolm Cowley

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 17 '29 2450w

"Not least among the many superlative merits of 'Our Singing Strength' is Mr. Kreymborg's treatment of the younger poets, upon whom a major portion of the volume is written. The author's recognition of values in what we have been inclined to view as their babblings is uncanny. For these sections we have no hesitancy in the least in pronouncing this survey of American poets and poetry at once readable and permanently valuable." W. M. T.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 7 '29 370w

"A remarkable achievement. The text is exceedingly well written, and is copiously illustrated by well-chosen quotations. Much that the author says is challenging and thought-provoking, and his literary judgments are, in general, sound and at times illuminating." Francis Snow

+ Current Hist 31:632 Ja '30 170w
Cleveland Open Shelf p155 D '29

"As a history of American poetry this volume is undoubtedly valuable, because it fills an actual need and has no rivals anywhere near it in the field. It is astonishingly and painstakingly complete, a product of careful and exhaustive research. Unlike many works rejoicing in these rather dull virtues, it is enriched by a vigorous and readable style, and informed by a strong and opinionated, if none too consistent, personality. . . The greatest single fault of the book lies in Mr. Kreymborg's failure to apply an inflexible criterion of taste. The rich and impulsive enthusiasm which enlivens a part of it, renders the whole vaguely unreliable. Mr. Kreymborg's very closeness to his subject, which is the life and breath of his work, contributes to an ultimate confusion. There are many more superlatives in his estimates of contemporary figures than the reader can comfortably digest." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Evening Post p10m N 2 '29 900w

"Its wide, inclusive, heavy-freighted main thrust is not critical in any objective sense; it is more a work of literary excavation than a summing up; but it is the sort of exploration that must be done before the critic per se can hope to move with any assurance among American poets. In its intention and effect it is a continuation of the most useful, even if it is not the most exalted, movement that American criticism has ever known. . . It is only when he comes to his own friends and enemies that the personal note of Mr. Kreymborg becomes too personal—and space is devoured by advice and admonition which may be useful, but which is out of place in a history of our singing." J: Chamberlain

+ — N Y Times p2 D 15 '29 1450w

"Kreymborg has written a fine, detailed appraisal of American poetry, seen from a balanced viewpoint. He will please neither the radicals nor the conservatives, but he will illuminate the whole scene for the spectator on the sidelines." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p13 O 30 '29 1000w

"His book is rich in quotation, finely used to convey to readers a sense of participation in critical analysis, and should be greeted with cheers by all American poetry lovers, new and old."

+ Outlook 153:429 N 13 '29 160w

KRISHNAMURTI, JIDDU. Life in freedom. 96p $2 Liveright

212 Theosophy 29-5089

Krishnamurti has put down here the gist of his teachings as contained in addresses delivered to his followers in Benares, Ojai and Ommen.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 7 '29 150w

"He writes with deep feeling; but in his most profound statements there is nothing more momentous than, say, the heartfelt ideas of an intelligent graduate student at Harvard. It is perhaps vagueness that one objects to in such books as 'Life in Freedom.'" A. H. S.

— Boston Transcript p5 Ja 26 '29 330w

"Poetic feeling and beauty of phraseology mark all the book, which is written in a style of such simplicity that the meaning is often deceptive and obscure. To the Hindu mind it may all be quite clear and cogent. But the Occident's viewpoint is so different, and its estimate of values and its methods of approaching life vary so greatly that the Western mind is likely to want to know what it is all about."

N Y Times p12 Ja 27 '29 480w

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS. Grand manner. 262p $2.50 Liveright

29-6177

Mr Kronenberger makes skilled use of the manner of modern biography in telling this story of the fictitious king of Hedenstrom and his unhappy career. The young Rudolph, bereft of his loved wife after a brief marriage, is long inconsolable. When he turns from amours to his imperial duties, Rudolph is a king of the old school. Out of sympathy with the democratic tendencies of his people, he is banished and spends his last years in squalid exile.

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS—Continued

"All that is actual he renders well, with a feeling for proportion that in a first novel is masterful. But his grasp on character, shrewdly modern, is slight. His figures move by the mechanics of his narrative and not of and by themselves. And yet one sets this book down after reading it impressed and rather grateful. The compliment of promise to a first novel is banal, and in 'The Grand Manner' the promise is more than partly realized." Eugene Lohrke

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Mr 10 '29 680w

"This pseudo-historical novel is the vehicle of the philosophy of its author, who uses striking pictures of characters real and fictitious to further the story. A satire on the downfall of kings, it is nevertheless a narrative, entertaining and exciting."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 10 '29 260w

Nation and Ath 45:632 Ag 10 '29 180w

"Many of our more mature novelists are lacking in that genuine sophistication and suavity and polish that distinguish Mr. Kronenberger's civilized attitude toward life and letters." E. S.

+ New Repub 58:314 My 1 '29 200w

"There are here none of the marks of immaturity that ordinarily denote a first work; the writer has assurance, power and brilliance. All his people partake of the vitality of the king." Lillian Rogers

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 2 '29 720w

"A civilized, charmingly written first novel. . . It is Mr. Kronenberger's weakness as a novelist that he doesn't seem to care much for the individual king, Rudolph of Hedenstrom, of 'The Grand Manner.' It is his strength as a charming writer that he is interested in the spectacle of life in general, in the influence of ideas on the inhabitants of this world, in striking off a certain milieu in a few apt words, and in esthetic perceptions."

+ — N Y Times p8 Mr 3 '29 600w

"When all the debits and credits are recorded, praise must be the larger meed to Louis Kronenberger and his first book; its courage in presenting non-existent history is extremely unusual and its intelligence in animating a group of representative puppets is a valuable service to fiction."

+ N Y World p11m Ap 14 '29 320w

"The characters are as vivid and well-executed as those of any memoir-writer; the arrangement, movement, and narrative far better." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 5:949 Ap 27 '29 600w

"Mr. Kronenberger's characters are cold medallions, curious and unmoving. He has the arts of those who cleverly catch the surface of the grand manner, and, with a little more heart, might have searched its depths, without committing any dreaded errors of taste or breeding. As it is, one must admire a limited, precious, and tenuous study in isolation and weary pomp, which promises sounder things when its author's spirit is riper." V. S. P.

— + Spec 143:60 Jl 13 '29 280w

"It is, in its way, a very fine piece of work, although it lacks emotional depth here and there. One of the most delightful things about it is the author's pretence of authenticating his story by means of extracts from contemporary memoirs. Some of his epigrams are very good."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p492 Je 20 '29 680w

KROWS, ARTHUR EDWIN. Equipment for stage production; a manual of scene building; preface by Barrett H. Clark. (Am. theatre manuals, pub. in coöperation with the Drama league of America) 152p il $1.50 (5s) Appleton

792 Theaters—Stage-setting and scenery 28-24506

"Mr Krows is in his way a Baedeker of the American theatre. . . Here is a work for those who want to know all they need to know about the fundamentals of equipment for stage production."—Preface

Booklist 25:199 F '29

"To write on such a prosaic subject as the building of theatrical scenery, and yet to produce a work that is as interesting as a narrative does not fall to the lot of all authors, but Mr. Krows has accomplished this result in a handbook which will interest those of the theatre, those who dabble in amateur productions and a great many of the great class of theater goers who desire to know what goes on back of the curtain."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 12 '29 150w

Pratt p23 spring '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:71 F '29

KROWS, ARTHUR EDWIN. Playwriting for profit. 549p il $3.50 (21s) Longmans

808.2 Drama—Technique 28-25876

A practical explanation of playwriting technic. Mr Krows is a playwright and motion picture director, and author of "Play production in America." In separate sections of the present book he discusses plot, dialogue, characterization, production, etc., and the garnering of ideas for plays.

Booklist 25:202 F '29

Bookm 69:xii Jl '29 130w

"On the whole, a very comprehensive manual, often uncritical and even naive, yet possessed of this saving grace: that the author nowhere assumes the difference between an Ibsen and a Channing Pollock is only a matter of facility."

+ — N Y Evening Post p9m D 22 '28 180w

Pratt p25 spring '29

St Louis 27:54 F '29

"As a clear, informative statement of such matters as 'Plot,' 'Sustained Interest,' 'Characterization,' 'Dialogue,' and 'Production' it more than achieves its purpose. One of its chiefest merits is the manner in which Mr. Krows for the most part avoids dogmatism in offering his helpful instruction, and one of its chiefest charms is Mr. Krows's life-long love of his subject which shows on every page and makes his book an invaluable mine for quotations from what past and current practitioners' and critics have said about playwriting."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:629 Ja 26 '29 280w

"This is no book to be read at one sitting. To digest it adequately, as Mr. Krows says, is the work of years. But whether one agrees with him or Mr. Ervine as to the possibility of playwriting ability being acquired, one must concede that in Playwriting for Profit, Mr. Krows has compiled the complete manual." Vera Kelsey

+ Theatre Arts Mo 13:311 Ap '29 250w

Wis Lib Bul 25:71 F '29

KRUTCH, JOSEPH WOOD. Modern temper; a study and a confession. 249p $2.50 Harcourt

190 Philosophy, Modern. Civilization 29-8012

A thoughtful, logical, well-presented statement of the case of the modern intellectual who having weighed and rejected the moral aesthetic and other values of his predecessors finds only in the pursuit of knowledge that which makes life worth living.

Booklist 25:343 Je '29

"His critics will not deny that he has written a book which is a masterpiece of clear thinking and interesting presentation—a book which, with regard to its intellectual quality, makes one exclaim with Milton's Second Brother in Comus: 'How charming is divine philosophy.'" R. M. Lovett

+ Bookm 69:439 Je '29 1000w

"It is a singularly penetrating statement of the impasse in which a mind, both sensitive and honest, finds itself when it looks out upon the world and inwardly upon the psyche as contemporary science reveal them both for our belief. Mr. Krutch is that rare thing in any age, and particularly in our own, a mind fine in its intellectual texture and structure, humane in its sympathies and highly engaging in its expression. . . His book arises out of a tormented consciousness. But he has turned his torment by means of his art into a delight for his reader and himself." Irwin Edman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 24 '29 1700w

"Always frank, honest in his every belief, keenly alive to every problem posed by contemporary thought, the author sets out the dilemma of modern life with superlative clarity." Sidney Homer

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 11 '29 2060w

"In spite of its dismal pessimism, Mr. Krutch's book is tremendously worth reading. Here is a modern who realizes, at least, that what the religious ages agonized about was not simply the fancies of children. . . Mr. Krutch will not be comforted by religion. But he has the virtue of realizing what it is that is lost when faith is gone." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Christian Century 46:586 My 1 '29 620w

"The book is profoundly interesting and very penetrating in its analysis. Every candid reader will be grateful to the author for not providing a cheap solution." Bertrand Russell

+ Nation 128:428 Ap 10 '29 700w

Reviewed by L: Mumford
New Repub 59:36 My 22 '29 1570w

"A book which is at once a challenge and a katharsis. Profoundly moving, because of a fine intellectual passion which characterizes Mr. Krutch's writing, this book rebukes that hundred-per-cent optimism which would substitute bonds and bread and circuses and democratic millenniums for the ancient pieties and gentle humanities of the human soul. Something of a katharsis, too, it may well turn out to be for the author as well as the reader. We are all glutted with the scraps and predigested findings of modern knowledge. Ultimates in science are no more to be trusted than ultimates in religion." E. C. Richards

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 6 '29 1050w
N Y Times p2 Ap 7 '29 950w

"The essay now appearing at full length gives one of the most comprehensive statements of the modern point of view that has appeared in recent years and will add greatly to Mr. Krutch's reputation both as a thinker and as a writer."

+ Outlook 151:587 Ap 10 '29 300w

Reviewed by R. B. Perry
Sat R of Lit 5:1063 Je 1 '29 2000w

"Though Mr. Krutch has hardly made an impressive synthesis of his ideas, his book for the most part represents a serious effort at philosophical thinking, and is not an exploit in clever or meretricious phases, like much writing which attempts to interpret contemporary life."

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 25 '29 730w

Reviewed by H: Neumann
Survey 62:201 My 1 '29 320w
Wis Lib Bul 25:192 Je '29

Reviewed by W. P. Lemon
World Tomorrow 12:375 S '29 600w

KUCZYNSKI, ROBERT RENE. Balance of births and deaths; v 1, Western and northern Europe. (Brookings inst. [Investigations in popular statistics]) 140p $2 Macmillan

312 Vital statistics. Population (28-29334)

A statistical study of the balance of births and deaths in western and northern Europe. The study will be extended to other countries in later volumes.

---

"Dr. Kuczynski's method, despite its simplicity, gives as true a picture of the fundamental trend as some of the involved mathematical methods employed in this country." J. Y. Spengler

+ Am J Pub Health 19:836 Jl '29 520w

"This is an extremely interesting little book and the author accomplishes well what he set out to do, viz., to make clear the present trends of population growth in northern and western Europe. . .No one who is interested in the population movement of the world today can fail to appreciate the value of this study and to make use of the data brought together here. We are promised other studies of similar nature for other parts of the world and still others in which the significance of the data is discussed." W. S. Thompson

+ Am J Soc 35:333 S '29 400w

"The book is written in a breezy style, at times bordering on the dramatic, but a good deal of scholarship went into its production. It is a worthwhile volume, indispensable to the student of recent population movements." Hugh Carter

+ Ann Am Acad 142:461 Mr '29 330w

"This modest little book, crammed with simple figures, is sufficient answer to the wails of the ultra-eugenists who have been gloomily predicting that the increase of population would soon outrun the world's food supply."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 30 '28 280w

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 13 '29 230w

Reviewed by K. H. Claghorn
Nation 129:70 Jl 17 '29 670w

KUHLMAN, AUGUSTUS FREDERICK, comp. Guide to material on crime and criminal justice. 633p price on application Wilson, H.W.

016.364 Crime and criminals—Bibliography 29-8484

A classified and annotated union catalog of books, monographs, pamphlets, and of periodical articles relating to criminology, the administration of criminal justice, criminal law, police, judicial organization, criminal procedure, punishment, institutional treatment of offenders in prisons, jails and reformatories, pardon, parole, probation, the juvenile court, and crime prevention.

---

"This publication is destined to remain a standard reference work for years to come. And so far as research work in the field of sociology is concerned, the present writer considers this second in importance to no other publication of the present century. . . There doubtless will be some students complain because many of the items included in the catalog are of no positive value for research, in spite of the fact that every reasonable effort was made to make the catalog a 'selected' list. However, it should be remembered that such a work as this is prepared for a wide variety of students representing many different types of need for information. And the scholars who selected the titles included in this book gave some of them a place because of some historical value." E. F. Bamford

+ Sociology & Social Research p46 S '29 2000w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '29 100w
Wis Lib Bul 25:317 O '29

KUHLMANN, CHARLES BYRON. Development of the flour-milling industry in the United States; with special reference to the industry in Minneapolis. (Hart, Schaffner & Marx prize essays) 349p $3.50 Houghton

679 Flour mills 29-4769

Awarded the second prize in 1924 in the Hart, Schaffner and Marx awards for books on economical and commercial subjects. The survey includes the beginnings of flour-milling in colonial times, Eastern-milling and marketing centers, rise of flour-milling and wheat growing in the Middle West, growth of the milling industry after 1890 in various centers, marketing and exports.

---

"To write the history of an important American industry which had heretofore received only fragmentary attention, was no small task but one which the author has done well. Material for the study has been drawn judiciously from colonial account-books and port records and later manuscript sources, from government publications, newspapers, trade journals, and a miscellany of other printed material, and from interviews with millers. The book is carefully documented and contains a useful bibliography. Its organization is clear, and its economic interpretations are convincing. Indeed, a most significant feature of the book is the author's comprehension of the economic meaning of the intricate historical material with which he deals." Henrietta Larson

KUHLMANN, C: B.—Continued

+ Am Hist R 35:176 O '29 500w
Booklist 25:310 My '29
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 27 '29 120w
Wis Lib Bul 25:158 My '29

KUMMER, FREDERIC ARNOLD (ARNOLD FREDERICKS, pseud.). Mark of the rat. 291p $2 Sears
29-18934

"The story takes place within the space of three days, at a Virginia country-house occupied by the owner, a retired speculator, his wife, her sister, and several other guests. Late at night an unknown intruder, his face scarred with the underworld's 'Mark of the rat,' breaks into the premises and is strangled, his remains, soon after the discovery of the crime, being mysteriously spirited away. Thereafter, what happens is related in alternate chapters by the various participants in the events which ensue, the tale reaching its climax in the occurrence of two nightmarish murders."—Sat R of Lit

"The book should give those mystery readers who search for unique methods a pleasant surprise."

+ Bookm 70:xxxii N '29 40w

"It is sufficiently ingenious to keep you guessing. The style is pleasingly unpretentious." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 8 '29 120w

"Originality in a detective story is by no means easy. Yet Mr. Fredericks has given us an unusual outcome to what might seem at first little more than a variation of an old plot. The book is certainly unique among its kind."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 9 '29 170w

"The strong points of this skilfully told detective story are its suspense and the concentrated intensity of its action."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:490 N 30 '29 150w

KUMMER, FREDERIC ARNOLD (ARNOLD FREDERICKS, pseud.). Maypoles and morals. 279p $2.50 Sears
29-10302

"The main concerns of this amusingly sophisticated novel are love and marriage, subjects which the author treats, as it pleases him, wittily or with philosophic gravity. He introduces for principal a budding young writer, handsome as Adonis, reputed a formidable heart-breaker. To spend a quiet summer at his literary work he has rented a lodge of a New England estate, but is continually distracted from his labors by the attentions of two beautiful married ladies living in the vicinity."—N Y World

Bookm 70:xxiv S '29 100w
Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 16 '29 200w

"There are moments when one questions the taste of the author. Yet one does not find it difficult to forgive such lapses when they occur in a novel so vivacious, so bubbling over with good spirits as the present one."

+ N Y Times p7 Je 30 '29 400w

"A smartly written and intelligent book, it discusses in sparkling style issues of life which are, perhaps, of more pressing interest to the ladies than to the manly sex."

+ N Y World p10m My 12 '29 200w

"The novel is essentially cheap, though superficially suave and wise."

— Sat R of Lit 5:1080 Je 1 '29 230w

KUNITZ, JOSHUA. Russian literature and the Jew; a sociological inquiry into the nature and origin of literary patterns. 195p $3 Columbia univ. press
891.7 Jews in literature. Russian literature
29-8169

This study of the attitudes taken by Russian writers toward the Jew in various periods of Russian literature maintains that the Jew has not received adequate treatment at the hands of these writers. Mr Kunitz shows their attitude changing from contempt to hatred, then a kind of pitying sympathy, till at last, with the Russian revolution, they begin to treat the Jew as an ordinary human being.

Reviewed by Alexander Kaun
Nation 128:620 My 22 '29 450w

"As we develop in America a more solid and influential school of social criticism, the real significance of this work of Kunitz will be appreciated. 'Russian Literature and the Jew' is no sterile monograph; it is creative criticism of excellent variety." V. F. Calverton

+ New Repub 59:238 Jl 17 '29 800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p1037 D 5 '29 250w

KURLBAUM, FRAU MARGARETE (SIEBERT). Mary, queen of Scots; tr. from the German by Mary Agnes Hamilton. 504p il $5 Harcourt [10s 6d J. Cape]
Mary Stuart, queen of Scots—Fiction
29-3262

In 500 closely packed pages a German writer has produced, after the new manner with the aid of imagined conversation, a romantic biography of the woman who was by birth a queen of Scotland and by marriage a queen of France. The story begins with Mary's arrival in Scotland.

"There can hardly be any question that Margarete Siebert has written the first genuine romantic biography of Mary Stuart, wherein history becomes all but indistinguishable from life." Donald Douglas

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 F 17 '29 1000w

"Her story is one of the great and at the same time the most thrilling tragedies of history. Nowhere have we found it more carefully and more tellingly revealed than through the eyes of this German woman. Having read her book, we know Mary, and Mary's Scotland." R. R. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 9 '29 500w
Cleveland Open Shelf p108 Jl '29

"This 'biography' offers nothing new either in fact or in method of presentation. It is merely a very readable piece of nervously energetic prose that happens—just happens—to be concerned with Mary, Queen of Scots."

— + Nation 128:sup491 Ap 17 '29 120w

"A hybrid, produced by crossing biography with fiction, and then again crossing the progeny with history. As a result you get about three parts fact to one part fiction. The pill of fact is frequently gilded with the drama of dialogue, and history is simplified to a story." Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 44:110 O 20 '28 80w

"There may be people who prefer a disguised historical novel to an avowed one. If so they are recommended to sample this hectic tale. If often inaccurate as to names and facts, it is full of ingenious conjectures as to what people thought, said, and looked like, and the English version, though it cannot alleviate the Teutonic elaborateness and prolixity of the original, is reasonably well done."

— + New Statesman 32:576 F 9 '29 150w

"Margarete Kurlbaum-Siebert's story of Mary, Queen of Scots, here presented in an excellent translation, is an amazingly human and living

figure added to the modern portrait gallery of historic biography." F: H. Martens
+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 2 '29 350w

"Every page suggests that thoroughness of preparation for which the German mind is famous. Yet at no point is the book ponderous. The materials, though ample, are presented with the ease of an accomplished familiarity. The translation, moreover, conceals itself. What Miss Hamilton has produced is a version, wholly English in idiom, and the English is as graceful, as vivacious as Mary Stuart herself." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 3 '29 2300w

"Margarete Siebert has done very well with her facts. She eschews psychological analysis, has no perceptible bias and draws no personal conclusions. Where action is concerned, her dramatic method is safe. When it comes to speech she is on dangerous ground. Dialogue and soliloquy in the mouths of historical personages is work for a great genius."
+ — Outlook 151:430 Mr 13 '29 220w

"This latest volume, which is called a 'romantic biography,' is characteristic of the tireless German mind which produced it. Besides, nothing has been lost from the original in Mary Agnes Hamilton's artistic translation. . . What the book should have been called is a historical novel. It is intensely dramatic, one scene follows closely on the heels of another, and, when the last page is turned, one feels that the final curtain has gone down on a splendid production."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 22 '29 360w

"This is the ordinary article of commerce: it is made in Germany, and describes with a thick and voluble sentimentality much that is known and a good deal that is not (much flashing of various people's eyes, for instance, and Mary gazing soulfully at the sea in a place whence she could not possibly have seen it) in the Queen's life between her return to Scotland and her flight to the hospitality of Elizabeth. . . The four page plates are the only things in the book that throw light on the events that are its subject."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p714 O 4 '28 480w

KURTZ, EDWIN BERNARD. Lineman's handbook. 547p il $4 McGraw

621:3192 Electric lines—Overhead 28-16499

"Simple, clear, and copiously illustrated instructions for linemen, foremen and other employees of line departments. Introductory information on elementary electricity and the general scheme of an electrical system is followed by chapters on materials, equipment, design, pole and tower erection, inspection, testing, maintenance, first aid, and accident prevention. Important requirements of the National Electric Safety Code are reprinted. Author is Professor of Electrical Engineering in the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College."—N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 25:108 D '28
N Y New Tech Bks 13:46 O '28
Pratt p15 spring '29
St Louis 26:351 N '28

KUYUMJIAN, DIKRAN. See Arlen, M., pseud.

KYLE, ANNE D. Crusaders' gold. 284p $2 Houghton

28-24273

A mystery story for boys and girls set in a Palestinian background. While visiting her archaeologist father at the scene of his excavations, Daphne picks up the trail of crusader's gold. Vail, an English boy, helps her hunt for it. The book's end papers show the scene of the exciting events of the hunt.

Booklist 25:251 Mr '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p80 My '29

"Miss Kyle has not escaped the tendency of writers for girls either to lapse into sentimentality or else to bend over backwards and launch upon impossibly melodramatic adventures. In spite of vivid incidents and authentic local color the book lacks continuity. . . She has made interesting use of the figure of Colonel Lawrence and her bandits and fakers of antiques are evidently drawn from life. Her failure lies in welding her material into a plausible whole."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:928 Ap 20 '29 280w

"Girls will find this an unusual story, set against a background of Jerusalem and the Palestine hills."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 16 '28 100w
Wis Lib Bul 25:78 F '29

KYNE, PETER BERNARD. Jim the conqueror. 303p $2 Cosmopolitan bk. [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

29-17527

"Don Jaime Higuenes, 'lord of a million acres' down Texas way, patrician of mixed Castilian and Irish descent, and dare-devil to boot, has fallen in love with the photograph of Roberta Antrim in a magazine devoted to the doings of New York society folk. When subsequently he is forced in self-defence to shoot a marauding sheep-owner who proves to be none other than Roberta's uncle, and discovers that she is his heiress, he sends her a laconic telegram, and looks after her property pending her arrival. She comes at length, sees, and despite her resentment at finding herself under an obligation to her uncle's slayer, is conquered by Don Jaime's charm of manner."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 26:33 O '29

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 21 '29 150w

"Though not the most thrilling of the long list of novels which Mr. Kyne has to his credit, it is nevertheless a good story with a picturesque setting and is written in a whimsical and amusing way that adds greatly to its charm."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 7 '29 280w

"Follows carefully and skillfully the conventional pattern of preceding tales about the great open spaces. Mr. Kyne is too practiced a writer to overlook the slightest possibility to introduce dramatic climaxes in his narrative, and the passages connecting these stirring episodes are marked by an economy of phraseology."
+ N Y Times p22 S 8 '29 180w

"The lovers are attractively drawn, but their story is a trifle tenuous, and takes far too long to get going."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p770 O 3 '29 170w

KYNE, PETER BERNARD. Parson of Panamint, and other stories. 387p $2 Cosmopolitan bk. [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

29-5948

"Into a brand new mining town where ore was assaying high and all sorts and conditions of men—and women—were assembling, came a story-book parson of the best type, imported by the mayor and backed by him to the limit. With a message such as reached publicans and sinners in Palestine long ago, Philip Pharo befriended the down-and-outers and helped them up, to the scandal of the orthodox and pharisaical. The story is told in Mr Kyne's breeziest style and is the first and longest in a collection of ten similar tales of the mining frontier of a generation ago."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 25:322 My '29

"Chuckawalla is a fightin' tarantula and a born story-teller in more ways than one, and it is the hope of one reader that he will manifest

KYNE, P: B.—Continued
himself often and more of it in the near future." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 7 '29 160w
Boston Transcript p2 My 1 '29 180w
N Y Times p24 Ag 25 '29 120w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 5 '29 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p497 Je 20 '29 150w

L

LACEY, THOMAS ALEXANDER. Reformation and the people, (Anglican lib. of faith and thought) 120p $1.35 (4s; pa 2s 6d) Longmans
270.6 Reformation [29-19219]

The constructive work of Calvin, and the movements of the Reformation in northern and southern Germany, are dealt with in early chapters. The author then traces the movement in England, and its various divisions there.

"His pages are packed with information, much of it of a curious and unexpected kind, though some of the facts given might change their complexion if seen through another pair of spectacles." Evelyn Underhill
Spec 143:727 N 16 '29 160w
Times [London] Lit Sup p827 O 17 '29 230w

LACRETELLE, JACQUES DE. Marie Bonifas; tr. from the French by Winifred Stephens Whale. 327p $2.50 (7s 6d) Putnam
[28-2244]

Brought up alone in the home of her sensual, ex-soldier father, and disgusted with his manner of living, Marie Bonifas became a hater of all men. Very ugly to look at and with few companions except servant girls and her mates at the convent Marie gained the reputation of being homosexual, which reputation followed her thru life until the days of the World war. Then by her heroism she lived down the past.

"If this newest book of his is not as consistently fine as its predecessor, 'Silbermann,' it is, nevertheless, a courageous, sensitive work upon an exceptionally difficult theme. Through all its dangerous fingering of the heart, this plumbing of the soul of a woman, there is not the odor of the dissecting room. M. Lacretelle's delicacy and deep pity are ceaselessly present; and one never has the feeling of peering in upon unspeakable privacies. The closing portion of the book, dealing with Marie's heroism during the war, is a distinct let-down." W: Spratling
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Je 2 '29 700w

"We can think of no other writer of the present—unless, perhaps, of another Frenchman, Mauriac—who could set himself such limitations and realize such possibilities without sacrificing any of the essential unity of the individual. It takes mastery in delineation to sustain an intrinsic harmony between the jealous, impulsive child who strikes down her rival with her fist, the anguished, suspicion-stung woman who doubts her own sanity, and the decorous person in black who wears the colored ribbon of an order on her dress."
+ Nation 129:151 Ag 7 '29 180w

LADD-FRANKLIN, CHRISTINE. See Franklin, C.

LA FARGE, OLIVER. Laughing Boy. 302p $2.50 Houghton
Navaho Indians—Fiction 29-23247

The story of the life and ideals of a young Navaho, Laughing Boy, and his mate, Slim Girl. The Navaho ceremonial dances, Laughing Boy's work in the fashioning of silver and turquoise bracelets and his wife's rug weaving, contact with other Indian tribes and with traders, and a more evil contact with the white man's civilization, form the background of this novel of modern Indian life.

Booklist 26:119 D '29

"An almost perfect specimen of the sustained and tempered, the lyrical, romantic idyll. It moves among conceptions of life so foreign to those of our naturalistic fiction that it would seem to belong to a different kind of writing. It is filled with love, with nature; it is also filled with morals and religion. The love and nature are ours, as they are anybody's; the morals and religion are those of the Indian. We are thus transported into a strange, foreign and rather pleasant civilization. La Farge has bested some scores of writers at their own game. He has written a book about Indians that is, and that is likely to be so called ten or twenty years from now, real literature." Clinton Simpson
+ Bookm 70:561 Ja '30 250w

"This novel of Navajo life reveals a new and vital talent in an almost untouched American field. The inward rhythms and meanings of the Indian world have rarely got themselves recorded in words, save in direct translation or scientific notation. . . La Farge seems to have listened intently to the accent of Navajo speech. The language of the book is credible, crisp and modern." E. S. Sergeant
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 N 3 '29 1000w

"By writing a novel, an intensely readable novel of the present, with plenty of humor, romance, and common sense in it, Mr. La Farge has insured a widespread reception for what he has to say. By using, consciously or unconsciously, the clear-cut, cameo-like dignity of the Indian style and speech, by thinking in Indian, he has made it impossible for his readers to step out of the atmosphere he would create, to lose the sense of quiet beauty he has prepared for them." I. W. Lawrence
+ Boston Transcript p3 N 9 '29 1800w

"The language is sure and rich. Lovers of Indian lore will love this, but the best is kept for the last. The twenty pages at the end have rare grandeur; they are a song of sustained sorrow, piercing, real."
+ New Repub 61:151 D 25 '29 180w

"Oliver La Farge is a welcome addition to the ranks of our younger fictionists. His first novel reveals an ability considerably out of the ordinary. It reveals a style devoid of stylism, a gift of simple, straightforward statement which is at the same time lyrical and colorful, and a quite adequate inventive power. His novel is one of the most pleasurable that have come from the pen of a young American for some time." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p7m S 7 '29 450w

"Mr. La Farge has infused the romance of Laughing Boy with a lucid beauty, with a vital, artistic imagination and a clear, almost hypnotic style." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p7 N 24 '29 700w

"A novel of Indian life which bids fair to take its place among the more sensitive and important pieces of regional literature which have come from the forgotten crevices of these United States of recent years." T: Tobias
+ N Y World p11m D 15 '29 500w

"Familiarity with the Navajo character, country and customs is the necessary foundation for such a story, but it is only the loom upon which a poet, imaginative, tender and skilful, has woven a lovely piece of stuff, an unexpected glowing spot among drab novels of conventional setting, and theme." F. L. Robbins
+ Outlook 153:386 N 6 '29 300w

"Were it nothing other, this is a book for middle age to read with surreptitious curling of the corners of the lips and wiping of the dew of youth from the eyes. It is the impossible thing so easily done that the reader does not know that one of the most obstinate literary traditions is reduced by it to the condition of a shopworn counterfeit. For 'Laughing Boy' is a true story of primitive love. Not the moving-picture Tin-pan-Alley-all-day-sucker-sexy-saxophone obviousness which goes by that name, but an authentic story of man and woman under conditions in which white thinking is a merely incidental intrusion." Mary Austin

+ Sat R of Lit 6:362 N 9 '29 1100w

"Only one conversant with the philosophy and religion of the Navajos could write this brilliant story. We may feel that Laughing Boy's idealism is extravagant; but we also feel that Mr La Farge has found a worthy embodiment for a poetic idea."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '29 300w

LAFAYETTE, MARIE JOSEPH PAUL ROCH YVES GILBERT DE MOTIER, marquis de. Lafayette in Virginia; unpublished letters from the original manuscripts in the Virginia state library and the Library of Congress; comp. by G. Chinard. (Hist. documents, Institut français de Washington) 64p $2.50 Johns Hopkins

973.337 Yorktown—Siege, 1781. United States—History—Revolution—Sources

29-5077

"This handsomely made book contains forty-seven letters written by Lafayette—almost all of them during his campaign in Virginia, February to October, 1781—to Jefferson while the latter was Governor of the State, to Jefferson's successor, Governor Nelson, to General Wayne and to Colonel Davis. The last two letters are addressed, one to Jefferson when he was about to leave as envoy to France in 1784, and the other from Paris the following year to Patrick Henry. The bulk of the correspondence, therefore, is concerned almost wholly with military affairs. . . The letters preserve the spelling and punctuation—both frequently unique—of Lafayette, and there is a double-page facsimile of his letter to Jefferson of date Oct. 11, 1784."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 3 '29 900w

"The letters, heretofore unpublished, have much historical value, but they are, perhaps, especially interesting because they reveal the personal qualities which made Lafayette so much beloved in this country."

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 3 '29 380w

"New light has been thrown upon Lafayette's career by the publication of a series of letters relating to the Virginia campaign. They are well edited and attractively published, and form a valuable addition to the history of the period." J: S. Penman

+ Pol Sci Q 44:623 D '29 600w

Sat R 147:293 Mr 2 '29 80w

LA FAYETTE, MARIE MADELEINE (PIOCHE DE LA VERGNE) comtesse de. Secret history of Henrietta, princess of England, first wife of Philippe, duc d'Orléans; together with Memoirs of the court of France for the years 1688-1689; tr. with an introd., by J. M. Shelmerdine. (Background of hist.) 264p il $3.75 Dutton [10s 6d Routledge]

B or 92 Orléans, Henrietta Anne, duchesse d'. France—Court and courtiers

Written by the author of "Princess de Cleves," this account of Princess Henrietta, who kept the secrets entrusted to her by Louis XIV and Charles I, is not so much a serious biography as a picture of the court life of the time. It is a reflection of an inside point of view in regard to many external happenings and affairs of state, as especially recorded in the part of the book entitled the Memoirs of the court of France for 1688-1689.

Boston Transcript p2 D 28 '29 300w

Hist Outlook 21:42 Ja '30 100w

Nation and Ath 46:148 O 26 '29 450w

"Madame de la Fayette's reading of the characters of Louis, Madame de Maintenon, and above all, of James II himself, makes this memoir interesting, quite apart from the incidents she describes. Henrietta played a slight, James a large and lasting part in English history. To possess contemporary portraits of them, drawn by a mistress of character-reading, is not without value. That alone might justify Miss Shelmerdine's careful and sensitive translation."

+ New Statesman 34:62 O 19 '29 650w

"For the study of the court of Louis XIV, these memoirs, though below the greatest, have a distinct if limited value."

+ — Sat R 148:548 N 9 '29 470w

"The little book was written purely with the object of amusing its subject, and its tone is generally frivolous."

Times [London] Lit Sup p1092 D 26 '29 500w

LA FOLLETTE, SUZANNE. Art in America. 361p $5 Harper

709.73 Art—United States—History. Art, American

29-29377

A history of American art and architecture and its development to the present time. The book discusses, and places by periods, everything from house-furnishing to portrait painting and modern skyscrapers. The life, work and distinguishing characteristics of American artists are also discussed.

"With its ample illustrations, the completeness of its data, and the reasonableness of its opinions Miss La Follette's volume will make a standard handbook for any layman who wishes to begin the study of American art. It is obviously written to inform and clarify, not to irritate. It shows a firm grasp of economic and social as well as artistic trends." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p6 D 15 '29 1300w

"A really useful work on art in America has been badly wanted for some time. Suzanne La Follette has written such a book, based on long study and sound judgment, in language which the layman can follow." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 153:630 D 18 '29 350w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 2 '29 320w

LAFORGUE, JULES. Six moral tales; ed. and tr. by Frances Newman. 292p $2.50 Liveright

28-29743

Translation of Moralités legendaires. "Whether or not Laforgue deserves to be called the forefather of those recent writers who have enjoyed themselves at the expense of sanctified myths and heroes of the past, there is no doubt that he manages to effect certain drastic changes in our associations surrounding such eminent personages as Lohengrin, Hamlet, Pan, Perseus and Andromeda. All of his tales, with one exception, represent a rewriting of the stories of these people in terms of his own ironic, playful and always brilliant imagination." —N Y Times

"As by Miss Newman, he was proclaimed by certain French critics the outstanding genius of his day. But later judgments even by critics friendly to the general trend represented by Laforgue, have not supported those exaggerated claims. Rene Lalou says that, undoubtedly, 'his work has benefited by the pity which the person of the consumptive poet could not fail to arouse,' and then goes on to call him 'the bard of abortive things.' . . This judgment is supported by a reading of his stories. They pique rather than intrigue." Edwin Bjorkman

Asheville Times p6 D 30 '28 420w

"Here is Laforgue's matchless small contribution to the craft and art of prose fiction, in a version that presents to readers of English the qualities of thought and feeling which literary historians in France have abundantly cited and almost unanimously praised for more than two decades. The introduction which precedes the stories in this translation is perhaps the finest of Miss Newman's critical writings." Hansall Baugh

+ Bookm 68:711 F '29 800w

"They do not wear very well, these ironic travesties which once aroused the mad applause of such critics as Huneker and Arthur Symons.

LAFORGUE, JULES—Continued
Laforgue's self-conscious artifice, his lunar mockery, his wit and elegance and calculated thin obscenities bear too obviously the stamp of the left-wing French symbolist movement which was dead by the beginning of the century."
— Nation 128:140 Ja 30 '29 130w

"Miss Newman's translation of some of the most tortuously difficult French ever written into firm, rich and beautiful English prose is not only a technical accomplishment of the first order, but the example of Laforgue's distilled and crystalline art which she has made possible is likely to have salutary consequences on a serious-reading public."
+ N Y Times p12 D 23 '28 850w

"Laforgue's travesties of Hamlet, Lohengrin, Salome, Pan, and Perseus lose none of their delightfully acid flavor in Miss Newman's Englishing of the book."
+ No Am 227:adv F '29 80w

LAIRD, DONALD ANDERSON. Psychology and profits. 272p $3.50 Forbes pub. co.

331.015 Psychology, Applied. Efficiency, Industrial. Employment management 29-12351

"Profits arise from putting the right man on the right job, seeing that he is not the victim of excessive and remediable fatigue, encouraging him to develop himself (by a bonus or sharing of profit) and building up a morale in the ranks of workers which will cause them to exert themselves beyond ordinary limits for their employers. Executives everywhere should welcome some of the practical suggestions in Dr. Laird's book."—Bookm

Bookm 70:vi S '29 120w

"Dr. Laird's amusing and thought-provoking scrapbook might be read with almost equal profit in almost any order, as it has been said of Emerson's essays that paragraphs and even sentences can be transposed without obvious loss of logical order. . . If his book is not a closely knit, systematic presentation in which every chapter logically follows from what has gone before, it is none the less entertaining." E: T. Divine
+ Outlook 152:550 Jl 31 '29 480w

LAJPAT, RAYA. Unhappy India. 565p $3 Hindustan assoc. of America, 500 Riverside Drive, N.Y.

915.4 India—Social conditions. India—Economic conditions. Women in India. Mayo, Katherine [29-620]

Lajpat Rai has replied to "Mother India" with a counter-attack on moral and social conditions in America and Europe. Where the author has yielded to the truth of certain of Miss Mayo's statements concerning India he has at once laid the blame for these existing evils at the door of the British Raj.

"Miss Mayo's attack on India has called out a crushing reply in his book, 'Unhappy India.' Even if the writing seems to take on the qualities of a lawyer's brief at times, and if the numerous quotations are somewhat tiring, the thoroughness of preparation, the careful accuracy of data, the fund of information conveyed are impressive." Gertrude Emerson
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 30 '28 1200w

Reviewed by E: Thompson
Nation and Ath 43:428 Je 30 '28 850w

"It is devoutly to be hoped that we have reached the last round in this unsavoury controversy. Every nation has social cancers of its own, and its own unwholesome underworld; but no sane patriot likes to have them laid bare and dissected before all mankind, especially by a foreigner. A bad-tempered polemic, however, like Lala Lajpat Rai's, serves no good purpose."
— Spec 141:302 S 8 '28 850w

"Lala Lajpat Rai's book is a compilation and is therefore unequal. His twelfth chapter, a study of the position of women in ancient India, which was originally published in a New York journal, shows scholarship and sanity. Elsewhere he ranges from shrewd debating thrusts to wholesale vituperation, expressed in abuse of plaintiff's attorney."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p601 Ag 23 '28 900w

LAMANDE, ANDRE. Montaigne, grave and gay; tr. from the French by Alfred van Ameyden van Duym. 303p il $3 Holt

Montaigne, Michel Eyquem de—Fiction 28-25385

A vivacious and rather sentimentally written story of Montaigne, translated from the French by Alfred van Ameyden van Duym and illustrated from contemporary portraits.

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Bookm 68:592 Ja '29 200w

"His life of Montaigne is full of charm. It would, indeed, be a difficult matter to pasteurize all the flavor out of the intensely appealing personality of the old essayist, and Lamandé is not a bungler, although his book is, no doubt to some degree intentionally almost as random and abrupt as his hero. The translator has seen fit to equip his far from perfect English version with a very un-Montaignelike introduction which is in several respects inaccurate." R. T. House
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 3 '29 300w

"An excellent biography of the Sage of Perigord, written in the form of an historical novel and laying particular emphasis upon the earlier years of the great French humanitarian. M. Lamandé has much of the charm of Maurois." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv D '28 70w

LAMBERT, ARTHUR WILSON, jr. Modern archery. 306p il $3 Barnes, A.S. & co.

799.32 Archery 29-12579

"A text book on the art of shooting for accuracy with the bow and arrow, illustrated with photographs and drawings by the author."—Subtitle

Booklist 26:20 O '29

"In 'Modern Archery,' the champion of the Mid West Archery Association of the United States in 1927 has written a guide for both novice and student. As the work amply achieves his purpose in so many respects, Mr. Lambert may perhaps be pardoned if in places he lapses into discussions of a technical nature more suitable for experts. It may be that such places, unintelligible on a first reading to the tyro, will increase the value of the work on a second reading."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 6 '29 280w

St Louis 27:310 N '29

"A new treatise on archery, written by such a famous American archer as Mr. Lambert, has certainly provided a welcome addition to every archer's library and one which should do much good towards raising the standard of that ancient pastime. It is a book which, besides appealing to existing archers, should, by its fascinating reading, tempt others who have not already done so to take up archery."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p845 O 24 '29 850w

LAMBERT, SAMUEL WALDRON, and GOODWIN, GEORGE MUNRO. Medical leaders from Hippocrates to Osler. 330p il $5 Bobbs

926.1 Medicine—Biography. Medicine—History 29-21902

"Drs. Lambert and Goodwin provide a survey of the development of medicine from the beginnings of medicine as a science to the realization of what medicine has accomplished. They terminate their survey logically with the contribution to Osler who may be considered the apotheosis of the practicing physician and with Gorgas who most practically realized preventive medicine. In the course of their book they give us the biographies of all of the great contributors to medical discovery and medical practice, not neglecting even the great among the charlatans."—N Y World

---

"It is a thrilling story of the advance of medical science from the welter of superstition to the heights of accurate knowledge, and it is told here so clearly and effectively that the layman can read it with understanding and appreciation." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 16 '29 700w

"One of the most capable and perhaps quite the most interesting of all the many accounts of the history of the development of medicine that have appeared in a long time."

+ N Y Times p38 D 1 '29 480w

"This volume may be classed among the best of one volume histories of medicine, suitable for either the lay or the medical reader but lacking in the dramatic interest that makes for wide public appeal." Morris Fishbein

+ N Y World p10m D 15 '29 280w

Outlook 153:350 O 30 '29 30w

LAMBORN, EDMUND ARNOLD GREENING. Parish church; its architecture and antiquities. 160p il $1.50 (3s 6d) Oxford

726 Church architecture 29-15048

A short history of the English parish church containing chapters on the plan, roof, buttresses, the windows and doorways, ornaments, materials, the porch, the nave, the chancel, tombs and monuments, and stained glass. Illustrated with photographs and diagrams.

---

New Statesman 33:374 Je 29 '29 140w

"It tells the amateur exactly what he wants to know about the plan, the styles, the fabric, the monuments and glass in a mediaeval English church, and it is so abundantly illustrated with line-drawings that no one can misinterpret the author's text. The traveller with this book in his pocket will be able to interpret the evidence that any old church bears on its time-worn walls, and to discover new points of interest in the buildings that he thinks he knows well."

+ Spec 143:138 Jl 27 '29 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p634 Ag 15 '29 280w

LANCELOT. Sir Lancelot of the Lake; a French prose romance of the thirteenth century; with an introd. and notes by Lucy Allen Paton. (Broadway medieval lib.) 420p il $5 Harcourt [18s Routledge]

Lancelot

The history of the life of Sir Lancelot of the Lake, translated from the thirteenth century French prose manuscripts found in the Bibliothèque nationale.

---

"As far as can be seen, Miss Paton has done her difficult task excellently; and the publishers have given her admirable assistance. The printing is clear and accurate; and the forty-six plates, all of them reproduction of medieval designs, are delightful."

+ New Statesman 34:22 O 12 '29 600w

"It is an admirable translation, scholarly without being pedantic archaic without being archaistic, charming both to the eye and ear. . . The material of this book has been judiciously selected and pieced together to give the history of Sir Lancelot's life and his achievements in the service of Queen Guinevere, and in addition to its intrinsic interest and charm it gives a valuable picture of French chivalry of the thirteenth century."

+ Spec 143:823 N 30 '29 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p808 O 17 '29 600w

LANDAU, MARK ALEKSANDROVICH (M. A. ALDANOV, pseud.). Devil's bridge; tr. from the Russian by A. E. Chamot. 325p $3 (7s 6d) Knopf

28-25959

This is the second volume of an historical trilogy of which the first was The Ninth Thermidor (Book Review Digest, 1926). It continues the amorous and military adventures of the foppish young Lieutenant Staal, and ends during the war with France, with Field-Marshall Suvorov's campaign at Devil's Bridge.

---

"Its curious astringent tone and its bitterly realistic portrait of the old Russian general make it just worth reading; but one hardly feels that Aldanov is actually interested in or moved by the artistic possibilities of his subject. Rather this seems to be the manufacture of a frigid and clever dilettante." C. P. Fadiman

— + Bookm 68:588 Ja '29 230w

Reviewed by Dorothy Brewster

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 23 '28 220w

Boston Transcript p2 D 15 '28 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p47 Mr '29

"It is untidy in design, as Russian novels are apt to be, though firm enough in its detail; but by its very untidiness, which is certainly due to no feebleness of grasp on the part of the author, it suggests the untidiness and uncertainty of life in a way that mere virtuosity can never do." V. Sackville-West

+ Nation and Ath 44:416 D 15 '28 220w

"This is one of the better historical novels; there is a pleasant mixture of irony and romance, the characters are vivid, the events are real." Cyril Connolly

+ New Statesman 32:471 Ja 19 '29 140w

"The book is interesting, a graphic account of a comparatively unfamiliar phase of one of the most dramatic periods in the world's history."

+ N Y Times p32 N 18 '28 550w

N Y World p11e Ja 6 '29 100w

"It is a very fine novel, full of splendid scenes which gain additional impressiveness from the detached, slightly inhuman manner of their narration." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 146:824 D 15 '28 80w

"Aldanov is a writer of considerable imaginative power, free from historical, though not, perhaps, from political prejudice and possessed of a gift of mordant irony. It is not yet possible to decide on the merit of the whole work, although there can be no doubt about the author's historical grasp and the boldness of his approach."

Times [London] Lit Sup p1024 D 27 '28 650w

LANDAU, ROM. Pilsudski and Poland; tr. by Geoffrey Dunlop. 305p il $5 Dial press [18s Jarrolds]

B or 92 Pilsudski, Jósef. Poland—Politics and government 29-25940

Marshal Pilsudski's passion for his country and his heroic effort to bring about Polish independence, is the dominant note in Rom Landau's biography of the man and his career. Writing from the sympathetic point of view of the Slav, the author presents his hero as something more than a post-war dictator, and something less, in moments of weakness and indecision, than a dictator with imagination and temperament ought to be.

---

Reviewed by V. P. Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 D 22 '29 1000w

"The biographer seems to strip veil after veil from his hero, yet to keep him ever veiled; in leaving between the reader—the non-Slavic reader, that is—and the portrait held before his eyes a final veil he endows his venture into patriotic hero-worship with an alluring mystery." T. R. Ybarra

N Y Times p1 D 15 '29 2000w

LANDAU, ROM—Continued

"It is too early to appraise Pilsudski's greatness, either as warrior or as constructive statesman. Meanwhile, this book presents us with important data on which such an appraisal may eventually be based. It is better as an interpretation of the modern Polish spirit than as a concrete evidence of achievement."

+ R of Rs 81:18 Ja '30 200w

LANDMAN, ISAAC, ed. Christian and Jew; a symposium for better understanding. 374p il $3 Liveright

296 Jewish question. Christianity and other religions—Judaism 29-10461

A symposium on the problems confronting Christian and Jew and their inter-relationships, by a number of outstanding contributors.

"Dr. Landman's symposium is remarkable if only because of the number and variety of the contributors whom he has persuaded to assemble in his volume. . . It is an extraordinary company—which explains why a subject which has been discussed for centuries is here made fresh again." J: H. Holmes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Je 2 '29 420w

Nation 128:772 Je 26 '29 150w

N Y Times p17 Jl 7 '29 420w

Outlook 152:148 My 22 '29 220w

"With the exception of Hendrick Van Loon's brilliant essays on the spirit of jingoism and Jacob Wassermann's blunt declaration on the futility of mollifying the anti-Semite, this book contains nothing of value in the field of research and understanding. It is an iterative expression of sentimental good-will and superficial thinking."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:1030 My 18 '29 80w

LANDON, HERMAN. Death on the air. 320p $2 Liveright

29-8317

Something new in murder methods is devised by the author in this tale of the death as predicted of a prominent citizen who has been warned that he will "die to music."

Bookm 69:xxv My '29 20w

"Here we have a brand new method of killing people. Diabolically ingenious and highly exciting, as Mr. Landon tells it, the new technique may be said to fill a long felt want in the way of mysteries." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 7 '29 100w

Boston Transcript p5 My 18 '29 130w

"It is no easy matter nowadays to invent a new method of committing murder. Mr. Landon has worked hard to invent one, and he deserves credit for his efforts. The only trouble is that he does not quite succeed in making the story convincing."

+ — N Y Times p20 My 5 '29 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '29 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1005 N 28 '29 200w

LANE, JEREMY. Left hand of God. 312p $2 Washburn

29-20645

"Violent and enigmatic happenings in Washington, Paris and Peking (with a side trip to the Gobi desert) having to do with an Oriental conspiracy to subdue the white races."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Jeremy Lane proves, if nothing else, that international intrigue need not be a bore. The fancier of highly flavored adventure should surely extract his fill of thrills from 'The Left Hand of God.' Dale Caslon of the American secret service obliges competently as hero."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 O 6 '29 80w

Boston Transcript p4 O 19 '29 200w

"A good adventure yarn—impossible, but exciting." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:312 O 23 '29 40w

LANGBRIDGE, ROSAMOND GRANT. Charlotte Brontë, a psychological study. 260p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [8s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92 Brontë, Charlotte 29-24051

A psychological biography of Charlotte Brontë, beginning with her pathetically gloomy and suppressed childhood and ending with her happy but uninteresting marriage.

"Her tone lacks charity. Nevertheless, in extenuation, her volume will serve excellently as a commentary upon that of Mrs. Gaskell." J: Chamberlain

— + Bookm 70:454 D '29 650w

"That most of the biographical literature upon Charlotte Brontë is derived from Mrs. Gaskell's chronicle of her friend is necessarily true, and Miss Langbridge is justified in endeavouring to remove some of the superfluous whitewash of a Victorian apotheosis. One is disturbed, however, in the first two pages of this 'psychological study,' by the unrestrained bitterness with which the author spares not even the authorities from whom she has obviously collected much of her material."

Nation and Ath 46:56 O 12 '29 250w

"To write of Charlotte Brontë and of Mrs. Gaskell, as Miss Langbridge too often does, as if they ought to have been acquainted with Freud and Jung, and to assume at the same time that psycho-analysis has a permanent validity, is really as silly as to expect the Brontës to know about and consider the consequences of modern plumbing and central heating. . . Miss Langbridge is often at fault in her analysis of the Brontë household and especially in her account of the girls' attitude to their father, and in Charlotte's attitude to M. Héger and her suitors." R. E. Roberts

— New Statesman 34:sup v N 9 '29 1550w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p12m N 16 '29 180w

"The Brontë Admiration Society (and there is a large one that was formerly headed by the late Clement Shorter) will not care for 'Charlotte Brontë: A Psychological Study.' And yet they should; for this tightly knit and admirably handled analysis endows Charlotte Brontë with more life and quickens our sympathy for her to a greater extent than any such saccharin praise as Mrs. Gaskell's famous 'Life,' for instance. . . A book that is soundly conceived, charmingly written and well worth placing on the shelf beside Miss Romer Wilson's 'All Alone: The Life and Private History of Emily Brontë.' " Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 O 27 '29 2000w

"Miss Langbridge has given us an entertaining, if not always convincing, study, which is certain to be provoking to the present day lovers of the three sisters." C. G. Bowers

+ — N Y World p10m N 10 '29 1100w

"Miss Langbridge has genuine if somewhat too conscious independence,' and she is outspoken enough. But her moral indignation is fatiguing in the long run, and she too often presents quarter-truths as whole truths. There is, in short, an air of 'the truth about Charlotte Brontë' pervading this book. Mrs Gaskell's book had obvious limitations, but it was a biography; Miss Langbridge's is a rather too violent exercise in psychology."

— + Sat R 148:327 S 21 '29 100w

LANGDON-DAVIES, JOHN. Dancing Catalans. 220p $2.50 Harper [6s J. Cape]

914.67 Dancing. Catalonia—Social life and customs. Spain—Description and travel

29-26888

Watching the Sardana, the national dance of the Catalans, has set Mr Langdon-Davies to philosophising in familiar strain on the dance and sex, and the temperamental differences between north and south, the old civilization and the new.

Booklist 26:65 N '29

"'Dancing Catalans' should appeal to a far wider audience than is numbered by the people directly interested in Spain, although it needs to be recommended especially by prospective visitors to the present International Exposition in Barcelona. It is an urbane, intelligent, well done study of a fascinating country and people." Herschel Brickell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Jl 28 '29 1200w

Nation 129:637 N 27 '29 220w

Reviewed by Sylva Norman

Nation and Ath 45:sup137 Ap 27 '29 180w

"The argument widens finally into a prayer for the genial, communal, pagan gaiety of the Mediterranean, against the anti-social, sex-ridden gaiety of the industrialised world. Mr. Langdon-Davies is distinctly better when he leaves these always useless comparisons between one civilization and another and keeps to the dance, its technique, its pietic emulation of the Mediterranean waves, its mountain setting, the lives and customs of its dancers. This he does intelligently and with a sober distinction which make an otherwise merely clever book absorbing and commendable."

+ New Statesman 32:826 Ap 6 '29 210w

"Although the author devotes only one chapter to a description of the picturesque topographical surroundings of the Catalan people, it is these pages which best illustrate his gift for pantheistic prose imagery. Whereas his style is somewhat detached and lacking in narrative detail, is is filled with such pointed phrases as 'the cradle song of choirs of insects' or the description of the breathing Pyrenees, 'like the chests of athletic giants.' "

+ — N Y Times p5 Ag 18 '29 500w

"There is something of the poet as well as the moralist about Mr. Langdon-Davies. On the whole, we prefer the former, as he describes that setting of mountains and sea and finds in the small, undirected Mediterranean waves the inspiration of the dance ring which rises up and subsides upon itself. . . To say that 'clothes and Christianity killed sculpture and thereby reduced that total beauty of the universe' and calmly ignore Christianity's inspiration of painting is one of the many half-truths into which Mr. Langdon-Davies tumbles some of his arguments. But there is enough genuine thought and beauty in this book to make it well worth reading."

+ — Sat R 147:510 Ap 13 '29 730w

"Possessing 'a beauty of motion almost lost in our cities,' this old-world ring dance is first and last 'a communal ceremony, a social ritual,' a truism that sets the author off on a round of mental comparisons which reflect unvaryingly and almost wearisomely the impact of South on North."

Spec 142:976 Je 22 '29 780w

"Mr Langdon-Davies's volume offers mild entertainment and some instruction."

Springf'd Republican p12 S 26 '29 380w

"There are a good many references to America scattered up and down the book: we should like to see Scandinavia, and more particularly Sweden, sometimes used as a model or a comparison. It is a comparison which would never occur to any Catalan, but it might attract Mr. Langdon-Davies. As it is, he has written a book which is quite different from the average book on Spain, for it is founded on personal knowledge of Spanish people."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p506 Je 27 '29 800w

LANGSTAFF, JOHN BRETT. From now to Adam; Peter Tompkins' adventures in the Bible. 190p il $5 Harper

220.9 Bible—History of Biblical events

28-21509

Peter Tompkins, a small boy of today, goes to sleep at a midnight Christmas service and dreams himself back in Bible lands and Bible times where he is an interested spectator at many of the striking events of Old Testament story. The book of Peter's adventures is illustrated from conventionalized pictures in color. The author is rector of the children's cathedral in Walden, N.Y.

"Mr. Langstaff's method gives great vivacity and reality to the stories."

+ N Y Times p10 S 23 '28 180w

"The narrative takes the form of an elaborate fairy story, into which the gems of the scriptural stories and their morals are made to fit as into a well-adapted setting."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 23 '28 200w

LANIER, HENRY WYSHAM, ed. Author's annual, 1929. 211p $1.50 Payson & Clarke

029 Authorship—Handbooks, manuals, etc. Publishers and publishing. Bibliography—Best books

29-26475

"Perhaps the most comprehensive title for the book would be 'The Literary Annual,' for the eleven sections into which it is divided deal wholly with literary matters and statistics. In its contents comes first of all an article on 'The Business Side of Writing,' by Jean Wick, and then follows 'The Book Clubs and their 1928 Selections,' 'Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners,' 'Best Selling Books in 1928,' 'Fifty Beautiful Books,' 'A Show of Book Illustrations,' 'Forty Notable American Books of 1927,' 'Romans a Clef: Real People Behind Fiction Characters,' 'The Vexed Question of Advertising,' 'A B C of Copyright,' and 'Preparing Manuscript and Proofreading.' "—Boston Transcript

Booklist 25:343 Je '29

"As a whole, the manual is invaluable for all literary workers."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 6 '29 280w

"Various information that will be useful and interesting, especially to authors and those who have authorship ambitions."

+ N Y Times p15 Ap 7 '29 280w

LAPIDUS, I., and OSTROVITYANOV, K. Outline of political economy; political economy and soviet economics. 546p $3.25 Int. pub. [12s 6d Lawrence]

330 Economics. Russia—Economic conditions

Once the writers of "An outline of political economy" establish labor as the basis of value, they proceed to show how wage-labour is exploited by the capitalist for surplus labor which is acquired by him in the form of surplus value because of his ownership of the means of production and consumption; and how the use to which surplus labor is put differs in Soviet Russia. Thus they consider the problems of political economy alongside those of Soviet economy. They conclude that the capitalist system is breeding the germ for its own death, and explain their theories as to how the transition from capitalism to socialism will come about.

"It might have been supposed that two leading Russian Marxists, writing a stout treatise on economics for the use of students in the Soviet Union, would have found something new to say by drawing on the rich experience of the past twelve years. In fact, however, they present a merely uncritical re-hash of orthodox Marxism, and do not venture to change a comma, or to add even a subordinate clause to the familiar doctrine. Confronted with the facts of the new Soviet economy, they can find nothing more to say than that many of Marx's statements do not apply to it, because Marx was writing of Capitalism, and Soviet enterprise is not capitalist. . . It is apparently improper for Marxists to think about economics; that was all done for them by the master."

— New Statesman 34:18 O 12 '29 160w

"There is here very little—surprisingly little—that is original in the theoretical handling of Russian economic problems; and the authors' tendency is to cloak all problems under the magic phrase, 'economic planning.' But, if we wish to understand what the Russians' own conception of their policy is, we have it here;

LAPIDUS, I., and OSTROVITYANOV, K.—Cont. and on the whole the authors approach their subject without rhetoric and with discrimination and restraint."
+ — Spec 143:sup461 O 5 '29 550w

LA PRADE, ERNEST. Marching notes. 190p il $1.25 Doubleday, Doran

781 Music—Instruction and study 29-17661

This entertaining book teaches the elements of rhythm, harmony and musical form. "Several years ago, Mr. Laprade, formerly a member of the New York Symphony Orchestra, wrote a book called 'Alice in Orchestralia.' In it he introduced children most delightfully into the mysteries of musical instruments and to their significance in the orchestral ensemble. 'Marching Notes' is an ingenious and vivid answer to Alice's question 'How many notes make a piece?' She is forthwith transported to a far country where the notes come alive. To her astonishment, she finds that each has a place in a well-trained army and that the rules and regulations of that army are complicated and numerous." (Sat R of Lit)

Cleveland Open Shelf p135 N '29

St Louis 27:316 N '29

"Mr. Laprade contrives to be clear and entertaining at the same time. . . Alice, with her new knowledge, discovers new joys in listening to music,—joys that one could wish for every child. 'Marching Notes,' however, is not a book for every child. It should be read either with guidance, or by a child with some musical knowledge and enthusiasm."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:428 N 16 '29 250w

LARDNER, RING W. Round up. 467p $2.50 Scribner

29-9877

A round up of the best of Ring Lardner's stories previously published in magazines and other collections.

Booklist 25:395 Jl '29

"The short stories brought together in 'Round Up' must be counted among the few that will be readable twenty years hence. Out of our flavorless life Mr. Lardner has extracted a flavor; out of the boiler-plate of current slang he has achieved a living speech; out of canned goods and synthetic breakfast foods he has produced, with consummate art, a seven-course dinner. From a hundred dead jokes and banal witticisms and cheap wisecracks he has created a commentary which is as funny to a mature mind as the original repartee seemed to the vulgar." L: Mumford
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ap 14 '29 1250w

"All critics who abstain from remarking upon the kinship of Ring Lardner's genius to that of O. Henry are proud of an avoidance of the obvious. Following their excellent example I make no mention of O. Henry in this connection, except to say that, if one were naming three writers who are as American as ham and eggs and in whom a surface triviality conceals a genuine insight so that they are read with hilarious joy by millions who don't know how good they are but only how amusing—the other one would be George Ade."
+ Christian Century 46:748 Je 5 '29 50w

"Mr. Lardner is the deadliest because the coldest of American writers. Unlike Sinclair Lewis, he is without a soft streak. He really hates his characters, hates them so much that he has ceased to be indignant at them. There is almost no emotion left. . . Far better than any other contemporary chronicle, his stories develop the basically democratic character of America: a democracy of snobs, fools, and moral cowards. We are all equal because we are all base. Where all are ignoble, there is no class division." C. P. Fadiman
Nation 128:536 My 1 '29 780w

"In this brief and rather impressionistic review of one aspect of Ring Lardner's latest book, I have chosen to compare him, not with the avowedly dedicated writers of his own generation, but rather with Shakespeare and Chekhov, writers whose attitude seems to have been as unpretentious, whose aims as sensible. For Lardner, like Shakespeare and Chekhov, has owed his literary existence (and has repaid it by writing for them) to the common people of his day, the people who have been talking prose all their lives, and will never know it." T. S. Matthews
New Repub 59:35 My 22 '29 1450w

"What strikes one first of all in reading this collection is Lardner's magnificent variety, his technical resources, his ability to cope with any sort of personality from the moron and the sadist up through 'just folks' to those who get wide credit for being our 'best people.' . . 'Round Up' gives the full measure of his talent—a talent that is mature and sure-footed." J: Chamberlain
+ N Y Times p2 Ap 7 '29 1350w

"A part of this chosen volume is substantial and durable literature, but the greater part is simply entertainment. Beyond skill in reporting, thorough knowledge of the ordinary American and his mind, and a satirical talent which gives the slightest of his sketches an edge, Mr. Lardner's endowments are not remarkable. There is no story here which leaves the reader in a mood of exultation, or which for a moment wrings his feelings, or which has a poignant artistry." Allan Nevins
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1089 Je 8 '29 1800w

"Under the gutter slang, the vulgar cheapness of phrase, the poverty of emotional experience, there is a deft and sober portraiture of various phases of middle-class life in this ultraprosperous democracy. . . Told ungrammatically, prosaically, with no romance or poetry, all of a sudden these tales are seen to mean something significant, as an index to average American culture."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '29 400w

Wis Lib Bul 25:162 My '29

LARRABEE, HAROLD ATKINS. What philosophy is. 204p $2 Vanguard press

102 Philosophy 28-23213

"Of the many books about philosophy this one can claim only to be the most elementary. People often say: 'I don't know the first thing about philosophy. . . .' This book tries to acquaint such readers with some of the 'first things' which they might like to know about it, such as: what philosophy is, why men practice it, how they go about it, and what results they have achieved."—Foreword

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p40 D 2 '28 130w

"The reader is given the sort of aid that introductory lectures in the subject give to the college student. No technical jargon, except the few type names are used, and the entire exposition is concise, admirably explicit and ably presented."
+ Boston Transcript p8 O 6 '28 300w

Christian Century 46:1016 Ag 14 '29 70w

"Excellent suggestions are given for further reading. The book is not entirely free of prejudice against certain viewpoints, but it is a real achievement in answering the question contained in its title. It can be read at one sitting, and is an attractive instance of book-making." O. F. Myers
+ Int J Ethics 39:374 Ap '29 140w

"The author is interested in the relation of philosophy, religion, and science, an exciting central theme which ought to produce an exciting book. But the subject loses all edge under his monotonously chatty treatment. One may doubt whether the book would sustain the interest of many general readers, for its flavor is too mild. But its bibliographical material and classification of current philosophy will give it a certain value in the public library." P. N. Youtz
— + J Philos 26:220 Ap 11 '29 600w

"The layman perforce will marvel a little at the ease, the skill, the clarity and the simplicity with which Professor Larrabee makes this exposition of the nature, the history, the content and the purpose of philosophy. It is a book intended solely for the reading of those who want a simplified approach."
+ N Y Times p10 S 30 '28 430w

LARRIMORE, LIDA. The wagon and the star. 319p $2 Macrae Smith co.
29-8005

How Elizabeth Lloyd, young, beautiful and rich, loved David Warren, protégé of Jerry the antique dealer, and how she defied her aristocratic grandmother and eventually married the right man.

---

"Miss Larrimore's story is stuffed cozily with nice, homey characters and sentiment."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 5 '29 80w

"She gives the reader a vivid impression of the immediate scene, but she is greatly in need of many other requirements of the skillful novelist."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Jl 10 '29 150w

"It satisfies that tender mood that wants lightness and youth and beauty, that wants to be stirred by the heartaches of love, and its charm, knowing always that everything will come out as it should."
+ N Y Times p28 S 22 '29 130w

"The writing does not give distinction to the theme, but it avoids sentimentality and provides entertainment. A good book to read in a train, and not a bad book to leave in a train."
Sat R of Lit 5:1005 My 11 '29 120w

LARSEN, HANNA ASTRUP, ed. Denmark's best stories; an introd. to modern Danish fiction; with an introd. and biographical notes. (Scandinavian classics) 377p $2.50 Am.-Scandinavian foundation; Norton
28-26939

A collection of short stories by sixteen representative Danish authors. The writers included are: Andersen, Blicher, Goldschmidt, Jacobsen, Schandorph, Drachmann, Bang, Pontoppidan, Wied, Karl Larsen, Skjoldborg, Nexö, Jensen, Söiberg, and Gunnarsson.

---

Booklist 25:165 Ja '29

"The stories in 'Denmark's Best Stories' are, on the whole, inferior in quality and variety to those contained in the other two collections published by the American Scandinavian Foundation. This latest anthology is interesting as a source book, as an introduction to Danish fiction and as a collection of tales." Eugene Lohrke
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 F 3 '29 580w

"A curiously pleasing sense of originality and freshness pervade this collection of stories written in Denmark during the past century. Almost without exception, the characters themselves seem to create the plots for their authors and carry the actions to logical, if not always happy conclusions. . . Vivid and unforgetable characters emerge in this collection of stories." A. L. Olsen
+ N Y Times p15 D 30 '28 800w

Reviewed by Bernard Smith
N Y World p11m F 10 '29 150w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 150:1378 D 19 '28 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p968 N 14 '29 140w

LARSEN, JOHANNES ANKER. See Anker-Larsen, J.

LARSEN, NELLA. Passing. 216p $2 Knopf
29-9990

The story of two fair-skinned Negroes both white enough to be Caucasians. Clare Kendry is living a dangerous life, "passing" in white society, and married to a man who is ignorant of her Negro blood. A chance meeting with Irene Redfield, a childhood friend who has remained loyal to her race, inspires Clare with a longing to associate with her own people. The tragic climax occurs at a Harlem party where Clare is discovered by her white husband.

---

"It is the perfunctory background that accounts for the reader's dissatisfaction with a well told and at times a really moving story, related in a careful, well-balanced prose, and revealing with sincerity and at times with subtlety a group of finely differentiated characters. This is a contribution of value to the growing list of 'border line' literature." Esther Hyman
+ — Bookm 69:427 Je '29 580w

Reviewed by M. C. Dawson
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ap 28 '29 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p110 Jl '29

"In spite of the suspiciously 'made' ending, and in spite of Clare's posed beauty, 'Passing' is on the whole an effective and convincing attempt to portray certain aspects of a vexatious problem. The fact that it is by a girl who is partly of negro blood adds to the effectiveness."
+ — N Y Times p14 Ap 28 '29 500w

"Miss Larsen has produced a work so fine, sensitive, and distinguished that it rises above race categories and becomes that rare object, a good novel." W. B. Seabrook
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1017 My 18 '29 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1060 D 12 '29 260w

LARSSON, RAYMOND ELLSWORTH. O city, cities! 104p $2.50 Payson & Clarke 811 29-19638

"Mr. Larsson's book purports to be influenced in its formal structure by the music of Bach, but although the title poem is stated to be a double fugue and chorale, and although scattered over its pages one comes upon several resonant chords, the influence that seems paramount here is not that of the old German master of religious music. It is, rather, of a would-be pietist and heartily acknowledged poet of this faith-hungry century: T. S. Eliot."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Bookm 70:xiv N '29 180w

"As one reads this book, one feels as though one were living in a gallery of echoes. The images and some of the cadences of Eliot, the brittle locution of E. E. Cummings, a phrase or two that one has heard played on Pound's lute in tender moments,—all combine to make of this a haunted book. It is not so much that Mr. Larsson has nothing new to say. One's quarrel with him is that he has not found his own particular way of saying it. One is the more impatient with him because one is vaguely conscious, among all his ghosts, of the man's essential vitality. One wonders how long it will be before he emerges from the asphodel fields into the light of day." Babette Deutsch
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 O 6 '29 350w

Boston Transcript p2 D 28 '29 180w

"Larsson is an imagist, a nostalgic imagist, and all that he has jotted down, as he has wandered from one Continental city to another, seems hesitant, tentative, as though he were waiting for one of those 'unpredictable crystallizations' which come to the most mature of poets so rarely and which have not yet come to him." E: Dahlberg
— New Repub 60:180 O 2 '29 400w

"If one will neglect the mannerisms into which Mr. Larsson has been led, one will find that the poetry springs from genuine emotional experience, that it has strength and warmth of expression and beauty of a novel sort. 'O City, Cities!' is unusual poetry that many will like because of its strangeness."
+ — N Y Times p36 O 27 '29 300w

LARSSON, R. E.—Continued

"Frankly experimental in manner and perfectly irregular in construction, Ellsworth Larsson's verse has the merit of originality. But in spite of the jacket's statement to the contrary, it can easily 'be read with indifference.' "

— Outlook 153:187 O 2 '29 60w

LASCELLES, EDWARD CHARLES PONSONBY. Granville Sharp and the freedom of slaves in England. 152p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 Sharp, Granville. Slavery in Great Britain. Slave trade—Great Britain [29-5841]

A short biography of the English philanthropist, 1735-1813, who was much involved in the struggle for the liberation of slaves in England, who advocated the cause of the American colonies and was prominent in the British and foreign Bible society and many other like movements.

"Coming out of his brother's surgery in Mincing Lane, Granville Sharp encountered a Negro slave waiting at the door for treatment. This fortuitous encounter made English history, for it marked the inception of Sharp's interest in stamping out the British slave trade and the abolition of slavery. It is a fascinating episode of the eighteenth century, and Mr. Lascelles presents it concisely and well."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 F 3 '29 130w

"Consists of Hoare's Memoirs of Granville Sharp cut down and dished up in a mildly modern manner." R. R. S.

— Eng Hist R 44:499 Jl '29 130w

"In the flood of biographies [this] small book of 150 pages may well escape notice, yet, historically and biographically, it is one of the most entertaining published this season. It is much to Mr. Lascelles's credit that he has learnt just enough from the modern method to make his book amusing and still leave it serious." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 43:463 Jl 7 '28 1100w

New Statesman 32:supxviii D 1 '28 650w

"Mr. Lascelles gives us a brief but complete and satisfactory account of the long war waged by Granville Sharp in the English law courts at the end of the eighteenth century to establish the principle that a slave ceased to be a slave when he landed in England. The writhings and wrigglings of that great lawyer, Lord Mansfield, in his attempts to avoid being compelled to lay down a general principle, while Granville Sharp brought case after case before him, form not the least interesting and amusing part of the book."

+ Sat R 146:219 Ag 18 '28 170w

"Mr. Lascelles tells the story sympathetically but critically, and his book is entirely worth while." W: MacDonald

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1000 My 11 '29 700w

"A book as informing as it is witty."

+ Spec 141:300 S 8 '28 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p478 Je 28 '28 780w

LASKER, BRUNO. Race attitudes in children. 394p $4 Holt

136.74 Race problems. Child study. United States—Race question 29-9359

A study of the development of race attitudes in children: how race attitudes are acquired; how they are expressed; and what may be done to modify existing attitudes among children and to inculcate the right ones.

Reviewed by E. B. Reuter

Am J Soc 35:491 N '29 600w

Booklist 25:379 Jl '29

Bookm 69:vi Je '29 170w

"Students of child psychology will be much interested in a book which treats the development of certain social attitudes toward members of other races and groups during the period of early childhood. . . The book presents a very stimulating discussion, which will be of particular interest to teachers and school administrators in cities where foreign populations create race problems in the schools. It is worth careful reading." G. T. Buswell

+ El School J 30:233 N '29 380w

"This book makes no pretense of being ultra-scientific or statistical. By making what use he could of the material available, the author has obtained more valuable results than could have been obtained had he attempted to wring scientific exactness from material not containing that desirable quality." C. M. Perry

+ Int J Ethics 39:510 Jl '29 150w

"A highly purposeful and lively book which will be useful to teachers and parents. It explores, nimbly and inclusively, the entire range of the child's attitude toward children and adults of other races and nationalities."

+ Nation 128:771 Je 26 '29 200w

"He is well aware of the fact that qualitative phenomena cannot be measured, but only sensed and estimated, and his critical remarks upon the mathematical vagaries of psychological testers are positively soul-searing. . . He is, I feel certain, in the right path, and it is to be hoped that the other volumes to be published under the auspices of the Inquiry will prove as illuminating and as wise." Alexander Goldenweiser

+ New Repub 59:213 Jl 10 '29 650w

"The volume is refreshingly free from argument or exhortation. If it makes any plea it is rather implied than explicit—and suggests only a decent regard for the rights of other people, irrespective of their racial ancestry or their color." O. R. Lovejoy

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Je 15 '29 720w

"This pathfinding discussion of the character and origins of race attitudes and the means by which they may be modified has none of the irritating ear-marks of the investigation upon which it is based. The scaffolding has been removed. There is no parade of technique." E. T. Devine

+ Outlook 152:70 My 8 '29 1300w

St Louis 27:305 N '29

"Mr. Lasker's analysis of the factors which enter into the formation of race attitudes, is by all odds the most painstaking and discriminating known to this reviewer. . . A unique feature of the book is the fact that it grew out of a three year study of a committee composed of experts and laymen and that it embodies a cross section of the experience and opinion of hundreds of parents, educators and social workers in every section of the country." H: M. Busch

+ Survey 62:206 My 1 '29 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p439 My 30 '29 100w

"Like an expert naturalist who takes us away from intricate scientific apparatus out into the woods and fields and there talks to us of the life habits of birds and flowers, by means of his many case studies, each still clothed in the simple, dramatic language in which it was sent to him, he takes us for a walk in the field of childhood." Rachel Davis-DuBois

+ World Tomorrow 12:375 S '29 600w

LATIMER, MARGERY. Nellie Bloom, and other stories. 308p $2 Sears

29-8316

Short stories by the author of "We are incredible" (Book Review Digest, 1928) written over a period of years, and gathered from Transition, Century, the New Masses, and the Bookman.

"Though these stories are not merely impressions or decorations, the writing in them might well give a craftsman or a dilettante a great deal of pleasure. . . Many of the stories have a peculiar intensity and force." J: Kemmerer

+ Bookm 69:559 Jl '29 580w

"These sixteen stories in 'Nellie Bloom' are fragments of Miss Latimer's spiritual body. In them she is concerned chiefly with that excess of sensibility which creates, in painful intensity, an internal life more real than any external reality. Her style resembles Katherine Mansfield's in its intensity, its simplicity and directness and its emotional unity." Florence Haxton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 My 12 '29 1300w

"There is every promise here of Margery Latimer's finding a place somewhere among the few young writers who are revitalizing literature. Her prose, still in the process of making itself uniformly effective, has far more concentration and fixity of purpose than, let us say, the prose of Evelyn Scott." H. G.

+ New Repub 59:241 Jl 17 '29 260w

"Miss Latimer writes out of a deep and fruitful personality. Her stories are absorbed into her, then, disciplined by art, released into writing. . . Best of all [these stories] is 'The Family,' something written with an instinctively personal expression, enriched by the imagination and deepened by a knowledge beyond mere observation."

+ N Y Times p8 My 19 '29 600w

"The impression one receives from the stories as a whole is that Miss Latimer should never have read Sherwood Anderson. This is not to imply that her work is imitative. She is too independent in her outlook and too wilful in her style to be a good disciple. . . It is precisely because Miss Latimer can write with ruthless objectivity that it is wasteful for her to compromise her genuine power with the attempt to be modernistic." Gertrude Diamant

N Y World p7m Je 16 '29 680w

"In such tales as 'The Child,' 'Spring,' 'Penance,' Miss Latimer gives liberal evidence of her proficiency in that compressed fiction form wherein plot and cumulative dramatic tension are not called into play."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:42 Ag 10 '29 200w

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. History of Christian missions in China. 930p $5 Macmillan

266 Missions—China 29-3916

A complete history of the work and influence of Christian missions in China from the introduction of Christianity before the Mongols to the close of 1926. Dr Latourette writes with acknowledged approval of missionary enterprise, but is none the less critical where criticism is due.

"The account is replete with dramatic interest. The development of national monarchies, their rivalries in exploration, the religious and cultural revival are drawn with skill. . . The subject is treated with a thoroughness which will make the book a mine of information for many years. The history of each missionary society at work in China is given in great detail. Mission methods and results are discussed critically, though sympathetically. The author does not hesitate to express his views on both Protestant and Catholic. Still his general conclusion recognizes the great value of the modern missionary movement to China. . . The work is significant not merely because of its size and its exhaustive character, but because it seems to mark the end of one epoch in the religious expansion of the West and the beginning of a new period." L: Hodous

+ Am Hist R 34:848 Jl '29 620w

"It has remained for Professor Latourette to put into a single work a scholarly and authoritative treatment of this phase of China's relations with the western world. An extremely thorough bibliography, with the wealth of footnote material, makes the book of inestimable value to all students of modern Chinese history." G. N. S.

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:512 My '29 200w

Booklist 25:344 Je '29

Reviewed by Stanley High

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Ap 28 '29 450w

"One of the most complete and best documented accounts of Christian work in China, embodying a rich wealth of detail brought up to date." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 23 '29 800w

"Documented and annotated in keeping with the best scholarly methods, its style remains smooth and its tone human. It is one of those books that will still be valuable fifty years from now." J. T. Addison

+ Churchman p17 Ap 27 '29 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p121 S '29

"The absence of hasty generalizations, the amazing amount of detail found on every page, and the extensive use of documentation in the footnotes gives evidence of the long and patient research which lies behind this work." A. G. Baker

+ J Religion 9:651 O '29 550w

"As a Protestant, his impartiality towards the Roman Catholics almost oversteps the bounds of historical moderation. As an American, his prose is not offensive. But the great virtue of the book is its excellent documentation and bibliography. Any novice wishing to study the first penetration of the Celestial Empire by western influence will find himself signposted into the remotest byways of research."

+ New Statesman 33:475 Jl 20 '29 650w

"Professor Latourette's work deserves the greatest praise for its scholarship, for its clarity, for its sanity, and for its readability. It is a work of which American Sinology may well be proud and confirms the high respect in which its author is held by Sinologs everywhere." G: W. Danton

+ N Y Times p23 My 26 '29 830w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv Ap '29 40w

Outlook 151:433 Mr 13 '29 320w

"A careful reading of the volume will serve to convince the reader that Dr. Latourette has not only made a most substantial contribution to the literature on China, but that the claim that his will be the authoritative work on Christian missions in China for the next twenty years is not an extravagant one." H. M. Vinacke

+ Pol Sci Q 44:613 D '29 850w

Pratt p9 summer '29

"This work is noteworthy not only as a complete record of the history of Protestant missions in China but as giving for the first time a full account of Nestorian, Roman Catholic and Orthodox Catholic missions in that country." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:26 Mr '29 150w

"More than fifty closely printed pages are devoted to an excellent bibliography, and the work is closed by a detailed index, most necessary in a book of this comprehensive nature. The author deserves well of students of Christian history and missionary enterprise for his clear exposition of a very difficult subject. The book is over-powering at a single reading, but it will be a standard work of reference for many years to come."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p372 My 9 '29 950w

"A monumental volume that will be a classic for decades to come. No one who is interested in the future of religion in the Orient can afford to ignore this book." K. P.

+ World Tomorrow 12:315 Jl '29 130w

LATTIMORE, OWEN. Desert road to Turkestan. 373p il $4 Little [21s Methuen]

915.17 Mongolia—Description and travel 29-5279

A long and interesting account of a difficult journey across the hinterland of Mongolia to Chinese Turkestan, with many good illustrations and a map of the route.

Booklist 25:317 My '29

Bookm 70:xix S '29 320w

"Lattimore never overwrites his story—but it is the live and vivid record of a modern pioneer on a far-off frontier of the new century."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 31 '29 300w

Boston Transcript p2 F 27 '29 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p94 Je '29

LATTIMORE, OWEN—Continued

"The poetic, subjective note struck in many passages throughout his book, lends it an unusual charm, and the curious and obscure facts recorded about the lives and traditions of the people of the Gobi are of rare value and interest."

+ Geog R 19:694 O '29 780w

"It is far-away and exotic, yet curiously akin to something which our own West has lost only in the last half-century. And he tells his amazing story simply and without bravado, yet with intensity and power."

+ Nation 128:sup491 Ap 17 '29 120w

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West
Nation and Ath 44:527 Ja 12 '29 500w

"Mr. Lattimore is able to say that he was the first to follow the 'Winding Way' throughout with a conscious interest in its history and its relations to the other great highways of Inner Asia. He was the only European in the caravan, and, as he speaks Chinese fluently, he was made free of the company and tasted the full flavour of this immemorial method of travel, which he describes with gusto. The book is well and profusely illustrated."

+ New Statesman 32:202 N 17 '28 150w

"Mr. Lattimore knows how to convey to the reader the emotions and thoughts that animated him on his great journey. From his writing we get a vivid sense of the drifting life of the desert and the sluggish overflow of time." L: Rich

+ N Y Times p16 Je 9 '29 1100w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Ap '29 40w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:10 My '29 60w

St Louis 27:269 S '29

Reviewed by F. V. Morley
Sat R of Lit 5:704 F 23 '29 700w

"A highly interesting book."

+ Spec 141:887 D 8 '28 100w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 22 '29 550w

"The author speaks Chinese and has absorbed enough of the Chinese spirit to make him, like his companions, adaptable in the strangest of circumstances. . . He found much that has never been described before, little incidents of desert life which will interest the biologist, natural historian and the general reader."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p978 D 13 '28 380w

Wis Lib Bul 25:159 My '29

LAUCK, WILLIAM JETT. New industrial revolution and wages; a survey of the radical changes in American theory and practise which have come in since the World war and created the present era of prosperity. 308p $2.50 Funk

331.2 Wages. United States—Industries. Labor and laboring classes—United States
29-7052

The factors contributing to the new era of prosperity which has risen since the war—a period of declining production costs, lower prices, higher wages and a rising standard of living—are analysed by Mr Lauck who is professor of economics and politics, Washington and Lee University.

---

"A fascinating and valuable symposium of the economic views of American industrial leaders. . . I dissent from many of Mr. Lauck's interpretations. This does not prevent my cordially recommending his book as an unusually thought-provoking survey of recent economic changes. Its discussion of the development of the theory of the fair wage during the last fifteen years is especially valuable." S. H Slichter

+ Am Econ R 19:476 S '29 2000w

"This work gives an excellent account of the vicissitudes of the different wage criteria during the last two decades." W. E. Butt

+ Ann Am Acad 145:207 S '29 400w

"The book contains a great deal of valuable social information and is a real contribution to labor-industrial literature, though somewhat marred by the author's desire to live up to its revolutionary title." H. W. Laidler

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Je 23 '29 350w

Boston Transcript p5 My 18 '29 230w

Reviewed by A. W. Taylor
Christian Century 46:1579 D 18 '29 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p88 Je '29

"The development of opinion and practice outlined by Mr. Lauck is important—though some of the views which he quotes probably are more pretentious than genuine. In arraying the opinions which he musters, Mr. Lauck appears sometimes to protest too much." Horace Taylor

N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 20 '29 1000w

"An impressive picture of the post-war phenomenon aptly described as an industrial revolution." L: Stark

+ N Y Times p3 Je 9 '29 520w

St Louis 27:281 O '29

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '30 350w

LAUFERTY, LILIAN (MRS JAMES WOLFE). Street of chains. 374p $2.50 Harper
29-18267

Descendants of the Gruenturm Jewish family have established themselves in New York, and the Delavans are a minor branch of it. The mingling and conflicting elements of Jewish and Gentile blood in the children of the present generation is the theme of the story. Carlie remains true to the Gruenturm tradition; while Tress, hating everything pertaining to the Jewish race, marries a Wilton of Boston to escape.

---

"Every one is here portrayed with sharp-focused rightness—every one, except, perhaps, old Mrs. Wilton, the ultra-Bostonian. The whole Boston episode, indeed, seems to betray a lack of familiarity on the author's part."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 10 '29 300w

Boston Transcript p3 N 30 '29 600w

Christian Century 46:1474 N 27 '29 100w

"This is a book that anti-Semites would do well to read. It presents two sides of the question convincingly and understandingly. And besides that, it is vastly entertaining."

+ N Y Times p30 O 27 '29 650w

Reviewed by W: Lipman
N Y World p11m D 1 '29 500w

"The first part of the book, dealing with the childhood of a really charming group of children puzzled by their mixed inheritance and by the very different values advocated by their elders, is far better than the later chapters, which let these same convincing young people grow into conventional adults moved very often more by the needs of the novel than by those of their own natures. The background of Jewish life is beautifully and sympathetically given."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:592 D 21 '29 350w

"The story begins with a burst of names and places, but it soon develops a pleasing continuity and sustains interest to the end. The climax, however, lacks force and the logic of events in having four persons suddenly change their minds on the final page is a bit questionable."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '29 220w

LAUGHLIN, CLARA ELIZABETH. So you're going to Paris! and if I were going with you these are the things I'd invite you to do. 4th ed 510p il $3 Houghton

914.436 Paris—Description 29-10649

The fourth edition of the guide-book, with new lists of theaters, restaurants, shops, etc. and a new appendix.

---

Booklist 25:405 Jl '29

"The revised edition contains a little about sports, concerts, churches, shopping, and a restaurant list, classified by districts. There is a list of holidays which may effect the program of the visitor and an outline of what Paris has to offer for children of varying ages. For the general run of travelers, 'So You're Going to Paris' is expertly designed."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 26 '29 160w

Wis Lib Bul 25:193 Je '29

LAUGHLIN, CLARA ELIZABETH. Where it [2] all comes true in France; the experiences and observations of Betty and Mary as related by their aunt. 286p il $2.50 Houghton

914.4 France—Description and travel 29-17117

"[The author] here interprets for young readers the experiences and observations of her two young nieces, Betty and Mary, in order to make a travel book that will do for young people something similar to the service provided by her books for adults. It leads the readers in and about Paris, Normady, Brittany, the Touraine country, the South of France, the battlefield zone. The illustrations are by Decie Merwin."—N Y Times

Booklist 26:37 O '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 N '29

N Y Times p12 N 17 '29 150w

"Just the right stories from history are always at hand; just the right mixture of sightseeing and relaxation is suggested, and the wisest selection made of what children can take in with profit and pleasure. This volume is about France—all the parts one would be most likely to visit, with an excellent section on Paris by itself. It is written in a lively style, and the material is well arranged."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:462 N 23 '29 180w

"This book, attractively illustrated by Decie Merwin, makes good reading as well as a valuable guidebook to France for both young and old people."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 16 '29 270w

LAUGHLIN, CLARA ELIZABETH. Where it all comes true in Scandinavia. 332p il $2.50 Houghton

914.8 Scandinavia—Description and travel 29-12626

Betty and Mary Clara Laughlin go thru Norway, Sweden and Denmark with their aunt, learning much valuable information as to transportation, hotel accommodations, history and interesting buildings.

Booklist 26:37 O '29

"It is a readable book for stay at homes, while for those contemplating a vacation in these northern climes, it is a real aid in planning an economical and pleasureable sojourn."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 13 '29 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 N '29

"Although the book is designed to meet the demand of travel books for young people, older folk need not be too stuck up to read it. We found much in it that was delightful." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Je 29 '29 120w

"It is written in easy, chatty fashion, and there is a particularly sympathetic account of Hans Andersen and the pitiful and drab background from which emerged his enchanting fairy tales." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 28 '29 100w

"These are the best guide books for children which we have seen." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 152:391 Jl 3 '29 70w

"She tells so many delightful things to do and places to see that anyone booked for a mere six-weeks' cruise is tempted to cancel the bookings at once in favor of nothing less than three months. . . It is a pity that in the midst of so much excellence the author has twice lost sight both of good taste and of good judgment. The first is the account of the interview with Selma Lagerlöf; the second, the paragraph with reference to the United States Minister to Norway. Neither of these passages adds to Miss Laughlin's stature, and it is to be hoped that she will omit them from any further editions." Lucy Bartlett

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1153 Je 29 '29 600w

"The guide-book phase is incidental, though much valuable information is given about transportation, hotel accommodations and the interesting sights to be seen in Denmark, Norway and Sweden. There are many excursions off the main-traveled highways which add greatly to the charm of the book. Architecture and other subjects of intellectual or esthetic interest are intelligently treated."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 17 '29 240w

Wis Lib Bul 25:278 Jl '29

LAUT, AGNES CHRISTINA. Overland trail; [2] the epic path of the pioneers to Oregon. 358p il $3.50 Stokes

978 Oregon trail. West—Description and travel. Overland journeys to the Pacific. Frontier and pioneer life 29-28794

The part the Oregon trail has played in building up the nation is Miss Laut's theme. She follows its course, historically, and its present development, from Kansas City to the Trail's end at Seattle.

"One might condone eccentricities of style if accuracy were unimpeachable. One could pardon historical lapses if the literary strength required for a book bearing that title were there. It is impossible to excuse the presence of both faults, with practically no extenuating circumstances." F: F. Van de Water

— N Y Evening Post p8m N 30 '29 480w

"It is a tale of adventure, of achievement. We shall be a more patriotic people in so far as we cherish such records as this."

R of Rs 81:21 Ja '30 170w

LAUT, AGNES CHRISTINA. Romance of the rails. 2v 590p il $7.50 McBride

656 Railroads—United States 29-20776

"Her two volumes trace the beginnings of that marvel in human history, the application of steam to motive power, first on land, then in transportation on the water, the birth of the steamboat, then of the locomotive, the work of Robert Fulton and George Stephenson. They tell the story of the canals and why they have been superseded by the railroad; the organization of the first corporations for building the American railroads; the development of the sleeping car, the first use of coal and of the modern locomotive that hauls a hundred loaded cars. But most illuminating is the picture of what railroads have done for the settlement of the Mississippi Valley and the Northwest and the Pacific Coast."—Yale R

Bookm 70:xx D '29 180w

Boston Transcript p2 O 23 '29 850w

"Miss Laut's recital of her story is a somewhat incongruous mingling of scholarly research, chatty style, and occasional irrelevant comment. While her lightness of touch keeps the narrative from dragging, her chattiness sometimes obscures the outline of developments and her inclination to philosophize injects an element of mushiness." R. J. Davis

— + Nation 129:439 O 16 '29 850w

"What interests Miss Laut, and what will certainly interest those who read her book, is the evolution of the railways as one of the romantic episodes in American history. . . Miss Laut is at her best in rehearsing the story of the railway systems whose early history is enmeshed in political and financial scandal." W: MacDonald

+ N Y Times p3 S 29 '29 2100w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 27 '29 530w

"Miss Agnes Laut, with her gifted and industrious pen, has brought together in her story 'The Romance of the Rails' many of the most thrilling features and incidents that have marked the past one hundred years of wonderful railroad development. . . It is a book well worth reading, written in a spirit of friendliness towards the railroads, and full of faith and optimism for their future." F: Williamson

LAUT, A. C.—Continued
+ Yale R n s 19:418 winter '30 350w

LAVEDAN, HENRI LEON EMILE. Heroic life of Saint Vincent de Paul; a biography; tr. by Helen Younger Chase. 279p il $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Vincent de Paul, Saint [29-11614]

As a shepherd boy, Vincent de Paul passed his childhood in the time of Henry IV. He received his schooling at the Franciscan order of the Cordeliers, and in 1600 was ordained priest. His life was an adventuresome one, for he was captured by the Turks and sold into slavery. It is for his work among the prisoners and galley slaves that he is chiefly remembered, and as the founder of two religious orders. The biography is on the whole the study of a vigorous personality.

"Though M. Lavedan's volume is decidedly of the devout order of biography, it contains not a little of that sharp reality which one associates with the more modern mode. Very slightly documented as it is, M. Lavedan's study provides a truly heroic picture of St Vincent."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 D 15 '29 160w

Reviewed by T: S. Lester
Boston Transcript p5 My 11 '29 950w

"The work of a French academician, who appears to have chosen to write in a naïve, childlike manner in the belief that the road to popularity lies in that direction. We do not agree with him, but the subject of his book is so fascinating a one and his background so complete that even a tiresome way of writing cannot make his book dull."
+ — Outlook 152:351 Je 26 '29 80w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:12 S '29 120w
Wis Lib Bul 25:276 Jl '29

LAVEILLE, AUGUSTE PIERRE. Life of Cardinal Mercier; tr. by Arthur Livingstone. 251p $2.50 Century

B or 92 Mercier, Désiré Felicien François Joseph, cardinal. European war, 1914-1918—Belgium 28-24837

"One of the undying heroes of the Great War is commemorated in this book by a compatriot."—R of Rs

Reviewed by W: L. Sullivan
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 N 25 '28 700w

"The book is written by one who was a compatriot of the great cardinal, and it reveals sides of him not generally known." M. F. C.
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 28 '28 380w

"The enthusiastic admiration for the great Cardinal of Malines felt by all classes in America throughout the World War and voiced during his brief visit here in the autumn of 1919, will find justification and increase through this eloquent tribute to his memory." F. P. L.
+ Cath World 129:377 Je '29 350w
Christian Century 46:426 Mr 28 '29 120w

"A vivid, intimate, and admiring biography of one of the most attractive figures in modern Roman Catholic history."
+ J Religion 9:160 Ja '29 20w

"The pages that deal with the war make stirring and absorbing reading. And the whole story of the beloved Cardinal's life is beautifully told."
+ N Y Times p9 D 23 '28 400w
R of Rs 78:adv38 N '28 40w

LAW, FREDERICK HOUK, ed. Science in literature; a collection of literary scientific essays. 364p il $1.20 Harper

504 Science—Addresses, essays, lectures 29-10576

Twenty essays on scientific subjects, each written by an expert in the field. Contents: Secret of the charm of flowers, by W: H: Hudson; The insects are winning, by W: A. Du Puy; Secrets of the ocean, by W: Beebe; The moon, by G. P. Serviss; The importance of dust, by A. R. Wallace; The romance of the diamond, by Sir W: Crookes; Niagara, by J: Tyndall; On a piece of chalk, by T: H: Huxley; Chemistry in everyday life, by E. E. Slosson; Chlorin, by J.-H. Fabre; The discovery of radium, by Madame M. S. Curie; The atomic theory, by E: N. da C. Andrade; Autobiography of an electron, by C: R. Gibson; A drop of water, by Henshaw Ward; A new light in the world, by W: H: Meadowcroft; Electricity and civilization, by C: P. Steinmetz; Modern physics, by R. A. Millikan; The scientific revolution, by J. H. Robinson; Design in creation, by Sir Oliver Lodge; Pivotal figures of science, by A. E. Bostwick.

"While it is intended as a text book, it is really a wonder book, fascinating as any book of adventure ever written."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 8 '29 220w

"The inclusion of writings of Hudson, Tyndall, Huxley, Mme. Curie, Steinmetz and Millikan makes the volume something more than the ordinary textbook." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p9m My 18 '29 60w

"The book is of high natural interest and introduces the pupils to a field of modern literature in which they can readily be induced to continue their activity in after-life. Science teachers can also make use of it for instructive and inspirational supplementary reading in their classes." J: C. Mayfield
+ School R 37:633 O '29 560w

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT. Collected poems. 2v $5 J. Cape and H. Smith. [21s Secker]

821 29-14189

A complete collection of the poems of D. H. Lawrence. There is a short biographical and critical preface.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:610 My '29

Booklist 26:111 D '29

"Through all the poems runs Mr. Lawrence's characteristic preoccupation with physical vitality. He is always sincere and impassioned, believing himself the messiah of a new erotic mysticism."
Bookm 70:xii Ja '30 80w

"Of all the poets who in the present day have written about love, none has ever written better than D. H. Lawrence. His poems, now issued complete in two handsome volumes, are nothing but the long-drawn-out confession and extenuation of a desperately temperamental, extremely northern type of lover. As such they will probably outlast all but the best of his novels, for the reiteration upon the same theme, perceptible in his prose, gains weight and power from its transference to the more easily flowing and more directly emotional rhythms of poetry." J: G. Fletcher
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Jl 14 '29 1300w

"The careful manner in which Mr. Lawrence has arranged the individual poems, chronologically and in related groups, establishes a definite autobiographical continuity, so that to anyone familiar with the main events in the poet's life, the poems have an added interest and significance. 'The Collected Poems' are in a sense the spiritual autobiography of the poet." E: B. Hall
Boston Transcript p4 Jl 20 '29 1300w

"The poetry of Mr. Lawrence is the vapour of poetry, pierced with tongues of flame, a phenomenon confused and clamorous, out of which instants of hot brightness are given. The appreciation of the spectacle must depend greatly on the temperament of the onlooker." E. B.
Nation and Ath 44:216 N 10 '28 320w

"His poetry is of the first importance. It enlarges the scope of our imaginative response to life. His sympathy, or rather, to use a new term which is coming into vogue, his empathy, enables us, also, to live in imagination in creatures and things foreign to us, hostile, even repulsive. This power is accompanied by a gift for vivid rapid impressionism—a brilliant shorthand of description, often extremely humorous."

+ New Statesman 32:51 O 20 '28 1400w

"Mr. Lawrence's poetry is just what we ought to expect. It has no beginning and no end; it is a kind of demoniac chaos which is everywhere vividly and terrifyingly alive. Like life itself, it is a process rather than a fulfillment—and perhaps that is tantamount to saying (if we are esthetic purists) that it is seldom a work of art. . . His poems are the record of this remarkable process; and if they are streaked with agony and morbidity, or grotesque with too humorless and shameless abandonment to the actual, or if (as on the whole they do) they present us with a world too uniformly and perhaps gloatingly seen in terms of sex (lower case), they have also an unmatchable honesty and that sort of special splendor of the thing which is alive." Conrad Aiken
+ — N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 20 '29 850w

"In the two volumes of D. H. Lawrence's collected poems there is a history of more than momentary interest of a mind of more than ordinary alertness. The individual poems are not ingratiating. All are lacking in grace; none is of arresting beauty. The books are not to be picked up and read here and there. There is no single piece that stands out, or makes claim on memory. But taken as a whole the poems present the spectacle of an energetic thinker resolved to see his way through the mists that becloud; a fearless thinker, one careless of criticism and misunderstanding. These poems, seen in their entirety, give one a new respect for D. H. Lawrence." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p5 Jl 7 '29 1750w

"Read in chronological order, as they are arranged, these poems present a vivid picture of the development of a brooding temperament. . . Lawrence's achievements are in impressions to be gained from a whole; almost never does he produce a happily-turned single phrase. In fact, there are only two poems in the entire collection which are important enough to reread: 'Sunday Afternoon in Italy' and the first of two bearing the same title, 'Embankment at Night, Before the War.'" J. D. Tasker
Outlook 152:468 Jl 17 '29 400w

"It is quite easy to see side by side in these volumes the poet he might have been and the poet he has actually become. That other poet, the controlled and careful craftsman, would if he had survived, have been no mean fellow. . . We may enjoy, if we will, the poet that for a time he was and that he might have continued to be, but we shall miss a more exciting, if more bewildering, experience if we do not also reckon with the poet that he has become." E: Shanks
+ Sat R 146:425 O 6 '28 1900w

"Whatever its faults, the pitch and register of his work is poetry. Impotence itself has power in his propulsive verse. A poet of sensibilities which are refined to the point of being always a little wounded, a recorder of kaleidoscopic images and sensory nuances, Lawrence at forty-three has made a permanent if painful contribution to literature." L: Untermeyer
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:17 Ag 3 '29 2200w

"He allows himself every licence in form, vocabulary, and subject; and there are times when he is justified. Not so often, however, as in his prose, at which he really works as an artist. Yet in these violent outrageous, shuddering pages there is a burning quality, a dark intense emotion suggesting communion with things at once sub-human and divine."
+ — Spec 141:403 S 29 '28 300w

"After all his contortions, all his desperate efforts to escape the normal, all his admirations of cruel physical manifestations, coils and springs, fangs and yellow eyes, it is probable that the most admiring of his readers will return at last to those few simple poems in which he does not bother to express his differences from other people, or to justify his sexual career." J. C. Squire
Springf'd Republican p7e N 4 '28 1250w
(Reprinted from London Observer)

"There is evidence in these volumes that he is a more natural artist, and a finer one, in verse than in prose. What, however, chiefly proves his power is a jet of inspiration such as is rare in our contemporary poetry. A richer and sharper emotion than is common has been awakened by life and taken the substance of poetry."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p852 N 15 '28 1550w

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT. Pansies. 202p $2.50 Knopf [10s 6d Secker]
821 29-20123

"Mr. Lawrence's title is his way of saying that here at last he has set down his opinions, his bare opinions, nakedly in verse. For 'Pansies' means 'Pensées'—these are the straight thoughts of Mr. Lawrence concerning subjects which he has hitherto treated either in novels or in psychoanalytical discourse or in long and relatively indirect poems. All these other methods, indeed, were indirect; now he pursues the quite simple method of epigram and image, of statement and idea."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"Mr. Lawrence is quite right in saying that 'Pansies' should not be taken too seriously, for if it is not so taken it turns out to be one of the sincerest books which this strangely interesting man has published." Mark Van Doren
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 D 15 '29 650w

Reviewed by Barrington Gates
Nation and Ath 45:572 Jl 27 '29 450w

"If Mr. Lawrence imagines that, by dividing his Pensées into lines and submitting them to certain loose poetic measures, he has avoided the aggressively didactic tone which characterises many of his prose utterances, he must have been brought up in a harder school than the majority of his readers. . . Some are graceful, some extraordinarily clumsy; few of them but are touched by that curious fascination with which Mr. Lawrence manages to endow everything, even the stupidest diatribe, the vulgarest polemic, that comes bubbling from the tip of his pen. . . These Pansies are all worth reading and considering; but the critic, who is familiar with the beauty of some of his earlier vers libre, must heave a regretful sigh." P. Q.
+ — New Statesman 33:501 Jl 27 '29 800w

"As for his technique, it is unmatched. No artist has carried free-verse so far. He has the sweep and grandeur of Whitman, but with an added grace, a susceptibility to the touch of single words, vowels, and consonants. The pulse of thought and emotion fills the cadence of his unmeasured line: a lovely art, so seemingly simple, so really deliberate." R: Church
+ — Spec 143:165 Ag 3 '29 420w

"Mr. Lawrence writes from a fixed point of prejudice, a small island in a sea of disgust; and if we do not mark the point with precision, or by a false turn of phrase evade it, we are likely to be swept into the sea. And Mr. Lawrence's disgust is easily aroused, since even to put a baby into the wrong kind of perambulator is to incur his loathing."
Times [London] Lit Sup p532 Jl 4 '29 1000w

LAWRENCE, JOSEPH STAGG. Stabilization of prices; a critical study of the various plans proposed for stabilization. 484p $5 (21s) Macmillan

332 Prices. Currency question. Federal reserve banks 28-29715

Mr Lawrence, instructor in the Department of economics and social institutions, Princeton university, discussed in Part one the problem of stabilization in general; in Part two the various plans that have been proposed; and in

LAWRENCE, J. S.—Continued
Part three the theoretical and practical possibility of stabilization.

Reviewed by Caroline Whitney
Am Econ R 19:307 Je '29 750w

"A lack of scientific caution and thoroughness is obvious in many places. A redundance of rhetorical and dogmatic expression, and of sarcasm and irony, can be properly charged. In his discussion of the multiple expansion of bank-loans against additional reserves, it is felt that Mr. Lawrence has added something to the already-known." W. M. Blaisdell
— + Ann Am Acad 143:382 My '29 430w
Booklist 25:345 Je '29

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:32 F '29 120w

"Dr. Lawrence's book is valuable and opportune because it takes the arguments for price stabilization in all their manifold forms, and, without questioning the desirability of the end, brings out practical difficulties which have not been adequately met and theoretical inferences from recent experience which are not justified."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p282 Ap 11 '29 60w
Wis Lib Bul 25:97 Mr '29

LAWRENCE, JOSEPH STAGG. Wall Street and Washington. 468p $5 Princeton univ. press

332 Federal reserve banks. Credit. Speculation. Stock exchange 29-26880

The book is a keen discussion of the complicated problems of the Federal reserve system, credit and speculation. The author makes a vigorous attack on recent policies of the Board which have brought Wall Street and Washington into conflict and condemns what he terms the "unenlightened and militant provincialism" of the central bank.

Booklist 26:55 N '29

"A book which will have to be counted with, whatever replies may follow its challenge."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '29 900w

"The book is readable and even entertaining. Not only is there information on banking, credit, the money market, the stock market, brokers' loans, domestic and foreign trade, prices, profits, gambling, ethics, but there is bristling opinion on all these subjects. The book seeks to demolish popular and unpopular conceptions of the purposes of central banking authorities, goes into the details of banking technique, and discusses at length and (when not too heated) in a scholarly fashion the interrelated factors on which Federal Reserve policies are based." H: Hall
+ Nation 129:526 N 6 '29 1100w

"The discussion is not always conducted in good temper; occasionally the language employed is of a kind not usual in serious economic reasoning. Professor Lawrence refers to the effect of reaction in stocks on the 'poor lambs' who 'presumably are the object of the board's solicitude'; explains that the board is doing its utmost to cast the proverbial monkey-wrench into the machinery of prosperity.' This is more in the vein of the exasperated Wall Street speculator than of the sober economists." A. D. Noyes
N Y Times p10 Ag 25 '29 1550w

"A trenchant criticism of the Federal Reserve Board's attitude towards the applicants for loans on stock-market collateral. The book was apparently called out by the debates of the subject in the United States Senate. The group headed by Senators Glass, Borah, and Brookhart seems to have roused the author's ire. There is no doubt that he voices a prevalent feeling in Wall Street concerning the relation of the banks to speculation in stocks." W: B. Shaw
+ R of Rs 80:22 Ag '29 110w
St Louis 27:305 N '29

LAWRENCE, SIR WALTER ROPER, bart. India we served; with an introductory letter by Rudyard Kipling. 317p $5 Houghton [25s Cassell]

915.4 India—Politics and government. India—Social life and customs [28-18649]

"Sir Walter Lawrence has played many parts in his time as administrator, author and courtier. This book deals mainly with his Indian experiences. He served in the Indian Civil Service, into which he passed first in the open examination, chiefly in the political department. Then he resigned for work in England, but again returned to India, first as Private Secretary to Lord Curzon and secondly to conduct the Prince and Princess of Wales on their tour in India in 1905-06. Few men have had better opportunities to view from different angles India's peoples and problems, and few have made better use of their opportunities."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 25:390 Jl '29

"A singularly interesting book." T. S. L.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '29 1150w

"He is full of delightful reminiscence of the Kashmiri people, and of fascinating stories of the Rajputs, their princes and social customs. . . Not a traveler's tale, but a vivid life's experience." S. K. Ratcliffe
+ New Repub 60:179 O 2 '29 600w

"A delightful book to read, and as such quite certain of an early reprinting."
+ New Statesman 31:294 Je 9 '28 140w

Reviewed by C: Johnston
+ N Y Times p1 D 16 '28 1100w

"In refreshing contrast to the sensational volumes which exploit only the darker and repellent aspects of Indian life and religions, is this straightforward, unprejudiced, and reliable account of the Indian experience of a member of the Indian Civil Service. Here in anecdote, narrative, and legend we see the real India."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:570 D 14 '29 380w

"Sir Walter says that this book would not have been written but for the persistent exhortations of Mr. Rudyard Kipling. It would be graceless, then, not to direct our thanks to Mr. Kipling as well as to Sir Walter, for between them they have given us a great pleasure. Sir Walter's geniality, his comprehensive sympathy, his remarkable memory, and his unfailing sense of fun have combined to produce some of the best stories about India we have ever read. . . Historically the most important part of Sir Walter's book is the analysis of Lord Curzon's character. This has every mark of truth. It is sincere and carefully considered."
+ Spec 140:843 Je 2 '28 630w

"We do not disparage Sir Walter's comments on the future of Indian self-government or other government. These are thoughtful and sagacious, free from catchwords and much to the point. In his final chapter Sir Walter deprecates any intention of giving opinions on Constitutional problems. With his experience a man of his mental freshness and power could not but make valuable contribution to the solution of such problems, and, without by any means committing ourselves to acceptance of his dicta, we regard this chapter as the most practically valuable part of his book."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p388 My 24 '28 1100w

LAWRENCE, WILLIAM WITHERLE. Beowulf and epic tradition. 349p $3.50 Harvard univ. press [16s Oxford]

829.3 Beowulf. Epic poetry 28-21290

"This book is not, as the title might indicate, another special study of Beowulf, but—what is far more welcome—a manual intended primarily for those who read the 'Beowulf' for the first time. Professor Lawrence discusses all the aspects of the poem that make it difficult for the beginner. The purely literary elements of the poem he rightly leaves to the reader's own appreciation or the teacher's interpretation."—Sat R of Lit

"The fullness of knowledge that has come from many years of studying and teaching 'Beowulf' has enabled Professor Lawrence to write that rare sort of scholarly treatise, one that is of value to the specialist and the neophyte alike. It will serve as a handbook to those who are being introduced to the Anglo-Saxon epic, but it will also serve advanced students as a guide to the intricacies of the subject and will inform even the most advanced on matters often underemphasized and even overlooked." S: C. Chew

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 D 16 '28 380w

St Louis 27:165 My '29

"It is not a mere text-book. The author's fine scholarship and independent view of the problems involved constantly show through his clear exposition of the tangled body of criticism that has grown up around the Old English epic. Now that the 'Beowulf' is taking its rightful place in the survey-courses of our colleges, this volume, the only book of its kind in English, should be particularly valuable to those who teach and those who learn there."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:559 D 29 '28 230w

"Prof Lawrence's book will render valuable service in the study of 'Beowulf.' He untangles difficulties, and where the difficulties are not completely solvable he offers a sound and, to use his own word, a 'conservative' theory of explanation. Above all he brings out the rich and varied interest that lies in the poem. No one can read his book without a reawakened respect and appreciation of 'Beowulf' as a work of art and as the record of an heroic age." C. D'E.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 14 '28 1100w

LAWRIE, JAMES WRIGHT. Glycerol and the glycols; production, properties and analyses. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser.) 447p il $9.50 Chemical catalog co.

668.2 Glycerin. Glycols 28-20115

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"This book is an interesting and valuable addition to our knowledge of industrial aliphatic chemistry, containing as it does a very thorough review of the subject and many new and otherwise inaccessible data. . . Dr. Lawrie's book can be strongly recommended as a valuable and authoritative work to all interested in the future development of industrial organic chemistry." Harold Hibbert

+ Am Chem Soc J 51:962 Mr '29 800w

"This book gives [complete] information about glycerol and the glycols. It is well written and will be useful in the research laboratory and in the plant." A. W. Hixon

+ Chem & Met Eng 36:166 Mr '29 380w

"This is an unusual book in that it embodies much hitherto unpublished material. The text is frequently illuminated with comments resulting from Doctor Lawrie's research and technical experience. A number of tables are published for the first time and a careful selection has been made among those already published to eliminate those which are inaccurate. It is the first book on glycerol in English which discusses glycerol for itself rather than as a subordinate material of the soap and candle trades."

+ Ind & Eng Chem 20:986 S '28 460w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:35 Jl '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:631 D '28

Pratt p18 winter '29

St Louis 26:382 D '28

LAWTON, MARY. Schumann-Heink, the last of the Titans. 390p il $5 Macmillan

B or 92 Schumann-Heink, Ernestine 28-29518

From a series of interviews with the great contralto Mary Lawton has made a continuous narrative. Her early struggles with poverty, her numerous children, her contracts, her friendships with the greatest singers of her day, are described and thru all is revealed the warm personality of Schumann-Heink.

---

Booklist 25:211 F '29

"The language seems to retain the chuckle and the robust quality of a German accent, while remaining direct and easy English."

+ Bookm 69:xii Mr '29 100w

"When one has got through the barrage of misprints, some of which are all but unbelievable, Mary Lawton's 'Schumann-Heink' is a richly rewarding volume." P: Bowdoin

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 17 '29 620w

"It is an heroic story of character and willpower, triumphant over incredible obstacles, coupled with one of the kindest and biggest and most generous of hearts." O. G. Villard

+ Nation 128:401 Ap 3 '29 580w

"Mme. Schumann-Heink talked it all off to Mary Lawton, who wrote it down as nearly as possible in the singer's own unconventional, naïve and impulsive language. The result is an autobiography that is much more revealing and entertaining than one really written by its subject. Miss Lawton has done a notable piece of work in catching and preserving the colors and accents of a rich personality and portraying it in the characteristic forms of expression which Schumann-Heink's friends will recognize."

+ N Y Times p18 F 10 '29 480w

Reviewed by Grace Overmyer

N Y World p11m F 17 '29 200w

"Miss Lawton has done her work well and there will be thousands, no doubt, who will enjoy reading of a singer they have heard for more years than seems possible." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv F '29 60w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:30 Mr '29 60w

St Louis 27:100 Mr '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:74 F '29

LAZELL, EDWARD WILLIAM. Anatomy of emotion; man's two natures. 267p $3 Century

157 Emotions. Psychology, Physiological. Mental physiology and hygiene 29-8129

The early chapters of the book deal with the physical basis of emotion. Following chapters discuss, interestingly and non-technically for the ordinary reader, the psychology of the several emotions—fear, anger, self-pity, love—and the psychology of individual types—the sensitive man, the globe-trotter, the successful man, etc.

---

Bookm 69:ix Ag '29 100w

Boston Transcript p4 My 25 '29 530w

"Though written by a physician and reflecting the bodily conditioning of emotional response, it gives the impression of being written out of office hours and to give expression to his interest in allied fields. The presentation is rather loosely organized with much excursioning into popular bypaths and philosophizing admonition. The 'anatomy' of the emotional life remains visible, but it is rather conventionally tailored to the popular taste. For the casual reader with a commendable interest in acquiring a serviceable knowledge of the emotions with an agreeable amount of effort, it will serve. It does not attain a notable place in the recent bibliography of the subject."

Sat R of Lit 5:1100 Je 8 '29 280w

LEA, FANNY HEASLIP. Wild-goose chase. 310p $2 Dodd

29-5596

A new collection of romantic love stories by a popular contributor to the magazines.

---

Booklist 25:360 Je '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 7 '29 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p96 Je '29

LEA, F. H.—Continued

Reviewed by Vincent McHugh
N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 16 '29 360w

"Taken singly these stories are delightful; together they suffer from a pallid lack of variety. This volume, in brief, is a credit to Miss Lea's technique rather than to her invention."

+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 3 '29 180w

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. The iron man & the tin woman, with other such futurities; a book of little sketches of to-day and to-morrow. 309p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]

827 29-27937

Humorous sketches, in the traditional Leacock vein, that satirize modern tendencies. In one group entitled Pictures of the bright time to come, the author burlesques the mania for social regulation, specialization, and mechanical invention. In another group he satirizes the contemporary fad in literature for memoirs and autobiographies. The futurity of fiction, travel, athletics, and other phases of modern life hold Mr Leacock's shrewd and ingenuous attention.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p40 D 1 '29 700w
Boston Transcript p4 Ja 4 '30 230w
New Statesman 34:334 D 14 '29 100w

"Even the man from Mars, who, like locusts or Halley's comet, should never appear oftener than every seventeen years, is dragged from his orbit by Mr. Leacock. . . Being a professor himself, he knows that the student must do his part, even in humor. If the art of thinking is moribund among us, he would help us to revive it by exercising our own wits to extract laughter from his concealed meaning. In short, you must dig for it to get it." T: L. Masson
— N Y Times p42 D 8 '29 400w

"As burlesques, with rare exceptions, [the sketches] seem to be lamentably flat and stupid, overburdened with idiotic exaggerations which have no relation to the art of humor. But there are bright spots in the book, as witness 'The Intimate Disclosures of a Wronged Woman,' a side-splitting parody of the 'I Confess' and 'True Story' type of literature dear to the tabloid reader's heart. . . Compare the book with the brand of humor Leacock was turning out steadily up to a few years ago and it is apparent that his work, in large measure, is in a decline." Granville Hicks
+ N Y World p11m D 22 '29 120w

" 'The Iron Man and the Tin Woman' shows Mr. Leacock at his best; not funny, perhaps, so much as outrageously funny. To enjoy him thoroughly one must have a share of his high spirits." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 148:686 D 7 '29 80w

"The whole book is the more delightfully funny because its satire is of the best kind that conveys an implicitly serious criticism of life." Gilbert Thomas
+ Spec 143:827 N 30 '29 170w
Times [London] Lit Sup p1030 D 5 '29 470w

LEARY, DANIEL BELL. Modern psychology, normal and abnormal; a behaviorism of personality. 441p $4 Lippincott

150 Psychology. Behaviorism (psychology). Personality 28-30467

"The purpose of this book in the field of human behavior is to present, first, a sober and scientific basis for the study of the behavior of personality,—of the integrated, complete human organism; secondly, to deal with, evaluate and classify personality on the basis of types and degrees of dynamic adjustment to the physical and social environment; finally, to bridge the gap between physiology, as an atomism of human behavior, to such a synthetic point of view as may properly be called a behaviorism of personality."—Foreword

---

"The book contains a number of new treatments of problems such as learning, personality and the social aspects, written, from new points of view." S: W. Fernberger
Am J Psychol 41:666 O '29 480w

"A well-organized presentation of the more outstanding features of normal and abnormal psychology. . . There are excellent bibliographic suggestions. The student of social psychology will find the book suggestive throughout." Kimball Young
+ Am J Soc 35:494 N '29 200w
Booklist 25:267 Ap '29

"Now and then the presentment is technical, and occasionally its arguments are debatable, yet a more elaborate and informing account of both normal and abnormal human psychology has probably never been written." E. N.
+ — Boston Transcript p7 D 8 '28 500w

"Dr. Leary has an unfortunate trick of phrasing that makes reading him a slow, laborious task, and this handicap, added to a goodly measure of fundamentally foggy thinking, inclines one to grave doubts of the book's wide acceptance." G. K. Pratt
— N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 5 '29 160w
St Louis 27:43 F '29
Times [London] Lit Sup p387 My 9 '29 250w

LE BOUTILLIER, MRS CORNELIA (GEER). Bright thread. 303p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-11669

Spirituality, or Christian idealism is the bright thread that runs thru the pattern of this story of young people of college age. Michael is the adopted son of very loving foster parents. The ideals set by them and by his foster uncle, a clergyman, are very high. Steadfastly Michael lives up to them, in college and out, deciding, after a struggle with himself, to become a minister. This same idealism pervades his love for Diana.

---

"This first novel exhibits some faults; in particular, a heavy, unleavened seriousness. The plot is spotty and the conversation rigid and graceless. The book has, however, a quality of naturalness and simplicity that appeal to those who are tired of wise-crackers and their cracks. And the author knows clergymen." T: Fansler
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Je 2 '29 320w

"One lays down the volume with the happy sense of having read a remarkable book. It is remarkable in every way. The style is delightful and so unobtrusive that one has to turn back the pages to see what characterizes it; but before one has hit on the proper phrase, the Austen-like simplicity of the plot holds one, and style is forgotten in the delight of reading with equal pleasure the quiet serene account of these two families." G. R. B. R.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 15 '29 550w
Churchman 140:16 Jl 6 '29 80w

"Granting that the chastity of the Atlantic Monthly tone and the chastity of the hero are preserved at incredible cost to good sense and a sense of humor, the writing itself is still glib and competent." Vincent McHugh
+ — N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 13 '29 380w

"The story is told straightforwardly, but is innocent of any of the tricks of the trade which make good plots."
+ — N Y Times p25 Je 2 '29 150w

"Mrs. LeBoutillier is a direct, interesting story-teller, not an especially gifted writer as to style. She inclines too much to stereotyped phraseology. But sincerity shines through her pages and she understands her own people thoroughly."
+ — Outlook 152:147 My 22 '29 220w

LE COQ, ALBERT VON. Buried treasures of Chinese Turkestan; tr. by Anna Barwell. 180p il $6 Longmans [18s Allen & U.]

913.51 Turkestan—Antiquities. Art—Turkestan [29-10029]

An account of the activities and adventures of the second and third of the four expeditions despatched by the Berlin ethnological museum to a little known region of Chinese Turkestan including the oases of Turfan, Kucha and Karashahr. One of the chief results of these expeditions was the collection of frescoes and sculptures showing the development of Buddhist art on its way thru Central Asia to China and the relation of this art to Greek art.

"It is not for descriptions of scenery that one reads this record of difficult and often dangerous excavation. It is, rather, for the interest of the link supplied between Buddhistic and Hellenic art. No one who has visited the Ethnological Museum in Berlin and has seen the superb exhibition of frescoes and sculptures which are the fruits of these four expeditions—no one, indeed, who looks at the pages illustrating the book—can fail to be struck by the combination of Greek and Asiatic influences." V. Sackville-West

Nation and Ath 44:528 Ja 12 '29 500w

"The narrative is illustrated by beautiful photographs of scenery, people, monasteries, rock-temples, and the like, and especially of Hellenistic statuary and wonderful frescoes. A reader desiring more detailed information than the somewhat slight amount supplied in this book is referred to the large number of publications which are mentioned in an appendix."

Nature 123:600 Ap 20 '29 180w

New Statesman 32:446 Ja 12 '29 220w

Spec 141:502 O 13 '28 190w

LE CORBUSIER, pseud. See Jeanneret, C: E.

LEE, MARY. 'It's a great war.' 575p $3 Houghton

29-22421

A novel of the World war, written by one who saw service with a hospital unit in Bordeaux, in Paris, and with the Y in the vicinity of the front. It is the very realistic story of Anne Wentworth who, coming from a cultured home in America to the mud of France and the horror of war, acquits herself well. "It's a great war" shared with William Scanlon's "God have mercy on us" the $25,000 prize offered by Houghton Mifflin and Company and the American Legion monthly for the best novel dealing with the war.

"In a staccato and rather confused style Miss Lee has managed to convey something of the gigantic bewilderment of those days in France, the seamy and sordid and disillusioning side of war, the bitterness and waste of life. . . It is a powerful book, but it is too amorphous to be accounted a literary masterpiece." Margaret Wallace

+ — Bookm 70:459 D '29 280w

"It is the first war book of any importance to be written by a woman. It is, also, as far as I can discover, the first war book that attempts to give a panorama of the whole business of American participation in the European affair. It is, further, the first book that undertakes to tell the truth about war from the point of view of a noncombatant who remained behind the lines, where, to be sure, the vast majority of the A. E. F. saw service. 'It's a Great War' is in no sense a sentimental book; it is informed with genuine feeling. It becomes ironical at times, as is inevitable, and it is not without humor of a slightly sardonic flavor. It is admirably done throughout and with fine skill. It seems to me one of the really good books that have come out of the war, a preachment, if you like, but a preachment by the simple method of telling the truth, and telling it well. It makes absorbing reading, and what a glorious lot of bunk-exploding goes on its half a thousand pages!" Herschel Brickell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 O 27 '29 1000w

"The author of this impressive account of what one American woman felt and suffered during the months she spent as a war worker has written this book with sincerity ringing through every sentence. Thousands of intelligent women in America will read and discuss this novel. If they belong to Anne Wentworth's generation and if they too went to France, they will recognize that what the author asserts is nothing less or more than the truth. Members of federated women's clubs will find this human document far more educational than fifty theoretical round table talks about internationalism." D. F. Gilman

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 26 '29 1200w

"This work often lapses into uninspiring dullness in its inordinate length and meticulous detail, and lacks some vital breath of creative imagination and synthetic interpretation." Francis Snow

— Current Hist 31:628 Ja '30 150w

"Miss Lee has marred her story badly by the method she chose for telling it. Because war is jerky she has made her book jerky. Little incidents are set down, separated from one another by three centered dots. Sometimes there are as many as five of these incidents on a single page. She carries the method into her sentences, which are jerky and verbless. Offsetting these blemishes is considerable interesting material about the S. O. S., which Miss Lee had such an excellent opportunity to observe. She records most dramatically the headlong way of living in those days, and she knows her army."

— + N Y Evening Post p11m N 2 '29 700w

"If the substance of this book were of very great meaning and purposefulness, one might be willing to endure its length and its prose; but the book, although written from the unstaled standpoint of a young woman serving in hospitals and canteens, attains to no such documentary importance. To put it crudely, the rewards of this book do not compensate for the dreary task of reading it through."

— N Y Times p7 N 17 '29 600w

"Her story is magnificent reporting; it brings home to every one the smells, the indecencies, the obscenities, the incongruities that are a part of war. Anne's attitude is that of the spectator rather than the participant, but she sees all, knows all, forgives all. To her the animal natures come on top in men because it is war; the inefficiency, the dastardly mistakes in hospital and at the front, the waste of human life and material, is all a part of war. And in thus portraying war without concentrating attentions upon the emotions of the heroine who experiences it, Miss Lee makes her book a pertinent propaganda against war." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p17 O 25 '29 700w

Reviewed by Johan Smertenko

— + Outlook 153:398 N 6 '29 130w

"Miss Lee's use of the episodic method and her carrying that method through six hundred pages really needs no defense. To read the book is to become convinced that she adopted a peculiarly fitting style." E. C. Marriner

+ Portland Evening News p6 D 17 '29 750w

"As a story, the action goes forward as a series of brief episodes interspersed here and there with longer sections. The interest is well maintained and the book is readable from cover to cover. Miss Lee has evidently a sharp ear, a clear eye, and perhaps most important in giving a sense of reality, a discerning nose. She has caught the idiom of the enlisted man as well as his profanity, and she makes one see town and camp and country side in France and Germany, and certainly she makes one smell them. It isn't the attempt of a woman to write like a man. Both in her choice of episodes and in her treatment of them, her book is wholly feminine; not of the Victorian order but of the clear-eyed young person of the new order, who can call a spade a spade even if she is a bit self-conscious about spelling out the letters." F: J. Keppel

+ Sat R of Lit 6:340 N 2 '29 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '29 220w

LEE, UMPHREY. The Lord's horseman. 358p $2.50 Century

B or 92 Wesley, John 28-22583

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"He has written an engaging and original story of a man who would undoubtedly be pleased with the finished work. And the curious and exemplary thing is that the author has done it all in good taste. His manners are above the run of biographers in general and a model for the behavior of certain chroniclers who feel that they have no function in life but to debunk and denude." C: W. Ferguson

+ Bookm 68:600 Ja '29 360w

"His selection of material has been good, and his book makes an excellent companion volume to the recent work on John Wesley by Abram Lipsky, for it is a clear, concise biographical study, while that of Mr. Lipsky is a series of vivid portraits dealing with the high lights in Wesley's career." Herbert Asbury

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 25 '28 520w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 45:1259 O 18 '28 280w

"The Lord's Horseman is a book about John Wesley rather than a biography. It contains no new information, but is easy to read and is attractively written. Mr. Lee has attempted 'to do' Wesley about as Hibben does Henry Ward Beecher or Hughes, Washington. . . In so brief an account of John Wesley it is certainly poor judgment and perhaps poorer taste to lug in so much of the type of material which smacks of sex appeal."

+ — J Religion 9:160 Ja '29 140w

N Y World p11m Mr 3 '29 120w

"Mr. Lee gives us much of Wesley's own words, which is helpful, especially since the quotations are apt and revealing. He also includes, in valuable appendices, Wesley's own account of his love for Grace Murray, and Wesley's own version of his most unhappy later marriage to Mrs. Vizelle. Both of these are moving, vivid, and psychologically important documents, nowhere else generally available, at least so far as this reviewer knows, in their unadorned entirety. Mr. Lee also has the good sense to understand that Wesley's love affairs, while vivid and engrossing, are really of secondary importance in estimating the man. He groups them in a single chapter and calls them 'Interlude.'" B. I. Bell

+ Sat R of Lit 5:621 Ja 26 '29 920w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '29 450w

"This portrait is the work of a skilful draughtsman who, by dint of some over-simplification, presents a clear, intelligible picture [of Wesley], in good prose." R. L. Calhoun

+ Yale R n s 19:197 autumn '29 500w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Peaks of invention. 269p il $2.50 Century

609 Inventions 29-6649

Illustrated stories in brief of the development and perfection of many great inventions, among them the submarine cable, radio and telephone, the lighthouse, steamship and locomotive, the submarine and airplane.

Booklist 25:382 Jl '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 21 '29 180w

"Although told in such a manner as to make them entertaining from the human point of view, he has nevertheless taken pains to have them carefully scientific."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '29 180w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:24 Ap '29

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:520 Mr 27 '29 30w

LE FRANC, MARIE. Whisper of a name (Grand-Louis l'Innocent); tr. by George and Hilda Shively. 244p $2 Bobbs

28-23922

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"Part of its success is undoubtedly due to the poetic and idyllic quality of the simple love story; part of it must be ascribed to the local color, the rather consciously emotional evocation of the gloomy but magical Breton sea-coast; and a good deal of it is undoubtedly related to the curious sexual situation it poses, a situation which is half lovely and half perverse." C. P. Fadiman

Bookm 68:589 Ja '29 150w

"Not only is it a thing of beauty in itself, but its translation is music undefiled. To read it is a holiday, an uplift, an adventure." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 2 '29 500w

"A story beautiful in its simplicity and in the lyrical quality of its style."

+ Christian Century 46:779 Je 12 '29 30w

"This book, which won the Femina Prize as 'Grand Louis L'Innocent,' is almost primitive in its simplicity and poetic in the quality of its prose, and it has lost nothing of either beauty or subtlety in translation."

+ N Y World p11m N 25 '28 120w

"As a purely technical accomplishment Mme. Le Franc's story may have value, for she succeeds in conveying the mysterious Breton background admirably, and in making the development of Louis thoroughly convincing. Her prose is stronger and less feminine than in the usual run of such distinctly introspective affairs, but the book as a whole is neither important nor liable to interest many readers. Like the life of its heroine, it is slightly dull and unremittingly gloomy. In spite of its evident sincerity, manifested throughout, it does not compel attention."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:564 D 29 '28 450w

"It is in its very fragility that there lies the affecting power of this strange story."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 22 '29 180w

LEGENDRE, AIME FRANCOIS. Modern Chinese civilization; tr. from the French by Elsie Martin Jones. 295p $2.75 (12s 6d) J. Cape & H. Smith

915.1 China—Civilization 29-16102

"As an anthropologist Dr. Legendre classifies the racial types (largely hybrid) of which China's population is composed, and thereafter examines the biological and sociological causes of their arrested development, of their lack of vitality, intellectual energy and initiative, and their inferiority of functioning powers. As Director of the Imperial School of Medicine at Chengtufu and later Commissioner for Scientific Research with a roving mandate, Dr. Legendre came into contact with all classes of Chinese society and, particularly, with the officials and students of the new regime. He is therefore in a position to support his opinons with facts and arguments based on close personal observation and a wide range of experience. The frankly pessimistic character of these opinions may be gauged from his summing up of the results of the revolutionary movement."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"M. Legendre was in China twenty years, as a medical missionary. He taught something, I hope, to the students at his university, but he learned nothing. Revealing an extraordinarily narrow mind, and one which, esthetically, is illiterate, he makes sweeping judgments, not only of physical conditions, but of Chinese art, music, literature and philosophy. He is an amazing caricature of a scientist, who, by a process of naïve fetishism, uses his scientific degrees to canonize his prejudices." Isidor Schneider

— New Repub 61:116 D 18 '29 420w

"As Director of the Imperial School of Medicine at Szechwan, Dr. Legendre had ample opportunities in the course of a twenty years' residence among them for observing the habits and customs of the Chinese. With a Frenchman's love of exactitude and gift of clear and graceful expression, he has set down his observations in a volume that throws a flood of light on social conditions in contemporary China."

+ New Statesman 33:686 S 14 '29 200w

"Dr. Legendre has confused wit with bad manners. His book might have been excellent, for it contains much information on Chinese life, but nearly every picture is twisted so as to conform to a theory. . . We hope that Dr. Legendre will leave polemics to others and return to the field of scholarship."

— Spec 142:201 F 9 '29 200w

"One feels, despite the general accuracy of his facts and the cogency of his reasoning, that the learned professor's feelings have sometimes got the better of his scientific detachment and that some of his most trenchant criticisms may possibly have been provoked by too prolonged contact with the new-style student, whose indiscipline, conceit, and frivolous laziness he so roundly denounces. But his exposition of present-day conditions in China is, on the whole, the work of a highly qualified and conscientious observer."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p196 Mr 14 '29 600w

LEHMAN, BENJAMIN HARRISON. Carlyle's theory of the hero: its sources, development, history, and influence on Carlyle's work; a study of a nineteenth century idea. (Publications) 212p $2.50 Duke univ. [11s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

824 Carlyle, Thomas. Heroes 29-4898

"From a study of the sources and a close analysis of all Carlyle's writing emerges a much-needed definition. What did he mean by a Hero? . . . The Hero defined, Professor Lehman reviews the various critics of the theory. Among them are Mazzini, Mill, Spencer, and Professor Babbitt."—Sat R of Lit

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 20 '29 400w

"An unusually stimulating scholarly analysis." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 19 '29 120w

"Disinterested scholarship, the kind that will read with sympathy and understanding, while keeping free from crotchets, has been all too rare. And this, indeed, is Professor Lehman's distinguished gift. . . Even books as good as this one will not settle matters. But they will bring fresh knowledge, sharpen distinctions, and curb our excesses. And, doing so, they will help civilize us and let us know at least the ground on which our passions have their play." Howard Lowry

+ Sat R of Lit 5:912 Ap 20 '29 880w

"Professor Lehman has produced a very complete piece of scholarship to be read by students of philosophy or by Carlyle enthusiasts, but as difficult as are most such books for the average Englishman."

+ Spec 142:sup591 Ap 13 '29 400w

LEHMANN, ERNST A., and MINGOS, HOWARD L. The Zeppelins; the development of the airship, with the story of the Zeppelin air raids in the World war. 329p il $4 Sears [18s Putnam]

940.44 European war, 1914-1918—Aerial operations. Aeronautics, Military 27-24124

This account of the development of the Zeppelin and its use in the war is written by the assistant manager of the Zeppelin works and contains first-hand accounts of air raids over England, and of Zeppelin activity on the Russian front, in the Baltic and in southeastern Europe.

Booklist 24:271 Ap '28

"The German version of the war-time activities of the Zeppelins is as interesting to the lay-reader as to the technical man hunting for operating details. . . If you have any complexes about the decay of the manly qualities of the human race, read this book and Wilkins's Flying the Arctic." Daniel Sayre

+ Bookm 68:585 Ja '29 280w

"Although jointly written by Captain Ernst Lehmann and Howard Mingos, the book is in outward form Captain Lehmann's personal story. It gains in interest by being cast in narrative form, and this is especially the case because the style is simple, vigorous and entertaining throughout." F. E. Hill

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ja 8 '28 1050w

"It is a fine account of the greatest, least understood problem of the air today." D. R.

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 14 '27 550w

"There is no clap-trap here, and very little of the bitterness which might have marred it had it been written ten years ago. It is not controversial, but it establishes without fuss the one fact which can be verified in the present welter of airship controversy—that Zeppelins were of very great value to the Germans. . . On its human side this narrative has elements of real heroism." B. G.

+ New Statesman 31:454 Jl 14 '28 300w

"No lack of material here with which to paint a picture of air travel; no need to watch the land below to get thrills. Almost every trip a Zeppelin made was a story in itself, and the achievements of their pilots in combating storms and dodging disasters deserve a high place in the history of aviation, even with the onus which attached to their bombing flights." Russell Owen

+ N Y Times p8 D 25 '27 130w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 225:adv Ja '28 50w

"The Assistant-Manager of the Zeppelin Works has given us one of the most interesting of the lighter books on the War." F. Y. B.

+ Spec 140:912 Je 16 '28 850w

"An unpretentious book which is well-grounded in verifiable fact. . . This narrative is a popular one in the best sense. No difficult technical questions are discussed, and statistics, when they appear, are not pressed to a dubious conclusion. The authors, having a plain and stirring tale to tell, tell it plainly, honestly, and with notably little rancour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p574 Ag 9 '28 1000w

LEIGHTON, ROBERT. Olaf the glorious. (Children's classics) 208p il $1.75 Macmillan 29-18315

A retelling of the "Saga of Olaf Triggvison," the first Christian king of Norway, cut to the taste of present day boys. The book was formerly issued by Scribner, but has been for some time out of print.

Booklist 26:78 N '29

"The narrative has all the spirit of the original. It still bears the earmarks of oral telling and, though abridged and organized, is a very real saga." Catherine Woodbridge

+ Sat R of Lit 6:492 N 30 '29 150w

LEISY, ERNEST ERWIN. American literature; an interpretative survey. 299p $2.50 Crowell

810.9 American literature—History and criticism 29-9777

Written since the newer stock-taking this history of our literature omits writers whose work is of historical importance only and gives more space to the authors whom time has proved of real significance in the development of American literary history. Authors are grouped by influences and movements and a discussion of contemporary literature is included.

Boston Transcript p2 My 22 '29 880w

"The author runs into the usual difficulties in the latter chapters, where the scene is changing every day, but on the whole the book is sound." Herschel Brickell

+ — No Am 228:adv Ag '29 60w

LEISY, E. E.—Continued

"While competent, the book can scarcely be considered significant."

+ — Outlook 152:148 My 22 '29 50w

"A concise, well-proportioned historical survey which is distinctive in its attention to the outstanding factors which help to explain the evolution of our national letters."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:63 Ag 17 '29 300w

LEITCH, GORDON B. Chinese rugs. 171p il $4 Dodd

745 Rugs, Chinese 28-24383

An elementary book on Chinese rugs describing materials, dyes and dyeing, designs, symbolism, the actual weaving, old and new types, and giving a short history of the art. Bibliography.

Booklist 25:199 F '29

"The author claims no encyclopedic standard for his book, but it seems to the writer that he has omitted no side of the subject in the hundred and sixty odd pages of text which are amply fortified by excellent half-tones and technical diagrams. The method of the book apparently leaves little to be desired."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:352 N 2 '29 330w

LELAND, SIMEON ELBRIDGE. Classified property tax in the United States. (Hart, Schaffner & Marx prize essays) 492p $3.50 Houghton

336.2 Taxation—United States 28-21132

This book is a study of the development and results of the classified property tax in the United States. Part one sketches the history of the movement for classification and discusses the arguments for and against the justification for the tax. Parts two and three are given to a study of the experiments with classification in the United States. Part four summarizes the writer's conclusions.

"Professor Leland's investigations are clearly marked by thoroughness and unusual breadth of vision. His book is a real contribution to tax literature. It will be found useful as a text, reference work, and compendium for tax officials." T. R. Snavely

+ Am Econ R 19:317 Je '29 800w

"A careful and inclusive study of the development and achievements of the classified property tax in the United States." C. L. King

+ Ann Am Acad 141:277 Ja '29 230w

Boston Transcript p2 O 6 '28 200w

"Professor Leland has achieved a notable success in the thoroughness with which he has covered the ground and in the soundness of judgment which he has displayed in dealing with matters that have been, and still are in some quarters, of a highly controversial character." H. L. Lutz

+ J Pol Econ 37:366 Je '29 700w

St Louis 26:376 D '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:341 D '28

LE MAY, ALAN. Pelican coast. 329p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-8648

A vigorous tale of old New Orleans when Jean Lafitte held the whiphand over a gang of pirate captains, and did a flourishing business in smuggled goods. Job Northrup, a hard and inscrutable New Englander, goes to work for Lafitte, falls in love with the girl the other has chosen, and fights his way thru and out of the pirate ring. Lafitte meanwhile puts down a rebellion among his captains and reëstablishes himself as master of the smugglers' gang.

"This is a hard, sinewy novel of abandoned rascals. It is romance but of actuality rather than of the moving picture scenario. We admire the author's scorn of literary convention; we envy shamelessly his prose. It is tight, fit and unscrupulous, with the savage bite of a steel trap. It is not a vehicle for sentiment and the happily rare amorous passages of 'Pelican Coast' are its least effective; but when dealing with the hard men Mr. LeMay draws, his style catches and holds like a grappling iron. The book is too long, but even in its most prosy passages it is pretty good and in its innumerable scenes of action, it is rare and superlative. In print, Mr. LeMay has done for the pirate what Howard Pyle did in oils and done it, we think, a shade better." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 6 '29 920w

" 'Pelican Coast' is an entertaining, very well done novel, which has for its background an especially picturesque phase of American history."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 24 '29 530w

"The author has stuck close to history and yet has produced a tale as vivid and as gripping as any devotee of Conrad could desire."

+ N Y World p11m Mr 24 '29 160w

"Although Mr. LeMay's 'Pelican Coast' is overflowing with splendid episodes, it is not, as a whole, a satisfactory novel. The progress of the narrative is neither steady nor climactic. Where characters, incidents, and backgrounds, are so excellent, it is a pity that the development of the narrative acts as a brake upon the momentum of the novel. But in spite of this perhaps overnice disparagement, the novel is one to be read and remembered. Its entertainment value is high."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:258 O 12 '29 280w

LENANTON, MRS CAROLA MARY ANIMA (OMAN) (CAROLA OMAN). Crouchback. 327p $2.50 Holt [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

29-17551

An historical novel of the time of the Wars of the roses, by the daughter of the famous historian, Sir Charles Oman. Richard III, "Crouchback," is one of the central figures of the story; Anne of Warwick is the heroine. The story of the two little princes murdered in the Tower enters in the book; the whole background displays the color and romance of fifteenth century life.

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p3 N 23 '29 1750w

"Without psychoanalyzing her characters she manages to present them to us not only in the consistencies which made them historically great, but in the inconsistencies which make them human. . . Although Miss Oman deals with the stuff of romance we have a straightforward, rather sober and authentic historical novel."

+ N Y Times p14 N 3 '29 500w

"The best historical novel this reviewer has read in years. With firm and tender touch Miss Oman builds up Anne Neville's strange tragedy so that this woman of history becomes as real and as moving as the realest woman of fiction. Furthermore, her study of Warwick is masterly. And she manages by subtle suggestion to convey the sinister quality of Richard the Third. And every minor character is vivid. Only fine scholarship could provide such a background, and only strong creative talent could build up such memorable characterizations or make of a worn page of history a tale so timeless and so new."

+ Outlook 153:311 O 23 '29 350w

"For her incident Miss Oman keeps strictly to historical fact, but her reading of Richard's complex character is individual and penetrating. She has obviously studied thoroughly the social background of her period, and her colour, if laid on a little too mellifluously, is essentially convincing."

+ Spec 142:793 My 18 '29 60w

"The author can write picturesquely and with intimate detail of fifteenth-century life in castle, court, and inn, but the book leaves an impression of gloom. Poor little plain timid lymphatic Anne seems almost as uncomfortable in the position of heroine of a book as she did in the position of queen."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p385 My 9 '29 240w

LENIN, NIKOLAI. Collected works; completely rev. ed. and annot.; v 20, The revolution of 1917; from the March revolution to the July days; tr. by Joshua Kunitz and Moissaye J. Olgin; ed. by Alexander Trachtenberg. 2 bks ea $4; pop ed $3 Int. pub.

947.084 Russia—History—Revolution, 1917-

The present volume covers the period of the first four months of the Russian revolution, from the middle of March when Lenin, living in Zurich as an exile, received the first news of the outbreak of the revolution to the critical July days when he was forced to go into exile. The material consists of letters, articles, speeches and reports.

Am Pol Sci R 23:786 Ag '29 300w

Boston Transcript p7 Je 29 '29 440w

Reviewed by Philip Kerr
Nation and Ath 45:710 Ag 31 '29 500w

"One finds here little which sheds light on Lenin's intimate personal life, but the story of his public activities, told through his own speeches and articles, moves like a great drama, full of fire and fury. The material has been ably translated by Joshua Kunitz and Moissaye J. Olgin and intelligently edited by Alexander Trachtenberg. Except for the absence of an index, the volume leaves little to be desired." F: L. Shuman
+ New Repub 60:131 S 18 '29 1500w

"It is hardly necessary to stress the importance of the authentic speeches and writings of Lenin during the four months following the February revolution. . . These volumes mark a decided advance in the very backward art of translating Bolshevik literature. Lenin's thought is faithfully and understandingly rendered, and the English is really English." Max Eastman
+ N Y Evening Post p8m My 25 '29 900w

LENIN, NIKOLAI. Selections; v 1 The fight for the programme, party organisation & tactics, 1893-1904; [sel. and ed. by Pierre Pascal and tr. by J. Fineberg]. 241p $1.25 Int. pub. [2s 6d M. Lawrence]

308 Russia—Politics and government

The present volume is the first of a series of four volumes of selections from the works of Lenin, which will contain the most characteristic and important of his writings and speeches. These selections are intended to illustrate the evolution of Lenin's ideas, and to present his philosophy completely but in relatively small compass.

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 27 '29 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p156 F 28 '29 500w

LENSKI, LOIS. Little girl of nineteen hundred. 218p il $2.50 Stokes

28-21491

Grown-ups who were children in the nineties will enjoy this story perhaps more than children of today. It tells about the five little Baxters of Pleasantville, Ohio, and the small town joys of their childhood.

Cleveland Open Shelf p80 My '29

"It seems as though this material could have been put into more interesting shape. It is too stiff and tabulated in its present form." M. G. Bonner
— N Y Times p28 D 16 '28 70w

"This ought to be a much more charming story for children than it is. Its period is the turn of the century, and we imagine that it will be more interesting to parents who were growing up in the 'nineties than to their 1928 children. . . Our question is whether the audience for which it is written will not find it a slow moving chronicle of a pompous and somewhat stuffy decade."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:357 N 10 '28 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 150w

Wis Lib Bul 25:32 Ja '29

LENSKI, LOIS. Two brothers and their animal friends. 122p il $1.50 Stokes

29-18031

All about Jonathan Joseph and his brother Frederick Philip who took a walk down the dusty road, and the strange adventures that befell them.

"'Two Brothers and their Animal Friends,' written and drawn by one of the most popular of children's artists, is contrived in a comical but almost too naïve style." Ernestine Evans
N Y Times p37 O 27 '29 30w

"Her illustrations, both in color and black-and-white, are in her usual manner, which is to say that they are both clever and amusing."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:328 O 26 '29 100w

"Has tried the trick of childish illustration with some success, but it is no better a story than the most unimaginative child himself could invent." Catherine Woodbridge
— + Sat R of Lit 6:429 N 16 '29 40w

Wis Lib Bul 25:325 O '29

LENSKI, LOIS. Wonder city; a picture book of New York. unp il $2 Coward-McCann

917.471 New York (city)—Juvenile literature

29-16106

Jimmy and Joan visit the wonder city of New York, walk along Fifth Avenue, go to the Museum of art, to the Zoo and the Library, and other well-known places, all in a very nice picture book.

"As a picture book introducing children of our own and of other countries to New York, it lacks depth and meaning. It is too much concerned with the commonplace to have any permanent value, but it does contribute as colorful a note as a nice bit of chintz to the new books of the summer." A. C. M.
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ag 4 '29 430w

"Here is a book of hardly more than thirty pages which should prove a source of endless diversion to the very young child, for it is a whole city, the city of New York, in microcosm. . . As full page illustrations Miss Lenski's drawings produce an effect of confusion which results from the numbers of small figures that throng them, but reduced to their various incidents they are delightful, portraying both realistically and humorously the various points of interest in New York." Amy Loveman
+ Sat R of Lit 6:78 Ag 24 '29 300w

LEONARD, JOHN LYNN. Care and handling of dogs; with preface by Albert Payson Terhune, and an introd. by Fannie Hurst. 374p il $4 Doubleday, Doran

636.7 Dogs

28-28955

A specialist in the care of dogs, author of "First aid to animals," has written a comprehensive handbook which answers all the problems of the dog owner in the selection, training, care and breeding of dogs. Illustrations of pure bred dogs of many types.

Booklist 25:197 F '29

"If we were a dog this is one book which we would accord an unqualified and hearty wag of approval. Its point of view is that which—if we were a dog—we should like to see inculcated upon the human race. It would lead to a better understanding on all sides and remove certain misapprehensions which sometimes render a dog's life too much of a dog's life."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 17 '29 180w

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 2 '29 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p59 Ap '29

LEONARD, JONATHAN. Back to stay. 331p $2.50 Viking press

28-9851

"Tortuously, obscurely, in a pungent, craggy idiom, the author unfolds by indirection the story of Dixi Wardon, who was pulled back

LEONARD, JONATHAN—Continued
from the city to the [New England] hamlet which bore him. That ingrown community, eaten by decay and malice and superstition, found him too free and strange for its liking. He was tarred and feathered. Then, contrarily, he was accepted at last as a returned son of the soil."—New Repub

---

"A novel of an individual flavor and a style so eccentric as to make its reading difficult but conveying, nevertheless, a vivid impression of the life and spirit of a secluded New England village in the 1870's."
Booklist 25:395 Jl '29

"His prose is firm and personal, and his capture of New England speech is the most successful I know. Compare the talk of his River Bend people of the eighteen-seventies with the dialogue of Desire Under the Elms, and you will see that O'Neill caught the meanness, while Leonard has taken the unexpectedness of phrase, the humor, the vigor, the poetry." G. B. Munson
+ Bookm 69:307 My '29 460w

"The language of 'Back to Stay' is full of eloquent, raw-boned words, authentic Down East vernacular. Natural, easy, pungent, it smites the senses like the smell of wood smoke on an autumn day. It is eccentrically ordered, eccentrically punctuated. The author is as perverse and arbitrary and stubborn as his characters; his temperament as strange as theirs. But in spite of this his book has a rugged strength and power that are Cyclopean. 'Back to Stay' is of the giants—but of the eccentric giants." Florence Haxton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Mr 10 '29 1000w

"'Back to Stay,' is a novel which makes its appeal to the few rather than to the many. Readers who do not care to have more suggested than is expressed, and who do not possess a speculative fancy, will be disappointed in Mr. Leonard's book. Neither will they delight in his unconventional style and punctuation."
+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ap 13 '29 110w

"Mr. Leonard's New England is in some respects the most deeply-dyed New England that American fiction has given us: and this is perhaps the greatest single virtue of Back to Stay. . . In the story itself, Mr Leonard is not quite so happy. It is packed with good things; at least half of its portraits are first-rate; but in his zeal for plot . . . Mr Leonard has been betrayed into a looseness of structure which now and then leans too hard on coincidence and sheer melodrama." Conrad Aiken
+ — Dial 86:432 My '29 930w

"I found the book eccentric, dull, and irritating. There is, to me, an air of unreality about all his characters, particularly the hero, Dixi, which argues a snapping of the thread that binds the creator to the external world. As to the so-called 'Yankee qualities' of the book, its 'raciness,' 'dry humor,' and so forth, I am not qualified to speak with any authority. My impression is that they are misty emanations of an eccentric intellect rather than indications of insight into the mentality of New England farmers."
— Nation 128:653 My 29 '29 140w

"It is a difficult book to read, eccentric in manner, bare-boned. It is also a book which no one who is seriously interested in our native literature can afford to neglect." E. H. W.
+ — New Repub 58:315 My 1 '29 170w

"It is only fair to admit that we found the last third of the book the most understandable, but whether this was because we were getting used to it or because Mr. Leonard was learning how to write, we cannot tell. To us, 'Back to Stay' seems the most unreal realism we yet have encountered." F. F. Van de Water
— N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 6 '29 230w

"Mr. Leonard is not the first person to undertake to depict the life of the Cape Codders, but it is doubtful if any one has performed the task with such a combination of veracity and literary finish." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 227:adv My '29 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 21 '29 180w

"Not for the average reader; will appeal to those few who can recognize an original talent."
Wis Lib Bul 25:128 Ap '29

LEONARD, JONATHAN. The meddlers. 416p $2.50 Viking press

"Meddlers" is the name given in this novel to social workers, or uplifters. The heroine, Louise Wilberton, is an ardent social reformer until her point of view and her whole life are changed by her contact with the ideas of Carolus Elston, student, philosopher, and genius.

---

"I should say that Mr. Leonard is a novelist in his bones. His sense of language is fresh, his sense of form preserves him from didacticism and his sense of character is highly imaginative." G. B. Munson
+ Bookm 70:314 N '29 480w

"The book is clearly a vehicle for his intense hostility toward reformers. It is unreal, inchoate, peopled with thin paper dolls who dance fantastically in the darkness, caught now and then in a phosphorescent light. As fiction, it falls far behind Mr. Leonard's earlier 'Back to Stay.' 'The Meddlers' is a violent, harsh piece of writing, lit now and again with sardonic humor. Its texture is the texture of sandpaper; but its ideas are the already accepted, the almost old fashioned. It is hard to understand how Mr. Leonard can get into such a lather of verbiage about them." Florence Haxton
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ag 25 '29 950w

"There is beauty, a streak of poetry in the book, fantastic glimpses into the mind of Carolus Elston, a description of the primitive fires that burn in Ernestino or of the strange loveliness of 'The Street of Mirage,' but it is also beauty intellectually perceived and admired. The book is of the nature of crystals, cold and clear, and its strange qualities will be best appreciated by those who are connoisseurs of crystals." M. L. S.
Boston Transcript p7 O 19 '29 450w
Cleveland Open Shelf p143 N '29

"Through the shabby disguise of a ghostly personæ, the voice of Jonathan Leonard is heard, shouting in the dark. Here is personal warfare, rising in titanic anger against the stupidity of social institutions, against the weakness of mankind and against itself. Many of the speeches carry the content of great poetry. Some are merely the dogmatic utterances of an opinionated man, the product of a provincial environment. But all are written down in a vigorous prose that has the texture of rock. Jonathan Leonard, like his hero, Carolus Elston, has spent his strength attacking straw men and windmills, but he has the distinction of making his failure an event in American letters." Horace Gregory
— + N Y Evening Post p7m S 7 '29 550w

"This novel by Jonathan Leonard is as penetrating and subtle a bit of pure satire as any that is likely to appear in an age that has very largely forgotten that cutting art. It is less direct, less harshly incisive, than the great satires of Swift and Pope, but it is more impersonal and inclusive. For Jonathan Leonard has aimed his shafts at no individual or class of individuals. He portrays in 'The Meddlers' and holds up to ridicule a tendency of the age, a kind of general social weakness which may be regarded, in a broader sense, as a weakness of the human mind."
+ N Y Times p6 S 1 '29 720w

"The Meddlers is not the kind of book that will be widely read or widely appreciated. Like Mr. Leonard's first novel Back to Stay this one will receive the occasional benediction of a Gorham B. Munson and a Conrad Aiken. Despite that, we believe that those people for whom the novel is something more than an evening's pastime will accept The Meddlers as the perfect example of a new and remarkable technique destined to influence the course of novel writing as ineluctably as Swann's Way by Proust or the Romans of André Gide. We know of no book of fiction written by an American during our generation which is so laudably a product of the finest fruits of contemporaneity." E. M. Benson

+ Outlook 153:110 S 18 '29 400w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '29 200w

"The author spends many pages in making up his dummies. But the needs of the thesis seem too strong to sustain the effort, and except for a few occasions when they come thrillingly alive, the audience must be patient with the mechanics. . . It has evidently escaped Mr. Leonard that social work, when well done, is not meddling with persons, but dealing with social circumstances; in other words, with the results of unescapable interference by the world on those persons. Meddling with meddling, so to speak. Whereas Mr. Leonard is meddling with social work." Walter West

— Survey 63:189 N 1 '29 600w

LEONARD, JONATHAN NORTON. Loki; the life of Charles Proteus Steinmetz. 291p $2.75 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Steinmetz, Charles Proteus 29-18913

A readable biography of the electrical wizard who "hurled synthetic thunderbolts," like a modern Jove. Born and educated in Germany, he came to America as the result of police investigation in his rather mild socialistic activities, and here lived out the remainder of his fifty-eight years. Most of his life in America was spent in the employ of the General Electric company, where he was given a free hand to work on any formulae which he cared to undertake.

Booklist 26:66 N '29

"This story Mr. Leonard tells in the chatty journalese of the modern made-to-order biography. His style is readable and pictorial. But I wish he did not so often tell us, between quotation-marks, just what Steinmetz thought, when he so obviously cannot know." L: Gannett

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 1 '29 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p152 D '29

Reviewed by J: Dos Passos

New Repub 61:104 D 18 '29 250w

"A difficult subject for a popular biography. Jonathan Norton Leonard has essayed the task by adopting the ultra-modern biographical manner and writing in a staccato style made jazzy with an abundance of slang, current catch-phrase tags and cynical witticisms. Also his reiterated harping on Steinmetz's physical deformity becomes distasteful; yet his book is interesting because of its subject and in spite of his method and style." G. W. Harris

— + N Y Times p4 O 13 '29 1350w

"Interest in the biography of a man whose life was his work, and whose work was so abstruse as to be incomprehensible to the lay mind, is not easy to arouse, but Mr. Leonard has done so by the ease and informality of his style. The history of the popular myth which the newspapers built up about Steinmetz, and which Steinmetz himself came in the end to consider the truth, is the most human part of the story."

+ Outlook 153:70 S 11 '29 230w

St Louis 27:314 N '29

LEONARD, WILLIAM ELLERY. Son of earth; collected poems. 235p $3 Viking press

811 28-23943

Arranged in chronological order, these poems chosen by William Ellery Leonard from the various collections of his work, register not only the successive changes in his life but also the development in his art.

Booklist 25:241 Mr '29

"Impressive as most of Mr Leonard's verse is, in its personal intensity, its hot sincerity, its passionate idealism, the effect of it as poetry is weak and ambiguous, and this because it, too, is largely autobiographical. On rare occasions Mr Leonard's verse rises to the impersonality which even a lyric utterance must have. In general, his poems are the expression of personal feeling recorded simply as such." Newton Arvin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ja 6 '29 450w

"In 'A Son of Earth' the best work of one of the greatest of contemporary poets is assembled, and arranged in such manner that through the poems one may read the man, and reading, venerate him."

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 29 '28 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p131 D '28

"The pith of this Collection is to be found, and bitter-tasting it is with its intense astringent savour, in the verse-sequence entitled Unpublished Leaves. The World-War poems are much less moving; while the earlier and later autobiographical marginalia are only arresting where that lava of white-hot feeling, which the least reference to the tragedy of his life evokes, jets out in ghastly pulsations."

Dial 86:527 Je '29 100w

"His verse is the objective autobiography of a full-blooded, impetuous personality, capable of passionate immediate reactions, and of a wide range of preoccupations, scholarly, social, political, philosophic, lyrical, religious, and playful. It is the record of an earthly man who has lived intensely for the spirit, who has written himself out as few men of his day have, and who has thus expressed his day in a more significant way than those who claim to be modern merely because they have not used a phrase or word found in the language before 1914." Eliseo Vivas

+ Nation 127:sup624 D 5 '28 260w

"In reading him you will find some of the worst and some of the best poetry of our time, written with equal vigor. He is afflicted with a 'grand manner,' yet there are moments, when he is fully articulate, when his ego coincides with the great impersonal 'I' of Walt Whitman. And that is not all. He has written some of the finest, surely most sensitive, translations of Latin and Greek into English poetry." Horace Gregory

New Repub 58:78 Mr 6 '29 250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:636 D '28

"Rhetoric aside, these are two hundred crowded pages. There is wisdom here, a grave and usually sombre philosophy. And there is wit, a quality both merry and malicious in those revised fables grouped under 'Æsop and Hyssop.' And, not submerged by taste or technique, there is a rebelliousness of spirit which makes one forget the merely mouth-filling phrases." L: Untermeyer

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1020 My 18 '29 550w

LEONORA CHRISTINA, countess ULFELDT. Memoirs of Leonora Christina; daughter of Christian IV of Denmark; written during her imprisonment in the Blue Tower at Copenhagen, 1663-1685; tr. by F. E. Bunnett. (Background of history) 342p il $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

B or 92

"The memoirs of a singularly unfortunate lady of the 17th century, Leonora Christina, a princess of Denmark, and wife of the traitor Lord High Steward, Corfits Ulfeldt. They are prison memoirs, and not the least curious of that class of writings. Leonora was arrested by order of the Danish government at Dover in 1663, and conveyed to Copenhagen, where she spent no less than twenty-two years in the so-called Blue Tower of the royal castle. Her account of this close confinement, from her forty-second to her sixty-fourth year, was originally published from the original manuscript in 1869; the present translation dates from a few years later."—New Statesman

Boston Transcript p4 Je 29 '29 1000w

Hist Outlook 21:42 Ja '30 50w

LEONORA CHRISTINA,—Continued

"The memoirs of prisoners are generally entertaining, and Princess Leonora Christina of Denmark, who spent the years 1663-1685 in the Blue Tower of Copenhagen, as a result of being married to a sort of Danish Montmorency, is no exception to the rule. Her story, which is written with much humour and good nature, throws a terrible shaft of light on Scandinavian boorishness." Francis Birrell

+ Nation and Ath 45:212 My 11 '29 80w

"It is not enlivened by the excitements of secret tunnels or escapes, but the domestic interest, as it might be termed, is considerable. Leonora's moods ranged from the practice of Christian devotion to a strange brooding over the untoward deaths of her principal enemies. Between her quarrels with her gaolers, she composed hymns, did prodigies of needlework and set down these recollections. They have gall and humour in their pages, which gives humanity to a somewhat remote figure."

+ New Statesman 33:88 Ap 27 '29 210w

"It is a moving narrative, notwithstanding its separation from our own age by centuries of time and still greater gulfs of thought and feeling. For it reveals a fine, brave, unquenchable spirit that held its head high in the midst of the squalor, the wretched and disgusting prison companions and the filthy environment, and refused constantly to despair, to deteriorate, to give in in any way."

+ N Y Times p15 Je 16 '29 400w

"Unfortunately, this edition is merely a reproduction (unacknowledged), almost in toto, of the 1872 translation with its eulogistic introduction and excessively learned annotations. In spite, however, of the recurrent intrusions of the translator's purisms the book is more than highly delectable and revealing." W: D. Staples

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1162 Jl 6 '29 300w

LE QUEUX, WILLIAM. Lawless hand. 315p $2 Macaulay [7s 6d Hurst & B.]

28-10875

A little black box, simple in operation but death-dealing in action, causes all the trouble in which Hugh Valentroyd and the girl in the Blue Hat find themselves. International complications ensue, but all turns out well for Hugh and the Blue Hat.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 20 '29 130w

"The name of Le Queux on the title page is a guaranty that the story is exciting, full of mystery and romance, that it is well written with clarity and in good English, that the events follow each other swiftly, and that the reader's attention will be held to the end of the story."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 4 '29 180w

N Y Times p20 F 3 '29 180w

"We rate this one B minus." W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:192 Ja '29 100w

LEROUX, GASTON. New idol; tr. by Hannaford Bennett. 410p $2 Macaulay [3s 6d J. Long]

A new tale about Cheri-Bibi, king of bandits. He returns to Paris to direct a powerful organization under the guise of a peanut peddler. He succeeds, among other heroic deeds, in saving Major Jacques, marquis de Touchais, and thruout takes the leading part in this tale of a Parisian communist uprising.

Bookm 70:xxxiv N '29 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 O 13 '29 120w

"Mr. Leroux uses more time and space on the character phase of his stories than an American writer would think permissible, but it makes his books all the more readable." J. C. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 2 '29 400w

LEUCHS, FREDERICK ADOLPH HERMAN. Early German theatre in New York, 1840-1872. (Columbia univ. Germanic studies) 298p $3.25 Columbia univ. press [16s 6d Milford]

792 Theater—New York (city) 28-25875

"The attempt has been made with the use of all available sources to present the early history of the German theatre in New York, not in annalistic form but as a connected narrative. By this method the author has hoped to give in adequate perspective the important phases in the development of German theatrical enterprises." (Preface) Beginning with a chapter on the cultural background of the period the book covers the period from 1840 to 1872.

"The reader yearns at points in the catalogue for some illuminating comment, but none is forthcoming. A dull book." W. P. Eaton

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 24 '29 130w

"The researches in this volume are minute and painstaking, and they doubtless form an interesting footnote to cultural history in the United States."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p143 F 21 '29 220w

LEVIN, SCHMARYA. Childhood in exile; tr. by Maurice Samuel. 277p $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Jews in Russia 29-18537

Dr Levin, one of the leaders of the Zionist movement, tells the story of his boyhood days in a little town of the Jewish ghetto in Russia. The life he describes seems like a slice of the Middle ages, so remote from the world of today are the experiences of this cheder boy of Swislowitz, brought up in the most orthodox of Jewish homes and educated in accordance with the most rigorous standards of Jewish scholarship.

"A delightful, credible picture of a Ghetto idyl. . . Now that the old Ghetto is irretrievably gone, it is well that men like Shmarya Levin, with vivid memory and keen appreciation of old values, preserve bits of a unique life and a rich spiritual culture for the edification of a hopelessly mechanized, increasingly uniform world."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N 17 '29 500w

"The pictures that he draws of the village and the surrounding country, of the forest and the coming and going of the seasons, share with his descriptions of the activities of the home, the school, and the synagogue in giving to these memories their special charm. He is not so fortunate, perhaps, in making the many characters live again for us, or in weaving them into his narrative." F. T. Marsh

+ — Nation 130:18 Ja 1 '30 500w

"A fascinating story. It is a vivid, graceful and interesting presentation of a, to us, strange and unfamiliar existence."

+ Outlook 153:29 S 4 '29 60w

LEVINE, ALBERT JULIUS, and MARKS, LOUIS. Testing intelligence and achievement. 400p il $2 Macmillan

151.2 Mental tests. Psychology, Physiological 28-29931

"Two officials of the New York City Board of Education present a practical technique for the administering of specific tests, together with a description and critical evaluation of various forms and types of tests. These include individual and group tests, language and performance tests, intelligence and achievement tests, scales for rating progress in the various branches and subjects of school work, tests for the measuring of social or personality traits. A feature of the book is the frankly critical treatment accorded the general testing movement by the authors; they do not hesitate to point out its weaknesses and their origins." —Bookm

"The conciseness of the book, its soundness and simplicity of language should place it on the desks of most teachers."
+ Bookm 69:xx Mr '29 130w

"The book reflects a broad acquaintance with the testing movement in Europe and America. Its story is clearly presented. Students, particularly those not specializing in psychology, will find it useful as a textbook." F. D. McClusky
+ El School J 29:709 My '29 500w
St Louis 27:159 My '29
Survey 63:381 Je 15 '29 40w

LEVINREW, WILL. Poison plague. 327p $2 McBride

"When more than a score of people have been killed with cyanide in a prosperous city and martial law has been proclaimed to prevent wholesale riots, Jimmy Hale, reporter on the Herald, gets his college chum, Matthews, to persuade Professor Brierly, a brilliant scientist, to get to the bottom of the mysterious poisonings and help restore order. How the murderer, who kills for sheer enjoyment, is traced and apprehended provides the story."—Bookm

---

"A good plot."
+ Bookm 70:xxxii O '29 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 O 6 '29 120w

"Besides presenting a thoroughly interesting story of an entire city terrorized and reduced to a chaotic condition by a great many deaths from poison, the author tells, in an interesting way, a great deal about chemistry."
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 26 '29 130w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 153:520 N 27 '29 30w

"A new-fangled method of wholesale murder is skilfully developed in this otherwise mediocre, and too talkative, mystery novel."
Sat R of Lit 6:299 O 19 '29 170w

LEVY, REUBEN. Baghdad chronicle. 279p il $6 Macmillan [15s Cambridge univ. press]

956.7 Bagdad—History

"A social rather than martial history of the Abbasid Caliphate. Mr. Levy's narrative is packed with stories from chroniclers and travellers, facts about education, the state of learning, the markets, the powers of minor officials, the varying treatment of the Jewish and Christian population, the state of etiquette and table manners. And when he is obliged to describe martial events, it is always with an eye for the curious detail. The narrative closes with the fall of the city to the Mongol hordes in 1258."—New Statesman

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 4 '29 150w

"Mr. Levy's chronicle is far from being semi-fictive in the modern manner. It is not the artist's attempt to reconstruct a past scene. It is good, honest history, with the blast of trumpet and the beat of drum kept at a due distance; and only a wide and active scholarship could have disinterred the entertaining information he so admirably presents."
+ New Statesman 33:122 My 4 '29 770w

"To tell this story, to illuminate its battles with tales of its high culture and notable persons, to give a background to the vivid life of the 'Arabian Nights'—this is a difficult and complex task. Mr. Levy who lectures in Persian in the great School of Browne and Nicholson at Cambridge, is well qualified to do it, and he has given us another valuable chapter in the history of the Orient." Kenneth Saunders
+ Sat R of Lit 6:128 S 14 '29 720w

"Professor Levy, who is Lecturer in Persian at Cambridge, has made a profound study of his subject and his Chronicle may be accepted as the most complete and authoritative account of 'the city of peace' that is ever likely to appear. But he does not allow the weight of his learning to cloud the sparkle of a story through which pass slaves and Sultans, poets, and cupbearers, holy men and odalisques—all the figures of the Thousand Nights and a Night."
+ Spec 142:sup589 Ap 13 '29 1050w

"He records the latter ends of a good many Caliphs, but omits the picturesque or sanguinary details of their respective fates, and seldom mentions the punishments inflicted on Grand Viziers in their political eclipse. Such information may be found elsewhere, and in the space which it might have occupied he provides information about humbler inhabitants which enables him to construct a picture of what life was like for ordinary folk in the palmy days of Baghdadi greatness. For this reason Mr. Levy's book is more interesting than if he had paid more attention to political affairs."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p658 Ag 29 '29 1500w

LEVY-BRUHL, LUCIEN. "Soul" of the primitive; auth. tr. by Lilian A. Clare. 351p $5 Macmillan [12s 6d Allen & U.]

572 Society, Primitive. Ethnopsychology.

Mana 29-2725

Continuing the line of study of two previous volumes, How natives think, and Primitive mentality, the author here deals with primitive man's ideas concerning himself, and life and death—i.e., the "soul" of the primitive as conceived by himself.

---

Booklist 25:344 Je '29

Bookm 69:x Ap '29 200w

"Important contribution to both anthropology and psychology, at once attractively written and rich in its evidences of research." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p1 D 15 '28 530w

Reviewed by Franz Boas
Nation 128:623 My 22 '29 640w

Reviewed by Ruth Benedict
— New Repub 58:77 Mr 6 '29 400w

Reviewed by R. B. Dixon
Sat R of Lit 5:950 Ap 27 '29 700w
Spec 141:797 N 24 '28 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p152 F 28 '29 1020w

LEWINSOHN, RICHARD. Mystery man of Europe: Sir Basil Zaharoff (Eng title Man behind the scenes: the career of Sir Basil Zaharoff). 241p il $3 Lippincott [12s 6d Gollancz]

B or 92 Zaharoff, Sir Basil 29-29120

Dr Lewinsohn clears up most of the mystery surrounding the immensely rich, powerful Greek armament-contractor during the war, and after-war statesman and financier whose more recent transactions included the purchase of the Casino at Monte Carlo.

---

"Dr. Lewinsohn has written a fascinating narrative, but it is all too brief. His attempts to pad it out with information concerning the financial background of the Zaharoff enterprises does not conceal the fact that Zaharoffiana are scant indeed. It may well be doubted if a fuller biography of Sir Basil can ever be written. For the kind of history which he made is that which flourishes in the deep and murky silence of the night." Hiram Motherwell
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 17 '29 1100w
Boston Transcript p8 Ja 4 '30 750w

"In going through the 240 pages of this volume one will vainly look for something more than mere gossip spun around the name of Sir Basil. The new information about the man is scant; the rest, although very pleasant to read, has been written quite often in many a newspaper and magazine article in France and England." A. T. Polyzoides
Current Hist 31:822 Ja '30 2000w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 46:141 O 26 '29 40w

LEWINSOHN, RICHARD—Continued

"Dr. Lewinsohn's story is told vividly and dispassionately, with an undercurrent of irony. But it is not an intimate biography, and we are left curious to know more of the mind of this prince of armament makers, who has always shunned publicity and operated behind the scenes."

+ New Statesman 33:744 S 28 '29 1000w

"He fails to give a life-like portrait of the man. Sir Basil's personality, as it appears in the pages of this book, is hardly more than a nebulous outline of what must be a striking genuineness in flesh and blood. It becomes lost in the presentation of Zaharoff's business adventures. But the loss is amply compensated for by the clarity of the idea which the reader gains about the armament industry. Zaharoff's life becomes a symbol of that industry, a striking embodiment of its secretiveness, its unscrupulousness, its organizing capacity and avarice." L: Rich

+ — N Y Times p22 N 24 '29 1300w

"There ought to be more books like 'The Mystery Man of Europe.' They breed a healthy suspicion of the whole armament business. They reveal why 'the armament industry was spared the severe slump in sales to which other industries were recurrently exposed.'" Harry Hansen

+ N Y World O 10 '29 1100w

R of Rs 81:16 Ja '30 170w

"It is difficult to resist the conclusion that the author has taken more pains to be sensational than to be accurate. That he is capable of mastering detail is shown by the knowledge he displays of the various organizations with which Zaharoff was connected. . . On the other hand, he is too quick to assume that public men are knaves rather than fools, while throughout the whole book it is to be remarked that the greatest villains are almost invariably also the strongest opponents of German aims. His book contains little that can be accepted without the further evidence of less interested authorities."

— Sat R 148:354 S 28 '29 700w

"Dr. Lewinsohn has the gift of objective writing, as befits the financial editor of Vossiche Zeitung, but he also has the gift of making silence obvious. He has little reason to write praise, and his book is in fact an exposure of the corruption and folly that marked most of the Governments of the world in their armament policies. Dr. Lewinsohn is not in a position to make revelations, or to do more than collect and sift a number of stories current in different places."

Times [London] Lit Sup p795 O 10 '29 320w

LEWIS, CHARLES LEE. Famous old-world sea fighters. 362p il $3 Lothrop

923.5 Admirals. Naval history 29-8976

These biographical sketches of seamen whose deeds of valor are conspicuous in their nation's history follow the course of naval history from the exploits of Phormio in the Peloponnesian war to David Beatty and the World war. Contents: Phormio; Marcus Vipsanius Agrippa; Olaf Tryggvesson; Barbarossa; Francis Drake; Robert Blake; Michel de Ruyter; Comte de Tourville; Edward Hawke; Comte de Grasse; Bailli de Suffren; Horatio Nelson; Wilhelm von Tegetthoff; Heihachiro Togo; David Beatty.

---

"The chapters are concise and readable; the author is thoroughly at home in his subject, yet knows how to present it in a way which renders it interesting to those who are not."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 16 '29 110w

"It is a story of adventure and achievement, yet it is a story that scorns fiction. The deeds of such men as Drake and Nelson need no embellishment to make them appeal to the reader. Not the least interesting features of the book are some excellent reproductions from noted paintings and a map which shows the scene of many of the famous naval battles of history."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 25 '29 150w

LEWIS, DOMINIC BEVAN WYNDHAM. King Spider; some aspects of Louis XI of France and his companions. 501p il $5 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Louis XI, king of France 29-29534

According to Louis XI a more sympathetic treatment than historians have given him, Wyndham Lewis has something to say for his talents and virtues, at the same time glossing over a good many of the faults of the Catholic church in fifteenth century France. The king's treachery, cruelty, and unscrupulous political intrigue are balanced to some extent by his devotion to his country. And the fact that Louis XI was instrumental in releasing François Villon from prison would in itself endear him to the heart of the vagabond-poet's biographer.

---

"As a work of research and arrangement it is admirable, but is spoiled when Mr. Lewis falls, as he did in his life of François Villon, into a sentimental, almost tearful, religiosity, alternated with outbursts of bullying and irrelevant personal opinions of the cursed present times in which we are doomed to live." K. A. Porter

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 1 '29 1000w

Boston Transcript p1 D 21 '29 1200w

"With due allowance for the author's personal equation in view of his evident predilection for Catholicism and alcohol, the book is highly valuable as well as splendidly readable. It is based on much research among contemporary sources, but the chief reliance apparently is upon the Memoires of Philippe de Commynes." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 46:1545 D 11 '29 700w

"'King Spider' depicts the life and time of Louis XI with grace and color, with ardor and some confusion. . . Mr Lewis is medieval in prejudice and passion. 'King Spider' is an echo from the age of Louis XI rather than a modern analysis thereof. As such it is brilliant, graphic and frequently stirring reading." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p10m D 7 '29 150w

"Mr. Wyndham Lewis, as his book on Villon abundantly proved, is a medievalist in the blood, a man who inhabits the fifteenth century as appropriately as if he had been born into it." Vincent McHugh

+ — N Y Evening Post p12m D 21 '29 500w

"The reader desirous of studying the complete biography of Louis XI and a full chronicle of his disturbed and varicolored reign will not find it here. Mr. Lewis is, however, an excellent scholar in his own right, as any one may see by glancing through the formidable array of 'principal sources' which he adds to his book. His Roman Catholic bias is the solitary feature of 'King Spider' of which the reader may be somewhat suspicious and surmise that the coloring may be a bit too artfully laid on." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 5 '30 2000w

"Mr. Lewis may disabuse the casual reader of errors concerning Louis, but his chief value is as a sort of go-between for modern readers and past ages. His is a splendid mixture of scholarship and passion which carries the reader who is anything of a student of history along in a flood of eager delight, and which must inspire even the most reluctant with a reflected enthusiasm." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 153:546 D 4 '29 450w

"The form and method that Mr. Lewis has selected are excellent. Only a part, and a small part at that, is devoted to a biographical study of the king. In this matter, he gallantly gives way to Monsieur Champion. The remainder of the book consists of a series of essays descriptive of scenes and characters during the life of the king. Most of these essays are real works of art, vignettes, clear cut, striking, and carefully analyzed. They are absolutely free from sensationalism: in fact, many of the principals described are deprived of a part of their romantic coloring." J: M. S. Allison

+ Sat R of Lit 6:553 D 14 '29 1900w

LEWIS, DOMINIC BEVAN WYNDHAM. On straw, and other conceits. 179p $1.50 Coward-McCann; Mitchell

827 29-14794

A book of selections from the author's famous column in the London Daily mail. It is a little bundle of amusing and effortless conceits—fables, plays, poems, parodies, and other diversions.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 5 '29 130w

"This seems to us quite the most fascinating selection of nonsense and genuine wit that has been published since the days of Lewis Carroll." D. F. G.

\+ Boston Transcript p2 My 15 '29 450w

"Mr. Lewis spoils everything he says by his affectations. He seems to have been bitten by Rabelais, by Mr. Belloc, by Mr. Chesterton, and by the whole French nation. He reproduces, somewhat watered down, the catalogues of the first, the archness and the high and mighty attitude of the second, the romantically flushed diction of the third, and a great part of the language of the fourth." Edwin Muir

— Nation and Ath 42:658 Ja 28 '28 150w

"It is so pleasant, nonsensical, amusing, delightful, irresponsible and unpredictable a little book that you should not, for the sake of your own enlightened selfishness, overlook it." Harry Salpeter

\+ N Y World p7m Je 16 '29 350w

"It is all compact of wit and good writing . . . not a collection of pot shots in paragraphs, but of essays in persiflage, triumphant and free. Mr. Lewis is for me better reading than any of our American columnistic selections. It may be because I am a bookish person. His reading is wide; his learning is ingrain; it is interwoven like a Persian carpet. He presupposes bookish readers, at home in the world of ideas." Arthur Colton

\+ Sat R of Lit 5:1109 Je 15 '29 850w

LEWIS, MRS ETHELREDA. Mantis. 317p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

29-5949

"Miss Jane Taighlir becomes an assistant to Professor Gilfillian, an entomologist doing his field work in South African jungles. The professor is severe with women and children, but at heart shy and lovable. Then the inevitable young Oxford man comes on the scene. He falls in love with Jane—not too hard, just enough to be her friend forever. Jane falls in love with his best friend enough to start another beautiful friendship, but, of course, she marries the professor, who is so like her dear dead father."—N Y Evening Post

"This is a desperately proper novel. In fact, 'Mantis' is not a modern novel in any true sense of the word whatsoever. It reveals its Victorian origins with disarming candor. The Africa of Ethelreda Lewis is not the Africa of Olive Schreiner, or of Trader Horn, or Sarah Gertrude Millin. It is a land of noble horizons, without any race problems to speak of, but with mysterious vestiges of vanished civilizations. It is also a land where British propriety reigns supreme." W: McFee

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ja 20 '29

"Mrs. Lewis has a deep consciousness of the beauty and romance of travel. She has also the ability to make characters live in a remarkably spontaneous manner. And, finally, she can tell a story so that you never wish to stop reading until you are forced to close the book. This novel springs from a cultivated soil that is rich in imaginative feeling. There is a great deal of rare warmth about it." D. F. Gilman

\+ Boston Transcript p8 Ja 26 '29 1200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p78 My '29

"Here is a seeing eye for the delicacy and nobility of the veld, for perverse flowers and grotesque insects; but the people are only paper dolls clipped from romantic fiction and illuminated in woodsy and golden browns. Writing at times with a wild delicacy and deftness that has surprising craftsmanship, Mrs. Lewis is given—even addicted—to the piercingly sweet phrase, the unfinished sentence trailing off breathlessly into ecstatic dots. Her sweetness carries well beyond the saturation point." F. H.

— + New Repub 57:330 F 6 '29 160w

"This would be perfectly harmless and just good clean fun if it were not for the fact that the British novel, from Walter de la Mare to Aldous Huxley, suffers from the same disease [sentimentality]. Mrs. Lewis's novel is a danger signal. Even though its setting is in South Africa, its real locale is England. Is it a wonder that the English reading public turns to America and Continental Europe for relief?" Horace Gregory

— N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 12 '29 500w

"Mrs. Lewis is not adept at getting a story under way; for the first hundred pages 'Mantis' moves slowly and clumsily. She builds her personages too carefully. A more experienced artist could have done the necessary work in half the space, for the story is not of people, but of episodes. . . Mrs. Lewis surprises and arouses; but, somehow, the big thrill just misses as it will in a play when something has gone wrong back stage."

\+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 20 '29 650w

"Mrs. Lewis has given this novel a glowing South African background which is the most real and living thing in her book. . . The theme of the 'mantis' runs throughout the story on a dual level, the scientific and the supernatural. Expeditions into strange pyramidal tombs, where the mantis is painted upon the walls as a warning to those who too greatly dare, bring the desired thrill to the vertebra, and these strangenesses are never quite explained away by the reports from the British Museum."

\+ Sat R of Lit 5:814 Mr 23 '29 160w

LEWIS, LLOYD. Myths after Lincoln. 422p $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Booth, John Wilkes 29-11525

Lincoln's assassination had the effect of deifying him. Mr Lewis collects some of the curious myths that grew up about him in the months succeeding his death as well as the legends relating to his assassin, John Wilkes Booth, the most persistent of these latter being that Booth was not killed at Garrett's farm but escaped and lived for years in hiding.

Booklist 26:66 N '29

"Lincoln's career was the very stuff of drama and an inexhaustible impetus to legend-building. A collection of semi-mystical tales dealing with the personality of the martyr president, his assassin, Booth, and the latter's numerous doubles has been made into Mr. Lewis's Myths After Lincoln. Writing in the moods of the different episodes, the author organizes and retells the stories attractively. The achievement is something more than editing and something less than creating. The volume is a splendid preface to Mr. Wilson's biography." J. D. Tasker

\+ Bookm 69:208 Ap '29 430w

"Mr. Lewis's prejudices have run away with him. And this raises the final question: what is the motive behind this book? The only definite motive that one can be sure of is a desire to show that whatever Lincoln was, the feeling of the nation with regard to him was not based on facts. A highly debatable position which, in spite of the present rage to 'debunk' the past, will have a hard time making its way. I beg leave unconditionally to dissent." N. W. Stephenson

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 9 '29 950w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 Jl 13 '29 120w

Reviewed by L. E. Robinson

Nation 129:329 S 25 '29 520w

"The tales of the backgrounds of the assassination, of Booth, of the Grand Army of the Republic, of the strange adventure with Lin-

LEWIS, LLOYD—Continued

coln's coffin, are well and interestingly told. But the reader, impressed though he may be, cannot escape the feeling that Mr. Lewis's book would have been a better one if he had not been too much obsessed with the idea of putting a 'theme song' into it. It seems to lose rather than gain by the assumption that the national attitude toward Lincoln is a response to the popular yearning for an American god." Raymond Holden

— + New Repub 60:107 S 11 '29 550w

"Mr. Lewis has the gift of writing history with the same vigor and poise that characterize the best of contemporary biographies. First of all, he is a brilliant reporter with a canny eye for news. Old newspaper clippings are revitalized by his own galloping prose style. The tangled, distorting mass of information labeled, 'the Reconstruction period in American history' becomes an orderly procession of fiction and fact, amusing and tragic, following a course as exciting as a detective story." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Evening Post p8m My 18 '29 700w

"Immensely provocative and thought-inspiring. . . 'Myths After Lincoln' is not a well-balanced book. Mr. Lewis has wasted too much time in history and spent too little on the co-ordination of his thesis. Enough has been written of the living Lincoln to have absolved the author from the necessity of further repetition. Mr. Lewis might more profitably have begun his volume with the President's funeral in all its vast indecency. He could have drawn his parallels, his comparison of the latest and earlier demigods, more clearly. In spite of this lopsidedness, he has done a stimulating book."

— + N Y Evening Post p6m Je 22 '29 420w

"Mr. Lewis badly needed an editor. But at any rate, he has assembled in one book all the strange folklore that had grown around the death of Lincoln up to the end of 1928. . . He mars his book, however, by devoting a large part of it to his own half-baked theories about the war, which he sets forth in the literary style of a very young publicity man writing an excited advertisement for a very yellow movie." C: W. Thompson

+ — N Y Times p3 My 26 '29 1100w

"Mr. Lewis has done an interesting thing in this book, and whether he has fully proved his theory or not, there can be little doubt our heroes do become demigods now just as much as ever before, and the greater the hero, the higher the place he wins in the upper realms and the more secure his position there." Herschel Brickell

No Am 228:adv Ag '29 150w

"'Myths After Lincoln' is valuable Lincolniana, indispensable, it seems to us, to any historian of Lincoln's times, and it is fascinating reading. Lloyd Lewis presents in substance a brilliant study of the creation of myth out of natural event, and of the deification of a national hero." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 152:146 My 22 '29 600w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:18 Ag '29 150w

St Louis 27:270 S '29

"After spending one hundred and fifty pages in getting started, Mr. Lewis proceeds to the entertaining business of analyzing and exploding a whole legion of myths and he does an excellent job of it. He evidently relishes the detective rôle and has left no page unturned that offered a clue or a scrap of evidence for the task in hand. In the presentation of his material he is very effective for his dashing style admirably matches the subject." A. H. Meneely

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1157 Jl 6 '29 1000w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '29 950w

Wis Lib Bul 25:322 O '29

LEWIS, LLOYD, and SMITH, HENRY JUSTIN. Chicago; the history of its reputation. 508p $3.75 Harcourt

977.31 Chicago—History 29-17674

A humanistic study of Chicago during the past century—its commercial, political and social history from the days when it was a prairie-village of mud and stench, to the present. Emphasis is placed upon the bizarre and dramatic features of the city's growth, the character of its leaders, and the experiences of its people.

---

Booklist 26:63 N '29

Reviewed by Irving Astrachan

Bookm 70:222 O '29 460w

"The perverse city of Chicago, with its century-old characteristics of bad morals and good business, enjoys another of its famed breaks of good fortune in the decision of Messrs. Smith and Lewis to explain just what made it what it is today, for without benefit of whitewash or blasting the City of Manifest Destiny gets its deserts in this fascinating, informative and beautifully done book." E: Sullivan

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ag 25 '29 1000w

Boston Transcript p4 O 19 '29 1000w

"The story of Chicago is set down by two men trained in newspaper work—and therefore neither over-sentimental nor overdidactic, who have a deep affection for their city, a keen understanding of its still childlike soul as well as its gaudily caparisoned body, and who are detached enough from their subject to be at once thrilled by its dash and amused by it. . . 'Chicago' reminds one more of Mark Sullivan's 'Our Times' than of any book of the last few years, for it is done in exactly the manner of that tremendous piece of work." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p7 Ag 24 '29 600w

"Almost the whole of the story of the city's growth has the quality of 'news.' It is such stuff as headlines are made of—the unexpected and incredible becoming the actual. . . It would be unfortunate if the reading of this book should be confined to citizens of Chicago. It is scarcely imaginable that it will be, for it should be clearly understood that this is at the farthest possible remove from that type of local history which is designed to flatter the pride of 'leading citizens' and embalm the memory of commonplace characters who would otherwise be soon forgotten." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 46:1410 N 13 '29 550w

"A throbbing biography of a city, fascinating as a Dreiser novel, written colorfully and with a fine sense of the dramatic. Neither a eulogy nor an attack, it is a swiftly moving recital of the tremendous events, tragic, humorous, inspiring, and nauseating, that have marked the imperial onward march of a community that has fairly pulsated with dynamic energy from the beginning. Happily, unlike most histories of cities, the tale is told with literary power and imagination. . . A tremendous job, the writing of this book, and a job amazingly well done." C. G. Bowers

+ Nation 129:436 O 16 '29 700w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 60:76 S 4 '29 1800w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson

N Y Times p1 Ag 25 '29 1800w

"Terming their own Chicago 'the Jekyll and Hyde of cities,' two of its residents trace its sensational development through five hundred pages of startling, disheartening, inspiring contrasts. The book is a vivid, comprehensive recital, with appropriate breeziness, of the most dramatic career a city ever had." R. J. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 6:178 S 28 '29 600w

"This spirited narrative doubtless deals overmuch with external events, susceptible of graphic description. But it makes the impression aimed at, and there are revealing touches and glimpses—as when the authors tell us about the 'long-established' firms 40 years ago or the life of the working people in the turbulent years of the eighties and nineties. If it is oversimplified drama, it is at least honest drama, and not melodrama."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 26 '29 930w

"The authors must have meant their volume to be read through, to take in the whole story, for it is without table of contents or chapter headings. The only other way it can be used for reference is by the index, which scarcely compensates for the lack of headings. Nevertheless, this is the best single source of facts upon which any just judgment of Chicago must be based." Graham Taylor

+ — Survey 63:160 N 1 '29 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 25:321 O '29

World Tomorrow 12:524 D '29 20w

LEWIS, MICHAEL ARTHUR. Three amateurs. 316p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Allen & U.]

29-11582

"Three amateurs succeed where Scotland Yard fails in this readable mystery story."—Wis Lib Bul

Bookm 69:xxv My '29 50w

N Y Times p22 Ap 21 '29 160w

"The author keeps the interest alive to the last."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p209 Mr 14 '29 150w

Wis Lib Bul 25:277 Jl '29

LEWIS, SINCLAIR. Dodsworth. 377p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d J. Cape]

29-26270

Samuel Dodsworth is another, if more human and likable, Babbitt, a successful automobile manufacturer who at fifty goes abroad for an indefinite holiday with his wife Fran, beautiful, indulged, and a social climber. Deprived of his absorbing activities, dragged about from capital to capital, bored and bewildered by his wife's new-found friends, the faithful Sam begins slowly to realize Fran's vanity, selfishness and worse, her infidelity. Finally, when he sees that Fran's folly is beyond the reach of his patience and self-sacrifice he summons courage to leave her for the peace and happiness which he has in the meantime found in the love of another woman. Of more interest, even, than Dodsworth's story, is the commentary on the differences between European and American civilization, conveyed on the thread of his travels.

For biographical sketch of the author see Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ap 28 '29

"Mr. Lewis' marvelous power of reproducing conversations and his keen observation are always evident, with less tediousness in amassing detail, with more recourse to artistic suggestion. It is the soundest job of novel-writing he has yet done and no one who is interested in American life should miss it." Woods Dargan

+ Asheville Times p8 Ap 21 '29 740w

Booklist 25:286 Ap '29

"I hope that Dodsworth will diffuse itself by the million on both sides of the Atlantic. It will do more to spread a knowledge of the world and its friendlinesses and freshness and attractions than a wilderness of Baedekers. Besides, it is a good novel, a good story." F. M. Ford

+ Bookm 69:191 Ap '29 920w

"Sinclair Lewis is not producing literature, and he does not create character. Literature demands greater patience and concentration than his restless energy and facility will permit; and he is so fascinated by types that he is unable to divert his attention to the sub-surface traits of personality. . . . 'Dodsworth' is lifelike. even to the repetitious tedium of long stretches of life. People are like that. There is no use denying it. But not everybody, nor always. For the exceptions and differences, one is enormously thankful as one lays down the book." Isabel Paterson

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 17 '29 1950w

"An interesting and vigorous book, with deep feeling, a good deal of understanding and plenty of sympathy for American life. In his sympathy and apparent affection for Samuel Dodsworth of Zenith, Mr. Lewis has made the amende honorable to Main Street." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 16 '29 1280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p110 Jl '29

"A hundred years of American reflection upon 'Europe' is summed up in 'Dodsworth,' in a crackle of comedy. This, however, is not the element in the book which lifts it above 'Elmer Gantry,' with its occasional drop into melodrama, or 'The Man Who Knew Coolidge,' with its frequent drops into monotony. That element is the sympathetic insight with which, for the first time, Mr. Lewis follows the workings of a profound, unreasonable, desperate passion in one of his characters." Carl Van Doren

+ Nation 128:400 Ap 3 '29 1000w

"The weakness of the book is that intolerably much of it is given up to the quarrels of the couple, life-like but very dreary. But Mr. Lewis makes incidentally the truest comments I have ever read on the differences between Europeans and Americans, including really admirable summaries of what is best in both civilizations." Raymond Mortimer

+ — Nation and Ath 44:915 Mr 30 '29 230w

"The journalistic faculty which Mr. Lewis possesses, which enables him to write interestingly, if not excitingly, about most of the journalistic subjects he touches, and which gives a hot-off-the-griddle air to all his books, saves this latest effort of his from complete failure. That 'Dodsworth' is a comparative failure it must be admitted." T. S. Matthews

— + New Repub 58:232 Ap 10 '29 500w

"Dodsworth is not to be reckoned among the best of its author's recent books, because it is without those sudden gleams of beauty of which he is undeniably capable. But there is no novelist now alive who is so unfailingly, so unescapably, so implacably readable as Mr. Lewis." E. S.

+ — New Statesman 33:119 My 4 '29 550w

"Like all of Lewis's volumes 'Dodsworth' is disheveled. The author never has had any real respect or use for form and, in his latest volume, disregards it as completely as a man sifting ashes. It is a sprawling, ungainly, unforgivably rambling book. . . A sort of emotional and spiritual Cook's tour. Mr. Lewis drags the Dodsworths through most of the countries of Europe and through 377 pages. The volume, profitably, could have been cut down to one-third its present size, and even then it wouldn't have anything particular to say, except that they do things differently in different countries and that a wife like Fran is a scourge." F: F. Van de Water

— N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 23 '29 520w

"It can go almost without saying that as a serious student of manners Mr. Lewis uses the European scene, particularly in contrast to his pair of Americans. to excellent advantage. What the Dodsworths brush up against makes extraordinarily interesting reading matter. . . With 'Dodsworth' on its purely artistic side one must, here and there, find fault." L: Kronenberger

+ — N Y Times p2 Mr 17 '29 1500w

"While Mr. Lewis does not reveal any new phase of his talent anywhere in his book, there is an excellent chance that it will be accepted as one of the best things he has done." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv My '29 170w

"His unfailing observation and facility in the minute reporting of character have peopled his book with authentic types. Every person, every place, every situation is photographically clear. There is no subtlety and no irony. It is a mistake to think of Lewis as an ironist. He is the cameraman and producer of the great American movie serial." F. L. Robbins

Outlook 151:466 Mr 20 '29 720w

Pratt p41 summer '29

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Sat R 147:482 Ap 6 '29 600w

LEWIS, SINCLAIR—Continued

" 'Dodsworth' is another 'Main Street,' a 'Main Street' sophisticated and matured, with a new problem, but the same broad pages full of the most excellent reporting. One reads for pages with an interest quite independent of the plot; yet it is a real theme, drawn, as always with Lewis, from something heavily inarticulate in the American imagination; and to call this book, as some reviewers have done, merely a satiric description of the American abroad, is surely to miss 'Dodsworth' altogether." H: S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 5:821 Mr 30 '29 2100w

"The journeys of Samuel Dodsworth serve, of course, to convey Mr. Lewis' recent impressions of Europe. Never has he written a more 'readable' book. For those impressions come sparkling through the interaction of amusing people, sidling through entertaining incidents, smiling through alluring scenes and quick-witted conversations. . . Dodsworth is stimulating and mobile and tonic, and altogether good for the brain." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 142:485 Mr 23 '29 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '29 850w

"There is much that is photographic, exuberantly photographic in this story of middle-aged American success and failure, but there is also more than that. In Samuel Dodsworth, Mr. Lewis has created a character with the vitality of life and growth. Below the superficial comedy of this story there is a comprehension of the changing and organic life of man which gives it substance." Mary Ross

+ Survey 62:202 My 1 '29 270w

"Mr. Sinclair Lewis never drew characters better than he draws these two. . . Apart from these two admirable portraits, the reader will find a great deal of interest and of colour in the author's picture of the European scene."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p258 Mr 28 '29 560w

Wis Lib Bul 25:127 Ap '29

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG. Mid-channel; an American chronicle. 310p $3.50 Harper

B or 92 29-9655

Continuing his spiritual autobiography begun in "Up stream" (Book Review Digest, 1922) Ludwig Lewisohn records somewhat easier going in "Mid-channel," happier experiences in life and work both in New York and in Europe, "adventures of the spirit transformed into art."

---

Booklist 25:357 Je '29

"Mid-channel is less exciting than its predecessor; it lacks the strain of conflict. The chief interest is in the discussions of artistic and social problems for which his narrative is a matrix." R. M. Lovett

Bookm 69:442 Je '29 520w

"It is an intimate personal revelation, composed as an austere work of art and written in a style which for rhythm and lucidity has few equals in the language. Even when he is writing nonsense—and sometimes I think he is —Ludwig Lewisohn writes beautifully. The sentences flow into each other; the words are chosen; there is music in his prose. There is also an emotional intensity and an essential seriousness which seldom mingle in modern writing." L: Gannett

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ap 21 '29 1100w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 24 '29 980w

Cleveland Open Shelf p124 S '29

"It is written in that style at once morally grave, intellectually responsible, and passionately personal which is Mr. Lewisohn's special accomplishment. But one never thinks of the book itself primarily as a work of art. It is too intensely personal a document. There is probably no distinguished writer in our time for whom the life of the mind is so much an affair of the passions, for whom the intellectual life is a love affair, which the reader is made to share. There is also no writer who is so frankly, sometimes so embarrassingly, and on occasion so annoyingly intimate in his self-revelation." Irwin Edman

+ — Nation 128:674 Je 5 '29 770w

"Ludwig Lewisohn has reached his most mature and poetic expression. The book is an eloquent restatement of his conviction that the deracinated modern Jew can find peace only by a return to the impulses of his tradition—but beyond that it is a plea for cultural pluralism divorced from nationalist ambition, and a scholarly analysis of the Christian and of the Jewish ethos." F. K. Frank

+ New Repub 59:214 Jl 10 '29 460w

"There is a note of superiority, of contempt for people less enlightened than Mr. Lewisohn, which will hardly help his book with Gentile readers. . . When he can for a moment forget his racial complex, Mr. Lewisohn can give interesting and lifelike little sketches of people encountered in Europe."

— + New Statesman 34:306 D 7 '29 320w

" 'Mid-Channel' is honest to a fault; it is written in superb and lucid prose; it is packed with the wisdom resulting from much experience, both of literature and men; and it is a more mellow book than 'Upstream.' " J: Chamberlain

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 28 '29 1200w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Outlook 152:27 My 1 '29 460w

Pratt p35 autumn '29

St Louis 27:206 Je '29

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 7 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1087 D 19 '29 320w

Wis Lib Bul 25:159 My '29

"Readers who expected another 'Up Stream' will be disappointed. Although like the earlier volume Mid-Channel is in a sense a spiritual autobiography. The author appears to have lost his first fine careless rapture. The early chapters of the book are devoted to strictures against current American morality, Puritanism, and reactionary legal procedure. But the author's invective has a curiously defensive sound which vitiates its force; it is so obviously actuated by personal resentment against a system which has caused him temporary marital embarassment. . . We must not, however, be too captious. No review of Mid-Channel would be adequate or fair which left unsaid the fact that despite its faults it is a provocative, stimulating book, one which all students of contemporary American letters will want to read." G. E. M.

— + World Tomorrow 12:377 S '29 6000w

LICHTERVELDE, LOUIS DE, comte. Léopold of the Belgians; tr. by Thomas H. Reed and H. Russell Reed. 366p $4 Century

B or 92 Léopold II, king of the Belgians. Belgium—Politics and government. Belgium —Colonies. Kongo, Belgian 29-11304

The life story of Léopold II, counted as the greatest king of Belgium, who ruled from 1865 until 1909, and was instrumental in gaining Belgium's most important colony, the Belgian Congo.

---

Reviewed by Norah Meade

Bookm 70:331 N '29 450w

Reviewed by R. L. Buell

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 23 '29 1100w

"Whether or not one goes all the way with Count de Lichtervelde in his admiration for his hero, one must do him the justice to say that he has not condoned Leopold's faults either of public or private life, but he leaves us with a far higher opinion of Belgium's second king." G. B.

Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '29 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p123 S '29

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

Nation 129:388 O 9 '29 550w

"Comte de Lichtervelde presents a new historical figure to the world—new, certainly, to most American readers—though we have the assurance of the translators of his book that the estimate of Leopold here set forth is that his own country has come to agree upon." L. V. Updegraff

+ N Y Times p7 My 26 '29 1350w

"Leopold was a dynamic figure and this presentation should be of interest to students of politics. The simplicity and directness of the style make it of especial interest to the casual reader."

+ Outlook 152:351 Je 26 '29 120w

"The reigning head of a small state, Leopold made himself an international figure to be reckoned with. This is a part of what the Count found in King Leopold's life history. It forms a striking narrative by itself." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:12 Je '29 180w

St Louis 27:314 N '29

"The book is a very adequate vindication of the public life of a sovereign who, misunderstood and therefore unfairly criticized in Belgium and abroad, was in fact an extraordinary man."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p1044 D 12 '29 750w

LIDDELL HART, BASIL HENRY. Remaking of modern armies. 315p $3.50 Little

355.4 Military art and science [27-18673]

"'The Remaking of Modern Armies' is composed of studies founded upon articles in leading English reviews. The author has set himself the task of showing that modern conditions will demand a renewal of open warfare tactics, and that the soldiers of to-morrow, like the knights of old, will find their best protection from the withering effects of fire in an adjusted combination of armor and mobility."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Reviewed by W. B. Bradford

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 13 '29 380w

"Captain Hart takes the stand that war is and always will be inevitable. That being so, he pleads with strong logic for a reorganization of modern armies on a mechanical basis, a complete overhaul of principles in strategy and tactics, and a revised system of training for peacetime armies. His arguments are plain and in the main convincing, but they are badly digested." T. J. C. Martyn

+ — N Y Times p4 D 2 '28 1700w

LIDDELL HART, BASIL HENRY. Sherman, soldier, realist, American. 456p $5 Dodd

B or 92 Sherman, William Tecumseh [29-27667]

"An attempt to portray the working of a man's mind, not merely of a man's limbs and muscles encased in uniform clothing. The man is William Tecumseh Sherman who, by the general recognition of all who met him, was the most original genius of the American Civil War. The book, further, seeks to project the film of Sherman onto the screen of contemporary history. For there are vital lessons to be learnt from this man, his character and his career, his struggle with his environment and his ascendancy over it—keys to the modern world and to modern war."—Preface

---

"Captain B. H. Liddell Hart's biography of General Sherman is a masterly performance. It is neither eulogy nor philippic, and the author's critical apparatus and technique are equaled by his critical judgment. . . . As a military study Captain Hart's Sherman can be placed alongside of Henderson's Stonewall Jackson. It is one of the most thoroughly dignified, one of the most distinguished biographies of the year." H: S. Commager

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 24 '29 1200w

"Whether our Civil War experts accept Capt. Liddell Hart's point of view or not, this book well repays reading. It should be the next book on the list of those who found 'The Tragic Era' such exciting history." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p11m N 22 '29 950w

"A biography for which a place has been waiting on a good many American library shelves. Sherman was something more than the man who led the march to the sea. He knew better what the war would involve, reasoned more clearly about how it should be conducted, than almost any of his contemporaries. For a clearer understanding of some phases of the war this book should be read—by Southerners as well as Northerners." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:588 D 11 '29 230w

R of Rs 81:18 Ja '30 240w

"It is not often that one comes upon a biography that is so well done as this book. Nearly every page bears evidence of the fact that it is the product of painstaking and exhaustive research, mature thought, and an expert understanding of the subject in hand. There is no attempt to jazz up the narrative, no withholding of criticism, no effusive laudation. Frankness is as characteristic of the author's presentation as it was of Sherman himself. One has the feeling that this is precisely the sort of a study that the redoubtable old soldier would have most appreciated. . . [The book] is by all odds the best analysis of General Sherman and his work that has yet appeared." A. H. Meneely

+ Sat R of Lit 6:439 N 23 '29 1300w

LIEB, CLARENCE WILLIAM. Eat, drink and be slender; what every overweight person should know and do. 194p $2 Day

613.2 Diet. Corpulence. Exercise 29-16095

A discussion of the causes of obesity and suggestions for sane and effective treatment. Dr Lieb divides obesity into three types: alimentary, endocrine, and mixed. The last two require special medical treatment; the alimentary type can be cured usually by proper diet and exercise. The book presents valuable data, including selected menus and weight-reduction programs.

---

"This addition to the outpourings on how to reduce is intended for general popular consumption. As such, it is a useful book, for the style is interesting and the facts are sound, with proper emphasis on the desirability of the prospective reducer consulting his or her physician." J. A. Tobey

+ Am J Pub Health 19:1180 O '29 100w

Booklist 26:106 D '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 D 8 '29 220w

LIEDER, PAUL ROBERT; LOVETT, ROBERT MORSS; and ROOT, ROBERT KILBURN, eds. British poetry and prose; a book of readings. 1362p $4.50; also in 2v ea $3 Houghton

820.8 English literature—Collections (28-25872)

A selection from the best of English poetry and prose from Beowulf to the close of the nineteenth century, chronologically arranged, with a note on the characteristics of each period and with brief sketches of the life and art of each author.

---

"If a schoolboy or a foreigner or a Martian, or anyone who knew little more than nothing of English literature, came to me in search of a single volume that would acquaint him with the individual works and the general developments of British prose and poetry, I would unhesitatingly give him British Poetry and Prose. If he really mastered the contents of his one volume he would know more of English literature than many a man who has lived his life out in a library." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 10 '29 850w

"The present text is to be recommended, if for no other reason than that it gives generously of each author's work and offers us literature rather than a liberal education." Edwin Seaver

+ — N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 5 '29 150w

LILLEY, ALFRED LESLIE. Sacraments; a study of some moments in the attempt to define their meaning for Christian worship. 159p $1.50 Macmillan [2s 6d S.C.M.]

265 Sacraments 29-1097

A study of the Christian sacraments as the meaning of the sacraments has been illumined at different "moments" in church history, by St Augustine, Hugh and Richard of the twelfth century, and St Thomas Aquinas.

"If the reader grants the initial premise, that sacraments are not only symbols of divine grace, but means by which that grace is effectively conveyed to recipients, he will find little in this book to which he can object. The author's attempt to save sacramental doctrine from materialism and to make it consistent with spirituality, indeed an aid thereto, is praiseworthy. And from his point of view it is tolerably successful." H: C. Vedder

Crozer Q 6:244 Ap '29 240w

J Religion 9:334 Ap '29 50w

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 11 '29 750w

LILLY, JEAN. False face. 392p $2 Dutton 29-27527

Within a two-weeks' interval, two prominent students at Jefferson University were shot. Natica, daughter of Prof. Crane, by her own confession was the person who last saw alive Granville Perkins, the first victim. Granville's brother, a young lawyer, undertakes to solve the mystery, clears Natica from suspicion, and discovers that the murderer is a very much alive young man of evil repute, whose death had been faked and reported a few years before.

Bookm 70:xxxiv N '29 50w

"'False Face' has that rare quality of real suspense that keeps you glued to your chair. . . . A worthwhile college mystery." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 13 '29 130w

Boston Transcript p7 N 13 '29 230w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '29 130w

LIMNELIUS, GEORGE, pseud. Medbury Fort murder. 311p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Benn] 29-22050

Any one of a number of officers at Fort Medbury had equal motive and opportunity for murdering Lieut. Lepean, the victim, who was an out and out scoundrel. Blackmail, a secret liason, and other distasteful matters complicate the solution for Inspectors Paton and McMaster, but the theory of the latter—that an educated man could not deliberately carry out a brutal and cold-blooded murder—proves correct.

"It is a brilliant and well-written piece of detective fiction with a good plot."

+ Bookm 70:xxxiv N '29 50w

"Has the advantage of unusual settings in army barracks, with an African interlude for further variety." Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 13 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p2 N 16 '29 230w

"The Medbury Fort Murder is quite first-rate. We do not remember to have come across, for many months past, any new crime mystery quite so ingenious, amusing, and well written as this one."

+ New Statesman 33:718 S 21 '29 100w

N Y Times p38 O 20 '29 130w

LINCOLN, JOSEPH CROSBY, and LINCOLN, FREEMAN. Blair's attic. 369p $2 Coward-McCann 29-17926

A mystery story of Cape Cod. In 1883 the Pride of the Fleet, Captain George Crossley, went down within sight of the home of Captain Freeman Blair. Crossley left all his possessions to his friend Blair, who at the time was very ill and who shortly afterwards died. There was a mystery about those possessions which was not solved until 1927 when young Marion Fisher invaded Blair's attic in search of antiques.

"The same philosophy and dry humor that characterize his other books appear here, and in addition he provides mystery."

+ Bookm 70:xxv S '29 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 25 '29 150w

"The movement of 'Blair's Attic' is none too brisk. From incident to incident it goes along slowly and with measured pace until the reader's interest in the mystery is certain to flag. And that interest is never at fever heat, as it should be in any story whose purpose is to keep one in a condition of eager bewilderment." E. F. Edgett

— Boston Transcript p3 Ag 31 '29 1100w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 S 14 '29 300w

N Y Times p28 O 6 '29 500w

"It is not a clever mystery story but it will hold your interest in spite of its technical weaknesses." E. M. Benson

+ — Outlook 152:710 Ag 28 '29 180w

"It may mark us as utterly low-brow, but we're going to confess it. We do like wholesome salty novels like 'Blair's Attic.'" E. C. Marriner

+ Portland Evening News p13 S 17 '29 350w

"Admirers of Joseph C. Lincoln need not fear that his son's collaboration has changed the old tradition of his Cape Cod stories. 'Blair's Attic' is a mystery novel, to be sure, but its mysteriousness is slight and unexciting. Otherwise the Lincoln formula is faithfully followed. If we were to believe the evidence of this novel, we should conclude that the art of prose fiction has been unchanged for twenty years. In method, temper, and material 'Blair's Attic' belongs to the age of the horse-car and the buggy. To a discriminating modern reader it will seem elementary and tedious."

— Sat R of Lit 6:116 S 7 '29 210w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '29 360w

LINCOLN, NATALIE SUMNER. Fifth latchkey. 269p $2 Appleton 29-14300

A doctor speeding to her patient at a rate of sixty miles an hour, the traffic officer who arrested her, a Russian prince, Senator Sanford and his lovely daughter Mona, and District Attorney Bruce are all much involved in the murder of Mona's husband. Why was there a latch key on the outside of the house in which the murdered man was found? The red haired traffic officer was a very good sleuth and he helped the district attorney to find out.

"The book works up to a perfect climax and a surprising solution."

+ Bookm 70:xxvi S '29 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 14 '29 100w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 31 '29 230w

N Y Times p13 Jl 28 '29 280w

"The outcome of this well-constructed story will (mildly) surprise you." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 152:594 Ag 7 '29 110w

Pratt p37 autumn '29

"Despite its rapidity of action and an occasional fresh turn, we should not rate the story above the average competently-handled, moderately interesting thriller."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:83 Ag 24 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p749 S 26 '29 200w

LINDSAY, VACHEL. Every soul is a circus. [2] 120p $2.75 Macmillan

811 29-23338

In an introductory inscription to this latest volume of Mr Lindsay's verse, the author describes a series of experiments in the "dancing of poetry" at the Lewis and Clarke high school in Spokane. Several of the poems in the present volume were written to be dramatized, or interpreted, in dance movement. The title-poem is a lyric celebrating a Chicago circus-parade; Part II of the book contains some nonsense rhymes illustrated with pen and ink drawings by the author.

"This is a book that proves that Lindsay's orchestra is not yet muted; and that it has new, though lesser, tunes to sing. In many of the present verses, a simplicity comparable to W. H. Davies is to be found; elsewhere are signs of a more conscious artist than Lindsay has heretofore shown himself to be—tendencies to explain himself, to philosophize more explicitly. The effect of this growth is a quieter collection of poems, but still a vital and a joyous one."
+ Bookm 70:xii Ja '30 150w

"Vachel Lindsay gets more real fun out of his jazz ballyhoo than a dozen long-faced intellectuals get sweating out their elegant measures. There is an innocent, Rabelaisian gusto about Mr. Lindsay; and, if you look a little closer, a bit of sly satire that adds piquancy to the most superficial nonsense. But the mocker can on occasion be serious; the clown may speak in parables and dare to prophesy. Section III of the book, dedicated to Camp Fire Girls and Boy Scouts, might just as well have been omitted—especially the conventional, uninspired drawings of Mr. G. M. Richards." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 29 '29 550w

Boston Transcript p2 D 11 '29 750w

"Vachel Lindsay, attempting the same art as Carroll, fails badly. He is never capable of a sense of humor; he cannot be nonsensical; he cannot relinquish his pose as teacher, and he is completely lacking in understanding of his students. The tom-tom beat of his rhythms is, to be sure, an excellent technique for children's verse, but his ideas appeal neither to children nor to adults. . . To be just, however, we must note the fact that within the covers of 'Every Soul Is a Circus' are several very simple and repetitive poem-games. These are poems to be danced, without music or drums, through bodily movement; they are imaginative enough and rhythmic enough to catch the young child's interest and would, doubtless, lend themselves to the teaching of bodily expression of poetry." E. L. Walton
— + Nation 129:594 N 20 '29 320w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory
+ N Y Evening Post p14m N 16 '29 400w

N Y Times p35 N 24 '29 550w

"To the readers who have cherished 'General Booth Enters Heaven,' 'The Congo,' 'The Chinese Nightingale,' and those radiant lines about the little broncho who could not be broken of dancing, together with certain other small masterpieces of music and insight and cosmic humor, 'Every Soul Is a Circus,' in spite of its happy title, can only come as a disappointment. There is a flicker or so here of the old Vachel Lindsay—alas, for the present interval, no more! It is the dark of the moon—but let us hope, at least, that the capricious daemon is only resting." L. W. Dodd
— Yale R n s 19:389 winter '30 200w

LINDSAY, VACHEL. Johnny Appleseed, and other poems. (Children's classics) 144p il $1.75 Macmillan

811 Children's poetry 28-30471

A selection of poems for children taken from the author's various books. Contents: Yellow butterflies; Moon poems; Stories and heroes; Nightingales.

Booklist 25:251 Mr '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 F 10 '29 1050w

Boston Transcript p2 F 9 '29 220w

"Here are filmy imaginings, frothy fancies, spun cobwebs, fragments of rainbows, gay humors, and nursery jingles. Also some streaks of seriousness, such as 'Congo.' The book is decoratively illustrated."
+ Christian Century 46:365 Mr 14 '29 40w

"When Lindsay addresses himself to mature minds he writes of the things children love—Indians, dragons, witch-doctors, circuses—because they generally please him and then he is richly successful. His presentation of his subjects, whether fabulous or comical, is intensely real." Josephine Pinckney
+ Sat R of Lit 5:928 Ap 20 '29 360w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 3 '29 230w

Wis Lib Bul 25:77 F '29

LINDSAY, VACHEL. Litany of Washington street. 121p il $3 Macmillan

814 Washington, George. Jefferson, Thomas. Whitman, Walt 29-7625

"After the realistic biographers have gotten through proving that Washington, Hamilton and Jefferson were commonplace persons, Vachel Lindsay proves that they were not. They had the grand manner; especially Washington. The book is chiefly about these three, and Walt Whitman, and incidentally it is about the whole United States from Mount Vernon to Spokane with special emphasis on Springfield, Illinois. It is a textbook in patriotism of the lyrical sort."—Christian Century

Booklist 25:352 Je '29

"Parts of 'The Litany of Washington Street' I have read a second and third time; I have stolen ideas from it to start noonday arguments, but I doubt if I ever urge any of my friends to read it for reasons other than to illustrate some of the dilemmas of evangelism. Lindsay's evangelism is always delightful." T: H. Ferril
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 19 '29 770w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '29 220w

Christian Century 46:589 My 1 '29 180w

"This American poet writes down in vivid prose the finer spirit of our national idealism. . . The book is a beautiful specimen of the printer's art." L. L. Riley
+ Churchman 139:17 My 11 '29 200w

"Though the incidents of its imagery are so novel, whimsical, and at their worst fanciful, the book as a whole is a serious success. It coins, for the first time I know of, an imaginative currency with which we, as Americans, can exploit the resources of our historical birthright. . . Who else could write a history-book like this, Star-Spangled all over, which yet leaves its readers with so thrilling, tingling an aftermath in the belfries of the brain?" Schuyler Jackson
+ New Repub 49:292 Jl 31 '29 800w

N Y Times p15 Jl 7 '29 470w

Reviewed by J. D. Tasker
Outlook 151:505 Mr 27 '29 210w

"If Mr Lindsay's 'Litany' is more a patriotic than a literary achievement, it at least employs imagination amusingly and never with effrontery. Possibly it is rather slight to make a book, even when supplemented with pictures and quotations from Whitman."
— + Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 5 '29 450w

LINFIELD, MARY BARROW. Young woman in love. 322p $2.50 Macaulay

29-2737

The adolescent tale of a southern girl whose love for her foster-father just escapes being a psychological problem when she falls in love with a cousin who is very like him.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 Ap 14 '29 130w

"This is a book belonging in that great middle group of fiction requiring no particular commendation or censure. When it is labelled a pleasant story, carried along on a fairly smooth flow of narrative, the best has been said of it."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 My 1 '29 220w

N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 2 '29 30w

LINFIELD, M. B.—Continued

"'Young Woman in Love,' despite its flow of rapid narrative, does not manage to ring quite true."

— N Y Times p22 My 12 '29 130w

Springf'd Republican p5e Je 2 '29 50w

LIPPINCOTT, ISAAC. Economic resources and industries of the world. 656p il $5 Appleton

338 Economic conditions. Commercial products. Natural resources. Industry

29-18449

A comprehensive survey of the distribution and production of the staple commodities of the world and of the industries based upon them.

---

Booklist 26:103 D '29

"Remarkably well written and amply documented book." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 16 '29 1050w

"Dr. Lippincott presents a very comprehensive account of all the economic resources of the world, mineral, agricultural and industrial; and studies the industrial condition of most of the countries of America, Europe and Asia, with special attention for the needs of the more backward regions."

+ N Y Times p31 N 10 '29 230w

St Louis 27:331 D '29

LIPPINCOTT, ISAAC. What the farmer needs. 200p $2 (8s 6d) Appleton

630.973 Agriculture—United States. Agriculture—Economic aspects. Farm produce—Marketing

28-25273

"The purpose of this volume is to study the farmers' needs more from the point of view of production than from that of marketing. The reasonable solution for the problem of the surplus is to improve methods of production so that costs may be reduced and consumption augmented." (Preface) Contents: Agriculture to-day; The problem of the surplus; Proposed measures for farm relief; Veto of the McNary-Haugen bill; An agricultural revolution; Suggested solutions; Products of agriculture in foreign trade; Development of American agriculture.

---

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 26 '29 100w

"Obviously, the professor's scheme is fine. Under it the farmers ought—in most years, at least—to be cats in catnip. Unfortunately, he omits to tell precisely how his plan is to be put into effect. I wish that somebody would write a book not telling what farm relief ought to be, but explaining how to put it into operation. Until that date, which I fear is still a few years off, such works as 'What the Farmer Needs' will be counsels of perfection." N. A. Crawford

— Nation 129:230 Ag 28 '29 350w

Reviewed by Herbert Gaston

N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 12 '29 130w

St Louis 27:89 Mr '29

"Dr. Lippincott's book is an excellent study from the point of view of an economist who holds that no essential difference exists between good production management in farming and in manufacturing. The reader is likely not to question the soundness of the author's judgment so much as the feasibility of his plan for an industry with more than six million separate units."

Sat R of Lit 5:632 Ja 26 '29 130w

Wis Lib Bul 25:70 F '29

LIPPMANN, WALTER. Preface to morals. 348p $2.50 Macmillan

171 Ethics. Philosophy and religion

29-10228

This book is written for those who can no longer believe in the religion of their fathers, who are not defiant, or proud or indifferent because of their freedom but who are perplexed by the consequences of their loss of faith in the old certainties. The first part of the book is an eloquent and moving analysis of the confusion and disillusion of the modern age. The rest of the book is an attempt to find a way out of this chaos, thru the acceptance of a higher humanism and a way of life inspired by the ideal of "disinterestedness" in all things.

---

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

Am J Soc 35:496 N '29 600w

"A thoughtful and thought-provoking book, written with admirable lucidity and charm."

+ Booklist 25:377 Jl '29

"The best description of the life of the spirit, as an enlightened modern understands the spirit, which I have encountered. On the lucidity, judgment and general interest of this book it is unnecessary to dwell." Gilbert Seldes

+ Bookm 69:444 Je '29 950w

"It may be said at once that Mr. Lippmann's credo is a statement profound, eloquent and sustained of a philosophy for the adult modern. His thought has become mellow and his language has stayed fresh. He has gone to the core of contemporary confusions. He has perceived its origins and its characteristic agonies. With candor and comprehension he has indicated the possibility of a way of life for those who will no longer take one on authority, a religion for the faithless, a morality that a free intelligence can recognize as the native expression of his life and his world. Mr. Lippmann has written a brilliant preface to contemporary morals. In that field no one can ever write a conclusion." Irwin Edman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 My 5 '29 1800w

Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '29 550w

"Book after book has appeared during the past year or two in support of the thesis that morality must seek and find a new basis. . . The clearest, simplest and frankest of all these books is Durant Drake's 'The New Morality.' Equally searching in its critique of the old order, and more complete in its argument for the possibility and practicability of the new, is this notable book by Walter Lippmann. It is not too much to say that if any thoughtful soul who is concerned about the future of civilization will to solitude retire with this volume he will find grounds for renewed hope at the same time that he is having his mind purged of platitude and his dogmatisms swept away." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 46:713 My 29 '29 700w

"With fine restraint and appealing conviction, he clears the air of our moral anarchy by a keen analysis of the superstitions that linger among us and disentangles the problem of conduct from the misleading associations of the past. He points a way for the sincere and reverent, but, none the less, tough-minded, man to orient his life amid the modern complexities of life and thought." L. L. Riley

+ Churchman p16 Je 1 '29 880w

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 6:368 Jl '29 850w

"Mr. Lippmann's discussion of religious belief is able and enlightening, and his remarks upon the relation between science and religion show true insight; but the relevance of the discussion of religion to his ethical beliefs is dubious. One is inclined to see in the discussion of religion a sophisticated but romantic desire to have a golden age, or, perhaps, as a sop to modern democracy, Mr. Lippmann attempts by discussing the passing of religion to make his aristocratic ethics in some way relevant to the problems of the common man." C. M. Perry

Int J Ethics 40:128 O '29 750w

"Mr. Lippmann has in the past shown a competence in using philosophical ideas to interpret various phases of contemporary life. In his latest book he exhibits this competence in an unusually high degree. Himself a successful journalist rather than a professor of philosophy, writing for the 'general reader' rather than the student of ethical theory, he has produced a book worthy of the attention of all who are interested in the moral problems of modern society." S. P. Lamprecht

+ J Philos 26:612 O 24 '29 700w

Reviewed by W: Seagle
Nation 129:148 Ag 7 '29 1000w

"One is grateful to him for writing with frank simplicity, and the clarity of expression which is his special gift. . . There may be some other book, perhaps in some other language than English, which, if I read it, I should think to be a better introduction for a clear-sighted young man or woman to the actual problems of conduct in the complexity of modern civilization. But if such a book exists, I have not read it." Graham Wallas

+ Nation and Ath 45:738 S 7 '29 1400w

" 'A Preface to Morals' is, I suppose, far and away Walter Lippmann's best book. In style, it is a long way from the sometimes tiresome Chestertonisms of his early political books; and in thought, it shows a new competence, a new inspiration even, in fields where he has never before ventured. It is beautifully organized, beautifully clear; and it is both outspoken and persuasive in bringing news which has been uneasily awaited. For Lippmann has not merely, as other writers have done, shown us the picture of our own confusion, with our ancient sanctions and authorities gone and obliged to stand on our own human feet: he gives us the assurance that we shall be able to do so, that we have begun to do so already." Edmund Wilson

New Repub 59:210 Jl 10 '29 1500w

"The author awakens great expectations which he is unable to satisfy. His diagnosis is brilliant; his prescription is not impressive. The latter part of his book is a genuine human document, presenting the story of a sincere and high-minded man trying to find security and peace in the gospel of 'disinterestedness.' " H. E. Fosdick

— + N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 27 '29 1400w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis
N Y Times p2 My 5 '29 2000w

"The distinguished editor of the New York 'World' has done what many men have dreamed of doing: he has thought through his philosophy of life in terms of the world he sees about him. The result is a clarification of confused doubts, a realistic approach to the new problems of religion and conduct. A lucid, stimulating, almost, one might say, commonsense discussion of a problem which, in the last analysis, is the most important consideration of life because it is the guiding spirit of life. One need not agree with either the major premise or the conclusions to recognize the value of the discussion. Nor will it, I think, give offense to those whose faith is still strong within them. Rather, it should fire them with new zeal to revaluate their own belief." Stewart Beach

+ Outlook 152:68 My 8 '29 1300w

"This is more than a 'preface.' It is a guidepost, a blazed trail. To be sure it does not take us to any very clear-cut and positive conclusions, but it gives the traveller fine courage to breast his way along the slope, through the mist and the brooding forest bloom. It is written by a man who knows his day and generation; he is not afraid to face life; he sees it steadily and sees it whole." H. S. McCready

+ Portland Evening News p5 Jl 23 '29 950w

"In his attempt to construct—or reconstruct—a basis for modern idealism, Mr. Lippmann produces a philosophy that some critics have likened to the stoicism of the Greeks." W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:16 Je '29 150w

"This is one of the most interesting and suggestive books that have recently appeared on the tendencies of the age in the matter of morals—in the widest sense of that much abused word. It is true that upon one or two points the author lays himself open to the criticism that his evidence is too largely drawn from his own country, but his analysis of conditions is invariably of universal application. . . Mr. Lippmann's analysis is better than his conclusions. He would have been well advised to have ended upon a less dogmatic note, for the logical outcome of his 'religion of the spirit' is anarchy, and his whole book goes to prove that anarchy is the last thing which he desires to advocate."

+ — Sat R 148:218 Ag 24 '29 900w

"To read it is a continuous intellectual excitement. It is the record of a finely endowed mind, with not a little first-hand experience of human affairs, trying to think its way through and out of the moral confusion of our time. It is full of penetrating analyses and of sound criticisms." C: A. Bennett

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1015 My 18 '29 2200w

"The book as a whole, though hardly a contribution to philosophy—the author's indebtedness to Mr Santayana is both apparent and acknowledged—tends to induce the thoughtful thinking of which America stands in need, and affords further proof of the growing conservatism of our literary and social reconstructionists."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 1370w

"A book that is rich, strong, and courageous in all its parts." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 62:413 Jl 1 '29 1350w

"We find ourselves demurring to the author's proposition that 'it is no exaggeration to say that science is high religion incarnate.' The pursuit of an exact science imposes upon the scientist a high standard of veracity; he learns also a genuine humility before the facts of nature; and these are great virtues. But a scientist is also a man; and the man includes the scientist. Mr. Lippmann is an exceptionally clear-headed man, in whom such confusions are quite unexpected. . . But if the moral freedom of to-day turns out (as we believe it will) to be a burden to the individual, he will begin to listen to the moralist, and to understand him, particularly if he speaks with the lucidity and conviction of Mr. Lippmann, in whose admirable book the tonic influence of Mr. Santayana's thinking is plainly perceptible."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p716 S 19 '29 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 25:272 Jl '29

"He has written one of the most helpful and thoughtful books on the moral problem in this generation. His volume is the most important of several indications that we are returning to sanity in moral theory and may ultimately return to it in practice." R. N.

+ World Tomorrow 12:313 Jl '29 1000w

"Mr. Lippmann had it in him to be a clever writer. One of the finest qualities of the 'Preface to Morals' is a certain strain of literary self-conquest, wholly in keeping with the author's idea of asceticism, which saves the book from falling into the slough of cleverness, and gives it a lean literary vigor and sincerity. . . This is a sound and valuable book; honest, unafraid, and austere. We are grateful to Mr. Lippmann for discharging so fully the debt he first incurred in writing 'Drift and Mastery.' " W. L. Sperry

+ Yale R n s 19:161 autumn '29 950w

LIPSKY, ABRAM. John Wesley; a portrait. 314p il $3 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Wesley, John 28-22586

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"[Not] in the category of the 'debunking' biographies. Mr. Lipsky may have had such a book in mind when he began to write, but his finished product is a vigorous study of a man whom he does not hesitate to pronounce truly great." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 45:1259 O 18 '28 280w

"Naturally, the author exaggerates the importance of the love affairs at times; and at others escapes the psychoanalytic pitfall and tries to present Wesley in relation to his time. The method chosen lacks continuity and has vividness."

Dial 86:79 Ja '29 80w

"To those who know the man only in his general relations to eighteenth-century life, this study is commended for a sympathetic ac-

LIPSKY, ABRAM—Continued
count of an important part of the inner man." Michael Kraus
+ Hist Outlook 20:146 Mr '29 320w

"It is very rarely that two biographies of a noteworthy figure in history are published simultaneously, and even more unusual that they should complement each other so perfectly as these two volumes do. Mr. Lipsky's study is cold and incisively analytical; Mr. Lunn's is intimate and colorful. What Mr. Lipsky has overlooked in incident and detail is supplied by Mr. Lunn; and what Mr. Lunn has omitted in historical background is supplied by Mr. Lipsky. Both books are admirably done, and, for the student of the man or the period, both are indispensable. . . Be it said to the credit of both biographers that they leave the psychoanalytical inferences of Wesley's love affairs to the reader's imagination." W. F. Kohn
+ New Repub 58:313 My 1 '29 470w
N Y World p11m Mr 3 '29 120w

"It seems certain to this reviewer that he greatly overemphasizes the importance of the itinerant genius's occasional infatuations. . . But his book is in other ways most helpful—and penetrating." B. I. Bell
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:621 Ja 26 '29 840w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '29 400w

"Mr. Lipsky's volume is written in lively fashion, with many shrewd comments and occasional passages of genuine insight, but it is not a portrait, not a competent psychological study." R. L. Calhoun
+ — Yale R n s 19:199 autumn '29 150w

LISLE, CLIFTON. Hobnails and heather. 289p il $2.50 Harcourt

914.2 England—Description and travel. France—Description and travel. Boy scouts of America 29-7594

Boy scouts and others may find pleasant, vicarious adventure in this narrative of a group of Pennsylvania scouts hiking in England and France. Illustrated with a sketch map of the route and drawings in black and white.

Booklist 25:362 Je '29
Boston Transcript p6 My 11 '29 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p132 N '29

"This should be a book that boys like tremendously. It takes up their thrilling and trivial experiences in readable and certain fashion. One of the achievements in this book is the success of the author in submerging his own personality. He always uses the plural pronoun, and the feeling is sustained throughout that not only one but all of those hikers write this story." M. G. Bonner
+ N Y Times p5 Jl 26 '29 380w
Reviewed by F. L. Robbins
Outlook 152:391 Jl 3 '29 70w
St Louis 27:289 O '29

"This book makes happy reading. To write so busy and compact a log required great skill; humor saved it, humor and a sincerity which gives vividness. The reader becomes a boy. He becomes a walker; the observation compassed by those thirty-two eyes astounds. He becomes an historian, seeing a new England, and mining amazing data from local conversations."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:962 Ap 27 '29 300w

"Maj Lisle's narrative is in slightly humorous vein but always interesting."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '29 180w
Wis Lib Bul 25:162 My '29

LISLE, CLIFTON. Treasure of the Château. 279p il $2 Harcourt

29-18928

Harry Spenser and his chum, Dick Hensley, American scouts, are invited to go with Harry's uncle on a walking tour thru the French battlefields. A train accident on the way out of Paris is the first exciting event of the trip. It starts a series of mysterious incidents which resolve into a hunt for lost treasure to reëstablish the fortunes of an old French family.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Bookm 70:443 D '29 50w
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Outlook 153:591 D 11 '29 50w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '29 60w

LITTLE, ARTHUR DEHON. Handwriting on the wall; a chemist's interpretation. 287p $2.50 Little

660.4 Chemistry, Technical. Scientific research 28-23441

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Reviewed by H. S. van Klooster
Ann Am Acad 144:157 Jl '29 280w
Booklist 25:197 F '29

"Passage after passage in the book is delightfully quotable; indeed, some are worthy places in current anthologies; the book will undoubtedly be quoted widely and will most certainly become a reference work in the offices of the Fourth Estate as well as in the Fifth Estate." C: F. Roth
+ Ind & Eng Chem 21:292 Mr '29 800w
N Y New Tech Bks 14:5 Ja '29

"The book pours forth for the lay reader varied treasures of information as to the marvels chemistry has lately wrought in a thousand and one matters that touch our daily life. But the manufacturer and the business man are the ones who most need to read it."
+ N Y Times p20 F 10 '29 400w
St Louis 27:94 Mr '29
Wis Lib Bul 25:98 Mr '29
Reviewed by W. C. Abbott
Yale R n s 18:803 summer '29 200w

LITTLE, SHELBY (MELTON) (MRS RICHARD HENRY LITTLE). George Washington. 481p $5 Minton

B or 92 Washington, George 29-18687

Mrs Little has written this biography without any intrusion of her own opinion, drawing the portrait of Washington as it forms itself from his own writings, contemporary memoirs, letters, diaries, newspapers, etc. "I have tried," the author says, "to set down with complete detachment the record of Washington's life, based on his words and actions, and on the words and actions of his contemporaries. I have tried to assemble all that is illuminating and significant; and I have tried to put it down here quite dispassionately, without praise and without blame. Conclusions are left as a matter, for the general reader. Each will color them according to his own manner of thought. So, at least, it is in life. And my aim has been to reconstruct a life."

Booklist 26:66 N '29

"It is not possible to discover in [Mrs] Little's biography any misuse of material for the purpose of special pleading. On the contrary the standards of historical scholarship and veracity are well-nigh impeccable. The result is impressive. Dispassionately, implacably, [the author] reveals in the vivid and irrefutable words of contemporaries the story of the American Revolution, the critical period, and Washington's two administrations. . . Mrs. Little's life of Washington, approximating as it does autobiography, merits recognition as the most impartial, the most judicious portrayal of the Father of His Country that has yet appeared." H: S. Commager
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 S 1 '29 1450w
Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 46:1219 O 2 '29 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p149 D '29

"The author has apparently consulted many of the books enumerated in the bibliography. Yet a reader who knew nothing else of Washington would lay down the book with a feeling that the Father of his Country was 'not such a much.' [She] aims to be truthful; but certain lapses seem to show a curious ignorance of or indifference to the sources. The military criticism, which occupies the central portion of the book, is inexpert and incomplete." A. B. Hart

— Current Hist 31:440 D '29 450w

"Mrs Little's portrayal of Washington is not a canvas but a mirror. Her work is the outcome of profound study. She has done it without the aid of rhetoric, inspirational deduction or psychoanalysis. Her prose is sober and calm. She reassembles the character and reinvigorates the dust of one of the greatest and most stultified of men, gravely, deliberately, scientifically." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p7m S 21 '29 500w

"Mrs. Little's book is, on the whole, quite the best biography that we have on the personal side. If it brings out strongly, by its straightforward recital, the limited endowments, the uncertainties and dissatisfactions, the emotional frigidity, and the pervading sense of anxiety and possible defect that marked Washington's temperament and performance, it does so only because those are the qualities that the record reveals. The great defect of the book is that it is so largely personal. A larger measure of attention to national problems would not have changed the essentials of the picture, but it might have left the central figure more attractive and less pathetic." W: MacDonald

+ — N Y Times p5 N 3 '29 900w

"[The author's] presentation is colorful without compromise to historical accuracy, and so in no real way does our hereditary idea of the brave soldier and patient statesman suffer by a knowledge of his more personal background and inward characteristics. Although less awesome, this portrait of Washington is decidedly more appealing than those of a national moral-clad hero such as every good history text is full of." M. A. Higginson

+ Outlook 152:710 Ag 28 '29 200w

LITTLER, ROBERT MCDONALD CHARLES. Governance of Hawaii; a study of territorial administration. (Stanford bks. in world politics ser.) 281p $2.75 Stanford univ. press [12s 6d Milford]

354.96 Hawaiian Islands—Politics and government 29-12601

"A study in territorial administration rather than in Colonial government. After a geographical and ethnological introduction and a historical sketch of independent Hawaii a chapter is devoted to a discussion of the plan of government, another to parties and elections, and these are followed by an exhaustive study of the Legislature and the executive organization. Each of the Ministries has a chapter to itself wherein much detail of the working machinery of the Government appears. Hawaiian law and legal administration are discussed, and two chapters are given to Honolulu, its general government and local affairs."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"In spite of its pedantic title, this is a good book, well written, thorough, and sufficiently well documented. A word like 'governance,' even though it has been used before, is not good English, and in any case a word which must be explained should be avoided, particularly in a title. The volume is not a plea; it contains nothing controversial. It gives the facts on which the lawyers and the politicians can build their briefs. The very recital of these facts is inspiring testimony as to the adaptability of American democratic principles to a territory made up of utterly divergent races." W: R. Castle, Jr.

+ — Am Pol Sci R 23:1037 N '29 550w

"A source work of considerable historical importance." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 6 '29 550w

"Almost Mr. Littler might have called his book, 'Hawaii Complete,' so comprehensive is it of so many interesting phases of life in those islands. It does, of course, fall short of deserving such a description, since much of commercial and social interests is left untouched. Primarily, it is what its subtitle declares it to be, 'a study in territorial administration,' but that has brought about also study of that most fascinating question of racial mixture which bewilders the visitor to the islands, study of the educational system, of health and welfare, of public works and, to a certain extent, of agriculture and commerce."

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 18 '29 420w

"The book may be recommended to students of world politics."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p799 O 10 '29 250w

LIVINGSTON, ARMSTRONG. Doublecross. 316p $2 Henkle [7s 6d Skeffington]

29-10176

"A diamond necklace is the cause of all the trouble. A group of smugglers have tried to get it into this country, but the agent to whom they have entrusted the mission has been robbed. In the closing pages good turns out to be bad and bad good in the persons of many of the characters, and the necklace is recovered while a huge counterfeiting plot is exposed."—Springf'd Republican

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 26 '29 80w

"This new mystery is outstandingly excellent amongst the flood of 'detective' fiction of the year. Mr. Livingston cannot merely spin a story with all the thrills that can be desired, but he can also draw real characters and write with such style and vigor that his work would be carried to success even without the aid of the interest-sustaining element of mystery."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '29 220w

"Mighty good reading."

+ N Y Times p24 My 19 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '29 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p749 S 26 '29 200w

LIVINGSTON, ARMSTRONG. Monster in the pool. 320p $2 Bobbs

29-16669

"When the Barron's butler, immediately after finding the yellowed paper which told where the long-lost family jewels were hidden, saw an eight-foot alligator approaching he dropped dead, and the yellowed paper vanished with the reptile. Presently the Barrons found the jewels' hiding-place—in the kitchen—but by then the jewels had vanished, though one of them turned up later when Philip Barron was shot through the head. So Jimmy Traynor, private detective and not quite reformed burglar, came to Lakeside to lay the terror, find at least part of the alligator, and recover the jewels."—Sat R of Lit

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ag 11 '29 150w

"Mr. Livingston has woven a grand tale out of the simple warp of everyday life, and made it funny into the bargain. There are a few horrors, and a murder or two, but they do not interfere with our huge delight in Jocelyn, and her troubles trying to cook, with Jimmy's aunt who does want him to stop burglaring banks. 'I shall be very angry with you, Jimmy,' says the gentle old lady, 'if you take up bank-robbery on a serious scale. It's too dangerous. I do wish you would promise me to stick to the safer business of burglary and house-breaking.'" I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '29 450w

"It is all quite light-hearted and giddy, with a highly irresponsible ending, and would have been capital entertainment if the author had either spoofed his material a little more or not quite so much."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:223 O 5 '29 130w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '29 130w

LIVINGSTONE, RICHARD WINN, ed. Mission of Greece; some Greek views of life in the Roman world. 302p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

180 Philosophy, Ancient. Greek literature—Collections [29-12641]

"Mr. Livingstone has collected in the present volume the thoughts of a considerable group of Greek writers in the Hellenistic and Roman world and has presented them in such a way that they are entirely intelligible to the general reader. Here are clearly presented the streams of Greek reason from the schism that followed Socrates and Plato down to the days of Lucian."—Sat R of Lit

---

"Meaty, reliable, entertaining. . . One of the foremost living Hellenists of the English-speaking world here makes his learning accessible to the interested reader. The work is its own best praise."

+ Nation 128:722 Je 12 '29 100w

New Statesman 32:364 D 22 '28 270w

"A good piece of work consisting of excellent selections, admirably woven together by ample and intelligent comment."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:819 Mr 23 '29 250w

"It is all excellent reading."

+ Spec 141:sup544 O 20 '28 130w

"In this collection of extracts, well chosen and admirably rendered, the Greekless will find sources of pleasure and profit on every page."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p20 Ja 10 '29 300w

LLOYD GEORGE, DAVID. Slings and arrows; sayings chosen from [his] speeches; ed. with an introd. by Philip Guedalla. 324p $3.50 Harper [7s 6d Cassell]

308 Great Britain—Politics and government [29-18443]

Selections from the speeches of Lloyd George which are as interesting for the light they throw on his temperament and character as for their political import.

---

Booklist 26:64 N '29

"It seems very likely that the book was intended and used originally as a campaign document. This, however, does not seriously impair its value as the portrait of a strikingly vital personality whose rôle in history renders him almost, if not quite, as interesting a study to American as to British readers." W: M. Houghton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Jl 21 '29 1150w

"These speeches, these sayings ring true. Sometimes there is the note of passion, often there is a delightful humor, always there is a certain reasonableness and moderation. But however eloquent he may be the note is never forced; there is no bitterness; and there is a complete absence of pose."

+ Nation and Ath 45:68 Ap 20 '29 1300w

New Statesman 33:224 My 25 '29 110w

"Here is a Selbst-portrait of the perfect orator. Here is an almost perfect textbook. You may not care for it as literature, but if you have a taste for the drama in politics and relish a solo pageant illumined by some superb fires, you will find it both instructive and not a little astounding. For the man still remains a phenomenon not yet thoroughly explained." Idwal Jones

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 27 '29 900w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p3 N 17 '29 680w

St Louis 27:304 N '29

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '29 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p387 My 9 '29 30w

LLOYD-JONES, MRS ESTHER (MCDONALD). Student personnel work at Northwestern university: with a foreword by Walter Dill Scott. 253p $3.50 Harper

378.1 Students. Northwestern university. Personnel work in education 29-18271

A detailed account of the methods of student personnel work employed, and the results achieved, at Northwestern university from 1922 to 1927. It covers the study of some 10,000 students and explains in detail problems of the personnel department and shows its relation to the other university bureaus and agencies.

---

Am J Soc 35:523 N '29 120w

"Mrs. Lloyd-Jones has given a forthright, impersonal, scientific account of the organization of the work at Northwestern, of the problems it had to meet, the many kinds of service it has tried to give to the students and the results of the research it has carried on. . . The volume contains many charts, diagrams, statistical tables and case studies and it will have very great value not only for those interested in its particular theme but for all who are engaged in the adventure of bettering the service given by colleges and universities."

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 4 '29 420w

"There is ample evidence in this book that higher education can be made more effective through research and counselling with respect to such problems as admissions, freshman orientation, probation, student maladjustment, vocational choices, employment, and academic records." D: S. Hanchett

+ Survey 63:103 O '29 380w

Wis Lib Bul 25:318 O '29

LOBEL, JOSEF. Don't be afraid; tr. by George F. Dunay. 233p $2 Putnam

610.4 Medicine 29-5108

Short breezy articles, as if from a doctor-columnist's notebook, on a miscellany of medical subjects such as glands, bathing cures, rejuvenation, and thought reading.

---

"The book is up-to-date, witty, and gloom-dispelling, but it is not detailed."

Booklist 25:382 Jl '29

"Completely modern in information, and as completely entertaining in manner, this little book by the eminent European physician, translated by George F. Dunay, tears the veil of misinformation away from many sacred shrines of popular medical belief, while emphasizing constantly the actual functions and behaviors of the human body."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 10 '29 200w

"Fear of illness so easily leads to the illness of fear that it is to be studiously avoided. Dr. Lobel helps us in this regard by writing of the disease fears of today in the spirit of high levity. The moral of his whole story is that work makes life sweet—and that fruitless worry makes it sour." E. W. M.

Churchman p29 Ap 27 '29 100w

"It is so cleverly and entertainingly written that it is an unfailingly diverting book. And it is filled with so many very recent discoveries and incipient discoveries of medical science, half-answered questions, glimpses of new truths, of which the lay reader as yet knows little or nothing, that he is likely to be a bit bewildered by the fantastic procession and to wonder how many of them will yet be made beneficial to man and how many are destined to go into the misbegotten discards of science."

+ N Y Times p14 Je 30 '29 380w

St Louis 27:197 Je '29

"Throughout his essays Dr. Löbel reveals in addition to his humor, common sense beyond that possessed by the vast majority of physicians." Morris Fishbein

+ Sat R of Lit 5:912 Ap 20 '29 570w

LOBSENZ, MRS JOHANNA. Older woman in industry. 297p $2.50 Scribner

331.4 Woman—Employment 29-7387

"The book takes up the various factors involved in the problem of the older woman in industry who is unemployed—herself, advertisements, the employment manager and the agencies. It then discusses constructively what she, the employer, the state and society at large can do to better existing conditions, and finally it summarizes the problem and the various solutions offered clearly and simply."—Survey

Booklist 25:308 My '29

"Mrs. Lobsenz has by simply stating the facts of the situation impressed the necessity of improving the status of older women as a matter of fairness and expediency." M. B. Bassett

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Mr 10 '29 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p86 Je '29

"She has made a valuable attack upon an important problem, in a field in which she must have encountered many difficulties as an investigator."

+ Nation 128:125 Jl 31 '29 200w

"Miss Lobsenz has made an interesting contribution to what has become a serious economic development and her book ought to stir up discussion of the matter."

+ N Y Times p3 S 22 '29 420w

"The book points to an economic and social mal-adjustment which will increasingly need to be given close attention and study by legislators, social workers, personnel directors and employers and by working women themselves." E. P. Kimball

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '29 1100w

"This is a book which one reads through from cover to cover with increasing interest. It covers only a small section of the problem of unemployment for the study was limited to Manhattan, but it treats this in such a clear and orderly fashion that its methods as well as its findings are valuable. . . . The reader who is interested in the subject from the technical side or who expects to use the material may well consider every word from Preface through Publications Consulted. The general reader can get the argument from Part III, the Summary, which is non-technical, orderly and stimulating." L. M. Gilbreth

+ Survey 62:143 Ap 15 '29 240w

LOCKE, WILLIAM JOHN. Ancestor Jorico. 339p $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]

29-24373

A treasure hunt story in which four cousins cruise to the West Indies in search of a vast fortune supposed to have been left by an almost mythical ancestor. Jones, the deaf and dumb valet, and his beautiful cousin Ruth play a surprising part.

Boston Transcript p2 D 31 '29 450w

"The story is of a type rather different from the majority of Mr. Locke's tales, but it is interesting, and its complicated plot brings about a number of exciting but dramatic moments. There are thrills, not only in the account of the search for the buried treasure and of Binkie's gruesome discovery, but also in the description of the shipwreck and its effect upon the enigmatic Jones. A lively and entertaining, if not always entirely plausible, yarn is this tale of 'Ancestor Jorico' and his ill-gotten wealth."

+ — N Y Times p6 N 24 '29 680w

"The story's obviously fragile materials are substantially enlivened by Locke's perennial charm of writing, by a delicate fusing of light and sombre factors, by adept character drawing, and by the unabating animation of the plot's incidents. Though not comparable to the best of the novelist's earlier work, it is a tale which never wearies, nor allows one's interest in the outcome to wax indifferent." E. C. Beckwith

+ N Y World p11m D 29 '29 350w

"A pleasant, old-fashioned kind of story." W. R. Brooks

Outlook 153:511 N 27 '29 100w

"A sophisticated reader of novels, as he turns the pages of Ancestor Jorico, might take a slightly malicious pleasure in detecting the author's admirably skilful devices for keeping a not very strong story going. Mr. Locke, this time in the person of an elderly retired general, knows to a hair's-breadth how much space he can take up in description of the characters, in details of their past lives, in marshalling them, in setting the stage, and in reflections by the way; which means that he is an accomplished spinner of yarns to whom you must allow scope for the exercise of his virtuosity if you want to be entertained."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p666 Ag 29 '29 520w

LOCKLIN, DAVID PHILIP. Railroad regulation since 1920. 211p $2.50 McGraw

385 Railroads—United States. Transportation act, 1920 28-28988

"Attempts to cover the general history of American railroad regulation since the war, and the controversies which have come up in connection with it."—Yale Law J

"This book reviews with clearness, conciseness and accuracy the development of railroad regulation since the passage of the Transportation act of 1920. The reading of the book ought to be preceded by a study of the masterly work of Walker D. Hines, formerly director-general of railroads, on War History of American Railroads. It takes up the subject about at the point where Mr. Hines leaves off. . . . The author indicates both sides of important controversial questions with intelligent comments, usually without attempting to establish the soundness of either side." E. J. Rich

+ Am Econ R 19:454 S '29 430w

"The book is a valuable addition to students' libraries on transportation. It is written without bias and it serves as an excellent basis for the further study of recent developments in the fields of railroad finances, rates, valuation and accounts." G. L. Wilson

+ Ann Am Acad 146:279 N '29 330w

"It is a fair and useful piece of work on a specific problem." H: R. Mussey

+ Nation 128:85 Ja 16 '29 40w

"The treatment is clear, and there is an obvious intent to give a fair hearing to both sides of a controversy. Nowhere else will the reader find in a single volume so many facts about railroad control which he wants to know and so little unnecessary talk. The economic side of the questions involved is not adequately discussed. We are told quite accurately and fairly what law makers and commissions have tried to do; but we are left in the dark as to the circumstances which will determine the success or failure of these experiments. Of course such thorough economic discussion would have added to the size of the book; but even a few pages of it, here and there, would have been welcome to the average reader, and salutary in their influence on public opinion." A. T. Hadley

+ — Yale Law J 38:690 Mr '29 200w

LOCKWOOD, FRANK CUMMINS. Arizona characters. 250p il $2.50 Times-mirror

920 Arizona—Biography. Frontier and pioneer life 28-23777

"'Arizona Characters' contains accounts of the most prominent of those men who in her early history made the deepest imprint. Great Americans wander through its pages: Cochise, the Apache Chief; Henry Clay Hooker, descendant of Thomas Hooker; Pete Kitchen, picturesque Indian fighter; General George Crook;

LOCKWOOD, F. C.—Continued
and many others, who are worth remembering."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p5 N 17 '28 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p259 Mr 28 '29 650w

LOCKYER, THOMAZINE MARY (BROWNE) lady, and LOCKYER, WINIFRED LUCAS. Life and work of Sir Norman Lockyer; with the assistance of H. Dingle, and contributions by Dr Charles E. St John. 474p il $7.25 (18s) Macmillan

B or 92 Lockyer, Sir Joseph Norman [29-10169]

"The widow and daughter of Sir Norman Lockyer have dealt with the personal part of the story in the first half of the book, and have provided in the second half a series of brief monographs, written by experts, on Lockyer's astronomical theories and discoveries. These papers, although necessarily at times presuming considerable technical knowledge on the part of the reader, are in every case so written that their meaning can be understood by any educated person."—New Statesman

"Although most explicit the account is rather lacking in feeling—it is the work of a writer who has not known his subject sufficiently closely and at the early critical period of his activity to paint a really intimate picture. It is, in fact, as are so many portraits—technically good yet not quite the man himself." H: E. Armstrong
+ — Nature 122:870 D 8 '28 3500w
New Statesman 32:262 D 1 '28 560w

"The memoir by his widow and daughter is admirable, and it is most usefully supplemented by essays in which several experts discuss various phases of Lockyer's scientific work and show how far his views have been confirmed or modified by later research."
+ Spec 142:sup389 Mr 9 '29 430w
Times [London] Lit Sup p847 N 15 '28 1400w

LOCOCK, CHARLES DEALTRY, tr. Selection from modern Swedish poetry; tr. in the original metres. 161p $2.25 Macmillan [6s Allen & U.]

839.71 Swedish poetry—Translations into English

A translated selection from the works of the following modern Swedish poets: Verner von Heidenstam, awarded the Nobel prize in 1916: Oscar Levertin; E. A. Karlfeldt, secretary of the Swedish academy and pioneer of the back-to-the-land movement in Swedish poetry; Anders Osterling, a translator of Wordsworth and Shelley; Bo Bergman; Harriet Löwenhjelm; Dan Andersson; and others.

Boston Transcript p4 N 16 '29 300w

"There are here a number of good poems well translated. . . Mr. Locock has, on the whole, triumphed over his difficulties in a remarkable fashion. Several of his versions, which none the less appear to be quite faithful, do not read like versions at all."
+ New Statesman 33:662 S 7 '29 600w

LODER, VERNON, pseud. See Vahey, J: G: H.

LODGE, SIR OLIVER JOSEPH. Why I believe in personal immortality. 206p $2 Doubleday, Doran [5s Cassell]

134 Immortality. Psychical research 29-786

Sir Oliver Lodge states the evidence on which is based his belief in survival after death, citing illustrative phenomena from his own experience or knowledge.

Booklist 25:268 Ap '29

"This little book is a beautiful example of persuasive argument. Lodge's long training as a scientist and long practice as a writer do not fail him in his presentation of the reasoned conclusions of many years of fruitful and fearless investigation." J: H. Holmes
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 23 '29 280w

"Sir Oliver goes beyond his former volume on the spiritual manifestations of his dead son and gives as adequate a statement of the claims and findings of psychical research as can be made." T. C. R.
Boston Transcript p5 Mr 9 '29 220w

"This book is not intended as an argument, but merely as a record of one man's attitude toward an age-old question, 'If a man die, shall he live again?' As such it provides interesting and rewarding reading." R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 6:393 Jl '29 300w
Nature 121:978 Je 23 '28 720w

"Whatever we accept on this subject must be received on the authority of persons, like Sir Oliver Lodge, who make a practice of believing; and consequently such persons must study well how to lend conviction. In this Sir Oliver has achieved preëminent success. Of his own quiet, calm, profound belief he leaves not the slightest doubt. His certainty, being genuine and durable, is actually infectious." C. E. Ayres
New Repub 59:47 My 22 '29 500w
N Y Times p5 F 17 '29 800w
Pratt p7 winter '29

"Sir Oliver's book—tentative, and even inconclusive as it is—is a stimulating contribution to a perennially interesting problem."
+ Sat R 146:58 Jl 14 '28 200w
Spec 140:973 Je 30 '28 1500w
Times [London] Lit Sup p491 Je 28 '28 320w

LODGE, RUPERT CLENDON. Plato's theory of ethics: the moral criterion and the highest good. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 558p $7 Harcourt [21s K. Paul]

171 Plato. Ethics [28-19528]

An interpretation of Plato's theory of ethics by the professor of logic and history of philosophy in the University of Manitoba. Professor Lodge divides his study in three parts; The moral criterion in Platonism, Scales of goods, and The highest goods.

"Professor Lodge has certainly worked out indefatigably his ideal of an exhaustive, inductive, scientifically generalized, and textually verified study of the Platonic ethics. . . The experiment, perhaps, was worth trying, and Professor Lodge has certainly given it a thorough trial. But I do not believe that it is possible to understand Plato in this way." Paul Shorey
— + Int J Ethics 39:231 Ja '29 2000w

"The book can be read by those who have no knowledge of Greek; but whether it can be understood is more doubtful. . . His book should be useful as a cram-book for those who have not the time or inclination to find out for themselves what Plato said; but it is difficult to see what other purpose it can serve."
— + New Statesman 31:671 S 8 '28 750w

"The strongest testimony to Professor Lodge's work is to be found in the fact that praise of the unity of the whole is easier and more natural than the selection of outstanding parts. The merest tiro will not be able to read his work through without receiving the impress of the Platonic system."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p1004 D 20 '28 1300w

LOEB, HAROLD A. Tumbling mustard. 405p $2.50 Liveright

29-12055

Dan Driggs is one of three "tumble weeds" blown by chance into the frontier town of Medicine Hat, Alberta. He marries pretty Flossie of the hotel cigar counter and takes root. But from high romance the marriage falls into furious warfare. Dan contemplates flight but at the edge of freedom turns back. This passionate human equation is drawn with realistic detail against the interesting background of the newly opened country.

Reviewed by Collier Ford
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ap 21 '29 430w
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 3 '29 500w
Reviewed by Margaret Wallace
N Y Evening Post p6m Je 15 '29 320w

"Here are all the elements of strong drama: love, hate, fear and, above all, suspense. Attention is held until the last, and is at the last almost breathless."
+ N Y Times p8 Je 2 '29 580w

LOFTHOUSE, WILLIAM FREDERICK. Israel after the exile. 248p $1.50 Oxford
221.9 Jews—History

"A new volume of a popular commentary. The period of Hebrew history treated covers the sixth and fifth centuries B.C."—J Religion

"More than a commentary on the Biblical books of the period which it discusses, Dr. Lofthouse's book successfully recreates for us the background of the exile, correcting many popular misconceptions as to its character and duration, and as to the number of people it included; reconstructing the historical and prophetic settings and showing the legal development of the times."
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 8 '28 200w

"A new volume of a popular commentary. The content is thoroughly in harmony with modern scholarship and the text is illustrated by several maps and pictures. The series is deserving of a wide sale."
+ J Religion 9:155 Ja '29 40w

LOFTING, HUGH. Noisy Nora. unp il $1.25 Stokes
29-13473

In which Noisy Nora is cured, by drastic methods, of the dreadful habit of chewing with her mouth open. Printed for the child's own reading, and illustrated by the author.

"The little pink book, a trifle bigger than a Beatrix Potter book, is charmingly designed and decorated. Children learning to read and write will be delighted with the clear printing of the hand lettering, which furnishes them incidentally with good copy for their own efforts in book making. There is a genuine atmosphere of country life in this little book which a child will feel." A. C. M.
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 7 '29 420w

"The book is a little moral preachment in favor of good table manners, but it is saved from being painful by Mr. Lofting's humor and the excessiveness of Nora's bad manners." M. G. Bonner
N Y Times p5 Jl 28 '29 50w

"The colored pictures are charming, and the moral tone is like an honest poke in the ribs, such as children give each other's table manners." M. L. Becker
+ Outlook 152:391 Jl 3 '29 120w
Sat R 148:688 D 7 '29 80w
Sat R of Lit 6:544 D 7 '29 200w
Wis Lib Bul 25:278 Jl '29

LOGAN, AGNES. Necessary man. 316p $2.50 Bobbs
29-17924

"All his life, Sandy Brocklebank made sacrifices for the farm. He left school to become his father's right-hand assistant. He buried his longing for the career of a veterinary. He watched his younger brothers grasp for freedom, but he did not flinch. He gave up the girl he wanted, because she would not live on the farm. When the war came, his brothers enlisted, while he stayed behind to do the work. Throughout the war he bore the caustic comments of the neighbors and his aching desire to be in the fight. Then Sandy was hurt in an accident, laid up in a hospital for weeks. What would become of the farm? In his absence, his sister had managed it flawlessly. When he grew well again, he found that, after all, he had not been necessary. His sacrifice was futile."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 26:119 D '29

"'The Necessary Man' has much living tissue. Humor, pathos, love, the fond emotions that crowd our dreams. But, for all its restraint and seriousness, it lacks a certain native vigor. Perhaps because we do not appreciate sweetness and light till we see them in some sharp contrast. And in Miss Logan's novel the shadows are fleeting and the glare of good will all-pervasive."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 18 '29 250w

"Besides the clever portrayal of character, the family life of the yeoman farming stock, which has always been the backbone of England, is cleverly drawn. It is life on the English countryside, rural England at her best." G. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 18 '29 580w

"It is a pleasant, leisurely, mildly amusing tale."
+ Nation 129:700 D 4 '29 150w
N Y Times p6 S 22 '29 450w
Times [London] Lit Sup p1004 N 28 '29 280w

LOGAN, GEORGE BRYAN. Liberty in the modern world. 142p $2 Univ. of N.C. press
323.44 Liberty 29-9

The volume opens with an analysis of the meaning of liberty as defined by society. An attempt is made in the following chapters to trace the main currents of social and institutional reorganization since the Middle ages, and to outline the effects of science, humanism, and religion on the meaning of liberty.

Booklist 25:233 Mr '29

"In his historical treatment of liberty Mr. Logan has a comprehensive and sound grasp of his theme; but as he approaches the present, he becomes less reliable; and when he dips into the future, he becomes visionary." A. M. Snider
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Ap 21 '29 380w

"The author is no radical, but a lover of liberty in its finer aspects and a liberal. He comes with a sane though searching answer to the question as to whither liberty is leading us."
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 11 '29 320w
Reviewed by W: Seagle
Nation 128:743 Je 19 '29 500w

"Mr. Logan died prematurely at the age of thirty-five. He left behind him in this monograph the outline of a balanced and comprehensive system of social philosophy. It is, unhappily, no more than the promise of the really great book which he did not live to write. The closing sections of his book are all aspiration not yet made vital by experience. When he wrote Mr. Logan had discovered his master principle, but was only at the beginning of its application."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p279 Ap 4 '29 250w

LOGAN, GUY B. H. Guilty or not guilty? stories of celebrated crimes. 288p il $3.50 Duffield [15s S. Paul]
364 Crime and criminals. Murder

Twice told tales of English murder mysteries of which some have never been solved.

"Mr. Logan tells his stories well, and he often has some interesting criticism and suggestions." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 45:307 Je 1 '29 150w

LOGAN, G. B. H.—Continued

"Mr. Logan has strong opinions of his own; but they do not always carry conviction, in spite of a portentous manner, quite unrelieved by those touches of humour which are the mark of the best modern operators in this field. Yet it is hardly necessary to add that his book, in spite of him, is readable."

+ — New Statesman 33:supxiv My 4 '29 580w

"The latest tabloid account of the latest love-fiend-death-duel is much more to our liking, having at least the quality of being somewhat new." Edwin Seaver

— N Y Evening Post p7m Je 29 '29 120w

N Y Times p18 Ag 11 '29 380w

St Louis 27:331 D '29

Sat R of Lit 6:64 Ag 17 '29 250w

"This book does succeed in throwing light on criminal psychology, and at the same time as it sets forth the various details of many unpunished crimes, it illustrates the cautious and splendidly fair character of British justice."

+ Spec 142:715 My 4 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p543 Jl 4 '29 350w

LOHRKE, EUGENE. Overshadowed. 235p $2.50 J. Cape & H. Smith

"This short novel intends to portray the disintegration of a sensitive, Shelley-loving young man while serving with the artillery in France. Young Darrow has never met the world except through the eyes of his mother. He lives to embody her ideals and to carry out her doting aspirations. The process by which we watch the artillery life driving him insane would gain in interest if the young man were a little more worthy of consideration. He is one of those who would probably break down eventually, even in a garden."—New Repub

---

"Mr. Löhrke's prose has tonal resilience, maturity and strength. He has written a poignant and splendid novel."

+ Bookm 70:xx S '29 120w

"The book is prefaced by a quotation from 'Lord Jim,' but even without this hint one might see a definitely Conradian shadow across the pages. There is the same technique of creating a powerful impression of a character by telling you almost nothing about him except, over and over again, some small trait or mannerism. At times the atmosphere, full of things unsaid and simple conversations potent for their echoes, is snapped by a kind of hard common-sense paragraph—entertaining passages, but full of brass tacks that prick holes in the style. The fact that this is his first novel accounts for these breaks in the rhythm. They will be easy to get rid of. A more serious danger is his tendency to lose himself in descriptions of nature that are sometimes rather tepid, and repetitious." M. C. Dawson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Jl 21 '29 580w

"Sardonic in its implications and malevolent in its revelations, the book bears about it a heavy atmosphere of black magic, of things furtive. The style is suave and practiced for a first novel and well fitted to such a theme, but the facility is the kind that is apt to prove inflexible when adapted to more intricate plots."

+ — Nation 129:364 O 2 '29 120w

"Except for the opening chapters, devoted to a sugary account of the unreal life of Darrow and his mother, the writing is superior to the story." C. A. C.

New Repub 60:133 S 18 '29 130w

"It is evident that Mr. Lohrke has been considerably influenced by Conrad. . . Admitting Mr. Lohrke's ability in this technique, it is questionable whether it is the best form he could have chosen for telling the story of Darrow's gradual disintegration. Too much, I think, is omitted. The successive steps in the debacle, the almost imperceptible changes from sanity to madness, are not shown. It is, however, a very difficult subject, and much may be forgiven a man who writes such sensitive and discriminating prose." Malcolm Logan

+ — N Y Evening Post p6m S 7 '29 650w

"One feels that 'Overshadowed' might have been more effective as a case report than as a novel. It is a curiously unsympathetic story, told from a cool and slightly ironic point of view. In spite of the manifest possibilities of its conception and the undeniable competence of its execution, it is not a powerful or a moving book."

— + N Y Times p9 Jl 21 '29 550w

"This is an excellent piece of work. A first novel, it has considerable distinction and a definite flavor. . . The novel, taken as a whole, is signally pure in outline. There are no deviations from the simple line of the narrative. The Conradian luxuriance of plot and topsyturviness of time scheme are absent. The only pity is that the first thirty pages could not somehow have been told through the consciousness of the officer. But that is the only flaw in the book's most satisfying construction. 'Overshadowed' is quiet, intense, and often brilliant. It will be more rewarding for the discriminating few than for the casual many. Those few should not miss it." R. B. Macdougall

+ Sat R of Lit 6:88 Ag 31 '29 720w

Times [London] Lit Sup p849 O 24 '29 380w

LOMBARD, FRANK ALANSON. Outline history of the Japanese drama; with an introd. by George Pierce Baker. 358p il $5 Houghton [16s Allen & U.]

895 Japanese drama

"This book is an anthology rather than a history, a fact for which the reader may well be grateful. Mr. Lombard includes seven Nō plays, five farces, one puppet-play, and one 'popular' play (kabuki). Nearly a hundred pages are devoted to the early dance-songs. It is, therefore, inevitable that not much room is left for a connected account of the Japanese stage. The various sections of the book are strung together by a few pages of explanation." —Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Professor Lombard, after long years of residence and first-hand study in Japan, has produced a work which for the first time presents an adequate general survey of the entire field [of Japanese drama] and provides the different forms with an historical perspective, and also specimens in translation. These translations will, perhaps, fail to satisfy those who know and prize the originals." Shigeyoshi Obata

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Mr 17 '29 500w

Theatre Arts Mo 13:232 Mr '29 360w

"Despite its omissions, Mr. Lombard's 'outline' is a solid and scholarly contribution to the history of Japanese literature."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 10 '29 200w

LONDON MERCURY. Mercury story book; with an introd. by J. B. Priestley. 400p $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans

Short stories—Collections [29-22435]

A representative collection of short stories which have appeared in The London Mercury. It is a cosmopolitan selection: stories by such well-known writers as Coppard, De La Mare and Sherwood Anderson are included, along with a number of lesser known authors. A great variety of style and subject-matter is represented, but all of the stories are of a high order of merit.

---

Nation and Ath 46:150 O 26 '29 150w

"Of the less familiar names here, one would single out that of Jessie K. March for her ghost story of the Varennes road, too long and a little heavyhanded, but still with a creep in it; Mr. Arthur Wheen for his small war-masterpiece, 'Two Masters'; and the late J. M. Allison for his infuriatingly humorous portrait of a bore and his story about a lost pencil. The late Stacy Aumonier has here a typical piece of his imaginative but slightly forced work; Miss E. M. Delafield's incident in a registry office is a neat social document of the times; and Mrs. Virginia Woolf's Unwritten Novel is not readily available elsewhere."

+ New Statesman 34:21 O 12 '29 170w

"To quote Mr. Priestley in an adjectival mood: 'Here, side by side, are the elaborate simplicity of A. E. Coppard and the contrapuntal ecstasies of C. E. Montague, the gasping sincerity of Sherwood Anderson and the grave fooling of Ernest Bramah.'" Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p10m O 19 '29 120w

Reviewed by Gertrude Diamant
N Y World p11m Ja 5 '30 140w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Sat R 148:760 D 21 '29 480w

"As the greater part of the stories are by writers of established reputation, and the exceptions hold their own in their company, its bulk is not the chief ground for commending it. The collection is representative, if not of the English short story of to-day, at any rate of the squirearchy in this category. A few names with an international reputation are absent from the list of authors; absent, too, are those of the base mechanics of fiction, and the wild men who flout the conventions of decency and intelligibility."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p786 O 10 '29 1200w

LONDRES, ALBERT. Very naked people; tr. by Sylvia Stuart. 267p $3 Liveright

916.6 Africa, West. French in Africa. Africa—Native races. France—Colonies
29-20659

A book descriptive of French West Africa—the Soudan, the Ivory Coast, Upper Volta, and the Congo. The author writes of the habits and customs of the Negroes in these regions. The sometimes cruel and inhuman treatment of these people by the French is recounted with ironic detachment by M. Londres.

"There is a sincerity about M. Londres' writing that makes it hard to doubt him. He is not a man with a cause and he has no thesis to defend. He is in the last analysis a keen observer who describes conditions as he sees them and facts as he finds them. But his book is more than a collection of connected facts—it is vivid, dramatic, a little cynical, and at times whimsical, but never dull. It is an interesting treatise that reads like a novel." H. G. K.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 16 '29 550w

"M. Londres, who gave so startling an account of the white-slave commerce in 'The Road to Buenos Ayres,' turns to a subject which again offers dramatic values for the vividness and reportorial brilliance of his style. . . It is in his narrative perceptions of these people and their colonial administrators that the author's principal strength lies. Several chapters, particularly the last two, could be lifted out and read as isolated short stories of considerable power." Max Lerner

+ N Y Evening Post p10m O 19 '29 900w

LONG, MRS GABRIELLE MARGARET VERE (CAMPBELL). See Bowen, M., pseud.

LONN, ELLA. Desertion during the Civil war. ltd ed 251p $3 Century

973.7 Desertion, Military. United States—History—Civil war
29-770

A treatise by the professor of history at Goucher college on desertion from Confederate and Union armies during the Civil war. The study takes up the causes of desertion, the means of escape, capture and punishment, deserter territory, and the effect of desertion from both armies on the outcome of the war.

"Miss Lonn has performed a most useful service by presenting an adequate though not bulky treatment of desertion on both sides in the Civil War." J. G. Randall

+ Am Hist R 34:860 Jl '29 500w

"Here is a book that every army officer and every member of a draft board, past and future, should be forced to read. It is not only a valuable contribution to the literature of the Civil War, but it is also a study that begins to clear away the mists that hide the realities of war."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 12 '29 300w

"Prof. Lonn has dug into the sources and she has found something quite unpleasant to the idealistically minded. She has added quite a bit to the understanding of the war. Displeasure may be aroused in members of patriotic orders, but that will not deter the reading of her book. It is full of thrilling narrative. With all its documentary annotations it offers interesting reading for students of American history."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 23 '29 150w

N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 2 '29 80w

"It was hoped that the very existence of those poor wretches might be forgotten, and now comes a woman, unwilling to have them left out of the picture, who by dint of persistent research recovers the lost records of desertion in the Confederate and Union armies and, strange to say, reconstructs from them a really dramatic tale, not without humorous as well as pathetic phases." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:22 Ap '29 280w

"The book admirably describes the measures taken to counteract defections in both armies; the public's attitude toward the deserter is described and explained. There is a vivid and very interesting account of the sanctuaries which deserters found for themselves, and the description of methods used to apprehend and penalize renegades is dramatic and moving." M. E. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 29 '29 330w

LOOKER, EARLE. White House gang. 244p il [2] $3 Revell

B or 92 Roosevelt family

"The particular 'gang' about which Earle Looker writes from personal memories, for he was one of its most active members, was made up of seven small boys who marauded and rioted in and around the White House during the Roosevelt Administration, with Quentin Roosevelt as one of its inspiring and audacious units."—N Y Times

Christian Century 46:1579 D 18 '29 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p147 D '29

"Incidentally, the book gives a view of Theodore Roosevelt from a new and interesting angle, that from which this group of mischievous small boys who were wholly without respect for place or understanding of power, viewed him as the father of one of their number. It is no small matter to his credit that he merged from the ruthless 'sizing up' of these small semi-barbarians with the affection, the loyalty, the complete trust of every one of them."

+ N Y Times p11 D 1 '29 800w

"Not since the immortal 'Huckleberry Finn' has there been such a record of boy adventure, gang spirit, and un-selfconscious lack of consideration for the amenities of more stodgy and elderly life as the, to me, enchanting chronicle of gay, and irresponsible hours, recorded in Mr. Looker's delightful description of the irrepressible contingent who played so big a part in the early White House days when Theodore Roosevelt was President." C. R. Robinson

+ Sat R of Lit 6:506 D 7 '29 1100w

Springf'd Republican p12 D 18 '29 180w

LORIMER, FRANK. Growth of reason; a study of the rôle of verbal activity in the growth of the structure of the human mind. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 231p $3.75 Harcourt

153.6 Reasoning. Speech
[29-16975]

"This book traces in detail the growth of words in the life of the child and shows the function of words in thought. It describes the rise of general ideas and logical structure, and at the same time discusses the relation of this development to motor organization and emotional factors. The author is Lecturer in Social Theory at Wellesley College."—Publisher's note

LORIMER, FRANK—Continued

Boston Transcript p3 N 2 '29 230w

Reviewed by Nathan Israeli
New Repub 61:76 D 11 '29 450w

"For psychologist, sociologist, philosopher, philologist, parent, and teacher it offers something of that perennial interest of seeing one's own problem as it looks from the other person's point of view. Obviously such a wide range of interests in one book carries its own dangers and not all of these have been avoided. But disagreement, the author would probably agree, is the reader's privilege, and it need not detract from one's appreciation of a thorough-going attempt to work out the application of the principle of continuity in the study of thought processes." F. I. MacKinnon
+ — Survey 63:169 N 1 '29 800w

LORWIN, LEWIS LEVITZKI. Labor and internationalism. (Brookings inst. Inst. of economics. Publications) 682p $3 Macmillan [12s 6d Allen & U.]

331.87 Trade unions. International cooperation. Socialism. International federation of trade unions 29-9474

"In this book, Dr. Lorwin makes clear how the internationalism of labor affects the political and economic life of the world. He explains not only the Third or Red International, but all the other Internationals, and shows how they came to be, what their present activities are, what their strength in the different countries is, what validity their claims have, and what is likely to be their development in the near future."—Publisher's note

"Dr. Lorwin's Labor and Internationalism is the best book in any language, so far as the reviewer knows, where the post-war international labor history is chronicled with adequate completeness and with fine analytical understanding. The reviewer knows of no place where the reader will find the tenets of the several schools of revolutionary thought summed up with the painstaking accuracy and the lucidity of exposition which characterize Dr. Lorwin's chapters." Selig Perlman
+ Am Econ R 19:708 D '29 1350w
Am J Soc 35:523 N '29 80w

"Mr. Lorwin's work is a contribution to the subject of the highest authority." W. S. B.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 18 '29 420w

"Mr. Lorwin has produced a book which every person interested in the worldwide problems of labor and every person with an 'international mind' will want to read. It is doubly valuable for reference on account of the excellently planned tables and charts dealing with trade union membership throughout the world, affiliations and interrelations of various internationals, and especially for the 'dramatis personae' which indexes a host of names prominent in the international labor and political world. This book represents a big job, admirably done." Eugene Staley
+ Christian Century 46:1119 S 11 '29 950w

"This is one of the most valuable books produced by the Institute of Economics. Dr. Lorwin has put into it immense knowledge and great skill of exposition." J. A. Hobson
+ Nation 129:201 Ag 21 '29 430w

" 'Labor and Internationalism' is a useful American survey of Socialist and Trade Union international organization—past and present. So fast do things move, that some portions of it, such as that dealing with the I.L.P., already seem out of date and lacking in perspective."
+ Nation and Ath 45:370 Je 15 '29 120w

"Mr. Lorwin is already well known as one of the first of living scholars who devote themselves to the study of Labor. His latest book is worthy of his high representation. It is a careful and detailed narrative of the activities of international labor since 1914. To the student, it is literally indispensable, because there is no other volume which covers the field." H. J. Laski
+ New Repub 59:34 My 22 '29 900w

"Mr. Lorwin had, in order to explain events, to revert constantly to the course of industrial development and controversy in each of the chief countries whose labor and socialist movements entered into these international bodies; he had also to enter into the study of the changing responses of each of the national labor movements to affairs inside and outside their countries. No less arduous was his task of inspecting and presenting the skeins of tangled doctrine to which each of the organizations, national and international, swore faith, of clarifying varieties of programs, and following the international movement through all the factional differences and coalitions which doctrinal disputes produced. All this has been done in orderly, adequate and far from dry summary. The story is completely and well written. The nature and history of each of the organizations and its units is studied by itself, and still kept in historical connection with others." Herbert Feis
+ Pol Sci Q 44:445 S '29 1700w

"The book is naturally not easy reading. Though never diffuse, it is long. It assumes a general knowledge of current European history, and of the major programs of social reorganization. In spite of a careful dramatis personae and an index, the mass of information taxes the memory on a single reading. At times it is hard to discover the relative importance of particular labor movements to the other factors in the international situation. At times, impartiality leads to lack of color. Yet as a whole, the book is unusually readable for so accurate and complete a description of so complex a situation." E. D. Smith
— + Survey 63:357 D 15 '29 370w

"It is comprehensive and covers the whole field of international Labour movements from the first vague aspirations of one hundred years ago down to the multiple and conflicting organizations of to-day. In order to accomplish this within reasonable limits, a mastery of the facts and a concise style of writing are both required, and Dr. Lorwin acquits himself well in both respects."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p509 Je 27 '29 1400w

"Lewis L. Lorwin has written a dramatic, stimulating book. The author sees the drama and the sweep of the whole; his contacts have been intimate and varied, his studies, his travels, his command of languages, all fit him for his task. His capacity for work and the command of resources of the Institute of Economics have insured an exhaustive survey of the available material, and, most worthy of comment, his experience and temperament have given him a dispassionate objectivity that is rare in any field and especially so in this." Roy Veatch
+ World Tomorrow 12:280 Je '29 700w

LOTH, DAVID GOLDSMITH. The Brownings; a Victorian idyll. 289p il $3.75 Brentano's

B or 92 Browning, Robert. Browning, Mrs Elizabeth (Barrett) 29-5268

A pleasant retelling of the story of the lives of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett, with the emphasis on their courtship and marriage, as the subtitle suggests. The author is on the New York World editorial staff.

"Mr. Loth has dwelt rather on the picturesque and humorous suggestions of his narrative; but his book is clearly written out of full knowledge and a genuine affection. He has almost entirely omitted literary criticism, though he has never forgotten that he was writing about authors." R. M. Gay
Bookm 69:203 Ap '29 320w

"Mr. Loth has made the Brownings the lovable, friendly, get-at-able man and woman they were in life. Man and woman first, then poets, and then philosophers and lovers of history and romance. . . The result—for us at least—is an increased appreciation of their genius, an even clearer perception of the beauty of their lives." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 13 '29 1050w

"Not the Brownings but the subtitle of Mr. Loth's work is really its theme. In a lucid, colloquial style he tells us the love-story of two middle-aged Victorians; she a simpering prude, he a pompous one, and both as sentimental and artificial as Dickens's characters. Except for the mention in chronological sequence of their publications, Mr. Loth does not make us aware that this is the emotional awakening of two of the great English poets. For the sake of the plot he deprives his characters of the individuality and the rational powers evinced in their works and letters and reduces them to the common inanity of Jenny Doe and John Roe." Johan Smertenko

— Nation 128:318 Mr 13 '29 320w

"When all the mannerisms which modern biography seems to impose are discounted, we have in Mr. Loth's book a well-planned, swiftly told, not ungraceful account of the externalities of the life of Robert Browning, with the emphasis and center placed, of course, in his courtship of and marriage with Elizabeth Barrett." Lionel Trilling

+ — N Y Evening Post p11m F 23 '29 750w

"Their latest biographer does justice to both their poetry and their love, and also to their personalities. In most respects his book is quite in the modern style of biographies, except that it is neither repulsively indecent nor maliciously iconoclastic. It is intimate, gossipy, companionable—biography in its shirt sleeves. But none the less is it compact of knowledge, full and accurate." F. F. Kelly

+ N Y Times p4 Je 2 '29 750w

N Y World p4e F 24 '29

"He has not written a 'literary' biography in the accepted sense of the term. His book is about two human beings. There is 'go' in it, and feeling. For the dry bones of the subject, if you want them, try elsewhere." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:32 Mr '29 220w

"While errors of fact and misconceptions of character have crept into Mr Loth's book, he writes in a spirit of good humor and not without genuine appreciation. For this reason the appearance of the book must give satisfaction to lovers of the Brownings." Lilian Whiting

— + Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '29 1000w

LOTH, DAVID GOLDSMITH. Lorenzo the Magnificent. 329p pl $5 Brentano's

B or 92 Medici, Lorenzo de', called Il Magnifico 29-19630

"The author has made a live human figure of Lorenzo and of other Renaissance characters, possibly at the expense of scholarship, for many incidents seem to be based on legend or conjecture, and there is neither documentation nor bibliography."—Booklist

---

Booklist 26:116 D '29

"Let that great public which is devouring biography today understand that it is being amused, and that in this florescence of literary history it is getting literature and not history. If that point be admitted the field is clear, and we can surrender quite willingly to the inclination to laud writers like Mr. Loth for their bravura as entertainers using erudition for their material. . . On the other hand, one must remind the litterateur that the historian also has his pleasures, and one might even call them of a higher order than those provoked by such pretty books as this of Mr. Loth." Arthur Livingston

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 D 8 '29 930w

"The serious student may find nothing new, but the casual reader will be spurred to curiosity concerning a period presented with much skill and vividness." Eloise Ellery

Nation 130:20 Ja 1 '30 160w

"His lapses, though frequent, do not mar the general outline of the picture he is drawing, and when one sets down his fascinating book it is with the feeling that Lorenzo, in all likelihood, was just such a man as Mr. Loth describes. The ethics of his method of treatment, from the point of view of scholarship, is debatable, but the result is nevertheless highly commendable." H. L. Matthews

+ — N Y Times p13 O 6 '29 1600w

"Mr. Loth has given us a biography which, besides being dramatic and authentic, is also a work of art. He does not use the flashy devices of the current fictional biography; he never overpoints; he is always accurate and low-keyed; his style flows smoothly; and in the end we get an unforgettable picture of the man." Pierre Loving

+ N Y World p10m O 20 '29 1300w

Reviewed by Lilian Whiting

Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '29 1600w

LOUD, GROVER C. Evangelized America. 373p il $4 Dial press

269 Evangelistic work. Revivals 29-4958

Sketches of famous American evangelists from the time of Jonathan Edwards to Sister Aimee Semple McPherson and John Roach Straton of our own day. Mr Loud gives an account of the method and the message of each of his evangelists, "stalwart saints and mountebanks of mammon," and the sketches taken together form a continuous panorama of one aspect of American life from the middle of the eighteenth century to the present.

---

Booklist 25:306 My '29

"An admirable, fair and judicious record of what has been a great force in America for nearly two centuries. It is hard to imagine a piece of writing on this subject more gracefully or thoroughly done." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 1 '28 1650w

"Mr. Loud's treatment is not disrespectful and he is generally accurate. . . He records an important aspect of American religious life in highly readable form."

+ — Christian Century 46:266 F 21 '29 240w

"An unusually readable and yet thorough history of evangelism."

+ Nation 128:210 F 13 '29 50w

Reviewed by C. F. Thompson

N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 5 '29 350w

N Y Times p15 Ja 6 '29 1100w

St Louis 27:88 Mr '29

" 'Evangelized America' is a vital and extremely important book. Just how important one cannot say—except that no one can readily exaggerate its importance." Bernard De Voto

+ Sat R of Lit 5:877 Ap 13 '29 1300w

"The author's treatment of the different methods and purposes of the evangelists under consideration is generally intelligent. The chapters on Edwards, Whitefield and the Wesleys are deficient in social and religious background."

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 D 5 '28 480w

LOVELACE, MAUDE (HART) (MRS DELOS W. LOVELACE). Early candlelight. 322p $2.50 Day

29-17999

Charming Delia DuGay, daughter of a voyageur, is the heroine of this story of frontier life in Minnesota. The "devil DuGays," French settlers, make their home at Fort Snelling. Delia falls in love with the fur-trader Jasper Page, and their romance forms the main theme of the novel.

---

Booklist 26:71 N '29

Bookm 70:xviii N '29 180w

LOVELACE, MAUDE—Continued

"'Early Candlelight' is a good historical romance told without ulterior motive. It attempts to solve no grave moral problem. It does not satirize society. Nor does it seem to exist primarily for the sake of its picturesque setting and characters. It tells a story, and that skillfully, in a smooth, delightful style." Garreta Busey

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p37 S 29 '29 900w

Reviewed by W: E. Harris

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 31 '29 1400w

"Like a fresh wind sweeping in from her own breezy prairies comes this romance of early Minnesota, delightfully told by one of her native daughters. The lyric beauty of expression and consummate skill in the recreation of a life long since vanished, which distinguish this novel, together with the quiet humor which seasons the narrative, make it a treat for all lovers of the romantic."

+ N Y Times p7 S 8 '29 700w

"Early Candle Light does not belie its pleasantly old-fashioned name. The book is as softly glowing, as modestly bright, as the title. Mrs. Lovelace tells how the city of St. Paul developed from a wretched settlement known as Pigs Eye in the course of her unpretentious but charming romance of other days. This book is refreshing in its simplicity. Its sweetness is not cloying." Mary Shirley

+ Outlook 152:709 Ag 28 '29 130w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '29 450w

Wis Lib Bul 25:323 O '29

LOW, BARBARA. Psycho-analysis and education (Eng title Unconscious in action; its influence upon education); with foreword by T. Percy Munn. 224p $2.25 Harcourt [5s Univ. of London press]

131 Psychoanalysis. Psychology, Educational. Child study 29-467

The author's object is to show the bearing of psycho analysis on education. Urging training for teachers in psycho analysis, Miss Low explains the application of certain Freudian principles to the development of the child in chapters entitled Unconscious mind and its rôle in education; Behaviour as conditioned by unconscious wishes; Emotion and its relation to intellectual development; Sublimation and education; Some modern educational developments from the psycho analysis standpoint.

---

"The book is well written; it has a message; it makes many a lecture in an average teacher-training psychology course look stale and sour. It deals with a genuine issue and points the way to a whole new set of theorems upon which to base educational practice—if the Freudian interpretation is the way to truth." F. B. Knight

+ Am J Psychol 41:670 O '29 350w

Booklist 25:268 Ap '29

"Miss Low's book is brief and it is fluidly readable, so entirely so that it can be read at a sitting. Yet in it one will find a condensation of material on the Freudian theory applied to education which has hitherto been unavailable to those who do not read German."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 F 24 '29 350w

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 9 '29 130w

"Miss Low is already known as an able writer on psychoanalysis, and in this little book she certainly gives us many valuable indications drawn from modern psychology for use in the education of children. The criticism of mental tests is valuable, since mental tests have become a sort of educational fetish." C. D. B.

+ Int J Ethics 39:121 O '28 110w

"Her subject is clearly and logically developed but seems to be all bones and no meat. The volume bears the stamp of a typical disciple of Freud who in order to be true to the master, dares not introduce an original idea nor propound even the most orthodox complex without quoting chapter and verse." Elisabeth Irwin

— + Nation 129:176 Ag 14 '29 150w

"Much of what she says will no doubt be of interest to teachers who are not acquainted with Freudian literature. To those teachers who are already familiar with the main points of Freud's teaching, and who have been looking for help in their everyday work, the book will, however, only be a disappointment."

Nation and Ath 43:684 Ag 25 '28 130w

"Miss Low is restrained and temperate in what she has to say. She certainly makes out her case for the understanding by the teacher of those forces upon which he plays, knowingly or ignorantly, in his rôle of educator. Her theory is Freud's. But the foundation upon which she builds is ever broader and more solid than the theory of Freud."

+ Nature 122:766 N 17 '28 450w

Reviewed by Augusta Alpert

New Repub 58:260 Ap 17 '29 580w

"In this book Miss Low sums up in an admirably clear and unprejudiced manner how psycho analytical methods can be used most advantageously in modern education. Not for a moment does she suggest that the teacher in school should attempt actual analysis, but she does think that the teacher can bring children who are in need of expert mental treatment to the school analyst just as she might bring those in need of medical attention to a physician." Fritz Wittels

+ N Y Evening Post p9m F 9 '29 700w

"Although we would certainly hesitate to recommend psycho-analysis for children as a general rule, we agree with Miss Low's clever criticism of mental tests."

— + Spec 142:sup284 F 23 '29 150w

"This volume is devoted to an exposition of the unconscious forces at work in educational processes. It is clear, convincing, stimulating and refreshing. Miss Low is well equipped for her task, both from the psychoanalytical and pedagogical standpoints. Her volume is intended primarily for teachers, and for them the book will be found practically indispensable in furnishing a lucid explanation of the bearing of psychoanalysis on education." I. H. Coriat, M.D.

+ Survey 61:817 Mr 15 '29 380w

"We are far from saying that there is not a good deal of value in her suggestions, or that a knowledge of the general theory of 'the unconscious' and the processes of repression, 'sublimation,' and the like may not often be of great use to a teacher; but to regard the child as essentially a bundle of ungratified instincts breaking out in all sorts of irrational emotions and actions seems to us a complete travesty of the truth."

Times [London] Lit Sup p619 Ag 30 '28 280w

Wis Lib Bul 25:97 Mr '29

LOW, DAVID. Lions and lambs; with interpretations by 'Lynx.' 156p il $3.75 Harcourt [10s 6d J. Cape]

741 Caricatures and cartoons [29-14240]

Full page caricatures of famous Britons by Low, with a page or so of less striking characterization of each subject by "Lynx."

---

"Each of the thirty-six drawings in this book adds something to our knowledge of the politician or writer or painter depicted. The comments by 'Lynx' are caustic and witty. . . Lions and Lambs can be confidently recommended to everyone who takes an interest in English personalities as various as the pompous Austen Chamberlain, the prodigal Augustus John, the provincial St. John Ervine, and the wholesome Prince of Wales."

+ Bookm 69:xix Mr '29 140w

"Contemporary British civilization passes under review in the figures of certain eminent persons drawn by Low and delicately, intimately characterized by 'Lynx.' The whole affair has the air of having been an enterprise enjoyed by the collaborators. Doubtless it will prove enjoyable to the reader. The emotions that it will arouse in the eminent subjects will at least be warm." Lloyd Morris

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ja 27 '29 700w

"Amusing and highly irreverent portraits."
Nation 128:166 F 6 '29 250w

"Most of these cartoons appeared in The New Statesman last year, and those who were our readers then will require from us no dissertation upon their merits. As a cartoonist of character as well as of form Low has certainly had no equal for longer than most of us can remember. A few of the 'interpretations' are quite good, but most of them are portentously silly alike in style and in matter, full of third-rate epigrams on irrelevant subjects."
+ — New Statesman 31:768 S 29 '28 300w

St Louis 27:131 Ap '29

"The book, though in a sense a pillory, is no instrument of torture, but a device to keep their victims still so that we may have a better look at them. And so well does Mr. Low make us feel that we know them, that should we meet Mr. Walpole in the flesh, we should be tempted to exclaim (like little Red Riding Hood), 'Oh, how your chin has shrunk since Low made it!' "
+ Spec 141:455 O 6 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 17 '29 620w

" 'Low' is represented by some of his best and most ironic caricatures. He is not fantastic and scarcely irreverent; but instead he follows after M. Rouveyre. 'Lynx's' wit is elaborate, pointed, and often, though not unpleasantly, malicious."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 3 '29 300w

LOWELL, JOAN, pseud. (MRS THOMPSON BUCHANAN). Cradle of the deep. 261p il $2.75 Simon & Schuster

29-7122

"This book purports to be the story of the author's girlhood at sea, from the age of eleven months to seventeen years. Her father, master of the schooner Minnie A. Caine, took her to sea as a baby; and thereafter for sixteen years she sailed with him, the only female on the vessel, dressed in boy's clothes and passing through the daily adventures of a seafaring life. The scenes of this life are mostly among the islands of the South Seas, on the coast of Australia and up and down the Pacific Ocean." (Books [N Y Herald Tribune]). Miss Lowell's publishers have finally settled the discussion about the truth of this tale by a public announcement that the book is not an autobiography, but a romanticized version of a girl's life at sea.

---

Booklist 25:317 My '29

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
+ Bookm 69:218 Ap '29 900w

"The amazing thing is that her use of nautical terms is more than often wrong, and that she distorts and exaggerates and sentimentalizes the sea picture out of all reality in many of the incidents which she relates. . . Miss Lowell is not by any means ignorant of a ship; but she is only familiar with a ship in a landlubberly way. The internal evidence of her book left me persuaded that she did not go to sea long enough or hard enough for the experience to make a seaman of her; I do not think the book an authentic picture of seafaring conditions, but it would make a superb movie." Lincoln Colcord
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Mr 17 '29 1150w

"The fact is that the story is somewhat loosely constructed and none too well written. But literary finish is scarcely necessary to its interest and little objection need therefore be made to its theatrical incidents and the frequent lack of novelty in its incidents."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 23 '29 300w

"Joan Lowell's story reads like a collection of all the good sea anecdotes of which she ever heard. I don't assert that it is such; I don't know. I do know that her sea is not like any on which I have ever sailed." Arthur Warner
Nation 128:401 Ap 3 '29 670w

New Statesman 33:608 Ag 24 '29 400w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv My '29 210w

"A young woman who could think up all these things and write about them with humor and little affectation of naïveté must always be a popular raconteuse. While one may question the judgment of a committee which assumes, rightly or wrongly, the position of arbiter of reading taste in choosing so trifling a book for its disciples, one must admit that, hoax or not, 'The Cradle of the Deep' is amusing."
Outlook 151:427 Mr 13 '29 280w

St Louis 27:168 My '29

Sat R 147:840 Je 22 '29 130w

"She tells a hundred incidents of her wild spirit, and her father's punishments. Besides there are tragedies, sudden deaths, mutiny, perversion, shipwrecks, and a lorn love affair. The curses, oaths, and rude language of labor in stress on land or sea are printed out, but they are mere red streaks in the fat meat of sentimentality that makes the body of the tale. . . The yarn is coarse, strong, and well-knitted. It suffers from retrospect, and an idealization of her remarkable Old Man." F: O'Brien
Sat R of Lit 5:748 Mr 9 '29 900w

"There is plenty of incident for the superficial reader; and for those who read with care there is the pleasure of studying a fine and unusual creature, revealed with an art which must have been born in her, since nothing in her life could have served to give her her literary certainty of touch. From any point of view it is an enjoyable book."
+ Spec 142:973 Je 22 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '29 390w

LOWES, JOHN LIVINGSTON. Of reading books. 37p $1 Houghton

028 Books and reading 29-23721

A delightful essay on the gentle art of reading which takes its text from Chaucer's "I hope, y-wis, to rede . . . som day."

---

"This is a scholar's essay, yet it is pleasantly sincere and is entirely free from scholasticism and time-worn injunctions."
+ Booklist 26:99 D '29

Reviewed by Johan Smertenko
Outlook 154:31 Ja 1 '30 230w

"Prof Lowes's touch is light, but there is enough consecutive treatment of thought to make his lecture a discourse."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 23 '29 750w

LOWIE, ROBERT HARRY. Are we civilized? human culture in perspective. 306p il $3 Harcourt

901 Civilization. Anthropology 29-17850

That man is, biologically, what he was 2000 years ago, and that modern man is no more civilized than the simplest savage, are the conclusions of the author. The book contains studies of primitive society: its customs, religion, art, etc., in comparison with modern western European society. The author's premise is that, in culture, "a change for the better never occurs without due cause, and a change for the worse is quite as probable." If, then, we are civilized, it is due to accident rather than to our superior conquest of Nature.

---

Booklist 26:112 D '29

"Mr. Lowie has made his book both accurate and popular. He presents in interesting juxtaposition variations in custom, folkway and ritual, in language, ethics and scientific accomplishment."
+ Bookm 70:x O '29 130w

"Professor Lowie has written the first diverting book about the history of civilization. It is the fruit of much exhaustive and special knowledge, but it is completely non-technical. Like all of Professor Lowie's books this one is a mine of trustworthy material intelligently observed." Ruth Benedict

LOWIE, R. H.—Continued
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 S 15 '29 1550w
Boston Transcript p3 S 28 '29 480w

"Here is a book that ought to rival in popularity any contemporary best seller. Although not written to pamper the reader's love of the bizarre, exotic and extraordinary, every other page of the book will provoke exclamations of startled surprise and chuckles of satisfying laughter. For the book is a lively commentary on the universality of man's follies and perversities, and ironic, trenchant exposition of the intellectual kinship of civilized man and the savage." B. J. Stern
+ Current Hist 31:218 N '29 700w
Reviewed by Anita Brenner
Nation 129:553 N 13 '29 400w

"The question which Professor Lowie really sets out to answer is not 'Are we civilized?' but 'Are we different, mentally and emotionally, from savages?' And if to the first the answer Yes is implied, to the second the answer is explicitly and very definitely No: with a brevity that often overlooks difficulties, but with an understanding that is usually sound and often entertaining." S. L. Mellen
+ New Repub 60:181 O 2 '29 600w
N Y Times p11 O 13 '29 430w
Reviewed by Arthur Strawn
N Y World p10m N 3 '29 800w
Reviewed by E. T. Devine
Outlook 153:671 D 25 '29 230w

"The book is simply written. The sentences are direct and brief, somewhat deliberately so. There are no technicalities, as the author himself writes in the preface, but there are some unnecessary flippancies. In all of its major features however, the book is not only solid but also dignified. While no 'civilized' person (least of all, Dr. Lowie himself) will expect it to speed up the wheels of progress, it will bring pleasure to many and instruction to a few." Alexander Goldenweiser
+ Sat R of Lit 6:207 O 5 '29 1350w

"The specialist may find some details to criticize in Professor Lowie's work, but in general he succeeds in being both accurate and popular. Much of the book is highly entertaining, even Rabelaisian. From the first page to the last it is informing and stimulating." R. C. White
+ Survey 63:189 N 1 '29 900w
Times [London] Lit Sup p843 O 24 '29 900w

LOWNDES, MARIE ADELAIDE (BELLOC) (MRS FREDERICK SAWREY LOWNDES). One of those ways. 312p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Heinemann]
29-10670

The story follows the adventures of a young English widow, charming but penniless, who accepts a position as companion to a mysterious Russian princess and becomes involved with a gang of international crooks in the casinos of the Riviera.

---

"Mrs. Lowndes has written, very simply, a well-planned story of international crooks, with none of the usual macabre backgrounds of the modern mystery tale."
+ Bookm 69:xxv Ag '29 60w

"A veteran of the true classic flavor, Mrs. Belloc Lowndes has adapted herself discreetly to the demands of the jazz age. Her latest is well worth the money—it contains mystery without trap doors, civilized characters and graceful prose." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 12 '29 180w

"There are no horrors in 'One of Those Ways,' although there are some moments of thrilling suspense. Not up to Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's highest mark, but it will repay reading." E. F. Edgett
+ — Boston Transcript p6 Je 8 '29 260w
Nation and Ath 44:724 F 23 '29 80w
New Statesman 32:544 F 2 '29 180w
N Y Evening Post p8m Je 1 '29 130w

"It is a verbose tale, with a pattern of melodrama constantly interrupted by long passages of polite and not very sprightly dialogue. There is so slight a progression of suspense that a cluster of thrilling situations in the conclusion becomes a hodge-podge of easily guessed dénouements. All in all, the book is chiefly distinguished by the characterization of its central figure, a thorough and detailed description of an incredibly dumb young woman."
— + N Y Times p24 My 26 '29 180w

"The characters move ponderously through many pages of labored analysis, but seem no more real than usual. The casino atmosphere is fairly convincing."
— N Y World p11m My 5 '29 80w

"We weren't disappointed. You won't be either." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 152:118 My 15 '29 90w
Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Sat R 147:220 F 16 '29 100w

"Mrs. Lowndes knows how to make our flesh creep, and her strong, vivid narrative holds us enthralled."
+ Spec 142:210 F 9 '29 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p120 F 14 '29 250w

LOWNDES, MARIE ADELAIDE (BELLOC) (MRS FREDERICK SAWREY LOWNDES). Some men and women. 363p $2 Doubleday, Doran
29-6679

Most of the men and women in these short stories by Mrs Belloc Lowndes are faced with an ugly dilemma; only a few find a pleasant way out. Contents: The philanderer; The lace scarf; The call; "God has made men so"; The answer; The gun room; One man's way; "I goes by the face"; A peculiar financial situation; The duchess's story.

---

Bookm 69:xxx Ap '29 30w

"Not only models of condensation are these sharply incised stories, but they witness the family flair for vivid portraiture and provocative suggestion and analysis."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 12 '28 150w

"Mrs. Lowndes's stories are irreproachable and clumsy, but then there is a good moral in almost every one." Edwin Seaver
— N Y Evening Post p9m D 1 '28 80w
N Y Times p24 Ja 20 '29 380w

"Of the ten little sketches which make up this volume, 'The Call' and 'The Answer' are far and away the best. These two alone seem really first rate, and their interest and strength does not depend upon an overworked subtlety. The book, moreover, taken as a whole deserves a significant place in that rapidly increasing library of depressing portraits of post-war England."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:543 D 22 '28 230w

LOWTH, ALYS. Wayfarer in Morocco. (Wayfarer ser.) 220p $3 Houghton [7s 6d Methuen]
916.4 Morocco—Description and travel
29-11626

"A concise history of the country, a study of its people and customs, a description of its contemporary life as it meets the eye of the traveler and practical guidance for the prospective tourist. The book is amply illustrated and indexed."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Booklist 26:27 O '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ap 21 '29 110w

"One of the things all travellers in Morocco and Algeria need is a competent well written guide book. This account is sufficiently well written but it is at times incoherent, and is apparently based on a great many source books which are quite as available to her readers as anything she writes." D. F. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 10 '29 450w

"This latest addition to the Wayfarer Series of travel books is scarcely as successful as some of its predecessors. Morocco, with its sharp contrasts between old and new, between the Orient and the West, is a country of infinite fascination; but Miss Lowth does not appear to be the ideal interpreter of its glamour. Though she evidently is well read in the history of Morocco, her mixture of guide-book matter and historical references, along the most conventional lines of travel-book writing, is more than usually amateurish."

— New Statesman 32:799 Mr 30 '29 100w

Pratt p30 autumn '29

St Louis 27:341 D '29

"It is a little difficult to visualize the public for whom this book is intended; it contains far too much irrelevant information for the ordinary tourist, while the author is too inaccurate and too uncritical to be of much help to the student. Much of the information that it contains is out of date. A good book on Morocco to-day written by someone conversant with the French and Spanish languages is needed, but that need will not be supplied by the present work, of which the illustrations are the most pleasing feature."

— Sat R 147:186 F 9 '29 120w

"A Wayfarer in Morocco can be recommended as a good book without hesitation. The travel information is clear, exact, up to date, and imparted with the zest which distinguishes—say—an E. V. Lucas from a Baedeker."

+ Spec 142:169 F 2 '29 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p656 Ag 22 '29 400w

Wis Lib Bul 25:193 Je '29

LUBBOCK, PERCY. Shades of Eton. 224p $2.50 Scribner [7s 6d Cape]

373.42 Eton college [29-20763]

"The book, throughout its charming, haunting pages, is a search for the genius of Eton; and the seeker, glancing backward at the personalities and characters which are the chief of his memories of boyhood, gets from each in turn the same reflection. His Eton days are the nineties, and of the personalities of those spacious days Edmond Warre's comes to him first. . . We are given other glimpses. One among them belongs in Mr. Lubbock's setting less to Eton than to the private school which he founded when (as a master) he left, Edward Daniel Stone. . . Other portraits, other conclusions, follow; we get glimpses in turn of Edward Austen Leigh, 'Badger' Hale, 'Pecker' Rouse, 'Mike'; and we pass to the completest and most convincing drawing of the book, that of the author's own tutor, Arthur Benson."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Boston Transcript p6 N 27 '29 850w

"Mr. Lubbock's book is so charmingly and adroitly written that it cannot be classified among those books about schools which are only interesting to 'Old Boys.' I can imagine this book being read with pleasure by all who appreciate good writing or are interested in the history of culture. It opens with a portrait of Dr. Warre, who certainly must be reckoned among the great headmasters of the nineteenth century, and this portrait could not be better drawn; it is vivid to the eye and satisfying to the intellect. . . The great merit of Mr. Lubbock's book is that, although it consists largely of reminiscence, of an account of his own personal education, of 'pen portraits' admirably drawn, the author never forgets the wider references of these topics. I have read no book in which both the limitations and merits of that now old-fashioned classic culture are more clearly and subtly defined."

+ New Statesman 33:371 Je 29 '29 1300w

"An artist in reminiscence surpassed only by Mr. George Moore among living writers, Mr. Lubbock's anxiety is to depict Eton exactly as he knew it forty years ago. He succeeds, but most curiously. Of its truth, that is, truth to his own sense of Eton, there can be no doubt. The selection of detail is well-nigh faultless; the tone of literary voice is carefully maintained."

+ Sat R 148:51 Jl 13 '29 500w

"Percy Lubbock's reminiscences of his old school, written with a peculiar charm and sympathy, recreate the Eton of the last years of Victoria. But this sympathy is ballasted with discrimination; it reflects the suspicion even then formulating in minds like Arthur Benson's that Eton's word might possibly not be final either in English education or in English polity. In their intimate charm and in their method these reminiscences recall Charles Lamb's; and in addition they help to explain the emergence of such extra-traditional leaders as MacDonald, Henderson, and Snowden."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:458 N 23 '29 120w

"The artist in letters and his noble subject together make a book which will give pleasure throughout Eton circles and beyond them."

+ Spec 142:903 Je 8 '29 900w

"Written, as would be expected, with insight, finish and charm."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 2 '29 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p451 Je 6 '29 1000w

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. The Colvins and their friends. 365p il $5 Scribner [21s Methuen]

B or 92 Colvin, Sir Sidney. Colvin, Frances Fetherstonhaugh (Sitwell), lady. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:211 F '29

Christian Century 46:204 F 7 '29 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p41 Mr '29

Reviewed by Johan Smertenko

Nation 128:320 Mr 13 '29 130w

"Mr. Lucas's book about the Colvins has something of the air of an old-fashioned memorial volume, composed higgledy-piggledy. It contains a good deal of boring material, but on the other hand there is much of real interest."

Nation and Ath 44:450 D 22 '28 120w

Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown

N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 19 '29 530w

St Louis 27:270 S '29

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 13 '29 1350w

Wis Lib Bul 25:30 Ja '29

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. Turning things over; essays and fantasies. 183p $2.50 Dutton [6s Methuen]

824 29-30431

Essays about a multitude of things, for instance: the philosophy of being ahead of time; Sundays; the Mohammedan mosque in Paris; words; the idiosyncracies of uncles; Miss Ellen Terry, and other things both sage and jolly.

"In this latest book Mr. Lucas is rarely dull. Most of the essays are slight, but carry the reader on to the end. Three or four anecdotes told at full length are delightfully done, and seem really to catch the intonation of the author. It is as a talker on paper that Mr. Lucas succeeds."

+ New Statesman 33:664 S 7 '29 200w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p14m N 23 '29 70w

"E. V. Lucas belongs to that not inconsiderable number of Englishmen who can adorn a trifle with an urban style. He does not affront the intelligence by assuming that the reader knows nothing at all about the subject under discussion; and his assumption that we are all rather civilized people is nicely calculated to make him wear well."

+ N Y Times p2 D 29 '29 250w

LUCAS, E: V.—Continued

"Mr. Lucas is not only a skilled and careful husbandman of his own estate—he is also a gleaner. And in that second capacity he uses his eye for what is good or curious to pick out what has been left unnoticed on large adjacent properties. These gleanings he sorts and trims and grades; and then he markets them with his own produce in a full wagon."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p680 S 5 '29 1000w

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. Vermeer the magical. autog ed 47p il $3.50 Doubleday, Doran [5s Methuen]

759.9 Vermeer, Jan [29-26891]

Essay on the Dutch painter, whom the author calls the world's perfect painter, giving the most important facts about his life and paintings.

---

Bookm 70:xxii O '29 120w

Reviewed by T: Craven

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 20 '29 620w

"Mr. Lucas [has] written what, for all its small dimensions, must long remain the standard work on the master in English. His eulogy of the pictures is extremely high, but it avoids hyperbole and is justified by being infectious. A connoisseur could not dispute it, while a novice anxious for guidance as to what qualities he should seek in a canvas will find Mr. Lucas an eminently sympathetic mentor. The reproductions are liberal and good."

+ New Statesman 33:58 Ap 20 '29 210w

"Enthusiasm is a fine thing, and readers are quick to respond to it, when it is genuine. There can be no doubt that Mr. Lucas is genuinely enthusiastic over this admirable artist—one of the finest, certainly, that Holland has produced. But there are times when the author's encomium strikes one as getting a little out of hand. Nevertheless, Mr. Lucas's little book presents the personality and accomplishment of Vermeer with bright, compact clarity. It brings the man and his work before us with considerable expertness." E: A. Jewell

+ — N Y Times p22 O 6 '29 200w

Spec 142:131 Ja 26 '29 120w

"Mr. Lucas does not go into any small points of scholarship, but his lecture is a popular one and doubtless intended to popularize Vermeer's works, which it is certain to assist in doing. His criticism is enthusiastic rather than penetrating. They are refined and cultivated comments, guarantees of the tourist's sensibility, but we suddenly find ourselves annoyed."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p261 Mr 28 '29 210w

LUCAS-DUBRETON, JEAN. Fourth musketeer; the life of Alexander Dumas; tr. from the French by Maida Castelhun Darnton. 276p $3 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Dumas, Alexandre 28-25377

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:211 F '29

"Sprightliness is in the fibre of J. Lucas-Dubreton's book, fitting admirably his hero and his title." A. B. Maurice

+ Bookm 68:593 Ja '29 280w

"The man was gay, simple and the biography likewise is simple, as amusing as the man himself. . . We cannot say that it is altogether satisfying and complete." S. H.

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 19 '29 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Ja '29

"It is not a work calculated to further the fame of the author particularly. It is to be suspected that Lucas-Dubreton concocted this volume in a hurry from sources immediately available and also that he was ordered to keep it within a limited number of pages. The result is a running outline of Dumas's life that leaves the reader wondering about a dozen and one things."

— Nation 128:88 Ja 16 '29 150w

New Statesman 34:301 D 7 '29 800w

"M. Dubreton has told his story with understanding and affection, and the product is both delightful and amazing." Arthur Strawn

+ N Y World p10m N 18 '28 700w

"The biography is free of the analysis of formal literary criticism, but its light, readable and yet adequate account of Dumas père gives one a clear notion, not only of the musketeerish man of kaleidoscopic loves but of his qualifications as a man of writing and the quality of his work."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 My 1 '29 320w

LUCAS-DUBRETON, JEAN. Restoration and the July monarchy; tr. from the French by E. F. Buckley. (Nat. hist. of France) 381p $4.50 Putnam [12s 6d Heinemann]

944.06 France—History—Restoration, 1815-1848 [29-16694]

The period of French history covered is that between the restoration of Louis XVIII in 1814 and the fall of the monarchy in 1848, comprising the reigns of three kings, Louis XVIII, Charles X and Louis Philippe. The book is not confined to political history. Several chapters are devoted to the intellectual and social life of the period.

---

"The treatment of the Restoration is almost entirely for popular consumption. There is an altogether unnecessary amount of space allotted to the gory and intimate details of seditions and assassinations, and entirely too little attention given to the things that were beginning to develop; political factions, religious factions, and, later, the unconscious efforts of Villèle to give France prosperity. This section of the book abounds with generalizations, with some of which a number of people would take issue. In the second part of the book, however, the author is, apparently, on surer ground. His analysis, brief as it is, of the principal parties in France at the opening of the reign of Louis Philippe is excellent. There is also a short but very fine description of revolutionary romanticism during the early years of the July Monarchy." J: M. S. Allison

+ — Am Hist R 35:350 Ja '30 550w

"M. Lucas-Dubreton is a careful chronicler but little else; a good textbook historian, but academic and uninspired. He knows his facts but he lacks charm and color in his stating of them. He is a historian but scarcely an artist." Grenville Vernon

— + Bookm 70:572 Ja '30 100w

"M. Lucas-Dubreton's account is clear and sufficiently vivid. We are surprised that he should state—and repeat—that the Counts of Provence and of Artois fled from France in order to escape the scaffold. They emigrated in 1791, before they were seriously threatened. But many little slips will be forgiven him because he has the proper contempt for M. Thiers." Albert Guerard

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p40 S 29 '29 500w

Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '29 400w

"The 'National History of France' is a very worthy achievement, containing some first-rate volumes, and M. Dubreton's book does not disgrace the company in which it finds itself. It is a pity that he has not been better translated. The English often reads clumsily, and is on occasion inaccurate. Nevertheless, a lot of people should enjoy reading M. Dubreton's book. The period is a fascinating one, and not nearly enough has been written about it in English." Francis Birrell

+ — Nation and Ath 45:631 Ag 10 '29 800w

"Here is a historical text-book which for once is not like a tin of bully beef, designed to give as complete a feeling of repletion as a City company's dinner, without the latter's pandering to the weakness of the flesh. It contains not merely all the 'facts,' but nearly all the good stories; its characters are briefly and deftly introduced; it is full of vivid sense and crisp comment. It has the sparkle of good talk without good talk's tendency to bewilder and perplex the stranger. On the contrary, it lays itself out to make him feel at home. It does not clog the digestion, it whets the appetite."

+ New Statesman 33:685 S 14 '29 800w

N Y Times p4 N 17 '29 800w

"M. Lucas-Dubreton's book is one in a series to which M. Madelin and M. Recouly are among the other contributors, and it is very high and at the same time very well deserved praise to say that the new addition is entirely worthy of the distinguished company in which it offers itself. . . If there is any criticism to be made of M. Lucas-Dubreton's book, it is that he sometimes weakens his own arguments by his neglect of what was happening in countries other than France." Christopher Hollis
+ — Sat R 148:160 Ag 10 '29 600w

"Not only a singularly able exposition of the forces at work during a critical period of social and political transition, but also the vivid presentment of a human drama hardly less absorbing than that which preceded it, though played by lesser actors on a narrower stage. It is the best tribute to M. Dubreton's impartiality to say that the perusal of his book leaves us uncertain of his own political views. The characters of the story are made to live for us; and, whether they be Kings or Communists, their characters and motives are explained without prejudice and, it may be added, with admirable lucidity as well as brevity."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p503 Je 27 '29 1050w

LUCKNER, FELIX, graf von. Sea Devil's fo'c'sle, by Lowell Thomas. 300p il $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

910.4 Seafaring life. Sea stories. European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives 29-23783

Yarns of the sea recounted by Count Luckner, whose career in the windjammer, "Seeadler," has been previously published by the narrator, Lowell Thomas. Felix von Luckner, of the German navy, won the favor of the Kaiser thru his tales of the sea. Many of them narrated in the present volume are based upon Luckner's own experiences; others are famous sea-yarns that have passed into legend.

"A group of choice yarns from old sea-dogs which carry the tang of the sea, and are alike amusing and grotesque."
+ Bookm 70:ix Ja '30 70w

Boston Transcript p1 D 7 '29 650w

"Count Luckner tells his sea yarns in a straightforward, matter-of-fact way, with plentiful interlarding of his one expletive 'by Joe,' which stands for all the profanities of deck and fo'c'sle, but without any attempt at embellishment or straining for effect." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p11 N 17 '29 950w

"Through it all Luckner stands out reckless, genial, simple, whimsical. That is fine stuff, by Joe!" R. L. Roe
+ Sat R of Lit 6:403 N 16 '29 240w

"Here are vigorous, varied and salty tales and reminiscences, with 15 illustrations, from which the count is not always missing."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 3 '29 180w

LUDWIG, EMIL. Diana; tr. by Eden & Cedar Paul. 2v 679p $5 Viking press

29-29423

Diana Wassilko, beautiful, brilliant, passionate, gracious, is adored by two poets, a soldier, a diplomat, an anarchist and a prince. The setting of the two-volume romance thru which she moves is chiefly pre-war Vienna, tho the scene moves from one European country to another, reflecting the cosmopolitan affairs and the correctly-costumed talk of sophisticated people.

"The first volume, dealing with a continuous stream of events, has swing and verve. There can be nothing blasé in one's reaction to such frank melodrama. But in the second volume, action seeps away into a bog of small talk. . . We are likely to appreciate poorly the passages which Mr. Ludwig conceived with greatest intellectual care and to find ourselves contemplating the finish with a groggy eye." M. C. Dawson
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 D 15 '29 550w

Reviewed by Margaret Wallace
N Y Evening Post p9m D 7 '29 500w

"Without possessing any real charm or glamour, 'Diana' manages, by its variety, its skillful pace and its easy familiarity with the surface Europe of twenty years ago, to hold one's interest throughout and at times to rejuvenate one with its romantic gayety. The man who has since written so many lively biographies had already learned when he wrote this novel how to tell a story; and if it is a story you want, perhaps you will find it here." L: Kronenberger
+ N Y Times p8 D 15 '29 500w

"It may best be classified as one of those fluently written books about smart conversation and smart people in which every one performs with the air of a dancing master and talks with the erudition of a doctor of philosophy." Harry Hansen

N Y World p11 D 7 '29 400w

"Ludwig has facility in the presentation of titillating situations, and can make a little plot go a long way. His dialogue is loaded with German epigram and badinage. His many love scenes are heavy and thick. The banality of Diana and its trivial style cannot be the result of poor translation. Diana is obviously immature work. Perhaps Ludwig, watching his American vogue wane, decided to take his profits on the early work. No doubt they will be considerable. If half the readers who thought Napoleon a great book make the same mistake about Diana, he should be satisfied." F. L. Robbins
— Outlook 153:629 D 18 '29 450w

LUDWIG, EMIL. July '14; tr. from the German by C. A. Macartney. 378p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Putnam

940.31 European war, 1914-1918—Causes 29-28806

An effective exposition of the origins of the World war, written without bias and backed up by documentary evidence, extracts from which are printed in italics to distinguish them from the author's work. Ludwig holds that the war-guilt belongs to all Europe, Austria being most blameworthy. The incompetent kings and statesmen who allowed themselves to be driven into war are shown up in brilliant pen-portraits.

Reviewed by S. B. Fay
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 17 '29 850w

"The book's value is that he has popularized material which until recently at least has been read only by professional historians. Thus he frequently couches his interpretations or quotations from documents in the form of a monologue in which the actor-diplomats are made to speak their part. The result is a vivid and on the whole accurate presentation of the fatal events of July, 1914." R. L. Buell
+ Chicago Daily Tribune p18 D 14 '29 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p148 D '29

Reviewed by J. F. Scott
Current Hist 31:819 Ja '30 1150w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 46:254 N 16 '29 130w

"The great defect of the book is that which is inherent in Ludwig's literary and historical technique. He is interested in vividness, color and high-lights, at whatever cost of strict historical accuracy. This has marred his earlier books, but it is especially deadly in a work on the precise and technical issues of the crisis of 1914. . . Even more, he attempts interpretative exercises which obviously can have no factual foundation. Especially notorious here are his efforts at mind-reading. We have pages devoted to just what Sazonov was thinking on a certain crucial automobile ride or what was running through the mind of Berchtold at a critical moment. We are given this material as sober historical fact, and not as the product of one of Ludwig's irresponsible guessing-exercises." H. E. Barnes

LUDWIG, EMIL—Continued

— + New Repub 61:107 D 18 '29 1150w

"Incomparably the best, the fairest and the most readable conspectus of the events of July, 1914, that we have come across as yet in any language; and it has been admirably translated by Mr. Macartney. One would have thought it almost impossible to read another book on this subject; but Herr Ludwig has cast his narrative in so concise and yet so vivid a form that one turns over almost every page with fresh interest."

+ New Statesman 34:125 N 2 '29 1550w

"By all odds the most vivid, the most dramatic, the most readable account of the momentous events of that fateful month which has yet appeared. And at the same time the brilliance of Ludwig's style, the exciting narrative form in which he tells the story of the outbreak of war, his striking portraits of the principal actors in the great drama embellish an interpretation of the immediate causes of the war thoroughly sound and based upon all the available evidence as it has been brought to light during the past ten years." F. R. Dulles

+ N Y Evening Post p10m N 9 '29 900w

"A fascinating book that gives an essentially true picture of the circumstances leading to the World War and impresses the reader with the moral earnestness of an author who pleads for a Europe that will firmly establish peace as an instrument of national policy." Emil Lengyel

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 25 '29 1700w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p16 N 11 '29 1000w

Reviewed by J: Carter
Outlook 154:72 Ja 8 '30 220w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:24 D '29 250w
Sat R 148:645 N 30 '29 450w

"Judged as a contributor to political thought on the prevention of war, the author fails because he is still too much of a biographer. He emphasizes the importance of personalities rather than institutions. However, the book is so well written that it cannot be disposed of as if it were a mere product of research scholarship; it earns the right to be judged in another court, by the canons of literary criticism rather than by the standards of historical method. For here is excellent literature, powerful tragedy. The author has been more than fertile in the use of dramatic apparatus." R. C. Binkley

— + Sat R of Lit 6:615 Ja 4 '30 1400w

"Herr Emil Ludwig has now applied his romantic-historical method to the origins of the War. July, 1914 is distinctly readable and substantially accurate."

+ Spec 143:632 N 2 '29 230w

"The book is the most vigorous and compelling picture which we have of the events of July, 1914; and if the lights and shadows are too strong, the main conclusions seem to us to be just."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p599 Ag 1 '29 1200w

LUDWIG, EMIL. On Mediterranean shores; tr. from the German by Eden and Cedar Paul. 268p il $3.50 Little [10s 6d Allen & U.]

910.4 Mediterranean sea—Description and travel 29-4682

Impressionistic travel sketches of the cities and the countries that touch upon the Mediterranean.

---

Booklist 25:281 Ap '29

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Bookm 69:xx My '29 130w

"With the exception of the early chapters, 'On Mediterranean Shores,' is a most unusual book of travel; unusual in the sophistication and cultivation with which every page glows, but more unusual still in the radical point of view which shines through sophistication. . . In some seventy pages Ludwig gives the most vitally interesting, the most original and comprehensive picture of Egypt which I believe can be found anywhere in the same brief space. These pages are a perfect example of an author's distillation of the essence of a land." Blair Niles

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 24 '29 1250w

"Starting from Genoa, Mr. Ludwig visited Capri and Paestum, Sicily, Egypt, Constantinople, Asia Minor, Palestine before returning to Venice. He saw everything worthwhile and not only with real historical insight but with the eye of the seasoned traveler. He indulges in interesting comparisons of peoples, customs, events, shrines. . . Mr. Ludwig may or may not have traveled extensively; at any rate he knows how to travel calmly, philosophically and sympathetically."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '29 220w
Cleveland Open Shelf p69 My '29

"On the few occasions when it ceases to be pretentious the book is interesting. The Assouan Dam, Zionist progress in Palestine, the characteristics of modern Greece, are all sufficiently alive to stir Ludwig to enthusiasm." Mildred Adams

— + Nation 128:722 Je 12 '29 260w

"There are passages of real beauty in Herr Ludwig's work, but too often it lapses into a portentous blurred self-consciousness. One likes the traveller to be present in his own picture; it gives an individual concrete quality to his scenes. But Herr Ludwig achieves the opposite effect. Instead of substantializing his picture he disembodies himself, makes of his own figure a half-abstract entity, or spirit of perception, gazing on nature and repeopling ruins with a predilection for that historic present tense which, to English ears at least, is apt to bring a sense of discomfort."

+ — Nation and Ath 44:848 Mr 16 '29 400w

"Herr Ludwig is best when he moves among crowded streets, scenes busy with people who are occupied and interesting. The pages on the bazaar at Tunis are worth all the long passages of fine writing about the art treasures of Egypt or Stamboul. Those who wish, however, to see the best the author can do will be well advised to . . . turn to the end of the book, and read Herr Ludwig's brief, suggestive telling of the romantic story of Madame Schliemann. It is one of the most romantic stories of modern times, and he tells it with reticence and respect."

+ — New Statesman 32:674 Mr 2 '29 640w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
N Y Evening Post p10m F 23 '29 720w

"His translators have handled his puissant, factual Teutonic style without any loss of strength or flavor. If the book falls short of the reader's expectations it is not because the author has failed to bring erudition and a love of natural beauty along with his notebook, but rather because the travel-book enthusiast prefers a lighter touch and greater novelty." Halsey Raines

+ — N Y Times p10 Je 16 '29 920w
Pratt p29 summer '29
St Louis 27:288 O '29

"Never searching or far-reaching he is never trivial and always interesting, consistently able to invest his sketches of Italy, Sicily, the African shore, and Egypt with freshness as well as color. His German original has been translated into a fluent and delightful English by Eden and Cedar Paul."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:715 F 23 '29 250w

"Gathered into a book, they produce the impression of an alert and sensitive mind, very ready to look below the surface of things, philosophical, introspective, but essentially the mind of the moralist and historian, rather than that of the artist whose business it is to evoke an image or convey an atmosphere. Frankly this is to say that Herr Ludwig is not at his best in travel sketches."

— + Spec 142:169 F 2 '29 80w
Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 31 '29 550w

LUEHR, ELMER. New German republic; the Reich in transition. 442p il $5 Minton

943.085 Germany—History—20th century. Germany—History—Revolution. Germany—Economic conditions. Reconstruction (European war)—Germany 29-22813

A survey of the history of Germany since the signing of the Armistice. The revolution and its causes, control under the Social Democrats thereafter, events following the Peace treaty, reparations, industrial rehabilitation, and the governmental processes in the new Germany of economic and political stability, are discussed.

"The book is good in spots. There is unusual narrative power in the first two chapters, which may be recommended to all those who still fail to understand how a revolution could ever have taken place in Germany, even after military defeat. Unfortunately, Mr. Luehr has not always succeeded in harmoniously combining narration and discussion. A topical treatment of the material is almost inevitable, but in supplying this the writer sometimes blurs the reader's time-sense." W: K. Stewart
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 D 8 '29 650w

"Mr. Luehr is ever the historian; quiet, reserved, objective. There are places in the book where the reader feels that he would like to cry out against the attitude of the Allies, but Mr. Luehr keeps himself well in hand. In the chapters devoted to the peace treaty, for example, he contents himself with statements of what he considers to be illegalities and crimes perpetrated against the helpless German Republic, many of the leaders of which had been 'conscientious objectors' during the war. These chapters and the chapters on the occupation of the Ruhr by the French are the most interesting in the book."
+ Boston Transcript p4 N 23 '29 280w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel
N Y Times p3 O 20 '29 2600w

Reviewed by Kenneth Gould
N Y World p11m D 29 '29 700w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:24 N '29 270w

LUGAN, ALPHONSE. Social principles of the gospel; tr. from the French by T. Lawrason Riggs; with a preface by John A. Ryan. 262p $2.25 (10s) Macmillan

261 Sociology, Christian. Roman Catholic church 28-22472

"This book presents a very clear apologetics for the Catholic attitude on social questions. The author is concerned to show that there is room for great emphasis in any true evaluation of the social bearings of the teaching of Jesus. Individual salvation in the theological sense is of greatest importance, but nevertheless Christianity, rather than democracy, is entitled to credit for the modern ideals of liberty, equality, and fraternity."—Int J Ethics

"This volume represents the first two parts of a monumental work and is the first book of Abbe Lugan to be translated into English. It is of interest as representing the Catholic interpretation of the social gospel by a Frenchman. This book receives the approval and imprimatur of Cardinal Hayes of New York."
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 24 '28 280w

"It is good reading for every class in moral theology, ethics, economics, sociology or political science. It is good reading for everyone interested in Catholic lay activity. And they who are anxious to explain the Church in these days of misunderstanding ought to know its thesis well." R. A. M.
+ Cath World 129:121 Ap '29 400w
Int J Ethics 39:374 Ap '29 100w

"The Roman Catholic point of view on the whole subject of the social gospel is here ably set forth. Abbé Lugan knows this field both from the Catholic and Protestant sources. His book is informing and it has the charm of clarity." E. B. Chaffee
+ Outlook 152:108 My 15 '29 40w

LUMMIS, CHARLES FLETCHER. Bronco Pegasus. 158p il $2.50 Houghton

811 28-29063

In these verses Mr Lummis celebrates his friends, Roosevelt, John Muir, Mary Garden, and others, the old Southwest and his cowboy experiences there.

Booklist 25:242 Mr '29

"The poems are generally violent, exaggerated, sentimental and ill-proportioned. Yet some of the shorter ones are charming. . . It is somewhat pathetic to realize that the last book of this rather big little man, against the publication of which he desperately measured his ebbing hours, adds to his fame only in the sense that it flagrantly parades his basic mediocrity." T: H. Ferril
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 F 17 '29 560w

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 5 '29 260w

"At its best it is quite as good as the most popular verse of Kipling; if in some quarters that seems to be faint praise, it will recommend the poems to those who are most likely to take pleasure in them." Granville Hicks
+ N Y World p11m F 10 '29 130w

LUNDBORG, EINAR PAUL ALBERT MUNI. Arctic rescue; how Nobile was saved; tr. by Alma Luise Olson. 221p il $3 Viking press

919.8 Arctic regions. Nobile, Umberto. Aeronautics—Flights. Italia (air-ship) 29-8943

A modest and revealing description of the attempted rescue of the Italia party by the gallant Swedish aviator who was first to reach them. At Captain Lundborg's suggestion General Nobile was the first of the group to be taken from the ice. On the aviator's return flight his plane was overturned and he was added to the marooned party. Captain Lundborg took the photographs which illustrate his narrative.

Booklist 26:27 O '29

"Captain Lundborg, a good flyer but not an enthralling writer, tells a straightaway tale about the Swedish rescue expedition and his own experiences." C. L. Skinner
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 31 '29 1400w

"Other books have been written on this same subject, but Lieutenant Lundborg's narrative will remain a human document that adds a unique chapter to Arctic literature." J. C. G.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 8 '29 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p94 Je '29

'The Arctic Rescue' is Captain Einar Lundborg's story of the part he played in the succoring of Nobile and the crew of the ill-starred Italia. It is an extraordinary story, even in a prose homespun and translated to boot." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 20 '29 220w

"Of the three books recently published in America, Captain Lundborg's is the one most worthy of careful perusal and belief. That the Swedish rescuer is not a trained writer is an asset, not a liability, in this case. He tells a simple, forthright tale of what he actually saw and did and far from being actually saw and did." H. L. Matthews
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 14 '29 950w

St Louis 27:205 Je '29

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey 62:311 Je 1 '29 200w

Wis Lib Bul 25:275 Jl '29

LUNN, ARNOLD HENRY MOORE. John Wesley; with a foreword by S. Parkes Cadman. 371p $4 Dial press [7s 6d Cassell]

B or 92 Wesley, John 29-4953

To the many Wesley biographies the author, an Englishman, not a Methodist, adds a realistic and readable study of this astonishing man and the extraordinary accomplishment of preaching, travelling and writing which he crowded into his long and memorable life.

---

Booklist 25:319 My '29

"Mr. Lunn's style is fresh and simple, and it is a triumph that he has been able to make John Wesley not only human, but almost lovable."

+ Bookm 69:iv Ag '29 200w

"In his analysis of the mind of Wesley and his political position, Mr. Lunn shows keen insight as well as in portraying the birthpains of Methodism. . . The book is well written throughout, is very readable, and usually without bias." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '29 500w

"Although Mr. Lunn is rather more aware of Wesley the Anglican than of Wesley the Methodist, I am inclined to regard his as the best one-volume life of Wesley now available. When one considers the enormous amount of material with which the Wesley biographer has to deal—the journals, the diary, the correspondence, the sermons, and the more than four hundred books published over Wesley's name—Mr. Lunn's feat in compressing the gist of the facts into 350 pages without losing much of the flavor of the original documents is extremely impressive. He has been unusually successful, and wise, in letting Wesley speak for himself." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 46:362 Mr 14 '29 780w

"It is very rarely that two biographies of a noteworthy figure in history are published simultaneously, and even more unusual that they should complement each other so perfectly as these volumes do. Mr. Lipsky's study is cold and incisively analytical; Mr. Lunn's is intimate and colorful. What Mr. Lipsky has overlooked in incident and detail is supplied by Mr. Lunn; and what Mr. Lunn has omitted in historical background is supplied by Mr. Lipsky. Both books are admirably done, and, for the student of the man or the period, both are indispensable. . . Be it said to the credit of both biographers that they leave the psychoanalytical inferences of Wesley's love affairs to the reader's imagination." W. F. Kohn

+ New Repub 58:313 My 1 '29 420w

"It is with the man and the active aspect of his career that Mr. Lunn is chiefly concerned, and if one feels that from a literary standpoint he has made something less than the most of his material, still he leaves nothing out and quotes at length from Wesley's journal, his diary, his letters and other writings. He also comments at some length upon the work of Charles Wesley and his hymns. He tends, perhaps, to claim too much for his hero."

+ — New Statesman 32:706 Mr 9 '29 220w

"Vivid and interesting biographical sketch." Evelyn Underhill

+ Spec 142:865 Je 1 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '29 1700w

"It would not be fair to describe this volume as a bookful of notes flung in the public's face, but it does seem to offer the material for a biography rather than the biography itself. The matter is here, but unorganized. Mr. Lunn seems never to have seen his subject as a whole, and the result is necessarily formless."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p284 Ap 11 '29 900w

"The book, on the whole, is genially written, with a perceptible concern for literary manner; and if at times its vivacity is overdone, it is nevertheless a pleasant book to read." R. L. Calhoun

+ — Yale R n s 19:198 autumn '29 280w

LUNT, WILLIAM EDWARD. History of England. (Harper's historical ser.) 900p $5 Harper

942 Great Britain—History 28-17001

The author, professor of history at Haverford college, has written this book primarily as a college text for the general course in English history. The history is brought down to 1925. Suggestions for further reading, arranged by chapters, are appended.

---

"Professor Lunt has produced an important addition to the rapidly growing list of college text-books in English history. Eminently qualified for the task by many years of teaching and extensive research in the field, he has written a scholarly and well-balanced history of England." Paul Knapland

+ Am Hist R 34:310 Ja '29 300w

"The main criticism of the book is one which is to be made of most of the stout volumes which the writers of history textbooks have of late been turning out, namely, that it seems to leave the teacher with little to do beyond saying over again what is already well said in the book, and affords the student little time for excursions into the collateral reading such as Mr. Lunt, in an excellent annotated bibliography of sixty pages, offers for further enlightenment."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 24 '29 200w

"It is doubtful whether this new presentation of English history by Professor Lunt, of Haverford College, will stand out as a significant synthesis. . . Much good, however, may be said of the work. The space devoted to various periods is sound—no epoch is overstressed. The book has an excellent up-to-date bibliography, which will prove of value to graduate students. It has been criticized by a galaxy of specialists, with the result that it has very few errors. The technique of the volume is good; it has few grammatical mistakes, good maps, illuminating footnotes, and a satisfactory index." S. B. Clough

+ — Hist Outlook 20:193 Ap '29 410w

Wis Lib Bul 25:73 F '29

LUSHINGTON, FRANKLYN DE WINTON. Christ's way and modern problems. 92p $1 Revell [3s 6d Wells Gardner]

241 Christian life

"A plea for the recognition of the practical place mysticism has in daily living. Bishop Rhinelander commends the book, saying 'it is written with a most happy combination of poetic feeling and spiritual insight.' . . Mr. Lushington has a special word for the application of Christ's methods to a long list of so-called 'modern problems;' among them the much discussed problem 'of the young people.' " —Churchman

---

Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '29 120w

Churchman 139:29 Ap 20 '29 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p166 F 28 '29 230w

LUTKEN, OTTO. Congo gods; tr. from the Danish. 255p $2 Coward-McCann

29-17918

A simple tale of a simple youth, who went out to the Belgian Congo to forget a broken heart, found little Yaja, who likewise had a broken heart, and learned much of the wisdom of Africa and of women.

---

